Only once was Wallace faced with a definite demand for an airing of his views on peace and understanding with Russia. This came in Little Rock, when Harry Ashmore, editor of The Arkansas Gazette, pressed him in a radio interview. The result was unmistakably a revelation that Wallace is without a clear idea of a plan, with no pattern for the talk face to face with Stalin that he has proposed for the President of the United States: perhaps himself. What, asked Ashmore, would Wallace say or do? What would he ask Stalin to do? What would he concede for the United States?

"I would utilize the men down the line in the State Department," Wallace said. "There are good men in the State Department. I would utilize them to state and reconcile the issues. I don't know what concessions should be asked or given. Perhaps no concessions would be necessary. I have repeatedly called on both the Democrats and Republicans to say what concessions, if any, they would ask or make. I would urge on Secretary Marshall that he use all his efforts to get a peace with Russia."

Thur 9-9-48

SO IT will be seen that for clarifications, for practical assurances on a course of action by a candidate for office, the Southern tour of the Progressive leader had not the slightest value. But it was given importance by other things. One of these was Wallace's bid for the Negro vote, in the name of the Progressive Party, by his proposals of absolute equality.

Here was a promise that is not deliverable by any man, because it suggests that attitudes as old and deep as time may be brushed aside by swift, apocalyptic visitation of superhuman grace. It was not based on tangible proposals of laws to be passed but on conversion. And it is to be judged in light of the fact that there are more than 5,000,000 Negroes of voting age in the Old South—more than the total number of voters in the 11 States in the 1944 election. An attempt to capture these votes is on, as the one-party system breaks down under impact of Supreme Court decisions. Wallace was borne South on a wave of political history.

Poll Supports Position of State's Righters

Harry Truman's stand on civil rights has been one of the historic acts of his administration. It is also his Achilles' heel in this presidential election.

Of course, Mr. Truman might not have been elected even with the usual solid Democratic support of the South. But it is clear from a recent poll by Archibald Crossley (a careful public opinion researcher) that Truman has no chance of winning WITHOUT the 113 electoral votes of the states below the Mason-Dixon line. On the basis of Mr. Crossley's poll, Truman now appears to be in a precarious position in the states of Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina and possibly Louisiana—and may lose those 38 electoral votes to the States' Rights party.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS issue in the past has been a delicate tightrope which presidential candidates have always walked with the greatest of caution. In many pivotal Northern states, such as New York and Illinois, the vote of Negroes and other minorities has sometimes decided the outcome. Almost always presidential nominees have paid at least lip service to the rights of these groups. Almost never, however, has the issue become a major national campaign controversy.

Mr. Truman took the bull by the horns and he recommended sweeping federal laws governing civil rights.

The latest Fortune survey indicates that neither federal anti-poll tax legislation nor a fair employment practices commission has the support of a majority of the American people. A cross-section of voters was asked:

> Do you think Congress should pass laws that will insure Negroes the same chance to vote that white people have, or do you think each state should decide its own election rules?

	Congress Should Pass Laws	Should Be Left to the States	Express No Opinion
Total voters.	42.6%	49.0%	8.4%
Total non-Southern voters	50.0	40.9	9.1
By regions:
Northeast .	51.5	38.0	10.5
Mid-West .	47.0	44.0	9.0
South	21.6	72.1	6.3
Far West .	53.8	39.7	6.5

Thur 10-7-48

THESE RESULTS reveal that federal laws insuring the rights of Negroes at the polls are favored by every section of the country except the South. But the three-to-one margin of opposition in the South tips the national scales of opinion against the measure. The opposition of the voters below the Mason-Dixon line is more unified than is the advocacy of such laws in the North.

But if the country is divided fairly evenly between federal and state action on the poll tax measure, this is not the case with the FEPC. Fortune asked:

> What would you like to see done about legislation that prohibits employers—when they are hiring people—from turning them down solely because of their race or religion?

	Congress Should Pass Laws	Should Be Left to States	Should Not Have Any Laws at All	Express No Opinion
Total voters ...	24.8%	28.9%	37.4%	8.9%
By regions:
Northeast	32.9	20.5	37.9	8.7
Mid-West	27.3	24.5	38.9	9.3
South ...	9.9	47.4	33.8	8.9

* * *

OVER ONE-THIRD of the voters are against any FEPC legislation, while another 29 per cent would reserve to the states the right to pass FEPC measures. A vote for state control of either FEPC or the poll tax is, in many cases, simply another way of voting against it.

In spite of all this, Mr. Truman made his position clear and unequivocal. Today the Fortune survey shows that a majority of voters in every party—whether they are Republican, Democratic, Progressive or States' Rights—know where Mr. Truman stands on the poll tax and FEPC.

Thur 10-7-48

The same is not true of Mr. Dewey. The voters are not at all sure where Mr. Dewey stands on civil rights legislation. Those who are opposed to an FEPC, for example, also think the New York governor is opposed to the measure (in spite of the fact that it was under the Dewey administration that New York established a state commission against discrimination). On the other hand, those who want an FEPC think Mr. Dewey wants one, too. And those who say the issue should be left up to the states think that is the way the Republican candidate also feels about it. On the civil rights issue, Mr. Dewey draws the support of voters favoring exactly opposite things, and more than that, each side thinks Mr. Dewey agrees with them.

States' Rights

Mon 10-18-48

Montgomery Ala

TODAY, it is a good thing for the people of our country, we are having more discussion about the rights of the 48 States composing the American Union than we have had in many, many years. So I feel it is worth-while this morning to state in plain and simple language just what the words "States' Rights" mean. Many good people just don't understand today what the rights of the States composing the Union are. Many other people who believe in a far away, strong, centralized government, who are opposed to the people governing themselves, try to make it appear that the doctrine of States' Rights is an old worn-out thing, a theory partially believed in by only one section of the United States, and that States' Rights were buried at Appomattox Court House, when the brave Army of Northern Virginia, commanded by the Illustrious Confederate chiefain, Robert E. Lee, laid down its arms. So let us this morning, in so far as space will permit, try to understand the supreme importance in the life of our country of maintaining in their plentitude the rights of the States.

JONES

The American Colonists, when they declared their independence of England, the Mother Country, declared that the thirteen colonies were and ought to be free and independent and that they ought to adopt a general plan of confederation. On July 9, 1778, the delegates from each of the thirteen original colonies met and formed a government which they styled "The United States of America." The articles of Confederation, as they were called, simply bound the former colonies, now sovereign and independent States, into a league of friendship for their common defense and mutual benefit. And when they wrote and accepted the Articles of Confederation these wise old Americans, who loved liberty and home rule, said in Article II: "Each State retains its sovereignty, freedom and independence, and every power, jurisdiction, and right which is not by this Confederation expressly delegated to the United States in Congress assembled." The States gave the Confederation certain powers; they named these powers, and they gave the new government no other powers. But to make sure and certain that there should be no misunderstanding about the matter, these men who founded what is now our present government declared that each State retained its sovereignty, its freedom, and its independence.

WHAT did the Founding Fathers mean when they spoke of a State as sovereign? What do we mean today when we use the words "sovereign" and "sovereignty" in connection with the States? "Sovereign" means independent of and unlimited by any other. It means absolute in authority, supreme, paramount. So, the Americans of Revolutionary days said that each of the Thirteen Colonies, now Thirteen States, held powers which were absolute, powers which were independent of and unlimited by any other power, that is the power of England or the Confederation. So a sovereign State, and that's what the States of this Union are, is a State which has absolute power, a State which is free and independent and can do as it pleases. But the States realized that there were many things which concerned all of them—the defense of the country, the waging of war, the making and use of money, so for the common defense and mutual benefit of the States, they delegated to their agent, in this instance the Confederation, certain powers. The States didn't give up these powers; they didn't surrender these powers absolutely; they simply permitted the agent of their designation, the Confederation, to exercise these delegated powers for the benefit and mutual interest of the States, themselves.

No, on June 21, 1788, when the State of New Hampshire became the ninth State to ratify a new constitution submitted to the States, here came into existence among the nine States a government under the "Constitution of the United States." It was a hard battle to ratify this Constitution. Only three of the nine States voted unanimously for it, and there were many votes against the new Constitution in the other States. One of the reasons for this was that Constitution did not have a Bill of Rights, and the conventions of a number of States, when ratifying the Constitution, demanded that, in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse of the Constitution's powers, further declaratory and restrictive clauses should be added. Twelve amendments were proposed to the Constitution, ten of which were adopted. Let's see what two of these said—they are the IX and X Amendments to the United States Constitution: "The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people." What "People?" The people of the separate and independent States composing the Union. This amendment shows that the national government at Washington is one of delegated and enumerated powers and that the powers named are all that the United States may presume to exercise.

THE Founding Fathers were not satisfied with just going that far—they wanted to go a step further. They did, and here's what they said, and it is in the Constitution today as the Tenth Amendment: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people." What "people?" The people of the States respectively. So, after all, the States do have some rights. They have thousands and thousands of rights which they have never given up to the government at Washington, nor surrendered to the horde of bureaucrats which infest, like plagues of locusts, every department and branch of the government.

The States never intended to have at Washington a government which would gradually absorb and wipe out the States and make them little more than convenient subdivisions of the government.

Read the Federal Constitution through and through and you will see that the government of the United States has very limited powers, and you will see that the federal government has no power to come into a State and govern all of its domestic affairs. There is not one line in the Constitution which gives Congress the right to pass a law to say who can vote in Alabama, or to appeal any law enacted by Alabama fixing the qualifications of voters, such as poll taxes. There is not a single line in the Constitution which authorizes Congress to enact Federal Anti-Lynching Bill. There is not a single line in the Constitution which authorizes Congress to pass a Fair Employment Practice Law. There is not a line in the Constitution which authorizes Congress to pass a law to prevent the States sending white children to one school and Negro children to another. And there is not a line in the Constitution giving Congress the power to pass Mr. Truman's so-called Civil Rights Program.

We must get in the fight for States' Rights, require the federal government to stay strictly within its limits, and we must fight to the last ditch the continued encroachments by the federal government on home rule and local self-government. . . .

The doctrine of States' Rights is not political heresy. The States are citadels of democracy. We must maintain their rights and keep our States strong and vigorous.

60 ADOPT RESOLUTION

Representatives Of 10 States Meet Here To Insure Work Will Go On (Pictures on Page 22)

By HARRY WOODBURY

The States' Rights Democratic movement will live on after the Nov. 2 election until the fight "to save constitutional government and individual liberty in America" is won, leaders of the party resolved in a Southwide cenference yesterday.

After more than five hours of continuous session at the Peabody, the meeting adopted a 42-word resolution designed tog ive the States' Rights movement permanency.

Finish Fight Pledged

The resolution stated simply:

"The States' Rights movement came into being to save constitutional government and individual liberty in America. We will continue thisf ight untl the ifight is won.

"Therefore, be it resolved that our organization continues its fight until its objective has been achieved."

Sixty delegates, representing 10 Southern States, took part in the lengthy discussions of the party's future. The meeting was closed to the public.

In an explanation of the scope of the resolution, Judge Merritt H. Gibson, national campaign director, said:

"It could mean a continuation under the pattern adopted in the present campaign. That is, in those states in which the Democratic Parties of the states have joined in the States' Rights movement, they will continue to operate within the framework of the Democratic party.

Two Parties Favored

"In those states in which we now operate as the States' Rights Democratic party, they will continue to operate as such unless the Democratic parties of those states return to the fundamental principles on which the Democratic party was founded originally."

Judge Gibson declared that the National Democratic Party was founded on the doctrine that the "powers not delegated to the Federal Government by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

Judge Gibson said the purpose of the party is to restore "a real two-party system in the Nation, in which at least one party is dedicated to local self-government guaranteed by the Constitution and to individual freedom."

The resolution was drawn by a committee including: Judge Horace Wilkerson of Birmingham, chairman; Walter Sillers of Rosedale, Miss., chairman of the Birmingham conference; Knox Huff of Forest, Miss., chairman of the Mississippi Democratic Executive Committee; Curtis Dall of San Antonio; Charles A. Stainback of Somerville, Tenn., chairman of the Tennessee States' Rights Executive Committee; Judge Leander Perez of Delcour, La., chairman of the Louisiana Executive Committee; Robert Figg of Charleston, S. C., chairman of the South Carolina Executive Committee; Oscar W. Baylor of Versailles, Ky., chairman of the Kentucky Executive Committee, and Amis Guthridge of Little Rock, chairman of the Arkansas Executive Committee.

First Draft Cut Down

The 42-word resolution was a redraft of a two page first effort, which some members of the meeting felt was too cumbersome.

Judge Gibson said there was "no argument" in the meeting on whether the States' Rights Democrats should return to the National Democratic Party after the election. He said it was agreed they could not return to the national party "under its present principles or lack of principles."

As to the strategy for continuing the fight after Nov. 2, the national campaign said the fight would be flexible "to the extent that the fight will be carried on, and will depend on conditions as they develop from time to time."

Thurmond To Arkansas

Governor Thurmand will wage his presidential campaign in Arkansas today and tomorrow. Wednesday he will dip into Louisiana for a Shreveport engagement, and end the day at a tri-state meeting for Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas at Texarkana.

Then the candidate will spend the rest of the week in a final effort to win Texas and its fat block of 26 electoral votes. He will ionclude his campaign with a Southwide broadcast next Monday night.

Governor and Mrs. Thurmond returned to Memphis by plane yesterday in time to sit in on the strategy meeting. W. W. Wright of Jackson, Miss., co-chairman of the Mississippi Executive Committee, called the strategy meeting into session.

States Rights Party Leaders Are Jubilant Over Louisiana Ban and Vote in Georgia

President Curtails Tour Plan—Democratic Spokesman Sees 'Soviet Tactic' in Louisiana

By The Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Sept. 11 — States Rights Democrats today jubilantly claimed forty-five electoral votes from six states and, in addition, had a place on the general election ballot of four others.

Their campaign of opposition to President Truman's civil rights program also was bolstered during the week by Herman Talmadge's "white supremacy" victory for the governorship of Georgia.

In the face of the new party's growing strength, Mr. Truman gave up his plans for a lengthy Southern campaign tour and, according to friends, will appear only at strategic spots for one-night stands.

The States Rights ticket of J. Strom Thurmond and Fielding L. Wright won ten more electoral votes in Louisiana when Democrats there removed Mr. Truman's name from the Presidential ballot.

The action, in effect, gives the state's ten unpledged electors to Mr. Thurmond, now Governor of South Carolina. However, court action in behalf of Mr. Truman is expected.

Sun 9-12-48

[In Washington, a spokesman for the Democratic National Committee likened removal of the Truman-Barkley electors from the Louisiana general election ballot to Soviet tactics.]

Suit Won in North Carolina

Already pledged to Mr. Thurmond for President were eleven electors from Alabama, nine from Mississippi, eight from South Carolina, four out of eight from Florida and three out of twelve from Tennessee.

A court action in North Carolina finally was won by the States Rights party. Originally denied a place on the November ballot by the Board of Elections, the party appealed to the State Supreme Court.

The court rejected the board's position that the States Righters had not complied with laws governing the creation of new parties and awarded them equal billing with the regular Democrats.

Mr. Thurmond and his running mate, the Governor of Mississippi, will appear also on the ballots of Virginia, Kentucky and Texas. Arkansas States' Righters have until Oct. 13 to name electors.

Sun 9-12-48

In Georgia the picture was confused. Herman Talmadge campaigned for Governor, and won, on a platform of vigorous opposition to a Federal civil rights program and in favor of states' rights.

His Democratic party organization is generally acknowledged to be anti-Truman, but so far no effort has been made to include Governors Thurmond and Wright in the general election voting.

The state Democratic Executive Committee is expected to name twelve unpledged electors, who will appear on the ballot under Mr. Truman's name. The electors, then, will be governed by the outcome of the November Presidential race.

If Mr. Truman is overwhelmingly defeated, they can cast their votes for him anyway and avoid the stigma of bolting the party. However, if Mr. Thurmond needs the electors, they would be his.

Sun 9-12-48

In Texas Thurmond Democrats organized a States Rights party and prepared to name a Presidential ticket. Mr. Thurmond himself attended the meeting.

His supporters were busy, as well, in the border state of Maryland where they started a petition to get his name on the ballot. Only 2,000 names are needed, but ordinarily they must be filled with the Secretary of State in the spring before the general election.

Inasmuch as the Secretary of State is expected to turn down the petition, a court case may follow or the States Righters may conduct an intensive write-in campaign.

A group of "minority" Democrats in South Carolina, meanwhile, came out for President Truman. The state's electors are pledged to Mr. Thurmond, but the minority members of the party's executive committee want to name rival electors pledged to Mr. Truman.

Last night Judge Horace C. Wilkinson of Birmingham, Ala., said that Mr. Thurmond could win the Presidency if the election were thrown into the House of Representatives.

Sun 9-12-48

He pointed out that the 127 electoral votes from the eleven "Solid South" states, if united behind Mr. Thurmond, conceivably could prevent either Mr. Truman or Gov. Thomas E. Dewey from winning a majority.

of what I conceive to be the best interests of the South. I do not think they are being served by the sound and the fury of the Birmingham rump meeting of disaffected Democrats Even if they have some little success in the primaries and the election of November, they are doing harm to the future interests of the South. I am willing to concede they believe they are serving those interests. But the thoughtful southerner will see they are not. 8-14-48 Sat.

As in 1856-60 when we were led to defend slavery as God-given and God-endorsed; when we were so needled and infuriated by the northern politicians, who were often false and hypocritical, that we stubbornly made slavery the "keystone" of the new nation, we were tricked and pushing into supporting a moral wrong. The Block dispatch

That is about to happen to us again.

The position of the Birmingham rump meeting is, for the moment, a popular one. It is the place where the bands play "Dixie" and men cheer the old shibboleths.

But the true southerner will see that, despite the hypocrisy and the infuriating smugness of the North, we cannot longer oppose civil rights. It is true that they are pushed cynically by the big city machines for votes. But, the fact remains that under the constitution, all citizens have a right to vote and to the protecion of the law. We cannot defend a moral wrong. The convention showed that every State outside the South was against us. Okla, Okla.

We still have the protection of the Supreme Court and the Constitution of the United States. There are rights reserved to the States under the Constitution. It is true that many persons have come to believe the Supreme Court is too liberal in its interpretation of the Constitution. But, even so, they cannot remove it entirely. The fact is, citizens have a right to vote. But qualifications can be made. The fact is, citizens have a right to protection of the law from the gang killings of the East and lynchings in the South. We shall have to take what the Supreme Court says about that when the legislation has been passed and tested in the courts. The South may not lose everything it fears. I doubt if life in the South will be greatly changed. Basic segregation will remain.

EQUALITY

The platform calls for "equal treatment" in the armed services. Whether that means an end to segregation in the services remains to be seen. The laws have not been written, much less introduced, passed and court-tested. The platform calls on Congress to pass legislation giving equal rights in employment. The laws relating to that have not been written or introduced. They may or may not contain features greatly objectionable to the South. These laws. generally referred to as the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Act), are the ones most objectionable to the South. Whether they be constitutional has not yet been determined. There is no mention of social equality.

The point is—nothing had been done as yet.

SOLUTION

Now, how does the South propose to meet these threats? Some go to Birmingham. As far as I am concerned, those who go to Birmingham are on the road to a political Damascus with the scales still on their eyes. Their sort of action can withhold electoral votes, which will be meaningless if the Republicans win as expected.

Those really devoted to the South are seeking the longtime answer.

As of now, there seem to be but two. One is for all those who want to quit the Democratic party to do so and join in an effort to establish the Republican party. You don't do that merely by voting for it. You do it by establishing party machinery at the precinct level.

The second procedure is for those who stay in the party to uphold the hands of our Congressmen and Senators, and not to destroy them and remove them from committees by setting up a southern ticket which will destroy even their minor committee and prestige positions.

We have got to do the best we can. The rest of the nation is against us. The Republican party proposes the identical measures. This time we have got to act differently and with less blindness than in 1856-60 when they also walked out and held a rump meeting and played "Dixie" and whooped and hollered. It sounds good and is exciting. But the results are disastrous. We don't seek disaster.

Echoes Of Another Rump Convention

Block dispatch ~~Okla~~ Okla.

Ralph McGill, of the Atlanta Constitution believes the Dixiecrats are being tricked into supporting a moral wrong, and reaches back into the pages of history to prove his point. He feels the revolters "are doing harm to the future interests of the South. 11-14-48

McGill points out that when the South "lost all" during the war between the states, the rebels was defending slavery, while today it is defending the denial of civil rights to Negroes. Both are "moral wrongs" according to McGill and "we cannot defend a moral wrong" continues the Georgia editor. 11-14-48

Senator Claud Pepper thought this editorial by McGill so significant he requested same published in the Congressional Record. It is significant to note McGill in his article points out that on the civil rights issue Dixie has opposition from the remainder of the states of the union.

The McGill [illegible] follows: 11-14-48

In [illegible] A Rump Convention

Footnote[illegible] 1856, under attacks from northern radicals, the South became ultrasensitive at much of the false and unjust criticism. There also was the deep conviction that slavery was a matter for the States and not the Federal Government. 11-14-48 Sat.

There were efforts made by the moderates to bring about Federal legislation which would abolish slavery, but which at the same time would reimburse the southern slave owners (not many southerners owned slaves) for their property, out of Federal funds. This effort was not a new one. It was made first by Thomas Jefferson. It was last made by Abraham Lincoln. He had made it previously, but he repeated it at the ill-fated "peace conference" at Hampton Roads in February of 1865. This was attended, among others, by Georgia's Alexander Stephens, then Confederate Vice President. But the peace commissioners were so restricted in their instructions by President Jefferson Davis that nothing came of it save futility. Stephens went home, never again to speak to Davis during the war, and to consider the Mississippian as having once more ruined the chance of the Confederacy for an honorable peace or end to the war.

The Dixiecrats Pose As Saviors of South

The Courier Journal Louisville Ky.

As WE seem to get the idea Governor J. STROM THURMOND is telling us that the Dixiecrat movement was really heaven-sent to the South. He affirms that it is not only saving Democrats from themselves and the South from the Democratic Party, but is also repelling an invasion by those Yankee Republicans. Otherwise, he says the latter would have prevailed this year in every Southern State, as once they did behind GRANT and SHERMAN. Sat. 9-25-48

It is an appropriate time to recite these assurances, as expressed by the Presidential candidate of the States' Rights Democrats at a rally in Augusta, Georgia. Governor THURMOND is practically in our midst, accessible to those who would give thanks to a savior. He brings the message of the fourth party to Kentucky this evening. He raises at Madisonville the banner which bears but a single device.

States' Rights, you are to assume, will put Russia in her place. States' Rights will build houses. States' Rights will give the country a solid farm program and cure inflation. States' Rights will tell the predatory Federal Government to keep its hands off our natural resources, especially tidelands oil, and let the States and their favored concessionaires exploit them as they will. And above all, the States' Rights Democrats will save the South from the Republicans.

Well, you may not be sure about all those blessings at the hands of the Dixiecrats, particularly the latter. You may recall, if Governor THURMOND does not, that even the most unpopular Democratic candidate from the South's point of view since STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS—ALFRED E. SMITH in 1928—carried more Southern States than he lost. And those that he lost were delivered to the Republicans by the 1928 counterparts of today's Dixicrats, acting on inflamed rage and prejudice. Governor THURMOND says that his fight first and last is a fight for representative government. He appears to forget also that the Dixiecrat movement took life on an impulse to reject the representative processes of the convention at Philadelphia in July. Those processes worked so decisively in the nomination of the Democratic Party's candidates that even if the old system of one-third veto of action had existed, the States' Rights insurgents would still have lost.

fourth party for what it is—not a party designed to defeat Harry Truman, but a minority group fourth party with no chance to do anything of political value for the South.

Old Betsy and I, Hand in Hand!

I never would have thought it, but here Old Betsy and I are—strolling along hand in hand, like a couple courting.

Who is Old Betsy? Why, none other than The Savannah Morning News.

Mon 9-27-48

And why are Old Betsy and I holding hands and making eyes at one another like a couple of bobby soxers, which neither of us is?

Why, because Old Betsy has joined in to expose the Dixiecrat

Atlanta Ga

No Merit Says the News, following Strom Thurmond's speech in Augusta last week:

"Up until now Dixiecrat leaders have attempted to argue that their real purpose is to defeat Truman—and that they are not hurting Dewey's chances in the South—but Gov. Thurmond in his Augusta speech exploded that idea when he bluntly declared that "If our ticket had not been placed in the field, Dewey would have carried nearly every Southern State. We do not believe he will carry a single one."

"Granted that it is highly desirable, from the standpoint of the South, to defeat Truman the Morning News cannot see that the Dixiecrats can accomplish anything of value whatsoever through the medium of a third party, but that on the contrary it is a matter of sheer wisdom for this section to establish the two-party system. . . .

"It is conceivable that in the future there will be times when it will be to our interest to vote the national Democratic ticket. This year, however, there is merit from neither a sectional nor a national standpoint in the New Deal ticket, headed by Harry Truman. The Dewey-Warren ticket admittedly may not stand for everything the South wants. It is doubtful that the Thurmond-Wright ticket, pro-Southern as it is in respect to the civil rights program, if elected, would stand one hundred percent in the best interests of this region."

Sense That makes sense. I may not agree with Old Betsy all the way. Old Betsy has gone Republican. As a Democrat I urge all those who don't want to remain Democrats to go off to the Republican Party. For many, many years we have, through The Atlanta Constitution, urged that all Southerners who are not satisfied with the politics of the Democratic Party to join the Republican Party and help make of it a satisfactory second party.

The Dixiecrats are pure folly.

As Old Betsy says, they can contribute nothing of value. All they can do is split the vote and make it possible for the Republicans to carry the State. The honest thing to do—and the important thing from the viewpoint of our vital two-party system—is to vote for Dewey if that is what the Dixiecrats want to do.

If this country divides up into many parties we will wreck our form of government and dissipate the strength of our political institutions.

Truman From the start we have confused Truman with the issue. Truman isn't the issue. The issue and the party will remain after Truman is gone. It is the Congress and then the Supreme Court which will determine the constitutionality of whatever legislation Congress passes that will settle the controversial matter of civil rights.

The odds are that Harry Truman is sure to be defeated.

There isn't then—if the idea is to get rid of Truman—any reason why the Democratic organizations against Truman shouldn't let the people know that since Truman is eliminated they will cast their electoral votes for the ticket which bears his name. He isn't the party.

If that isn't satisfactory, then let the State go Republican. Old Betsy and I certainly see eye to eye on the two-party system being vital to this country and necessary to our region. Truman isn't the real issue.

Old Betsy, let me embrace you again. True, that cop is looking our way, but what of it! Such love comes only once in a life.

Thurmond Strom Thurmond is a fine fellow, they say. I am sure he is. He had a fine war record and I am entirely sincere when I say I believe him to be a fine fellow of good intent.

But I remain unsold.

In the first place, as Old Betsy said, he has quit his original platform—which was to defeat Truman. He now is out to elect himself. That's silly, on the face of it. He hasn't any more chance than Henry Wallace. The nation doesn't need his minority party any more than Wallace's.

In the second place, I have always been puzzled by a picture I saw of Mr. Thurmond. He stood on his head for a Life Magazine photographer and allowed himself to be photographed in that position. I never quite understood what it was meant to illustrate—the Governor standing on his head. But now I think I know. It explains a lot about the Dixiecrats.

In the third place, as Louisiana's Earl Long now sees—our Senators and Congressmen won't be in a good position to fight for us in Congress if the Dixiecrats take our States.

So I hope the State of Georgia—and other Southern States as well—will see the light, as the Dixiecrats reveal they really aren't out to beat Truman—and let our States go either way—Republican or Democratic.

Let's keep the two-party system.

Especially if the two other choices are Henry Wallace and a fellow who likes to stand on his head.

Comments on the 'Southern Revolt'

Jacksonville Fla

When the President gave his civil rights message to Congress on February 2nd, the Southern white press reacted immediately with indignant protest. Such legislation as anti-lynching, anti-poll tax, and FEPC statutes are not only unnecessary, argued Southern editors, but are downright dangerous. They maintained that valuable progress is being made in race relations and that federal laws would only serve to set back this progress, reviving old hatreds and prejudices. One large daily referred to the President's proposals as a "Moscow-like plan to enforce civil rights." Practically all of them agreed that the time-honored prerogatives of "states-rights" should be respected.

But even in this first torrent of violent protest, a few more moderate voices were heard. An editorial in the Birmingham News declared: "The gathering rebellion is putting too much energy into obstructive action and not enough on honest self-criticism and constructive self-improvement . . . There is a call for positive action on the state and regional levels".

The Little Rock Gazette sounded a similar note. It urged that we "consider the proposals of the President as a bill of indictment and measure our performance against it." An affirmative answer, continued the Gazette, would be to substitute "intelligent concerted action for the lip-service we have all too frequently given our own ideals of fair treatment for the Negro race".

The Raleigh News and Observer commented in a thoughtful, temperate editorial that "this is a time not for our angers but for our prayers — and prayerful work for the advance of all at home."

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot deplored the fact that the controversy tended to obscure the genuine value of the Report of the President's Committee as "a serching and useful contribution to progress on the civil rights front."

As the political phase of the controversy arose to fever pitch, more and more Southern editors began to see the danger in a purely negative protest that seemed too often to be based as much on opposition to civil rights themselves as on opposition to federal legislation . The editor of the Atlanta Journal, Wright Bryan, observed: "The best answer, the only effective answer the South can make to what is being said elsewhere, is to set our own house in order."

Sat 4-24-48

The Columbia Record agreed with the Atlanta Constitution that "most Southerners would feel a little more comfortable about it all if the Southern politicians leading the present revolt against the Democratic party had sense enough and the good taste to make their issue something else than civil rights . . . No decent person can defend any proposal to deny anyone by law any of the civil rights."

Douglas S. Freeman, the biographer of Robert E. Lee and editor of the Richmond News-Leader, denounced the program of the Southern Governors in an editorial that was widely reprinted and commented upon, by other Southern papers. Wrote Dr. Freeman:

"The program of the Southern Governors is wholly unrealistic. That ought to be said in plainest terms and ought to be realized by every Southerner, even by the victims of Negrophobia. . . . We must remember that the Negro has come a long way in 80 years, that he has encouragement in the North, that he possesses a new sense of political power. In addition, he knows that his status as a veteran cannot be challenged or his advantageous position destroyed. The South will do well to understand this, too, and to decide how far it will go, by compromise and conciliation in the way of equal justice, jury service, economic opportunity and public employment. This is the minimum that will be demanded and, in time, will be won, whether we of the South like it or not".

The Richmond Times-Dispatch cut to the heart of the matter in an editorial entitled "State's Duties as Well as State's Rights": "The important thing is for Virginia and the other Southern States to remember that there are State's duties, as well as State's rights, and that mere protestations against interference with State's rights are not enough. We in the South must demonstrate convincingly that we deserve to have rights as citizens of States and localities respected."

No Dixiecrat

Editor Constitution: I have been voting the Democratic ticket for 30 years and will do so in November. We certainly in the South need to be united as never before to preserve our Southern traditions.

I never heard of such a strange animal as a Dixiecrat and I certainly am not going to vote for him.

The South and the Revolt

Constitution

WASHINGTON—The current attempt of some elements in the South to break away from President Truman and split the Democratic Party in its traditional stronghold finds the South itself splitting in turn into groups to set up a counter-rebellion against the self-appointed State righters.

This is helpful, in its way, because it shows dramatically that the whole South cannot be herded together under the Confedrate flag. This resistance to the Truman movement springs from various motives—personal conviction, awareness that the War Between the States is over, and in some cases is dictated by practical political considerations.

A symbol is the South Carolina Federal Judge, J. Waties Waring, of an old Charleston family, who, even while the Southerners were rebelling at the Philadelphia convention against the Truman civil rights program, was declaring calmly from the bench that no subterfuges could be used by South Carolina Democratic Party officials to keep Negroes from voting in party primary elections. He announced bluntly that anybody who violated his decision would be jailed for contempt. Atlanta, Ga.

To the Negro standing before him who had brought a case against discrimination, he said:

"It's a disgrace and a shame when you must come into court and ask a judge to tell you you are an American."

These words might well become historic.

Wed. 7-21-48

There are many people all over the South who look upon extension of the franchise as a primary civil right that must be granted to make the South and its politics truly democratic. The Judge was merely backing up the United States Supreme Court in its outlawry of the "white primary" and the Supreme Court was only upholding the Constitution.

Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

The South Carolina Democratic Party, like some in other Southern States, has used all sorts of devices to evade the dictum of the Supreme Court against the "white primary." It was a decision by Judge Waring some months ago against such a dodge that was sustained by the Supreme Court. But the Democratic Party in South Carolina cooked up another by requiring Negroes to take an oath upholding segregation before they could vote. It was this against which Judge Waring struck the other day, and the Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee subsequently directed that his order be fully carried out. That looks like progress.

Significantly an element of the South Carolina Democratic Party composed of upstate farmers and mill workers came forward recently in defense of Negro voting. This recalls an often forgotten chapter in politics of the South which was an alliance after the War Between the States of the same sort of elements with Negroes in a common front to improve their economic welfare. That alliance was destroyed during the Populist era in the South, when it became effective politically, by appeals to prejudice and institution of the "white primary" to deny Negroes the vote. Its revival today, despite similar appeals to prejudice, is a hopeful sign.

It is interesting that it happens in the State which led the way to secession in the sixties, and the State which has provided, in Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, the presidential candidate of the new Confederate movement organized in Birmingham. This alliance may impede Gov. Thurmond in lining up his State electors against President Truman. Wed. 7-21-48

It bespeaks the ferment all over the South today out of which may come something not anticipated by the Birmingham revolutionaries. For other elements in the South will refuse to go along with this rump rebellion, including church groups, labor groups, and independent citizens who are working quietly in behalf of extension of civil rights.

It is noteworthy, for example, that outstanding party leaders in the South kept aloof from the antics at Philadelphia and are having no part in the Birmingham movement, such men as Sen. Walter F. George, of Georgia, and Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, prominent conservatives, who naturally would be enlisted first, if possible, to give the revolt weight and character. While Gov. Ben T. Laney, of Arkansas, was, for a time, the candidate of the Southern revolters for President at Philadelphia, he refused to become the candidate of the Alabama and Mississippi "walk-outs" at Birmingham. Sen. Richard B. Russell, of Georgia, who ultimately was given the votes of Southerners at Philadelphia, also refused to join the Birmingham rebellion.

Gov. Laney is reported ambitious to run for the Senate in 1950 and the others have important party posts in Congress which they do not care to jeopardize. That is a strong influence that minimizes chances of much success for the Southern rebellion.

The Birmingham Bolt

THE "statement of principles" issued by the Birmingham conference of southern insurgent Democrats amounts to a cold demand upon the people of the United States, Congress, the Supreme Court and the Executive Department of the government to leave the southern states free to nullify the 14th and 15th amendments to the Constitution at will and to continue to stifle the economic life of the nine-million Negroes who reside in these states. Journal & Guide

The Birmingham meeting, held in a heated atmosphere of bigotry and intolerance was a resurgence of the notorious elements in the political life of the South characterized by the TILLMANS, the BLEASES, the HEFLINS, the VARDAMANS, the COTTON-ED SMITHS, and the BILBOS. The chief ranters came from Mississippi, the birthplace of almost everything that is despicable in the political and social fabric of America. The little known governor of that state, who was the chief instigator of the southern revolt, was placed on the ticket as vice presidential candidate, and Senator EASTLAND, who stood up in Congress and notoriously slandered the Negro soldier during the last war, was his companion piece in riotous demagoguery. Norfolk, Va.

The Birmingham convention drew the presence of the notorious GERALD L. K. SMITH, Jew, Negro, and Catholic-baiter, who sat through its proceedings and later rushed into print to give them his heart-felt blessing. Former Governor DIXON and HORACE WILKINSON of Alabama, long patrons of the race-hate elements, were among the top-drawer leaders of the movement.

Norfolk, Va.

The presidential candidate put up by the Birmingham belligerents is a rural school teacher who rose to the governorship of South Carolina, which is not a noteworthy achievement politically and neither is it a thing that is hard to do if one knows how to play on the race prejudices of the relatively few white people who vote in South Carolina. As vote-getters on their own the pair will flop. Sat. 7-24-48

The gathering was a good show in southern political dramatics of a kind that almost everybody would like to see relegated to the obscurity which it deserves. The rebellious Birmingham buddies were boycotted by practically all of the responsible political leaders in the South, even those foremost in the Dixiecrat demonstration at Philadelphia. The worse that it can do is to spread hatred and bitterness for the next three and a half months, resulting in some contribution to the further disunity of the Democratic Party, and possibly to that party's certain defeat in November because of its defections as represented by the HENRY WALLACE bolt, plus the equally damaging rumpus in the southern states. All of these things will naturally help the DEWEY-WARREN ticket.

Race Vote Whipped Dixiecrats

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 7-24-48

By AUSTIN NORRIS

(Editor of The Courier's Philadelphia Edition)

PHILADELPHIA — The Democratic National Convention gave to the Nation the most important political event of our time when the South was completely defeated and routed on the issues of "States Rights" and "Civil Rights."

This fight to the death between Negroes, organized labor and the liberal forces on the one side, against the racial bigots and the reactionary South was inevitable, and a victory for the Northern forces was necessary if the Democratic party hoped to continue as the dominant party in national affairs. 7-24-48

The results of this victory are far-reaching. It has ended the dominance the South has exerted over the national Democratic party for the last eighty-three years. It is likely to lead to a two party system in many Southern States, with the rich, conservative element eventually turning Republican and the underprivileged masses, both white and black, taking over the reins of the Democratic party. Sat.

It may create a short period of intense racial feeling in the South, but this period can be made very brief and violence speedily suppressed by a firm attitude by the President and other important Federal officials.

AN EVEN CONTEST

It may mean that in several decades the South will become politically more important to Negroes than the North. It may be the first step in making the Democratic party a truly liberal party. Its immediate effect has been to enhance the chances of success of the Democratic party in the November election to the extent that an election which two weeks ago looked like a Democratic massacre is now admitted to be an even contest.

Rebels' Enthusiasm High But Chances To Win Are Low

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Cheering wildly and prancing around the floor in a spectacle matching the regular party conventions, revolting deep south Democrats last Saturday gave the green light to a states rights ticket of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi for Vice President.

To the awed onlooker, no greater show of confidence in the Thurmond-Wright ticket could possibly be mustered. But even while the 7,500 rebels yelled hoarse approval to the recommendation that Southern electors vote for their favorite sons, revolt leaders were admitting that at best the whole thing probably wind up just a die-hard protest vote against President Truman and his civil rights.

At the same time, many leading electors could be entered in Missouri and Kentucky, home states of the President and Senator Barkley, Democratic Vice Presidential candidate. Defender

"It may be that we will take the southern states and that Truman will lose the northern states, and then which will be the Democratic party?" shouted former Gov. Frank Dixon of Alabama, conference keynoter.

That statement coincided with one made by W. W. Wright (no relation to Gov. Fielding Wright) who, though admitting the states rights Democrats had no chance of winning in November, said the conference can start the ball rolling to defeat Harry Truman's bid for reelection and "get control of the party back in the hands of the regular Democrats. Chicago, Ill

A proposed feature of the show flopped dismally, when several mailmen, saying they would not defile their government uniforms by appearing as grey-clad soldiers of the confederacy, refusing to take part in the conference. One sweating rebel however, did enter the auditorium wearing a patched up edition of the confederate grey and waving the old confederate banner'

Mississippi and Alabama, which have a total of 20 electoral votes, have pledged their electors not to vote for President Truman or any one else who supports a civil rights plank that threatens the southern economic and social system based on segregation of Negroes.

Democrats from Florida to Texas said efforts would be made to stir up grass roots sentiment that would result in the entrance of Thurmond-Wright electors to take electoral college votes away from the Truman-Barkley ticket. 7-24-48

"Our people are more aroused than they have been in years and they will repay by retirement to private life the efforts of any so-called southern leaders who hope to carry them into the camp of Harry S. Truman in the coming elections," keynoter Dixon stormed.

"We have just begun to fight," Thurmond said in his acceptance speech. We must prove to the nation that this time the South means business."

Eject Negro Newsman From Confab

Dixie 'Rebs' Say U. S. Can't Stop South's Segregation

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 7-24-48

Sat. 7-24-48

(Special to The Courier)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Screaming, frenzied, frightened and comical, Dixie ran up the Confederate flag again here Saturday, eighty-three years after Lee hauled it down and handed it over to Grant at Appomattox Courthouse . . . and these frantic Dixiecrats bellowed their resistance to civil rights and their allegiance to the principles of the KKK.

In an illegitimate "convention" of Southern Democrats and a roaring one-day session, dissident Dixie rebels selected South Carolina's Governor J. Strom Thurmond and Mississppi's Governor Fielding Wright to head their revolt ticket in opposition to both President Truman and GOP nominee Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Attended by some five thousand rebels, the meeting was picketed by white supporters of the Wallace-for-President group who delayed the convention's opening for forty-five mnutes. An unidentified Wallaceite was ejected from the afternoon session by policemen.

GENERAL EJECTED

Also ejected was retired U. S. Army Brigadier General Herbert C. Holdridge of Washington, self-styled candidate, who was accused of being a Communist when he protested the way nominations were made.

After the meeting, Senator John L. McClellan (D.-Ark), told reporters that President Truman as a result of the Dixiecrat ticket, stood to lose six Southern States in the November election — listing them as Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina and Tennessee.

The South's fourth party was launched in an atmosphere boiling wth bigotry, defiance and violent threats, and, dominated by ex-office holders, challenged both major candidates, Truman and Dewey, to a battle.

EJECTED NEGRO NEWSMAN

Negroes were barred from the meeting with Emory O. Jackson, Birmingham World editor, being escorted from the gallery by two giant police officers who confiscated his notes.

"You are in a good place to get killed. Get out of here as fast as you can and don't stop walking," one of the two officers warned Jackson, he said.

In raging oratory, Governor Thurmond in his acceptance speech bitterly thundered, "There are not enough laws on the books and not enough laws can be put on the books to break down segregation."

The angry Governor added heatedly, "There are not enough troops in the Army to force the Southern people to break down segregation." He accused President Truman of betrayal, assailing him and the civil rights program with malignant emotionalism.

SO DOES THE KKK

Passionately he called for States' rights, local rule and preservation of racial traditions. He said that the South was a friend to the Negro, attributing all of his progress to Southern kindness. He conceded that the Negro is entitled to fair treatment, Southern style, and denounced the civil rights program savagely, bill by bill.

Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor, one of the thirteen Alabama delegates to walk out the Philadelphia National Democratic convention, gave the welcome speech. Connor is the one whose police arrested Senator Glen Taylor and who figured in the Freedom Train incident here.

LAMBASTED RAYBURN

Mississippi was the heaviest represented State, other than the host State, with Senators James O. Eastland and John Stennis, Governor Wright, Mayor Arrington of Collins, Miss., among the delegation which also included fifty University of Mississippi students. Arrington blisteringly condemned Congressman Sam Rayburn for not recognizing the Alabama walkers at the Philadelphia convention.

Many of the top convention names were ex-office holders. Numbers of delegates were not official. Delegates had not been orderly selected, leaving it hard to determine how much of a grass roots rebellion they represented.

Approximately forty Birmingham Southern College students, members of Kappa Alpha Fraternity, paraded with a large portrait of General Robert E. Lee.

Identified among the Wallace pickets were Robert Travis, chairman of the People's Progressive party of Alabama, and Mrs. Pauline Dobbs, wife of Malcolm C. Dobbs, of Mobile, chairman of the Alabama branch of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

DECENT WHITES OPPOSE

Travis, a Birmingham Southern College student and chairman of the Alabama Student Conference for Civil Rights, made the following comment to a reporter:

"We just want the decent people of the South to know there are some opposed to such actions as those here."

Police dispersed the pickets by demanding that they walk fifty yards behind each other. Hecklers also made it uncomfortable for them.

"ALFALFA BILL" AGAIN

Seventy-nine-year-old former Governor "Alfalfa Bill" Murray of Tshomingo, who boasted of being the father of Oklahoma's jim-crow laws at his State's 1906 constitutional convention, said: "If they pass those civil rights laws there'll be hell to pay in the North."

Judge Horace Wilkinson, one of Alabama's eleven anti-Truman electors and director of the White Supremacy League, was chairman of the platform and resolutions committee which reported an eight-point statement of principles which was unanimously adopted.

ONE OF THESE POINTS SAID:

"We stand for the segregation of the races and the racial integrity of each race; the constitutional right to choose one's associates; to accept private employment without Governmental interference, and to earn one's living in any lawful way. We oppose the elimination of segregation, the repeal of miscegenation statutes, the control of private employment by Federal bureaucrats called for by the misnamed civil rights program. We favor home rule, local self-government and a minimum interference with individual rights."

SHADES OF JEFF DAVIS

The rebel Democrats insisted that they were not bolting the party. Most of the influential party leaders of the South were absent. Robert E. Lee and Jeff Davis were rallying names sounded and praised.

Southern Revolt Throws New Curve At Truman's Chances

McClellan Asserts President May Lose Six States; Dewey Considers Direct Bid For Dixie Vote

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The entrance of a "Dixiecrat ticket" into the presidential field brought a disputed prediction Sunday that President Truman may lose the support of up to six Southern states in the November election.

Senator McClellan, (D), Arkansas told a reporter he thinks the Southern Democratic Rebel ticket may help take the electoral votes of a half dozen Southern states away from President Truman and Senator Alben Barkley, his running mate.

The new ticket—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for president and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi for vice-president — was put forth at Birmingham Saturday as one Dixie answer to the president's civil rights program.

McClellan — who fought the president's nomination but did not walk out of the Democratic convention — named Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Tennessee as possible participants in a bolt he said is almost certain to result in the regular Democratic party's defeat in the presidential election. Mon.

Tennessee, Too

He put Tennessee in the list, McClellan said, because of a sharp local division among Democrats there. 7-19-48

He said that if the Thurmond-Wright ticket gets on the ballot in Arkansas it may split the Democratic vote in his home state and give the Republicans some chance of winning there.

But McClellan's prediction drew immediate fire from Senator Hatch, (D) New Mexico, close personal friend of the president.

Gerald K. Smith Dixiecrats Snub

The Dixiecrat movement yesterday received—and promptly rejected—the support of Gerald L. K. Smith, National Director of the Christian Nationalist Crusade.

Smith, one-time follower of the late Huey P. Long, said he would line up his Crusade behind the Dixie States' rights ticket because "our 3,000,000 enrolled followers believe that the Negro and the Jew are exerting too much control in American politics."

But the Dixiecrats, who put up Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, to oppose President Truman on an anti-civil rights platform at their Birmingham convention Saturday, gave a loud "no" to Smith's offer and they didn't add "thanks."

Thurmond, when he heard of it, said "We do not invite and we do not need the support of Gerald L. K. Smith or any other rabble-rousers who use race prejudice and class hatred to inflame the emotions of the people."

Smith said that he and 200 followers attended the Birmingham meeting but he stayed in the background because "I was anxious to do nothing that would introduce extraneous controversy into the wholesome and historic gathering."

Convention Takes On Philadelphia Air; Gov. Wright Arrives

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Revolting Southern Democrats convened here Saturday to wage war on the Truman-Barkley presidential ticket either by nominating candidates of their own or by a campaign to free presidential electors to vote against the regular party standard bearers.

Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney, who arrived early in the day, and South Carolina Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, who was not expected to reach Birmingham until noon, were seen as likely nominees of the states-righters, if they decide to place a ticket in the field.

Laney would be their choice for president, Thurmond for vice president, in such an event.

BUT SOME OF THE STATES RIGHTS DEMOCRATS, who were expected to gather here from 15 states, were opposed to nominating candidates to oppose standard bearers of the National Democratic Party team.

They contended the cause of the Southern revolt against the adoption of a strong "civil rights" plank in the national party platform and rejection of a states rights plank the Southerners sought to have included would be better served by waging a fight to free presidential electors.

The 11 presidential elector nominees are pledged to vote against Truman. The revolters were set to take their battle for anti-Truman electors into the president's state of Missouri and at least a dozen other states.

* * *

AT 10:30 A.M., a half-hour after the convention originally was scheduled to start, Municipal Auditorium was about half filled. Spectators, several carrying Confederate flags, filled the balcony seats about halfway to the rear of the hall.

The floor, dotted with the standards of Southern states, was sprinkled with delegates, most of whom milled in confusion up and down the aisles.

Cheers broke out from the audience off and on as a band on the stage played such Southern tunes as "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "Dixie," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny." A "Rebel Yell" ripped across the hall.

The convention promised to better the Philadelphia Democratic meeting in at least one respect: Cool air, generated by a fan system from the front of the auditorium, made the indoors at least 20 degrees cooler than the sunny steps outside. The News

In the front of the hall, at least 100 newsmen and radio broadcasters were working at long rows of tables. Birmingham Ala

The convention had taken on much of the atmosphere of the national convention hall in Philadelphia, out of which half of Alabama's and all of Mississippi's delegates took a walk in protest against the strong "civil rights" plank rammed into the platform. 7-17-48

These delegates, along with scores of others from Southern states, were still boiling mad at the steam-roller tactics of the Philadelphia convention and the slights and insults heaped upon them in that city of brotherly love.

* * *

GOV. FIELDING L. WRIGHT, head of the Mississippi delegation arrived in town with his cohorts last night, to reiterate the Birmingham conference is being held to press the South's fight for a principle. It was Gov. Wright who announced the call for the Birmingham convention from Philadelphia after the walkout.

The News

"Mississippi has never fought this thing as a matter of personalities," declared Gov. Wright. "We're not against Mr. Truman as a person. We're against the things he's gone on record as favoring." Birmingham

He explained the Mississippians could not have remained in the Philadelphia convention because of the national party's platform, thus making it impossible for them to stay and support Sen. Richard B. Russell. The Georgia senator got the votes of anti-Truman Southern delegates who remained in the convention. Ala.

* * *

WRIGHT EMPHASIZED that he would support Southern senators and congressmen in opposing and filibustering expected attempts by the Republican-dominated Congress to enact "civil rights" measures in the special session called by President Truman. Sat.

The Mississippi governor, when asked if he and his followers had withdrawn completely from the National Democratic Party, said:

"The only official party organ we recognize now in Mississippi is the State Democratic Executive Committee." 7-17-48

Wright, who reiterated he would not be the one to head a states' rights presidential ticket, was asked in what position withdrawal of his state and other Southern states from the national party would leave their senators and representatives.

"WHAT WE ARE DOING is of more importance to the South than any committee appointments the Democratic organization in Washington might be able to give our senators and congressmen," he continued.

Former Gov. Frank Dixon, temporary convention chairman, took the states righters' fight to the air last night in a statewide broadcast originating from WAPI. He outlined two courses open to the revolters:

1. Put out a Southern presidential ticket, or,
2. Campaign to free presidential electors of other states, as already done in Alabama, so they may vote against Truman.

Mississippi Sen. James O. Eastland predicted the nominees of the Birmingham conference would carry more states than Truman, while some of the other revolters here predicted that the Truman-Barkley ticket would not carry a single state.

* * *

DIXON DESCRIBED the meeting as a "grass roots movement," adding that he had been "amazed at the intensity of the action."

He told his radio audience that the "civil rights" program, which would include anti-segregation, anti-lynching and anti-poll tax laws, was an unconstitutional effort to "reduce us to the status of a mongrel inferior race." 7-17-48

The former governor warned that it would "crush with imprisonment our leadership and thereby kill our hopes, our aspirations, our future and the future of our children."

Gov. Folsom was due here for the convention and Oklahoma's 79-year-old former Gov. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray was already here, assailing the Truman candidacy. He advised the only thing to do in Oklahoma was to write in the name of some candidate in opposition to Truman. Birmingham, Ala.

"It'll work in Oklahoma," Murray said. "It has before. Sat.

"I'm the man who introduced Jim Crow in Oklahoma," he added. "If they pass those 'civil rights' laws, there'll be hell to pay in the North."

The News

HUDDLING FAR into the night to map conference strategy and draw up resolutions, expected to be along anti-Truman lines laid down at the Jackson, Miss., meeting, were Gov. Wright, Dixon, Wallace W. Wright, of Jackson; Gessner T. McCorvey, Sidney W. Smyer, Horace Wilkinson and others. 7-17-48

McCorvey, Alabama Democratic chairman, tried to revive the Eisenhower-for-president boom. He still insits the states' rights meeting here could bring about the election of Gen. Eisenhower in the House of Representatives. He pointed out the Southern states could name electors pledged to "someone such as Gov. Laney, who would later throw the electoral votes to Gen. Eisenhower and hand the presidency to him on a silver platter.'"

The News

SEVERAL HUNDRED delegates, newspaper, radio and television men, photographers and the hordes of others who swarm to political conventions were in Birmingham for the revolt conference.

Adding to the color of the meeting was the appearance of a delegation of 55 black-hatted University of Mississippi students, who were sent as "delegates." They emphasized they were on "serious business" and not here as "college students on a lark."

The revolters' aim was to take the solid South out of the regular party columns for the first time in 70 years.

It was pointed out that the convention was motivated by a situation somewhat similar to the Democratic Party split of 1860, which elected Lincoln president and brought on the War Between th States. Birmingham Ala.

THE CONVENTION then was Charleston, S. C., where, as at I adelphia Wednesday night, bama led the withdrawal of sev Southern states and no nominat was made. Later at Baltim more Southern states withdrew a Democrats remaining in the co vention nominated Stephen Douglas. The revolting Southern ers subsequently picked John C. Breckenridge as their standard-bearer. Sat. 7-17-48

It was a race issue then that split the party. The fight was over whether any slave owner could take his property into the territories. The scrap now is whether the federal government is to intervene to bring about greater equality among the races.

"Whereas, at a meeting held in Birmingham, Alabama, on the 17th day of July, 1948, the Democrats of the South in meeting assembled recommended to the Democrats of the several states that they take the steps necessary to have the electoral votes of the several states cast for Honorable J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President of the United States and for Honorable Fielding Wright of Mississippi for vice-president of the United States, and

"Whereas, we have given due consideration to the recommendations made at the Birmingham meeting held on July 17, 1948, and are convinced that Honorable J. Strom Thurmond, Governor of South Carolina, is the choice of the Democrats of the other Southern states for President of the United States and that Honorable Fielding Wright, the Governor of Mississippi, is the choice of the Democrats of other Southern states for vice-president of the United States, and

"Whereas, we regard it as vital and essential to the preservation of this republic that there be a return to constitutional government and due regard for the limitations placed on the federal government by the Constitution of the United States and due recognition of the powers reserved to the several states by that historic document, and

"Whereas, we believe the Philadelphia convention nominated a candidate for President that 90 per cent of the rank and file of the Democrats of the several states do not want. The convention was manipulated by masters of political intrigue and controlled by political bosses for selfish purposes and it deliberately thwarted instead of carrying out the wishes and will of the Democrats of the several states. We are convinced that the people do not want the nominees of the Republican convention or the nominees of the Democratic convention and the time has arrived when the people should be taken into consideration in electing men who will fill these high offices for the next four years. We prefer to present Governor Thurmond and Governor Wright as presidential and vice-presidential nominees to the Democrats of the United States and ask them to support these two men rather than having the candidates for the high office of President and vice-president picked by boss-dominated conventions.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the nominees of the Democratic Party in Alabama for presidential and vice-presidential electors, that we pledge the Democrats of Alabama and the Democrats of the nation that we will cast the electoral votes of the State of Alabama for the Honorable J. Strom Thurmond, Governor of South Carolina, for President of the United States and for the Honorable Fielding Wright, Governor of Mississippi, for vice-president of the United States.

"Be it further resolved, that the Honorable John A. Lusk, Jr., chairman of this meeting be, and he is authorized and requested to forward a copy of this resolution to the chairman of the State Executive Committee of the Democratic Party in each state and that the Honorable J. Strom Thurmond and the Honorable Fielding Wright, each be officially notified of the adoption of this resolution at a meeting to be held in

States' Rights Parley Slated At Birmingham

Delegation Will Include Delegates, Electors, Committee Executives

To Open Saturday

10 Others Are Listed Besides Committeeman And Committeewoman

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—(AP)—A Dixie states rights' conference to adopt a plan opposing the national party's civil rights stand will be held in Birmingham Saturday, ex-Gov. Frank Dixon said Wednesday night.

Dixon, one of two Alabama members of the states rights campaign committee, said he had "been in touch with the Philadelphia convention" and that definite plans had been made to hold the meeting here.

Knife In Heart

Dixon issued the following statement:

"The National Democratic Party has put a knife in the heart of the South. I urge the good Democrats of Alabama to attend the Birmingham states rights meeting to register their protests and adopt plans for the future."

The former Alabama governor said further that first plans were to hold the meeting at the Tutwiler Hotel but arrangements had been made to have it at the 6,000 capacity city auditorium, if, he added, the response is what we expect in view of the new developments at the Philadelphia conventiton.

52-Man Group

Earlier Wednesday, State Democratic Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, named a 52-man Alabama delegation to the conference.

At a recent meeting in Jackson, Miss., states' rights Democrats agreed to hold the Birmingham conference if the national convention nominated President Truman or adopted a platform on civil rights objectionable to them.

Convention Delegates

The 52-man delegation includes Alabama's 26 convention delegates, 11 presidential electors, state party national executive committee and 10 other persons.

McCorvey said he was naming the delegation instead of calling the state committee into session because of the time element. With such a large delegation from Alabama, he said each delegate would have only a fractional vote.

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — Governor Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, formally called Wednesday night for a meeting of Dixie Democrats in Birmingham, Saturday to designate a "states rights" Democratic candidate for president, opposing Harry S. Truman.

He issued the call shortly after the Mississippi delegation and half the Alabama delegates had stalked out of the Philadelphia convention in protest against the convention's endorsement of Mr. Truman's civil rights program.

"The Mississippi delegation is on its way to Birmingham," he told a reporter. "There will be a good many other states represented."

He said the Birmingham conference will suggest a man for the individual Southern states to nominate for president. The meeting will write a states rights platform, he said.

W. W. Wright, co-chairman with Governor Wright of the Southern States Rights Committee, joined in the announcement.

McCorvey named the following delegates to the Birmingham meeting:

J. M. Bonner, Camden; A. A. Carmichael, Montgomery; Eugene (Bull) Connor, Birmingham; Handy Ellis, Columbiana; Lister Hill, Montgomery; D. Hardy Riddle, Talladega; Chauncey Sparks, Eufaula; Albert Stapp, Birmingham; John E. Mandevill, Mobile; John L. Moore, Mobile.

States' Rights Issue

The Post

The Democratic convention may have seemed to many rather a sorry spectacle of the breaking up of a famous old party. But, if it served no other purpose, at least it reminded us of the great basic principles on which this country was founded.

For the Southern Democrats, achieving real stature in their hour of defeat, had this to say—that the 13 colonies entered the Union to protect themselves on their right to local self-government and in their right to be free from the heavy hand of an imposed outside authority. The founders never envisioned what a hydraheaded monster their own central government would become under the leadership of unprincipled ambitious men taking advantage of a national emergency.

Washington D. C.

No amount of tinseled window dressing nor frantic eleventh hour beating of the breast at the plight of the common man (whose vote is their chief concern) can obscure the fact that once again both major parties have failed to present the country with the real issue, which is the issue of constitutional government versus statism.

For 16 long years the American people have been waiting for a man with vision and patriotism to lead them back to the broad free highway where there is room enough for them to march side by side.

Dixie Democrats Alert Against Civil Rights Bills

Star
New York, N. Y.
Mon. 7-26-48

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP)—Southern Democrats guardedly watched today for an effort by the Republican Senate majority to enact the civil rights program President Truman has urged.

Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi conceded a chance that at least one of the bills Truman asked Congress to enact would get through the special session.

Without actually saying so, acting Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska has indicated the GOP command would call up a civil-rights bill first.

Wherry noted last week that three civil-rights bills were on the Senate calendar and ready for immediate debate. Others are pending in the House.

Mon.

The three are bills aimed at outlawing lynching, the poll tax and discrimination in employment.

Eastland and other southerners have served notice, however, that they will try to talk any of the three to death.

Dixiecrats May Try 'Unbeatable' Filibuster

WASHINGTON, July 25 (UP)—Parliamentary experts said today that unless someone stole a march the first day or two, the Dixie Democrats had an unbeatable filibuster technique handy to throttle any civil rights bill.

The system is known as "amending the journal." At the beginning of each new legislative day, the journal of the previous day's proceedings comes up for approval. Senate rules provide that it must be gotten out of the way before any other business can come up.

Usually the journal is "dispensed with" by unanimous consent. But if someone wants to prevent certain legislation from coming up, he can demand that it be read in full, and then start amending it.

There is no bar to the number or nature of amendments, and debate on each amendment is unlimited.

Star

What is more important, it has been held that the Senate's famous cloture rule cannot be used to shut off a talkathon based on amending the journal.

New York, N.Y.

Previous attempts to break that type of filibuster have failed. The most recent one was in January-February of 1946, when for 21 days Southern Senators "discussed" two amendments to the journal of Jan. 17 to block an effort by Sen. Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.) to get action on a fair employment practice bill.

States' Righters Capture Party In Louisiana

Mon. 9-13-48

The States' Rights Democrats can now add ten more electoral college votes to their total.

The senatorial campaign in Louisiana is over and Russell Long, son of Huey Long, has been nominated.

So meeting last week the Louisiana Democratic executive committee went over lock, stock and barrel to the States' Righters, eliminating the names of Truman and Barkley, the Democratic nominees, from the Democratic ballot and substituting instead the names of Thurmond and Wright, the States' Rights nominees.

Moreover, the committee, acting unanimously on motion of Judge Leander Perez, explained its unprecedented action of changing candidates in midstream in a scorching denunciation of the President's civil rights program declaring it to be its duty to "support candidates for president and vice president who will preserve the traditions of the people of this state and protect their right of self-government and all other state's rights in accordance with our American way of constitutional government."

To prevent a split in the anti-Truman vote the State's Rights Democrats, who had already qualified their electors with the secretary of state of Louisiana, will be asked to withdraw their ticket, now that they have captured the Democratic party organization. And this is, of course, expected to be done.

What the national Democratic party will do in Louisiana now is not certain. They may follow the course adopted in South Carolina where also the Dixiecrats have taken over the party machinery and set up a separate organization to put out a list of "real" Democratic electors. Or the loyal Democrats may resort to a write-in campaign. Either course, however, is likely to be futile. Louisiana, like South Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama, can be written off as lost. This talk of court action against Louisiana is nonsense. The national party cannot control the state parties.

Apparently the national Democratic party had been banking on Governor Earl Long's remaining faithful to President Truman. Obviously it has proved to be a vain hope. The unanimous action of the Louisiana executive committee could not have been taken without Governor Long's approval.

And the addition of the 10 Louisiana electoral college votes to the Thurmond-Wright total would give the Dixiecrats as of today between 38 and 45 electoral votes—it takes 266 to win and Dewey will be elected—Alabama, 11; Louisiana, 10; Mississippi, 9; South Carolina, 8, plus a possibility of four more from Florida and three more from Tennessee. And in either case this is more than Landon got in 1936 and more than Taft got in 1912.

The States' Righters may of course lose their four Florida votes and be forced to make a contest of it as a result of the special session of the Florida legislature, called to straighten out the situation resulting from the announcement by four of the eight Democratic electors in Florida that they would vote for Thurmond and Wright instead of Truman and Barkley. The special session is intended to put two so-called Democratic tickets in the field in Florida, one committed to Truman and one to Thurmond, in which the case the Florida voters would decide the issue.

But the Louisiana victory is not expected to be the last such seizure of Democratic machinery in the South. There is Georgia where the Democratic primary is now over with Herman Talmadge named as the new Governor of Georgia. Talmadge conducted his campaign on what may be termed a States' Rights Democratic platform and it would be consistent and logical therefore if he should use his influence, which would be controlling, to carry the official Democratic party of Georgia over to the Dixiecrats.

And there may be others although not many.

STATES' RIGHTS KITTY SHOWS MERE $13,449

Appeal

And It's Been Overdrawn By $1446, Headquarters Says In Retort To Pearson

Tues. 9-21-48

From The Commercial Appeal Jackson, Mississippi, Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 20.—Despite reports that the States' Rights Democratic organization has reecived large contributions from oil interests, the national headquarters here Monday disclosed donations of only $13,449 through Aug. 31.

On top of that, expenses as of that date were $14,890, leavin a "book overdraft" of $1441.

Pearson Charge Denied

Release of the financial report was coupled with a denial by Merrit Gibson, national campaign director, of a statement Sunday night by Drew Pearson that a $200.000 gift had been made the organization by H. R. Culien, wealthy oil man of Houston, Texas.

"It is not true that Mr. Cullen contributed one penny to the States' Rights national campaign fund," Mr. Gibson said. "All receipts will be reported according to law and they will be self-explanatory."

The financial statement, covering the period Aug. 4 through Aug. 31, showed total expenses of $14,890. The $13,440 in contributions included $2672 turned over to the group by the Mississippi State Democratic Campaign Committee after it became a national party.

First official action linking the group with a national setup was Aug. 3 when the Mississippi Democratic Convention nominated Governor Thurmond of South Carolina for President, and Governor Wright of Mississippi for vice president.

Inverness Gives $1590

Tues 9-21-48

Largest contribution listed by Mr. Gibson was $1590 from citizens of Inverness in the Delta. The largest individual donation was $540 from Frank Wynne of Meridian. The H. D. Holder Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy gave $200, as did W. M. Drake of Church Hill. John S. Mosby of Little Rock, donated $250.

LET THE DIXIECRATS BEWARE

Sat 8-28-48

It is interesting, but not surprising, to note that a political Gallup poll published last week, revealed that at that time, the Dixiecrats in the Southern states had the support of one in every seven voters below the Mason and Dixon line.

On the first survey to be conducted on the popularity of Governor J. Strom Thurmond since his nomination for president by the States Rights party. Thurmond polled 14 per cent throughout the 13 southern states as a group.

Throughout the south, interviewers for the Gallup Polls institute put the following questions to southern voters in a survey begun immediately after the formation of the States Rights party: "If the presidential election were being held today, how would you vote—for Dewey, for Truman, for Wallace, or for Thurmond?" The results among those qualified, and who said they intended to vote in November, were, for: Truman, 41 per cent; Dewey, 34; Thurmond, 14; Wallace, 02; and those who gave no opinion, 09.

On the surface, this 14 per cent of the vote taken from the recognized Democratic party, can mean little more to the Dixiecrats than one cutting off his nose to spite his face. But, this is a thing characteristic of these 14 per centers, and it is a thing that for lo lo! these many years have made these 14 per centers a mill-stone about the neck of the Democratic party as a whole.

It has long been the hue and cry of this 14 per cent group that the Republicans constitutes the party of the "Special privilege class." That's the only thing they've ever said that we heartily agree with. But, on the other hand, what are they going to do about it?

Sat 8-28-48

All we are able to see is: that they are going to hash the Democratic party up into so many pieces that its own sire won't know it, and, as a result, hand the November election over to their Republican arch enemies, on a silver platter.

And why? Because the right-wing of the Democratic party has recognized the truth of and is proposing to carry out the tennets of that golden phrase by someone: that we cannot be a srong naion "half slave and half free." and let us add: half privileged, and half under privileged.

Now, this latter phrase the Dixiecrats well know, as regards themselves, and is one of the principles in life, (whether they kuew it to be a principle or not) they have long fought fast and hard for, but not including that group God made wth black faces.

Let the Dixiecrats beware!

Wright Warns South Must 'Stand Solid'

Bir. News

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

SELMA, Ala., Oct. 19—The South must either "stand solid" or "endure a shameful period of social and economic exploitation," Mississippi Gov. Fielding Wright warned in a speech prepared for delivery here today.

"We have our choice," the States' Rights vice presidential candidate told members of the Dallas County Farm Bureau. "Either we assert our political maturity by balloting overwhelmingly for constitutional government and our traditions, or we divide our strength and thus fall prey to the grasping tactics of Truman or Dewey."

Speaking before a barbecue rally attended by various political leaders from over the state at Twilley's Lake, near Selma, Gov. Strom Thurmond's running mate asserted:

"Both the Truman Democrats and the Republicans have agreed to exploit the Southern states for the sake of clamoring minority groups in the North.

"With vicious phrases and vainglorious words, the platforms written by those parties in Philadelphia were designed to create a social, economic and political wasteland South of the Mason-Dixon Line."

Meantime, State Democratic Executive Committee Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, one of the 11 Alabama Democratic elector nominees pledged to Thurmond and Wright, was lashing out in two directions at critics of the States' Rights and in Alabama.

Striking back at the CIO-PAC in Birmingham, McCorvey characterized as "merest rot and buncombe" a claim by this organized labor group that his interest in state ownership of tidelands as an oil company attorney led him to support the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

* * *

McCORVEY ALSO TOOK A POKE at Gov. Folsom's recent declaration for President Truman. He said that Folsom and other Truman suporters deliberately had avoided placing Truman elector candidates on the November ballot for fear of "being snowed under."

The CIO-PAC asserted that the "real issue" motivating the States' Righters was "tidelands oil money and what's best for the corporations and real estate lobbies." McCorvey was referred to as attorney for two large oil companies.

The state chairman admitted he was attorney for "some major oil companies and other corporations." But he added that none of them had "directly or indirectly" suggested the question of tidelands in connection with the States' Rights campaign.

Gov. Wright, in his Selma address, struck out against both Republicans and national Democrats, declaring that the "so-called civil rights proposals of Truman and Dewey were aimed directly at the South."

"Don't be misled," the vice presidential aspirant said, "We are the targets. The weapons were forged in Philadelphia by subversive forces who have seized control of the national Democratic Party and the Republican Party. Either we resist these forces are we are conquered."

The Mississippi executive warned that not only would social traditions of the South be disrupted by passage of "civil rights" measures of Dewey and Truman, but that the "great progress made by Southern states in agriculture, industry and commerce will be throttled."

* * *

WRIGHT SAID THE LINE has been sharply drawn between the States' Righters and "Democrat-Republican-Progressive," and that the political battle would continue long after the Nov. 2 election.

He pointed out that Alabama always has fought for states' rights and praised this state's senators and representatives for their stand against the FEPC and other "subversive legislation designed to injure the South."

"We of Mississippi, South Carolina, Louisiana and other Southern states join with you in this historic struggle," Gov. Wright told the Black Belt gathering. "We have served warning to those selfish politicians who believed they could snub the South and barter away our birthrights of freedom."

Rep. Walter C. Givhan, president of the Dallas Farm Bureau and himself one of the state's 11 Democratic elector nominees, presided at the rally. Gov. Wright and members of his party were greeted by other elector nominees (all 11 were invited) and States' Rights leaders at the Albert Hotel here before the barbecue.

Judge Wilkinson States States Rights Objectives

Columbia Record

Judge Horace C. Wilkinson of Birmingham, States Rights candidate for elector in Alabama, made out as good a case as can be made for the States Rights party or semi-party in his speech Friday night at Sumter.

Mon 8-30-48

There was in his speech some Southern oratory which would have been better omitted but the four objectives of the States Rights party as listed by him were sanely put and reasoned.

Columbia S.C.

But Judge Wilkinson's oratory and his arguments cannot conceal the fact that the States Righters are pursuing a will-o'-the-wisp. When he holds out the hope that the Thurmond-Wright ticket will get enough electoral votes to give Thurmond a fair chance of election in the House of Representatives, he is ignoring history. Only twice in history has the election of a President been thrown into the House.

The first occasion occurred in 1800 when Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr, both candidates of the Republican, now called the Democratic, party received the same number of votes for the presidency. This was in the day when it was the custom of the electors to make no distinction between their votes for the president and the vice president. They simply voted for two candidates, the one receiving the largest number of votes becoming president and the one the next largest vice president. Jefferson and Burr—Jefferson was the party's choice for president—were running against John Adams and Charles C. Pinckney, of South Carolina, the Federalist party candidates. The Republicans won but since all of the Republican electors voted for both Jefferson and Burr, the tie resulted. In the House through the influence of Alexander Hamilton, leader of the Federalist party and Jefferson's long time political rival, Jefferson was chosen as president, as the Republicans intended.

Mon 8-30-48

The second occasion that forced the election of the President by the House occurred in 1824. By that time the once strong Federalist party had become so weak it did not even attempt to put a presidential candidate in the race. But this did not mean that there was any lack of competition for the office. Four Republicans—i. e., Democrats—tried to get it. They were Andrew Jackson, John Quincy Adams, William H. Crawford and Henry Clay. Each received enough electoral votes to prevent any one of the others from receiving the necessary majority. Jackson led with 99, Adams had 84, Crawford 41 and Clay 37. The constitution had been amended meanwhile to provide that the House should choose the president from a [illegible] the three highest candidates. This provision automatically eliminated Clay. Before the House could convene William H. Crawford suffered a stroke which put him out of the running. The contest was, therefore, narrowed to a choice between Jackson and Adams, and Jackson having received the largest popular and electoral vote expected to be president. The House through the influence of Clay, then its speaker, chose Adams instead. Jackson had to run again four years later and this time was elected.

Mon 8-30-48

Neither of the circumstances which led to these two elections by the House are likely to occur again. Now the electors are required to vote for one man for president and one man for vice president. No party puts four candidates in the field any more. The device of the party convention, which hadn't been invented in 1824, prevents this.

The Republicans, Dewey and Warren, will be elected in November. Nothing the States Rights Democrats can do will really help or hinder them. What the States Righters can do—and it is the one positive gain from a negative movement—was suggested in Judge Wilkinson's second objective. "We will educate the people of this nation on the perilous departure from constitutional government advocated by the three nominees of the Philadelphia conventions," he said. And to a certain extent the States Rights movement has helped to advertise the importance of states rights everywhere. The weakness of the effort derives from the fact that it is not being made within the two-party system. The States Rights party, if it be a party, cannot hope to be anything but a minority party forever out in the cold. It may have right on its side—and to a considerable extent it does have—but a political party needs more than right; it needs votes.

The States Right movement, however, is suffering from schizophrenia—split personality. It is a party and it isn't. As Judge Wilkinson said, "We will preserve the Democratic party in our respective states." This makes the States Righters undertakers and embalers in the Southern states or those states in which it has taken over the Democratic party machinery for the historic Democratic party, which is as dead as Pharaoh.

The States Rights movement is a sort of halfway house. It represents the Southern attempt to cling to word worship for another four years. In 1952 when the disaster at Philadelphia is repeated, with some additional trimmings, the South may get mad enough to go the whole hog and set up the two-party system.

DIXIECRAT DOUBLE-TALK

The [illegible]

Mon 8-30-48

Wash. D.C.

The Dixiecrats, who lost their shirts at the Philadelphia Democratic convention, began dealing some fast ones from the bottom of the deck after they returned home.

They began building a political organization of their own on the cockeyed premise that their beloved "states rights" took precedence over the civil rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

They announced they would have candidates of their own running for president and vice president. This, they said, would give Southerners an opportunity to show how they felt about that rebel Harry Truman and his dad-blasted civil rights program.

Then they began a campaign to keep Truman's name off the ballot!

Temporarily, they have succeeded in Alabama and Louisiana.

We say "temporarily" because there's a chance legal action can be taken to get Truman's name on the ballot.

The Dixiecrats, who had full opportunity at Philadelphia to vote on the party's nominee, are trying to deny citizens of two states the right to vote on the man the party nominated.

This disgraceful behavior goes with the double-talk about "rights" which has been coming from Dixiecrats.

So there will be no misunderstanding, we state flatly that we feel the same way about those who seek to keep Henry Wallace's name on the ballot.

Alabama's Votes Are Pledged To Thurmond-Wright Ticket

Commerical Appeal Memphis Tenn

By STANLEY ATKINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 29.—Alabama Democratic Elector nominees Thursday night pledged the state's 11 electoral votes to the Thurmond-Wright States' Rights ticket.

Chairman John A. Lusk Jr., Gadsden, said a resolution to that effect was adopted at a special caucus attended by seven of the 11 electors. He said the other four, who were unable to be present, agreed to the pledge. Fri. 7-30-48

The action was the first by Southern electors in support of the States' Rights ticket chosen at the convention in Birmingham July 17.

At that meeting, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina was recommended for President and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi for vice president.

Pledged Against Truman

Alabama's electors, like Mississippi's, are pledged against voting for President Truman in the Electoral College.

Mississippi States' Rights supporters will meet Tuesday at Jackson, Miss., in ar econvened session of the State Democratic Party. A similar pledge to support the Thurmond-Wright ticket is expected to be made at the session.

The Alabama electors' resolution said in part:

"Governor Thurmond and Governor Wright are in hearty accord with the platform upon which we were nominated and the views of States' Rights Democrats (throughout the Nation) for a return to constitutional government and the preservation of the rights of the several states in domestic matters, personal rights and personal liberties, more particularly such domestic matters as law enforcement, voting, employment practices and segregation. Fri. 7-30-48

Score Philadelphia Action

"We believe the Philadelphia Convention nominated a candidate for president that 90 per cent of ther ank and file of the Democrats of the several states do not want.

"The convention was manipulated by masters of political intrigue and controlled by political bosses for selfish purposes, and it deliberately thwarted instead of carrying out the wishes and will of the Democrats of the several states."

Half of Alabama's 26-man delegation and all of the Mississippi delegation walked out of the Philadelphia convention over the civil rights issue.

Governors Thurmond and Wright announced Wednesday plans for an intensive national campaign opening Aug. 11. This drive is to start at a States' Rights rally at Houston, Texas, at which Governor Thurmond will formally accept the nomination. 7-30-48

Laney Did Not Know About Appointment

From The Commercial Appeal
Little Rock Bureau

LITTLE ROCK, July 29.—Governor Laney said Thursday his appointment as chairman of a Steering Committee to map campaign plans for States' Rights Democratic presidential candidates "was made without my knowledge."

The Governor received a telegram from South Carolina's Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, recommended as a presidential candidate on a States' Rights ticket, informing him of his appointment to head the Steering Committee.

"This action was taken without my knowledge," Governor Laney said. "I haven't agreed to serve so far, and will have to give the matter some consideration."

He declared he still was against President Truman's civil rights proposals, but added the civil rights question and heading a committee to run a campaign "are entirely two different things."

"I am in sympathy with this group, and will be available to assist them in some capacity," he said.

Meanwhile, John Daggett of Marianna, a member of the States Rights Democrats' Executive Committee, announced Governor Thurmond planned to speak in Arkansas on Aug. 2 6and 27. Mr. Daggett said the places would be announced later.

NEW ORLEANS, July 29.—(UP)—Al C. Terrebonne, an official of the New Orleans States' Rights Democrats, said Thursday night "The time is not too far off when the white and colored people of the South will be working together to find a solution to the horrible racial conditions in the Northern states."

". . . I want to make it clear that no sinsible citizen of the South claims that our racial situation is perfect . . . but our local conditions are 100 per cent better than the slums of New York, Chicago and Philadelphia," he said.

Terrebone, a member of the temporary General Committee, spoke over a radio station in New Orleans. Fri. 7-30-48

"I further think it is safe to say . . . that hundreds of our colored friends already know and understand that they are being used as tools by these vote-hungry Northern politicians, who keep pointing at the South to cover up the cruel and filthy conditions in their own sectionso f the country," he said.

He charged that the three presidential candidates, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, President Truman and Henry Wallace, "have proposed to short cut and detour the American form of government, home rule and constitutional States' Rights to catch the balance of power vote in November of 1948."

Mr. Terrebonne said most voters did not have the time to "read the fine print" of the civil rights proposals, and the presidential candidates were relying on this to get them to "swallow the poisonous contents of their political bottles."

"There can be no dictatorship or totalitarian government in any land that retains States' Rights and local home rule," he said.

States' Rights Report Shows $122,192 Given

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 29 (AP)—States' Rights Democrats' third financial report shows contributions totaling $122,192.88 and expenditures amounting to $111,644.77 for the period August 4 through Wednesday.

George C. Wallace, Jackson, national treasurer of the organization, said today the report was mailed to the clerk of the House of Representatives prior to [illegible] night Thursday in com with the Hatch Act.

Dixiecrat Denounces Rights-Klan Suggestio

The News
Birmingham Ala.

A leader in the States' Rights movement yesterday labeled as "maliciously false" the recent criticism by Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael of the Thurmond-Wright ticket and its supporters.

Carmichael, speaking to the Methodist Committee for Social Action in Montgomery, said the States' Righters were linked with the Ku Klux Klan and that their aim is to pave the way for a Republican victory this November.

Atty. Horace Wilkinson replied to the attorney general with this statement: 9-5-48

"Carmichael's maliciously false statement, so far as the States' Rights group is concerned, was not original with him. He only repeated some maliciously false statements that others had prepared for him.

"I greatly fear that some designing and unscrupulous politicians have taken advantage of him. Carmichael pretends that he is for Truman and against the FEPC. Two-thirds of the inmates of our asylums have more sense than to expect people to accept a statement of that kind. The only way to keep Alabama from going Republican is to vote for Thurmond and Wright.

"Wallace, Dewey and Truman all favor FEPC. All of them want to make our way of life conform to a Russian pattern. It is regrettable that Mr. Carmichael is unable to appreciate that." 9-5-48

States' Rights And Federalism

"That all should cry, 'Beware! Beware!
His flashing eye, his floating hair . . .'"

Tues 9-7-48
Columbia S.C.

Alabama's attorney general breathing hard, makes it out that the States' Rights movement is a trap for fools that has been set by knaves. But the great Baltimore Sun disagrees. Although doubting that the movement will sweep the country, The Sun calls it "the most dignified and intellectually the most honest political movement launched in the South in several generations."

This should interest the equally hard-breathing editor of The Atlanta Constitution.

"I Sat Back and Reflected," Editor McGill captions a recent column. "It being late in the evening," he explains, "and I alone in the office, I gave way to reflection." We lesser editorialists can barely manage just to put our reflections down, but Ralph obliges always with a nice pen picture of himself reflecting as he reflects. This time he is reflecting on the awful hyprocrisy of our southern people in talking States' Rights and nevertheless accepting federal monies for this and that, and even, some of us, wanting federal aid to education. "We cannot in honesty stand and say that what we are fighting for is the purity of states' rights," he reflects, sitting there, late in the evening, alone in his office.

We are not fighting for States' Rights in a vacuum or as a pure abstraction. We are fighting for the principle because we happen to have in our race problem a more powerful and peculiar need of the principle than any other people in America. The fact nominates us now to lead—as we are doing—an America turned, everywhere and for many reasons, against federalism gone mad. Tues 9-7-48

To affirm the principle which some call home rule, some local self-government, and we States' Rights, is not to propose secession from the United States, or from either the duties or the perquisites of belonging. We mean to go on being Uncle Sam's nephew, of course. We mean to go on contributing more fighting men per capita than any other Americans when war comes. We mean to go on paying our federal taxes, engaging in interstate commerce, adding our songs and loves and cultural achievements and birth rates to a nation's total. And we mean to go on participating in those governmental benefits which, in counties as regards states and in states as regards Washingt are a recognition of the fact that e are in most respects a people together, that the federal government does have an obligation to us all, and that even though there are many things the states can handle far better than the federal government there are others which can only be dealt with practically from Washington.

If your heart is in the right place, Ralph, (and if you reflect hard, all alone there, and shuck some corn), you will understand these things. There is a difference between Secession and States' Rights. Indeed they are opposites. Nobody, in the South or anywhere, wants Secession. But nearly everybody, all over the country, not just those you call "Dixiecrats," thinks this a time for reemphasis of States' Rights. Tues 9-7-48

That pronouncement from the World Council of Churches about Capitalism and Communism both being sinful and about how we need one for freedom and the other for welfare sounds so familiar that you would almost believe our American Bishop Oxnam had been made one of the Council's six presidents. And, by a singular coincidence, he has. Editor Caleb King, says in The Florida Times-Union that this selection "will disappoint Americans who had been praying that great good might come out of the work of this world wide body." Bishop Oxnam is European minded. He believes in the participating government and the participating church. But unless we Americans stand out against excesses of both, the twain are going to meet, and what will there be then?

It is indeed disappointing to most Americans, I believe, to have the World Council balance Capitalism and Communism, as it does, implying that Capitalism means freedom but Communism welfare, and that the two must get together. For Communism is not only a Godless system but it is one which, as witnesses the only land where it has ever been tried out, provides neithor freedom nor welfare. In America, the only land where capitalism is still the unblushing rule, we happen to have with all our sins more freedom and more welfare than any other nation on earth. The World Council, of course, is a council of religious, not economic leaders. That explains its mistake. But it does not explain how it is persuaded to compromise its religious leadership by going in for politics and economics. Tues 9-7-48

And then Editor Brainard Cooper, of The Chattanooga News-Free Press, makes point against the Mayor Humphrey type of oratory that says "Let's forget about States' Rights and bask in the sunlight of human rights." In the long run, he says, "you can't have human rights without states' rights." The more total and centralized and participating a government is, the more human rights are likely to be destroyed. It is something for Mayor Humphrey to think about. And Bishop Oxnam and Attorney General Carmichael, and the Lone Reflector in great Grady's chair.

'Fourth Party' May Pave Way for GOP Capture of Some States

New York, N.Y.

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—Seven weeks before the campaign ends, the four-way battle for political preferment in Southern and border states with their 148 electoral votes still is far from the climactic stage, but these trends are now developing:

The "Dixiecrats" may be able to take enough regular Democratic votes away to give the Republicans a victory in one or more of the following states: North Carolina (14 electoral votes), Virginia (11), Tennessee (12), and Oklahoma (10). This prospect is conceded privately by some Democrats, and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey intends to campaign at least in North Carolina and Virginia.

The "Dixiecrats" chalked up a surprise gain when the Louisiana Democratic Central Committee took President Truman's name off the ballot. This seems to insure Louisiana's ten votes for Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, the "Dixiecrat" candidates.

Sun 9-12-48

"Dixiecrats" also seem to have a stranglehold on the electoral votes of Mississippi (9), Alabama (11), and four of Florida's eight, with an excellent chance of winning Governor Thurmond's home state, South Carolina (8).

The regular Democratic ticket of President Truman and Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky seems to have good prospects for taking the electoral votes of Arkansas (9), Georgia (12), Kentucky (11), Texas (23), and four from Florida.

Setback in Indiana

The "Dixiecrats" stubbed their toe when they invaded Indiana in an effort to get on the ballot. They may have provided the regular Democratic organization with the ammunition needed to make the new party unpopular with Southern Democrats who are against Mr. Truman but still are not sympathetic to the Republicans.

The Indianapolis Star, an independent Republican newspaper, said Thursday that Republican State Chairman H. Clark Springer admitted that GOP headquarters had provided mimeograph equipment to prepare the petition forms upon which the "Dixiecrats" obtained 11,084 voters' signatures.

Frank Kimbrell, Jackson, Miss. attorney and "Dixiecrat" organizer, made the request for GOP help in getting on the Indiana ballot, and later paid approximately 6 cents per signature to petition passers. But the validity of the signatures now is under attack in a number of court actions.

The importance of this issue is that an attempt can now be made to label the "Dixiecrat" party throughout the South as a Republican "puppet," rather than a dissident Democratic group fighting for principles in which a majority of Southerners believe.

Democratic Efforts

This picture, as of today, represents a synthesis of views expressed by Democrats, Republicans and "Dixiecrats," with whom this correspondent has spoken. The time before the campaign ends, however, is sufficient to permit drastic changes to occur by Nov. 2.

Regular Democrats are making the major effort. Separate slates of electors are being selected to oppose the party organizations in Mississippi and South Carolina, which seceded with the "Dixiecrat" founders. A court fight will be necessary to get the President's name on the ballot in Alabama. Top Democratic leaders already have called for the resignation of Governor Thurmond and Marion Rushton of Alabama as National Committee members; if they do not voluntarily quit, their seats will be declared vacant because they have deserted the national ticket.

It is probably safe to say that the "Dixiecrat" spokesmen, in their emphasis on opposition to President Truman's civil-rights program and advocacy of state's rights, voice the sentiments of a majority of Southerners. But it is by no means clear, as yet, that this majority is willing to bolt the Democratic ticket and support a fourth slate or go Republican.

What the Democrats fear are defections by a sizable minority in states where active Republican organizations exist and where the margin of victory in 1944 was none too satisfactory. That is why North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Oklahoma are listed as states which might be swung into the Republican electoral column by a plurality.

The thing that is hurting the Democrats most in the South is the lack of funds and top campaigners. This section normally comes up with $1,000,000 in a Presidential campaign year, but this year there has been only a slow trickle of money. Faced with an internal fight in the South, most of the party's leading statesmen from Southern states in Congress apparently will lend aid neither to the regular Democrats nor "Dixiecrat" organizations.

Senator Barkley, the Vice Presidential nominee, is, of course, an exception. So is Senator Claude Pepper of Florida. None of the other Senators has lined up with the "Dixiecrat" movement although they are equally opposed to the President's civil-rights program which precipitated the split.

Truman Uncompromising

Sun 9-12-48

Despite the fact that he is fighting an uphill battle for re-election, President Truman has thus far given no sign of attempting to mollify either the "Dixiecrats" or those Southern leaders who, while not bolting, are not inclined to give the national ticket any help. His call for an extra session of Congress in which he reiterated his demand for the civil-rights legislation so distasteful to all Southern Congressmen was proof that he meant to fight the battle for the White House on his own terms.

The Republicans, given a liberal dose of confidence by every new published public opinion poll, are not counting on any Southern electoral votes to put Governor Dewey in the White House, but they are overlooking no bets in the long-range effort to make the two-party system more of a reality in the South. The Republicans in the South are waging one of the most intensive publicity campaigns in modern history. Herbert Brownell, GOP campaign manager, has announced that a leading Republican will speak in each Southern state for the Dewey-Warren ticket.

South Snubbed By Trumanites, Bloch Asserts

Georgia States' Rights Leader Says President Fooled By Dixie Stand

Montgomery, Ala.

350 Attend Rally

Thurmond Vote Is Asked By Rushton From All Supporting His Views

By WILLIAM McDONALD and FOSTER HALEY

Two fiery Dixiecrats lashed out at President Truman and his civil rights program last night at a meeting of about 350 ardent States' Righters at the City Auditorium here.

The principal speakers were Charles J. Bloch, one of Georgia's presidential electors and the man who nominated Senator Russell (D), Georgia, for president at the Democratic convention, and Col. Marion D. Rushton, an Alabama States' Rights Democratic leader.

Judge Walter B. Jones, of Montgomery, presided. A 15-piece brass band lent color and music to the event.

Bloch declared that "The Democratic Party stuck with the tenth amendment to the U. S. Constitution until beyond 1944; but abandoned it, and all States' Righters with it, at the Democratic convention in 1948 by adopting Truman's civil rights planks over heated and prolonged protest."

South Deserted

The Georgiana was emphatic in his assertion that the Democratic Party has deserted the South and the States' Rights Party.

"Truman took advantage of the solid block of votes in the South," Bloch averred. "He thought the South could be depended on to stay with the Democratic Party, but he discovered otherwise."

Col. Rushton declared: "Vote for Wallace, if you want to. Vote for Dewey, if you weer raised that way. You can't vote for Truman, but you can fuss about it. Vote for Thurmond, if you were raised that way!"

Rushton said that the Negro problem belonged to the South and no one else, adding:

"It will be settled by education, evolution, patience and growth. Legislation is not the solution, although the majority of the people outside of the South think it is . . .

"The South has to educate 120 million people outside the South to understand the problems of the 20 million that live in the South. Otherwise, the

Sat 10-16-48

"People of the rest of the country will try to MAKE the South settle the race question, and that will only stir up trouble every where and settle nothing."

The main speakers were preceded by the presentation of the Alabama flag—that was snatched from a balcony at the last Democratic Convention—to Mrs. Marie Bankhead Owen, director of the State Department of Archives and History.

The man who snatched the flag, Jesse Edwards, a delegate from Brighton ,Ala., made the presentation.

Edwards described the Truman civil rights plank as "something that must have been written by the press agent of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

"Didn't Belong There"

He explained that the reason he cut down the flag was "because it didn't belong there."

Those present i nthe audience enthusiastically greeted the anti-Truman sallies tossed frequently int othe microphone by the speakers, and were vociferous in their approval of pro-Southern sentiment.

Mrs. Owen, in receiving the convention flag, was acclaimed by particularly hearty applause when she pointed out that "a survey made by the Library of Congress showed that the most popular and beloved song in the entire world was none other than 'Dixie'."

State Dixiecrat Group Will Stump For Texas Party

34d

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Oct. 17 — (AP) — A group of Alabama's States' Rights Democrats are scheduled to leave by chartered plane tomorrow for Houston, Tex., and an extensive campaign for the States' Rights Party in Texas.

Mon 10-18-48

Headquarters of the States' Rights Party here said members of the group will attend a rally and barbecue at Houston, where Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas will speak.

Montgomery Ala

The group will participate in a speaking campaign designed to carry the States' Rights platform and objectives into every county in Texas, headquarters here said.

Members of the Alabama group will include Frank M. Dixon, Birmingham, former Alabama governor; John E. Mandeville, Mobile, a delegate to the National Democratic Convention last Summer; Robert B. Albritton, Andalusia, Democratic nominee for elector from Alabama; former U. S. Representative George Huddleston, Sr., Birmingham; Col. O. P. Lee, Opelika attorney, and U. S. Representative George Andrews, Union Springs.

LANEY, THE ARKANSAS TRAVELER

The Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala.

Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas seems to have a record of marching up the hill, then marching back down. Now he's a Dixiecrat, now he ain't.

In the beginning he was a prime mover. In Philadelphia he presided over the states rights rump convention. He was booked as the nominee of the Southern bolting element—the answer to Truman.

Sat

7-31-48

As late as Wednesday, the day Truman was nominated, Laney was anticipating his nomination. We recall that on Wednesday morning his two emissaries, Senators McClellan and Fullbright of Arkansas, arrived at the Alabama section in the convention hall to make sure that Alabama, first on the roll call, would yield to Arkansas for the purposes of Laney nomination.

Chairman Handy Ellis explained that the Alabama delegation, unwilling to take even a remote chance of Truman's name being placed first in nomination, had decided to yield or pass, to no one. Neither Arkansas senator said much, but McClellan, a man with cross black eyes, departed with a scowl on his face.

7-31-48

It is believed that Gov. Laney, a bulldoggish looking little man who speaks out of the side of his mouth, got a sore toe out of this. In any event, that afternoon the convention adopted its 21-carat version of a Civil Rights plank. And Laney announced that he could not allow his name to be used by a convention associated with anything so despicable. This was not an impressive explanation since, in any event, the convention was associated with something so despicable as Truman.

The Advertiser

Just after, in Birmingham, Laney would not take an active part in the Dixiecrat convention. He remained aloof in his hotel and issued a statement that, in essence condemned the convention. He said "revenge and obstinacy" were not the spirit of the South.

Montgomery, Ala

Some days later, back in Arkansas, Laney said we must seek deliverance within the national party.

Sat. 7-31-48

We assumed that this was exeunt Laney. But now we read that Laney will serve on a seven-man steering committee of the Dixiecrats.

His Nibs may well be called "The Arkansas Traveler."

Dixiecrat Pattern Lacks Forthrightness

(En Editorial In The Arkansas Gazette, Little Rock)

Down in Louisiana a few politicians sitting on the Democratic State Central Committee have decided that Govs. Thurmond and Wright shall be the Democratic nominees for president and vice president. As a result of their decision Dixiecrat electors will go on the Louisiana ballot under the rooster, in the place where Democrats have always appeared. And those Louisiana Democrats who want to vote for their party's nominees—Harry Truman and Alben Barkley—may do so only by writing in the names of 10 electors on the ballot.

This, Gov. Thurmond says happily, sets a pattern, and he predicts that other Southern states will follow it. An effort in that direction is being made in Arkansas—with the difference that the Dixiecrats will have to capture a whole state convention instead of a mere committee before they can deny the Truman-Barkley ticket its proper place on the ballot.

The maneuver is based on the theory that the Democratic nominees named in Philadelphia, and the platform adopted there, are not acceptable to Arkansas Democrats. But this argument comes late in the day. The issue was drawn clearly in Philadelphia. Gov. Laney, in offering himself as the Dixiecrat candidate, refused to commit himself to support the convention's nominee. As a result most of the Southern delegations which had endorsed him began to fall away, until finally Gov. Laney withdrew. The Georgia delegation, for instance, unanimously voted against Gov. Laney on the ground that it would not participate in a party bolt, and instead announced support of Sen. Russell of Georgia who had indicated that he would accept the verdict of the convention whatever it might be. It was with this clear understanding that Sen. Russell finally received the South's protest vote. The only delegates who indicated their unwillingness to support the nominee of the convention in which they had participated were those from Mississippi and Alabama who walked out. The others, including Gov. Thurmond and Gov. Laney and the entire Arkansas delegation, stayed with the convention until the end.

The moral obligation to support the party nominees implied by this record is, however, the least important aspect of the matter at hand. There is only one way to prove the Dixiecrats' contention that the national Democratic leadership is unacceptable to the South. That, of course, is to submit the proposition to the people as simply and directly as possible. And the only way to do that is to make certain that the Democratic electors are, as they always have been, committed to the nominees of the Democratic Party, while those who oppose Mr. Truman offer a slate of clearly-identified electors pledged to another candidate of their choice.

The Southern Democrats took their case against Mr. Truman to Philadelphia, presented it ably, and were voted down by an overwhelming majority. Those who cannot accept the verdict of the national convention are free to withdraw from the party and fight the Democratic nominee in the general election. The strongest indictment against the Dixiecrat cause is the apparent unwillingness of its leaders to follow that simple and forthright course. The fact that they are instead relying upon intra-party manipulation which would prevent a free expression of the popular will stands as evidence that, while they may sincerely believe in the justice of their cause, they entertain grave doubts as to its popularity.

Birmingham, Ala.

Governor Thurmond Repudiates Rabble-Rouser Support

South Carolinians generally and the Dixiecrats throughout the South may take pride for the summary way in which Governor J. Strom Thurmond, the Birmingham nominee for the presidency, dismissed and repudiated the offer of Gerald L. K. Smith's support for his state rights ticket.

The Dixiecratic movement, established on a shaky foundation by the conference-convention at Birmingham, could have died a-borning, if it had permitted itself to be identified with the Gerald L. K. Smith type of rabble-rouser.

Wed 7-21-48

Smith, who now lives in Oklahoma, announced that he had attended the convention "incognito" as a "delegate" from Oklahoma and was determined as director of the Christian Nationalist Crusade to recommend to "our leadership" that they support the state rights group in the campaign. "Our three million followers," he said, "believe that the Negro and the Jew are exerting too much control in American politics."

Governor Thurmond said he was "totally unaware" that Mr. Smith attended the Birmingham meeting and "he had no part whatever in the conference of Southern Democrats."

Columbia S.C.

"We do not invite, and we do not need the support of Gerald L. K. Smith or any other rabble-rouser who uses race prejudice and class hatred to inflame the emotions of our people," the Governor said.

"The fight of the South is not a racial fight, but an effort to protect the principle of state rights, without which the United States government cannot exist under its constitution."

Columbia Record

And that is as plain as English words can make it. The Dixiecrats, The Record believes, are pursuing a will-o'-the-wisp, trying to preserve the single-party system instead of abandoning it as they should. They are doing the South harm rather than good. But there is no need for them to compromise for the sake of votes and there is no need for them to accept association with demagogues of the Gerald L. K. Smith variety although there will doubtless be many of this type to try, as Smith did, to attach themselves to the Dixiecrat coattails.

Governor Thurmond, however, has made it clear that he wants nothing of them, nor of the effort to "smear" the movement "with the false trappings of race hatreds."

"We are interested solely in protecting the rights of states to manage their own internal affairs, which is a fundamental guarantee of the constitution of the United States," he said.

And this is a bigger issue than the so-called civil rights issue, upon which the speakers at Birmingham, Governor Thurmond among them, laid too much stress. It is the issue of whether the United States is to remain a federal government of self-governing states or is to be transmogrified into one big state in which the present states exercise no more real authority than townships in South Carolina.

But the movement toward the one great state, in which the national government is swallowing up the powers of the states, did not begin at Philadelphia in 1948. It was already far advanced when the Democratic party wrote the civil rights plank into its platform and few of the Southern politicians who are now leading the pack away from the Democratic party said or did anything to oppose the movement. The Southern states joined in the mad rush to exchange their state rights for federal money, which had, of course, been gathered from the states to begin with.

The Record.

And how much of a Dixiecratic movement would there be today if Truman had opposed instead of advocating the so-called civil rights program and the Democratic platform had ommitted all reference to the anti-Southern measures which have been devised as Negro vote getters in the "crucial" states? The answer is almost certainly, "None." This is the handicap that Governor Thurmond labors under in his attempt to divest the Southern dissident movement of the "racial issue" tinge. It was the racial issue that set off the dynamite. The state rights issue is the bigger issue, but that fight may have been begun too late.

Finish Fight Over Truman Seen In Texas

The Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala.

Mon. 8-2-48

Success Of Dixiecrats Is Linked To Seating Of Four Delegations

AUSTIN, TEXAS—(AP)—States Rights Democrats and party members loyal to the national Democratic ticket counted delegates Sunday for a finish fight over control of Texas' 23 presidential electors.

The delegates were named in Saturday's turbulent county conventions which saw rival states set up in Harris (Houston), Dallas (Dallas), and Tarrant (Fort Worth), three counties with heavy voting strength in the state convention. The convention meets in Fort Worth Sept. 14.

States Righters, also called Dixiecrats, are trying to seize the electors for the ticket of J. Strom Thurmond and Fielding Wright.

Their success in the state convention may depend on whether their states rights delegations from Harris, Tarrant, Dallas, and Harrison (in which two conventions also developed), are seated by the credentials committee

Loyalists Ahead

An Associated Press survey of convention results in the most populous Texas counties shows the Loyalists with heavy numerical strength in the number of delegations they control in the state meeting.

They will go there with at least 35 counties clearly pledged to President Truman and his running mate Alben Barkley.

The same count shows nine counties clearly in the Dixiecrat column, and 11 sending uninstructed delegations.

Texas electors are pledged now to the national ticket but the September convention can reinstate or replace them if it desires.

Dixiecrats also went after sentiment in Saturday's meetings for a presidential referendum on the Aug. 28 second primary election ballot. At least 11 county conventions endorsed that.

R. W. Calvert of Hillsboro, chairman of the state committee, opposes such a referendum, as does Gov. Beauford Jester. Wright Morrow of Houston, national Democratic committeeman, favors it. 8-2-48

Loyalists walked out in county conventions at Houston, Fort Worth, Dallas and Marshall when States rights Democrats controlled the regular conventions there. A small Dixiecrat group walked out in Jefferson County, which Loyalists controlled. Unlike the others the Jefferson group did not hold a separate convention.

Fist fights enlivened the confused Dallas convention as it struggled for four hours to organize. When anti-Truman forces gained control a liberal element, supporters of Truman, walked out. It was the first break in four years of the liberal group's control.

States' Rights Electors Sought For Minnesota

Petition Would Put State In Field To Challenge 'Civil Rights' Radicals

WASHINGTON— (AP) —Plans are underway to try to place the Thurmond-Wright ticket of the States' Rights Democrats on the ballot in Minnesota, W. Austin Seay, head of the Washington office of the party, said Monday.

He announced in a statement that Walker Wood, former Mississippi secretary of state, would go to Minnesota this week to co-operate with local supporters in circulating petitions to qualify a slate of State' Rights electors.

"It was Hubert Humphrey, Jr., mayor of Minneapolis, who maneuvered the Philadelphia convention into rejecting the historic principles of States' Rights Democracy and endorsing a plan for flagrant federal violation of constitutional processes in order to attract votes of radical Eastern minority groups," Seay said.

"We have received protests from citizens of Minnesota that Humphrey is not representative of them. The placing of a States' Rights electoral slate on the Minnesota ballot will afford Minnesota citizens a means of repudiating the Humphrey radical slant."

Gov. Thurmond Lashes Program Of Truman; Likens It To Hitler's

'They're Deserters'

Speech In Birmingham Follows One In Florida Along The Same Lines

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.— (AP) — Gov. J. Strom Thurmond attacked the civil rights proposals Monday as "the wedge which can force open the doorway to tyranny."

The South Carolina governor and States' Rights candidate for president flew to Birmingham for a Labor Day address. It followed a similar talk at Wildwood, Fla.

Thurmond likened the civil rights program—which he said bears the endorsement of Truman, Dewey and Wallace—to the program by which the Nazis gained control in Germany.

All state legislatures were abolished there, he said, and "elected heads of the 17 (German) states were replaced with Hitler henchmen.

"The German people . . . soon learned that when constitutional rights are gone all human rights are destroyed."

The governor said the "so-called civil rights" measures of anti-lynching, anti-segregation and fair employment practices acts would lead to a "federal gestapo, with dangerous powers over the lives of our people."

Liberty Perishes

"Liberty quickly perishes under such a setup," he said, "as we have seen in Europe in our time."

Tues 9-7-48

"Party loyalty," he added, is being urged by men who "are deserting the faith of our fathers.

"Those who carry party loyalty have told their political bosses in Washington that they can come into your state and the other states in the union and fix up the political fences that are badly in need of repair. . . .

'Does that mean that we must humiliate ourselves while the party leaders drag the name of the Democratic party in the mire of political disgrace as they seek to appease groups that have never been known to be loyal to the party?

"There is but one answer. We shall be true to the principles of our fathers. We shall not be led astray by the Judas Iscariots who would profit through our defeat.

"Constitutional government must be preserved in America, and the States' Rights Democrats are the men and women who are making the fight to preserve it."

Dispute Arises

While Thurmond paid tribute to labor in Wildwood, a minor disagreement arose over his sponsorship.

He was brought to Florida by the Wildwood Labor Day committee, Incorporated, a purely local civic organization with E. R. Ward, chairman.

Somehow, the name of A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, came up and Whitney promptly telegraphed a denial.

This brought a response from Ward, a Seaboard Airline Railway conductor, and a member of Whitney's union, that "as far as I'm concerned, Whitney can go jump in the lake. We don't intend to be dictated to by national labor leaders or anybody else."

No mention of the spat was made by Thurmond who arrived at the celebration park with his bride and the four presidential elector nominees who have said they would vote for him—Mrs. Helen Hunt West, A. E. Adamson, John O. Jackson, and W. L. Coats.

The presidential candidate reiterated his previous attacks on proposed civil rights legislation.

Rebel yells, scattered cries of "Let em have it" and "Put it on" greeted his remarks about the FEPC and anti-lynching proposals.

He lashed at the "horrible example set lately by the nominees of the Republican, Democratic and Progressive parties" who are "willing to break down the separation of the races in the Armed Service, even at the sacrifice of the morale of the soldiers."

"Our boys in service should not be subjected to an unnecessary hazard," he added, terming talk of non-segregation in the Armed Forces is "simply to allow politicians to appeal to block votes."

6,000 Angry Southerners Hear Dixon

Keynoter Flays Anti-Lynch Bill

Columbia S.C.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 17 — (UP) — Former Gov. Frank Dixon charged today in a keynote speech at a States' Right meeting of rebel Southern Democrats that President Truman was plotting a social revolution in the South which would "reduce us to the status of mongrels, mixed in blood."

Dixon's keynote address was delivered to nearly 6,000 angry Southerners convened in convention here to consider putting up a presidential candidate in opposition to Mr. Truman. About 700 of those attending were registered as "delegates."

Dixon said the anti-lynching bill was "written patently to buy the Negro vote."

Race riots and killing in the North, "which have made some Northern states famous," have no equal in the South.

To Fight Truman Planned

This convention, Dixon said, is a gathering of militant Southerners who have gathered to fight the President's civil rights program "which is meant to destroy us."

He charged the program would do away with segregation in public schools, then private schools, and finally denomiational schools. It would mean, he said, white and Negroes living side by side in apartment houses. And he shouted that the FEPC would mean that 43 clerks out of every 100 in Birmingham department stores would be Negroes.

Alabama Democratic Chairman T. McCorvey banged the convention to order at 11:01 a .m. CST as "delegates" still swarmed into the seats reserved for the various state representations.

Gov. Ben T. Laney of Arkansas, leading choice for a presidential nominee, arrived just before the convention opened and huddled with leaders of the "Dixiecrat" revolt movement. Another possible candidate was retired army Brig. Gen. Herbert C. Holdridge, who said he would like a chance to speak to the group.

Wants South Cut Loose

His policy, he said, was to see the South cut loose from the Republicans, Mr. Truman and Henry Wallace.

Convention leaders said they had received more than 100 telegrams urging that the Rebels formally nominate candidates for President and vice president in opposition to the regular Democratic ticket.

A crowd of between 5,500 and 6,000 persons virtually filled the Birmingham municipal auidtorium to capacity. Only the extreme top balcony—commonly reserved for Negroes and called the "peanut gallery" was empty. Not a Negro was in the hall.

The Rev. John Buchanan of Southside Baptist church, Birmingham, delivered the invocation.

"Lord grant that we be true to those principles upon which our nation was founded," he said. "Let thou blessings rest on this conference, give us courage and strength.

Ruby Mercer, Metropolitan opera star, sang the "Star-Spangled Banner!" the crowd was quiet, then burst into yells as she sang "Dixie." The South's "national" song was repeated by the entire house, with Miss Mercer leading.

PHILLIPS DELEGATION BOUND TO DIXIECRATS

County Convention Calls For States' Rights Support

HELENA, Ark., Aug. 16.—The Phillips County delegation to the State Democratic convention was instructed Monday by the county convention to press for adoption of resolutions recognizing Governors Strom Thurmond and Fielding L. Wright as the official Democratic nominees for president and vice president.

The instruction was contained in a resolution adopted by the convention at its meeting here.

Delegates named included Al Haraway, James P. Baker, James R. Nichols, E. P. Hickey, Clarence Taylor, C. S. Fielder, D. S. Heslep, John L. Anderson and J. B. Lambert.

States Rights Dinner Friday At Kershaw

Columbia S.C.

Thu. 9-23-48

CAMDEN, Sept. 23.—State Rights Democrats of Kershaw county will meet at the Kershaw county courthouse Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock to plan for one or more state rights dinners to be held for Democrats in the near future. 9-23-48

The plural of dinner is used for the reason that Senator R. M. Kennedy, who is one of the leaders in the movement for the affair, says that there will be so many who want to attend that one seating will not begin to accommodate them.

States' Rights Petition Offered In Maryland

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 30—(AP) —Petitions bearing more than 2,000 signatures and asking that the States' Rights Democratic presidential ticket be placed on Maryland ballots were presented formally to Secretary of State Bertram Boone, II, today.

Atty. Gen. Hall Hammond said he will inform Boone the petitions are invalid because they were not filed before the April 12 legal deadline. They were filed yesterday by E. Steuart Vaughan, temporary chairman of the States' Rights Democrats of Maryland.

Hammond issued a similar opinion several weeks ago.

Signs Indicate Demos To Woo Dixie Revolters

The News Mon. 11-8-48

B'ham, Ala.

By FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

There were still more indications today President Truman and Democratic Party chieftains would seek to win States' Rights revolters back to the fold.

But a Dewey campaign adviser predicted at Mobile that unless the South now shows some initiative in granting "civil rights" to Negroes, federal legislation "probably will be forced down Southern throats.

Merlyn Pitzele, Business Week's labor editor, declared that if individual Southern states show progress in eliminating discrimination, Congress might not see fit to enact "force" legislation.

Another Dewey adviser, Stanley High, roving editor of Reader's Digest, also in Mobile for a speaking engagement, said President Truman's victory showed the American people are liberal-minded and probably in sympathy with the president's stand on "civil rights."

* * *

PITZELE SAID LABOR UNIONS would take the election results as a green light to go ahead with organization of Southern industries.

At Jasper, Labor's Non-Partisan League, made up of labor organizations in the Seventh Congressional District, was calling for States' Rights Democrats to be ousted from the Democratic organization in Alabama.

The league adopted a resolution commending Gov. Folsom's court move seeking to force Alabama's Democratic electors to vote for Truman and denouncing the Dixiecrat movement as "detrimental to the common people."

It also called on the governor to ask chairmen of all county Democratic executive committees to hold meeitngs and "oust this rump organization, and restore the Democratic Party to the people of Alabama, where it rightly belongs." The resolution stated the Democratis Party is "the only political organization that has defended the rights of the common people in the U. S."

While surprise winner Truman and close presidential advisers were vacationing at Key West, the big qestion being tossed around Washington—mostly by some of the wild-eyed boys who really want the South punished—was will there be any reprisals against Southern senators and representatives.

The Associated Press' Gordon Brown quotes Leslie Biffle director of the Senate Democratic policy committee and a man very close to Mr. Truman as saying flatly: "No reprisals."

Mon. 11-8-48

SEN. ALBEN BARKLEY, vice president-elect; Tennessee Sen. Kenneth McKellar, who will head the upper chamber's powerful appropriations committee; Arkansas Sen. Brooks Hays and others either intimated or made positive declarations there would be no reprisals against the South.

Still another Southern senator, who asked not to be quoted by name, said he thinks President Truman's post-election statements have indicated he wants unity and that he is not in a vengeful mood so far as the South goes.

Illinois Sen. Scott Lucas, who very probably will become Democratic floor leader when the election victors organize the Senate in January, declined to comment on how the South will be dealt with, saying "we'll have to get organized first."

Meantime, there were indications in the South that many of the States' Righters did not want to go back to the National Democratic Party.

State Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Alabama elector and one of the States' Rights campaign leaders for Gov. Strom Thurmond, said during the campaign that "Alabama does not choose to affiliate (with the national Democratic Party) this year."

Immediately after the election, McCorvey declared the States' Righters were "only temporarily defeated" and would come back even stronger in 1952. States' Rights Democrats carried four states—Alabama, South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana—with 38 electoral votes.

Mon. 11-8-48

GOV. JAMES E. FOLSOM has filed proceedings in Federal Court at Montgomery seeking to force this state's 11 electors to vote for Truman instead of Thurmond, to whom they are pledged. The governor also has called on McCorvey and the other 10 electors voluntarily to vote for Truman without being forced to do so by the courts.

McCorvey and several other electors lashed back at the governor. Among these were Tom Abernethy, Talladega, and Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham, who reiterated they would not go back on their anti-Truman pledges of the campaign.

Ed Blair, Pell City, another elector, cracked back at Folsom for shifting his position with "every political wind." As to Folsom's criticism about Truman not being represented on the Alabama ballot, Blair wired the governor:

"I would like to respectfully call your attention to the fact that, as governor of Alabama, you were the only person in this state in position to put Mr. Truman on the ballot by calling a special session of the Legislature."

It was pointed out that for Truman to have been represented on the ballot, it would have been necessary for the Legislature to change laws which require that presidential elector candidates must be qualified on or before the date of the first Democratic primary. In the recent campaign, that date was May 4.

At Montgomery Sunday, the recently-designed state chairman of pro-Truman forces were assailing States' Rights forces as "Republicans masquerading under the head of Democrats."

* * *

THIS CRITICISM was made by State Sen. Broughton Lamberth, Alexander City, in addressing the Southeastern System Council, Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which ended a two-day convention at Montgomery.

Lamberth said "75 per cent of the people of Alabama are against the Dixiecrats."

Commenting on Gov. Folsom's suit to force the Alabama electors to vote for Truman, Lamberth said "We will go through with it, hell or high water."

Arkansas Sen. Hays, who led a fight in that state to keep States' Righters from taking over the Democratic Party machinery and personally supported Truman, said the president will want cooperation from Congress the next four years. He added that if Democratic National Chairman Howard McGrath and other party chieftains insisted on reprisals, hope for cooperation might be wrecked.

There is still speculation as to what will happen on patronage in Southern states which revolted.

A meeting of the Democratic National Committee, which likely will come sometime after President Truman is inaugurated Jan. 20, will be watched with great interest. McGrath has said he would recommend that the committee remove members who deserted the national party and joined the States' Righters.

Mon. 11-8-48

McGrath's statement was aimed personally at Gov. Thurmond, Democratic national committeeman in South Carolina, and Marion Rushton, Montgomery, Alabama national committeeman, who headed the States' Rights campaign executive committee in this state. Both Thurmond and Rushton announced their resignations as committeemen early in the campaign, but Democratic Executive Committees of Alabama and South Carolina took no action.

Shelby Elector Drops Truman To Back States' Rights Slate

The Commercial Appeal

Wed. 10-20-48

Memphis, Tenn.

Walter P. Armstrong Sr., Memphis attorney and former president of the American Bar Association, yesterday resigned as Shelby's candidate for elector on the Truman-Barkley Democratic slate.

Reason for his action, he said, was his decision to vote for the Thurmond-Wright States' Rights ticket, and his unwillingness that his position toward the national candidates might be misunderstood.

As candidate for presidential elector on the Tennessee Democratic ticket, Mr. Armstrong's name would have been listed in the Truman column on the ballot.

Mr. Armstrong's letter of resignation was sent simultaneously to Marvin A. Bryan, secretary of the State Board of Supervisors of Elections, at St. Joseph, Tenn., and to Robert L. Taylor, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee. It said:

"I hereby resign as candidate for presidential elector. I do this so that my position may not be susceptiblee of being misunderstood.

For Thurmond, Wright

"I shall cast my individual ballot for Thurmond and Wright—both splendid citizens—with whose views I am in accord as representing the best interests of the South and of the Nation.

"It will be an especial pleasure to vote for Governor Wright, of my native state of Mississippi.

"I am unwilling for anyone to be able to suggest that as candidate or elector I have any moral obligation, either personally or officially, to vote otherwise."

Mr. Armstrong supplemented his resignation letter with telegrams to Mr. Bryan and Mr. Taylor to expedite notice to them of his action.

He declined yesterday afternoon to discuss his stand in the Tennessee contests for governor and senator.

Mr. Armstrong was named one of Tennessee's 12 candidates for Democratic presidential electors by the State Democratic Convention at Nashville last Spring. The vacancy created by his resignation must be filled by the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Other Electors

To put his successor's name on the Nov. 2 ballot, the Executive Committee must act at least 10 days before the election.

The Memphis attorney is the second Tennessee elector candidate to resign from the Truman slate, and the fourth to declare his intentions to support the States' Rights ticket. Larry Morgan of Brownsville recently quit the Truman column in favor of the States' Righters. Preston Parks of Somerville and Malcolm C. Hill of Sparta remain on the Truman list after having been chosen States' Rights candidates as well.

Wed. 10-20-48

Mr. Armstrong, senior partner in the firm of Armstrong, McCadden, Allen, Braden and Goodman, served the 1941-42 term as president of the American Bar Association. At present he is on the Board of Editors of the American Bar Association Journal.

Thurmond Assails FEPC Proposals

The Wash Post

Tues. 10-26-48

Wash. D.C.

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 25 (AP).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond charged tonight that an FEPC law "would be carried out by a national police force already being trained "by President Truman.

"This means," he told Arkansas listeners, "you would be hounded by Federal police whom you never saw before and who neither know nor care what your problems are."

The South Carolina chief executive and States Rights Democrats' candidate for President, again assailed the President's civil rights proposals in an address prepared for radio delivery.

Declaring that Mr. Truman, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Henry Wallace all indorse the FEPC proposal, the candidate said a vote for any one of the three "is a vote for x x x a piece of legislation which is the first plank in the Communist platform."

He also charged his three major opponents with "having dared to insult" the people of Arkansas "by proposing that you give up your right to handle your own affairs."

Insisting that he is a staunch advocate of the two-party system, Thurmond promised "we shall reclaim and rebuild the Democratic Party x x x we shall give the people of this Nation a two-party system that means something."

Federal Court Upholds
Georgia's Ballot Stand

Atlanta, Oct. 25 (AP).—A three-judge Federal court today upheld Georgia's refusal to place the Progressive Party on the ballot for State offices. Henry Wallace, the party's presidential candidate, is on the ballot.

The court held that the suit concerned a "purely political matter" and said the Progressives suffered no serious inconvenience because State law permitted write-in candidates.

Tues. 10-26-48

"There is also impropriety in a Federal court compelling a high State officer by a mandatory injunction to do his official duty under State laws as the Federal court may thing he should," the judges said.

s Has 'Treaty' With U. S. Back Up States' Rights Cry

BY JAY G. HAYDEN

HOUSTON, Oct. 19—(NANA)—In Texas, "States' Rights" carries a much broader meaning than anywhere else in the South.

For more than a century, every Texas school child has had drummed into him the proud fact that his is the one state that came into the union by treaty between its previously independent republic and the Washington government, rather than by congressional gratuity.

Because Texas reserved to itself so many rights not allowed the existing states it was a long time before two-thirds in the Senate could be induced to vote for confirmation of the treaty of annexation and statehood.

Take the now-burning issue of tidelands oil. One stipulation of the Texas treaty was that all its land, including submerged coastal areas to a distance of three marine leagues, remain under state ownership.

* * *

LONG AGO ALL RECEIPTS by the state from sale of land or mineral deposits beneath it, including the tidelands oil, was set aside for educational purposes.

Therefore, Texans contend that when President Truman and former Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, aided and abetted by the Supreme Court, attempted to establish federal ownership of tidelands oil, they were not only violating a solemn international treaty but robbing Texas school children of their rightful patrimony.

It should be added that outsiders who talk of "oil" as a label of political opprobrium in Texas are very far from the mark. There is scarcely one among the 200 odd counties in this state that does not have oil wells already gushing or being drilled for by the hopeful. For Texans, the daily report of oil prices and sales is the index of economic well-being or depression. Three-fourths of Texas voters probably draw their living in whole or in part from oil.

Texas citizens do not get greatly excited when they hear, for example, that Roy Cullen, a rich oil magnate, is contributing to Republicans and States' Righters, since Mr. Cullen previously has given $160,000,000 for improvement of education and health in Texas.

* * *

SOCIALLY, TEXAS is still firmly "Southern"; but economically it is rapidly taking on Western and Northern points of view. Far from being any longer dependent on outside capital, Houston and Fort Worth millionaires now are carrying their money bags, in search of investments, all the way to New York and Detroit, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Any Texan will tell you that one day his state will be as big and as dominant along the Southern Gulf Coast as New York in the East, or California in the West.

The one-party system suffered its most severe setback when a Negro named Smith won from the Supreme Court in 1944 a decision forbidding exslusion of Negroes from Texas Democratic primaries. A hundred thousand Negroes not only are voting freely in Texas elections this year, but all candidates and party factions, even including the Thurmond States' Righters, are actively bidding for Negro support.

DIXIECRATS PROTECT PRINCIPLES OF U. S., GOV. WRIGHT HOLDS

8-12-48

Mississippi Governor Assails Big Parties In Accepting No. 2 Ticket Spot

THURMOND IS CONFIDENT

Governor Of South Carolina Says He'll Get A Greater Electoral Vote Than Will Truman In November

By the Associated Press

HOUSON, Texas, Aug. 11.—Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi declared Wednesday night that the principle of States' Rights "is the only alternative of abject subjection to the tyranny of dictatorship."

He said that "with a full consciousness of the dire necessity for immediate and aggressive action" he accepted the nomination for vice president of the United States tendered him by States' Rights Democrats.

'No Regard To Principle'

"Today the present Democratic and Republican parties are philosophically bankrupt. They are mere vehicles for getting into and holding onto office," Wright said in his speech at a rally launching the States' Rights group's national campaign.

"They veer from point to point without regard to principle, but only with an insensate desire to pander to any minority for votes. Government by bloc, by vociferous minorities, is a cowardly thing. It is a disgrace to America. It paves the way for ultimate dictatorship or Socialism.

"Only a return to American principles, to local self government, can halt the unseemly spectacle we are now witnessing."

He said Dewey wasn't the choice of the Fepublican rank and file; called Truman "an acknowledged loser," and said "Wallace represents Russia and its ideology."

Thurmond Confident

Wright's acceptance speech preceded one by Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, presidential candidate for the States' Righters.

At a press conference earlier Thurmond had said he believed he would get more electoral votes than President Truman, the national democratic candidate.

He said the States' Righters are determined to get their ticket on as many state general election ballots as possible.

Wright accepted his nomination as tendered by the "Democratic parties of South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi." TheStates' Rights group says it is trying to work similarly in the regular Democratic organization of as many states as possible.

"Local self government is what a majority of the people of this country are convinced is the best form of government on earth," Wright said.

'Remote, Distant, Mysterious'

"The moment that government becomes remote, distant, mysterious, and beyond the comprehension of the people themselves, danger arises and we subject ourselves to the possibility of abuse and ultimate dictatorship. This ever-constant peril is visible to us at all times.

"In our large cities and more populous areas machine politicians and self-seeking officeholders have obtained and held an unrelenting grip on their municipalities.

"This threat of seizure of control by big city bosses and their henchmen is today greatly augmented and increased by the 3,000,000 Federal jobholders, none of whom are elected by the people other than the President and vice president."

Wright said that when the Constitution was drafted "it was specifically provided that the right and authority of the state to conduct its own affairs should be preserved inviolate."

The Mississippi Governor said that for almost 100 years the South "has given consistent and persistent ployalty to the Democratic Party."

He added that states' rights, since organization of the Democratic Party, had been one of its dominant principles; that the South's loyalty had "not been unreasoning and without justification."

The principle had been "consistently recognized and maintained by the Democratic Party until the present generation," Wright said.

Sees Repudiation

"At the Philadelphia convention for the first time in its long history this doctrine was completely and finally repudiated."

Wright said the principle of states' rights was a "living principle, as vital and essential today as it was in the foundation days of the Republic."

Earlier Wednesday, Thurmond told his press conference:

That he and his running mate, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, will receive 100 Electoral College votes, or more.

That "we hope" to win if the Electoral College winds up in a deadlock and the final decision on the presidential election goes to the House of Representatives.

That the campaign of States' Rights Democrats will strengthen position of Southern congressmen, will gain more respect for Southern delegations to National Democratic Party conventions of the future, and will make the American people more conscious of the "present threat to the American way of life."

"We expect to carry most if not all of the Southern states and expect to receive more than 100 electoral votes," the South Carolina Governor said.

He admitted the Southern Democrats were off to a late start, but confidently added that "we hope to make up a lot of lost time."

Thurmond, in commenting on the Electoral College, said the House of Representatives would make the final decision on the presidential election should no candidate receive a majority, or 266 electoral votes.

8-12-48

Sees Balance Of Power

The House, with each state receiving one vote, would limit consideration to the three top candidates.

Thurmond said he believes the states supporting him will hold the balance of power in the House vote, and that they would be in a position to use this power "for the majority of the American people."

Asked if this power would be used to effect a compromise calling for another candidate, dropping civil rights and other anti-States' Rights legislative proposals, Thurmond said:

"We are against Dewey, Truman and Wallace. We hope to win in the House of Representatives."

General Adds To Excitement Of Gathering

Self-Styled Candidate Gets Rough Treatment As He Protests Vote

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 17.—(AP)—A self-styled presidential candidate, Brig. Gen. Herbert C. Holdridge, was nearly mobbed at the States' Rights Convention today after he protested the manner in which candidates were nominated.

The retired Washington, D. C., Army general said, after being removed from the Municipal Auditorium under police guard, that police had suggested he stay away from the meeting altogether.

Gen. Holdridge, commenting on his departure in a police car, said "they were very kind."

By Bayonets, Law

Reached at his hotel, Gen. Holdridge said "I came here in the hope of seeing Democracy in action. I believe in the States' Rights issue and I was willing to admit that on race segregation you could not solve the issue by bayonets and law.

"I listened to the nominations of (Governors) Thurmond and Wright by the resolution committee and at that point I quit. It was Philadelphia all over again.

"Truman placed himself in nomination in such fashion.

"These people protsted against the high-handed actions of machine politicians at Philadelphia," the general continued, "and they came down here and did the same thing."

The general said one woman struck him with a sign when he protested the actions of the resolutions committee and that many around "made bitter and threatening remarks."

Right To Speak

He added, though, that "I was encouraged by the young people who gathered around and insisted that I have the right to speak."

'Holdirdge for President" circulars were passed out earlier in the day by Mrs. Nell Foster Rogers, of Gainesville, Fla.

She said she had sought his selection by the Democratic party at the national convention and planned to place his name in nomination before this convention. The nomination failed to materalibze, however.

Th ebiographical material handed out by Mrs. Rogers gave his birthplace as Wyandotte, Mich., March 6, 1892.

He also was described as the "GI's General" though he did not serve overseas in either world war. He earned the sobriquet, said the printed material, because he opposed the army's caste system.

Dixiecrats In Big Vote Drive

The Defender

Chicago Ill

Sat 8-21-48

JACKSON, Miss. — Democratic States Rights advocates out to defeat President Truman and scrap his civil rights program opened national campaign headquarters here last Wednesday.

The campaign director, Merritt Gibson of Longview, Texas, said that the goal is for the Solid South's entire 127 electoral votes. He added that field workers are already promoting the campaign in several states, and their activities will eventually take on a national aspect.

Enlarging on the statement that a study is being made to determine those states in which their candidates can get on the ballot, Gibson said: "In some states where we may not be able to get on the ballot as the regular Democrats, we can still be listed as independents.

Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi accepted nominations for president and vice-president respectively at a rally in Houston, Texas, August 10.

Waiting for The Mail Train

Wed. 12-8-48

OHATCHEE, Ala.—We were standing in front of the post office waiting for the mail train and talking politics.

"There are a lot of explanations for why Truman got elected," said Cliff Propst. "Best one, though, is to say he got elected for the reason a man will stay married to a woman he doesn't like much for 50 years or more. He gets up in the morning and there is breakfast. He comes home at night and there is dinner. He needs clean clothes and they are in the drawer of his bureau or dresser. He gets holes in his socks and his wife mends them. He gets used to a certain comfortable routine of living and he doesn't want to change even though he doesn't think too much of the old lady. That was the way with the American people. They have enough to eat and a place to stay, a job and clothes to wear. They don't like a lot of things about the Government, but then, they don't want a change, just like the fellow doesn't leave his wife. Tom Dewey was not saying anything, but a lot of his friends were hinting things wouldn't be nearly so comfortable for the farmers, the teachers and for labor. Me, I don't like a lot of things. Many things look cockeyed to me. But I know why folks voted for Truman."

That is about the best homespun summing up I've seen of the recent election. It covers all the more technical reasons developed by the experts in politics and economics. The people didn't trust Dewey and they actively distrusted his managers.

State Politics In Birmingham and Anniston I was told the Dixiecrats are angry, bitter and on the defensive. Had Dewey won, there would not have been much reaction. But Truman won, and while Gov. Folsom is having no luck getting the Federal courts to interfere, since it is a State matter, his argument is being discussed and accepted.

The Dixiecrats took over the symbol of the Democratic Party and, in a display totalitarian in character, refused to allow the people a chance to vote for the Democratic nominee unless they went through the difficult and complicated business of writing in the vote.

Wed. 12-8-48

This was without any question un-American and unfair and it is being resented. Many persons believed, when they voted under the symbol of the Democratic rooster they were voting the Democratic ticket. Many who voted under it resent the fact they had no choice.

Whatever they believed, the total vote cast was small, indicating a majority of the eligible voters preferred not to vote at all if they could not express a choice.

Also, the true and inside story of the manipulation of the Dixiecrat Convention is getting around.

Result The result is that in almost every community the Dixiecrat leaders are on the defensive and imagine they hear whispered comments every time they pass down the streets of their home town. They do, too, and some of it isn't said in too low a whisper.

The movement reached its lowest character in Alabama in the decision not to allow the people to have a choice save by the write-in method. You can't do that to the American people and make them like it.

Harm Great harm was done to the legitimate and important issue of States' rights—an issue of great importance to local government. Those who all along tried to say that the Dixiecrat effort to saddle States' rights with the Klan, with racial hatreds, with religious prejudices and with all the sordid and vulgar-mouthed political hacks, so long in ill repute, would do the cause of States' rights and local self-government great damage, have, unhappily, proved their point.

No amount of sophistry will change that fact. And the sincere persons in the Dixiecrat movement—and there were many such—now see that they were betrayed, along with their cause, by the leaders who criminally took over them and the cause.

Farmers Alabama farmers had the Secretary of Agriculture speak to them last week. He didn't cheer them up any by reminding them that cotton no longer is king.

He spoke out for more pastures, more vegetables, more poultry, more cattle, more milk—and so on. He is exactly right, of course.

But the farmers who heard him no doubt thanked God for Truman's victory. Almost every cotton farmer, save those with large acreages in the flat lands of the cotton States where machinery can be used to replace vanishing, expensive labor, knows the Secretary is right.

But, he also knows what the city dweller does not and what even the glib commentators ignore—namely, that when you turn land into pasture it requires investment for at least three years before it is ready for cattle and any cash return. And the farmer knows, too, that he has a sort of financial security in cotton which prevents him from losing his shirt. He does not have this in vegetables or milk and not much of it in poultry and other "diversified" products.

So, for the farmers in a region losing its one-crop status after more than 100 years, there must be a Government plan to keep the farmer eating and well while he changes over.

That was one reason the President got elected. And that is another reason the Southern farmers are realizing that they are pretty lucky he did get elected, what with cotton moving west and pastures new and unprofitable until they are "made."

NO TIME TO TURN AROUND

The Afro American

Among the things proved by the recent Presidential election was the fact that the support of the Dixierats was not needed to win.

While there are some persons, like Mrs. Roosevelt, who feel that these deserters should be read out of the party, and others who feel that they should be welcomed back with open arms, we believe that there is an even more desirable solution.

We suggest that these revolters be given an opportunity to come back into the fold on one condition only, namely that they be deprived of any seniority to which they may lay claim, and be denied all rights of patronage and privilege.

They will drool much more by being in sight of, but out of reach of, the banquet table than if left outside the banquet hall altogether. And as they see the others partaking of the feast and feel that growing gnawing at their innards, they'll really know what it is to experience the pangs of hunger.

And if they show that they really don't want to improve their table manners, they can then be ushered out into the cold. This process may produce a few slow deaths, but it also may win some converts.

Baltimore, Md

There can be no sentimentality in this business and no exceptions to the rule. The Democratic Party, under President Truman, is headed in one direction. It can't turn back just because a few dissenters want to go the other way.

As the head of his party, Mr. Truman can be expected to consolidate his gains through a program of greatest benefit to those who helped to sweep him back into the White House.

Now that he is "in" on his own, we expect him to get rid of the mediocre advisors he has had around him and get some first-class aides who are sold on his program. Men are available now who were not available when he took office.

Once the "Men Around Truman" have been decided upon, we expect the President to get down to brass tacks on his campaign promises. The voters delivered on Nov. 2; it's his turn to deliver now.

Maryland Bars States Righters

The Montgomery Advertiser

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6.—(AP)—A superior court ruled today that the presidential and vice-presidential candidates for the States Rights Democratic Party are ineligible for a place on the Maryland ballots.

34d

The decision, handed down by Judge Joseph Sherbow, sustained the state law department's demurrer to a writ to force election officials to put the states-righters on the ballot.

Montgomery Ala

Judge Sherbow said he agreed with Maryland Attorney General Hall Hammond that true democracy called for the giving of every opportunity to voters preference on the ballot.

But, under the current election laws and a guiding decision by the Maryland Court of Appeals, the jurist said, he was obliged to deny the States Righters' petiton.

Delegates Gather For Texas Rally

Columbia Record

Wed 8-11-48

States' Rights Meeting Tonight

Columbia S.C.

BY ROBERT JEFFREY
Record Staff Correspondent

HOUSTON, Aug. 11 — South Carolina delegates to the Texas States' Rights convention hoped today to furnish the spark that would set Gov. J. Strom Thurmond successfully on course in his presidential campaign.

34d

News that Texas States' Rights supporters had suffered a setback in their attempt to place a States' Rights slate on the Lone Star ballot placed a blight on some of this delegation's enthusism.

Meanwhile, the 24 representatives, all but two of whom are from South Carolina, completed a 975-mile train journey from Columbia to Houston.

The concensus among the South Carolina Thurmond supporters was to draw as much unified backing for their champion as possible, both in Texas and in the Palmetto state.

Wed 8-11-48

Yesterday and today, as the train pounded westward, persons standing along the railroad tracks gawked at the identifying sign emblazoned across the car of the delegates.

Response to the bright red print, "States' Rights Special—Thurmond for President—Wright for Vice President," was mixed, as was the audience that viewed the banner. Negro sectionmen looked with blank stares while some white spectators waved enthusiastically.

Governor Thurmond flew to Houston yesterday and his running mate, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, arrived this morning by train from Jackson.

Tonight, Thurmond will accept nomination for the presidency of the United States on the States' Rights ticket after more than two months delay since his name was mentioned as a presidential possibility at a Birmingham convention. Those attending the Houston convention by train from Columbia will be joined by an equal number who flew in from the Palmetto capital today.

Delegates aboard the trains were: Dr. J. W. Thurmond, brother of the South Carolina governor, North Augusta; J. W. Reel, Augusta, Ga.; J. C. Moore, Columbia; Dr. W. H. Mathis, N. Augusta; J. C. Bush, N. Augusta; Thornwell Clyburn, Bishopville; H. C. Edens, Sumter; Clifford Baxter, Hampton; R. B. Gentry, Bishopville; J. C. Todd, Columbia; Dr. E. K. DeLoach, Columbia; Allen LeGare; Charleston; J. L Stewart, N. Augusta; W. A. Cleckley, N. Augusta; Corbett Williamson, Augusta, Ga.; Furman M. Prickett, St. Matthews; Leon W. Harris, Anderson; William Baker, Hampton; Q. A. Kennedy, Williston; R. E. Grier, Columbia; Mrs. Kitty M. Willson, Easley; E. C. Rhodes, Columbia, and J. F. Buzhardt, McCormick.

Another load of Dixiecrat supporters left Columbia today by plane for Houston, Tex., to whoop it up when Gov. J. Strom Thurmond formally accepts the presidential nomination on a State's Rights ticket there tonight.

Leaders of the States' Rights Democrats arrived at Houston in force today for the formal opening of their national campaign.

They came, with their supporters, determined to shape a program which would at the least wrest the 127 electoral votes in 11 states of the traditionally solid South from the National Democratic ticket.

The climax of their gathering is a rally tonight, which the Progressive party of Texas, supporters of Henry Wallace, has voted to picket.

Then Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, States' Rights presidential nominee, and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, his running mate, make speeches accepting their nominations.

The action on picketing, voted by the Progressive party at its state convention in Dallas yesterday, didn't seem to disturb those arranging the rally.

Nowlin Randolph, president of the Houston Bar association, who will preside, grinned.

"I think if it is the Progressive party picketing us it will help us," he said.

Wright, 53, grey-haired, pipe-smoking father of the revolt, led a party from his home state. They came by special train.

The 45-year-old Thurmond already was in Houston. He and Wright arranged to meet the press this morning. From then until the rally at 8 p. m. (CST), they scheduled conferences with delegations from various states, and a reception for the public.

Pretty Jackie Nelson, 22, business agent for the CIO Food, Tobacco, and Agriculture Workers' union here, offered the resolution of picketing the rally. It was quickly passed. She is chairwoman of the Progressive party in Harris county.

The resolution proposed to picket the Dixiecrat meeting with signs which read:

"There are only two parties—Republicrats and Progressives. Take your choice: Peace or war, slave or free, prosperity or depression."

The Dixiecrats came here claiming as a certainty 11 electoral votes from Alabama, nine from Mississippi, eight from South Carolina, 10 from Louisiana, and five of the eight from Florida.

They considered probable 12 votes from Georgia; nine from Arkansas, 12 from Tennessee, three more from Florida. They labeled "possible" 14 votes from North Carolina and 11 from Virginia.

Governor Thurmond, who flew from Columbia yesterday, was greeted upon his arrival at the Texas city by a reception committee, which also welcomed Mrs. Thurmond, state Sen. James H. Hammond, R. M. Figg of Charleston, and George MacNabb, Thurmond's press secretary, all of whom accompanied Thurmond on the plane.

In addition to the rally tonight in Houston, Thurmond and Wright were scheduled to attend a series of strategy and policy meetings with other States' Rights leaders.

Evidence that the States' Rights cause has gained favor was seen in the statement of Gov. Earl Warren of California, apparently designed to convince members of the G. O. P.'s party of the Republicans' good intentions toward states' rights, and to strengthen the Republican cause with a solid timber from the States' Righters' platform.

Warren called for "decentralization of authority because the strength of the republic depends largely on the virility of the state and local governments."

"Everything that can be solved by the state should be solved on that level," he noted.

STATES' RIGHTS MOVE PUSHED AT M. S. C. W.

Committee Chairmen Named By Miss Nichols

Special to The Commercial Appeal

COLUMBUS, Miss., Sept. 26.—Chairmen of States' Rights Committees were appointed Saturday at the Mississippi State College for Women. The newly-organized group began campaign plans for 100 per cent voting of all students 21 or over.

Miss Lois Nichols, senior from Belzoni and chairman of the M.S.C.W. group, said:

"We are still keeping our States' Rights campus movement on an educational level. Our purpose is not to dictate political choices to students, but to help them gain greater understanding of our form of government."

Miss Nichols named the following chairmen:

Joy Noble, Anguilla, Membership; Jean Wells, Canton, Program; Lennie Estes, Laurel, Finance, and Regina Cowley, Smithville, Procedure.

The next meeting of the States' Rights group will be held Friday, at which time other officers will be elected. Meanwhile, the committees will work on rallies, chapel programs, lectures and forums. A campus poll will be held this week to determine if students are for the States' Rights Movement, against it, or without opinion.

Sparks Tells States' Righters To Join Democratic Ranks

Cause Is 'Dead Issue'; Sees No Value In 3rd Party

Sat-11-6-48

EUFAULA, ALA., Nov. 5—(AP)—States' Rights Democrats were advised by former Gov. Chauncey Sparks today to abandon their organization and "join ranks" with the Democratic Party.

The cause for which they have been fighting, he said, will be a "dead issue" after the next session of Congress. By that time, he explained Truman's civil rights proposal will "either be enacted into law, or will have been abandoned."

Sparks said the States' Rights movement was started for one purpose—to fight President Truman's racial policies. He said its backers "never had a positive program."

Sat-11-6-48

The former bachelor governor said in his opinion there is no value in a third party. Instead, he said, the States' Righters should get behind the Democratic Party.

Possible Candidate

Regarded by some as a possible candidate for governor in 1950, Sparks was one of the delegates who refused to walkout of the Democratic national convention last summer. He disagreed with Truman's civil rights program but did not actively support the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

A look at the election results, he said, shows Alabama "has an obligation to join ranks in support of the new four-year administration under President Truman."

"Alabama cannot isolate herself politically any more than she can industrially or commercially,' 'he said. "We are a part of this great nation, and we must find some way to express ourselves through channels of national scope."

Alabama was the only state in which Truman did not appear on the ballot in last Tuesday's general election.

Sat-11-6-48

Sparks suggested as to the future there should be:

"More talk about states' responsibilities as well as states' rights: Improved standards, particularly in education, for the Negro; more and better technical training for everyone, white or Negro."

Sat-11-6-48

The former governor said this year's presidential election proved that the people are thinking for themselves . . . what spells "doom to the big political machines such as those of Chicago, Memphis, Kansas City" since they can only thrive on ignorance and prejudice."

States' Rights Again

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Wed-12-15-48

With the odor and stench of the unsolved Mallard lynching still reverberating around the world, Georgia's Governor Herman Talmadge, asked the Southern Governors' conference at Savannah to give official condemnation to the program of civil rights advocated by President Truman. The conference, through its resolution committee, branded the civil rights proposal as an "invasion of States-rights" and pledged to give their support to southern congressmen in their fight against any such legislation.

It would appear that the States-Righters or Dixiecrats, as they should be called, should have enough now to convince them that the South is making itself ridiculous in the eyes of the Nation to make a plea for States-Rights only to deny, withhold from the Negro his basic constitutional rights and guarantees. Least of all, should a responsible Georgia official be expected to make any outcry against civil rights in the face of the shameful handling, or shouldn't we say, mishandling of the Mallard case at Lyons. For nearly three weeks of fumbling and stalling by first one and then another not a single arrest was made, except the arrest of Mrs. Mallard at her husband's funeral.

The sorry spectacle of law enforcement officials making wild and windy statements which no 8th grade child would want to believe, together with the uncertainty of their rights to issue warrants of arrest for murder, gave the world the impression that local sentiment is too strong to expect anything approaching justice for Negroes from the South in the foreseable future. This indeed is a bad time to bring up the old, shopworn argument of States' Rights.

No person having a knowledge of southern conditions could afford to risk his good sense and logic on the strength of what is taking place right before their eyes in the South week in and week out. We need more talk about civil rights and less of States-Rights.

STATES' RIGHTERS EN ROUTE TO RALLY

Special Train Car Bears S. C. Supporters To Houston, Tex.

The Columbia Record
Tues 8-10-48
Columbia S.C.

By ROBERT JEFFREY
Record Staff Correspondent

ABOARD STATES RIGHTS CAR, ENROUTE TO HOUSTON, Aug. 10—Twenty-seven South Carolinians were aboard this train today headed for a Texas version of a States Rights convention.

The Palmetto residents will attend the meeting at which Gov. J. Strom Thurmond will formally accept the nomination for president on the Southerners' ticket. The occasion will be the first since 1828, when Andrew Jackson became a presidential candidate, that a South Carolinian has been nominated for the presidency.

Tues 8-10-48

Meanwhile, Governor Thurmond was winging his way to Houston aboard a special plane, that would put him in the Texas city in time for conferences with political leaders from throughout the South, prior to his acceptance speech.

A mammoth reception awaited Governor Thurmond at the Houston Municipal airport, where he was scheduled to arrive at 2:30 p. m.

Thurmond's running mate, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, will come to Houston tomorrow morning aboard a special train from Jackson.

Added Support

This South Carolina delegation will have additional support at the convention when a chartered airliner, scheduled to leave Columbia Wednesday morning, brings more than 20 more Thurmond supporters.

The South Carolina group will present an entirely different appearance from that evidenced at a Birmingham States Rights convention July 17, when Thurmond's name was offered in a resolution to became the Southern anti-Truman candidate. The surprise move at Birmingham caught South Carolina with one of the smallest delegations on the floor.

A heavy three-day schedule awaits Thurmond in Houston. In addition to the principal rally at the Houston Coliseum Wednesday night, Thurmond will attend numerous campaign conferences, policy mapping meetings, and an organizational meeting of Texas States Rights college students.

Today, conferences were underway in Houston among States Rights leaders to plan for coraling all of the 127 electoral votes of 11 Southern states.

Tue 8-10-48

Unofficial reports claim 43 of the votes already are certain, 36 are probable, 23 likely prospects, and five as probables.

Supposedly "in the bag" are nine from Mississippi, 11 from Alabama, eight from South Carolina, ten from Louisiana, and five from Florida.

Texas' 23 votes, the largest number in the South are considered a 'likely prospect." Campaign leaders hope to start a States Rights movement rolling in the Lone Star state that will bring the votes definitely into the Thurmond-Wright fold.

Other Votes Expected

Thurmond supporters expect to gain additional votes from Virginia, North Carolina, and six unpledged votes from Florida.

The States Rights movement, which really began to gain momentum at a Jackson, Miss., rally in May, has slowly gathered support in opposition to President Truman's civil rights proposal.

Thurmond was one of the principal speakers at the Mississippi meeting and has been boomed as a States Rights leader ever since.

Although called on short notice, the Birmingham conference, held two days after Mississippi delegates to the National Democratic convention walked out of the convention in protest over the civil rights plank in the party's platform, was the first coordinated move toward concerted States Rights action.

Thurmond, although not officially nominated at Birmingham, opened his presidential campaign with a speech at Cherryville, N. C., three weeks ago.

Tues 8-10-48

The movement has hit a snag in North Carolina where Thurmond supporters have been refused a place for their slate on the ballot.

Thurmond and his party, which included his wife, left Capital airport at 11 a. m. in a converted A-26 bomber, made available especially for his flight to Houston.

South Carolinians making the 975-mile jaunt to Houston by train, will arrive there at 6:30 p. m. C.S.T. tomorrow, and will start the 32-hour trip home Thursday.

The Southern Railway company announced that space in addition to the special Columbia car, was reserved for other delegates who might board the train enroute to Houston. The train's route will be via Spartanburg, Atlanta, Montgomery, Mobile and New Orleans.

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 10—(AP)—States' rights Democrats met in Houston today to lay before Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina their battle tactics for conquering electoral college votes in the solid South.

Licking Wounds

Meanwhile, Texas Dixiecrats were licking wounds suffered yesterday at Austin, the state capital.

The state Democratic executive committee certified the names of Truman and Barkley as party nominees for president and vice president over protests of the Dixiecrats and rejected a Dixiecrat demand that it submit a referendum on the Thurmond-Truman issue to party voters in the Aug. 28 primary.

Launches Campaign

The visit here of Thurmond and Wright formally launches states' rights campaigns for the nation and within Texas.

Party leaders held conferences here before Thurmond's arrival on campaign plans to sweep the 127 electoral votes in the 11 Southern States.

At Austin yesterday, the Democratic executive committee voted 42-18 to table a resolution providing for the referendum.

The loyalists, headed by Gov. Beaufor Jester, argued the committee had no authority to submit it; that it was a part of a scheme to disrupt the party.

The states rights Democrats contended that the Truman civil rights proposals were aimed at destruction of the Southern social system.

The Dixiecrats, or States Righters, said they would carry the fight to the September 14 convention at Fort Worth, and go on the stump between now and then to urge their position. The certification is "an unlawful act," they said.

Texas Republicans met today at Waco to nominate a state slate, but more interest was shown in the fight over state control of the party.

The battle is between Col. R. B. Creager of Brownsville, GOP national committeeman and big wheel in the party since 1922, and George Hopkins of Dallas, state chairman.

Dixiecrat Writers

B'ham News
B'ham Ala.
Tues 12-14-48

To the Editor:

For going on eight months, now, I have been reading letters written in by members of what everybody calls the "Dixiecrats." For some reason they object to that name. "Dixie" has always been a pretty good word, so I guess it's the "cratic" they don't like. Anyway I always thought it was men who made the name mean something and not vice versa. Now these letters that I'm talking about started out in April, heavily larded with quotations from the Bible, calling Democrats "scum," "traitors," "rascals," "radicals," and maybe a "Communist" or two slipped in. The one I read in the paper not long ago said the same thing. So it seems they haven't gone very far during the eight months.

When all the civil rights trouble started, I didn't know anything but what Dixiecratic writers wrote and Dixiecratic politicians said. Newspapers didn't help much either. They just spilled a lot of ink without saying anything. But they all seemed to agree that civil rights in some way violated states' rights. Well, I didn't know much about the constitution, but I wanted to know how civil rights violated states' rights. They just talked all around the bush but they never did say.

Birmingham News
B'ham, Ala.
Tues 12-14-48

Well, sir, as I found out, it doesn't violate anything. FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Commission) affects only businesses engaged in interstate commerce. And I never heard of any state claiming to regulate interstate commerce. But why didn't the Dixiecrats mention that? And what part of the constitution or states' rights would an anti-lynch law violate? Anyway, lynching surely does deprive a man of "life . . . without due process of law!" I just can't understand the hullabaloo over the unconstitutionality of the civil rights program. I always thought we had a Supreme Court to decide on things like that.

I suspect these Dixiecrats are only using the states' right argument for a screen. They oppose civil rights on racial and economic grounds, but they aren't man enough to come out and say so. Even J. Strom Thurmond denied he was fighting civil rights for those reasons. Well, all I got to say is that his states' rights grounds are mighty weak.

I'm mighty tired of these letters that call names and use these long words. I want these Dixiecrats to write, so I can understand them and be more "friendly-like" with everybody, like us farmers.

States' Rights Democrats

The Columbia Record

About the last thing any spokesman for the South Carolina Democratic (States' Rights) party should mention is the "cardinal Democratic principle of majority rule."

For the Democratic party of South Carolina is deliberately and willfully disregarding the "cardinal Democratic principle of majority rule." It served notice upon the Democratic convention, meeting at Philadelphia, that it would not abide by the will of the majority, unless that majority subordinated its will to the South Carolina minority.

Columbia, S.C.

The States' Righters are not Democrats—that "degraded name," the Charleston News and Courier calls it—and they should have the courage of their convictions and their principles to divorce themselves from the Democratic party.

Fri 9-24-48

They used to be Democrats, of course, some of them, and these still cling to the old Democratic ideas. But the Democratic party has moved away from them and has notified them that they are not wanted in the Democratic party, as now constituted, and do not belong there.

South Carolinians and Southerners generally are a proud people. Normally they would react promptly and violently to get out of any organization which does not want them and where both they and the organization majority agree they do not belong, to the principles of which they cannot subscribe.

Fri. 9-24-48

But political parties are more than organizations built around a set of principles, which are always changing. Basically they are all politicians' organizations, run by office-holders and office-seekers for the benefit of office-holders and office-seekers.

And these politicians' have a vested interest in maintaining the local status quo, an interest above principles. And this is why the Democratic (States' Rights) party of South Carolina still calls itself the Democratic party although it is actively campaigning to defeat the Democratic party.

This is the real weakness of the States' Rights movement. It is not a real grass roots movement, a voters' movement, but a politicians' movement.

The South had a real chance to get itself out of the bag for good this year. But the States' Rights party killed it, guaranteed that even if the South escapes for the one year it will be only for a year. For the States' Rights party is a caretaker for the Democratic party in the Southern states and when the election is over the South will be back in the bag again.

Fri. 9-24-48

The opposition in the South to President Truman's ideas which, of course, are not his own, but President Roosevelt's, had become too strong to be ignored although the politicians tried desperately to ignore it. The Roosevelt magic was no more and there was no real hope of winning again. The single-party system was ready to collapse.

And this was a real grass roots movement. The Southern voter was mad, mad enough to throw off his shackles and vote Republican. Governor J. Strom Thurmond, States' Right candidate for president, told his Augusta audience last night that Dewey "would have carried every Southern State."

But then the politicians took it in tow. At Philadelphia they tried to find a substitute for Truman, who is to be defeated, in General Dwight D. Eisenhower, who might have won. When they failed, the States' Righters held their conference-convention in Birmingham, named Thurmond and Wright as their candidates and the campaign was on to preserve, protect and defend the one-party system from the voters.

Old Dominion

The Washington Post
Wash. D.C.

Despite all the anti-Truman threats that emanated from Richmond last summer, Virginia has remained a Democratic dominion, and comfortably. The margin by which President Truman won over Governor Dewey was, to be sure, less than in any recent presidential election save that of 1928, when Virginia gave its votes to Herbert Hoover. But the 1928 upset can be traced largely to a religious prejudice against Al Smith which was lacking this year.

What the Truman victory indicates is that the States' rights issues on which the Republicans relied to split the Democratic vote were largely phony issues insofar as they concerned the Virginia electorate. Despite record Virginia turnout of more than 400,000, the Dixiecrats appear to have captured only a little more than one fifth the number of votes given President Truman. Northern Virginia counties adjoining Washington plumped for Dewey, and there was a strong Republican showing in southwest Virginia, but neither of these areas could counteract the general Truman trend.

The Truman surge is a vindication of the political wisdom of old-line Virginia party men such as Senator Byrd in remaining aloof from the lures of the Dixiecrats. It also is an implied rebuke to those State Democratic leaders who toyed with the thought of denying Truman a place on the ballot. Especially it is a repudiation of the attitude of Governor Tuck, who only a month ago coyly played host to the Dixiecrat candidate, Governor Thurmond.

No one should be surprised over the sweep of Senator A. Willis Robertson. He always was the safest of the Democratic candidates, and his switch back to the regular fold after a brief flirtation with the States' rights defection undoubtedly helped to entrench him. Representative Howard W. Smith had a tougher fight in the Eighth Congressional District, barely carrying his home city of Alexandria. Basically his victory can be attributed to the fact that the Republican sweep, upon which his opponent, Tyrrell Krum, relied, did not materialize in the rural districts—plus the fact that Mr. Krum, who predicated his campaign largely on an appeal to veterans, seemed to offer little fundamental change.

Arlington County voters have cause to rejoice over the fact that the school bond issue desperately needed to supply new classrooms passed by a reassuring majority. Unquestionably it was interest in the schools that brought an unprecedented vote of nearly 22,000. Arlingtonians apparently heeded the fears that a change in the school board election date would play into the hands of the "machine." They voted down the referendum on this point as leaders in the school fight had suggested. The one anomaly is the defeat of the only county board candidate who had openly supported the school bond issue, I. Lee Potter, by the incumbent, Alfred E. Frisbee. Perhaps the voters felt that, whatever the attempts to relate the issue of better schools to the county board race, they have no logical connection. At any rate, the vote to provide more classroom facilities should convince the county board that Arlingtonians feel strongly about their schools.

Four Party Complications

Columbia Record

The States Rights leaders in North Carolina are contesting the ruling of the North Carolina board of elections that in order to get the name of Governor J. Strom Thurmond on the ticket in North Carolina they must present petitions signed by 10,000 or more electors who did not vote in the primary.

Columbia, S.C.

It is the contention of the States Righters that the petition needs to be signed by 10,000 or more qualified electors. Whether they voted in the Democratic primary or not is immaterial, they say.

Tu. 8-3-48

But if the names of Governors Thurmond and Fielding Wright go on the North Carolina ticket the names of Henry Wallace and Glen Taylor will also be put on it. For the Progressive party is putting up the same kind of argument. The Progressives may even get on the ticket without the necessity of an appeal to the courts. In the 30,000 or so names they claim to have on their petition may be 10,000 or more who meet the board of elections qualifications.

This would give North Carolina voters the choice of four tickets and, the Charlotte Observer believes, "would almost certainly insure that the Republican ticket of Governors Dewey and Warren would receive a plurality of the popular vote of the state, as predicted by Senator Hoey."

"It is not in the cards," The Observer declares, "that either the States Rights or the Progressive party ticket could poll a majority, but both combined could draw so heavily on the strength of the regular Democratic party as to enable the Republicans to win a plurality.

"It is inconceivable that either the Wallace-Taylor ticket or the Thurmond-Wright ticket would attract any very substantial number of those who have been regularly voting Republican."

8-3-48

In Texas, however, where the regulars seem to have the edge over the States Righters as a result of Saturday's county conventions, despite the Dixiecrat victories in three of the four biggest counties, the entry of the Thurmond-Wright ticket into the race, should the States Righters get on the ticket, is expected to help the regular Democrats.

Tu. 8-3-48

The States Right ticket in Texas would attract Democratic votes, it is true, but they would be Democratic votes which probably would have gone to the Republican party this year. The anti-Truman forces in Texas, therefore, would be divided and Truman would benefit.

States' Rights

Editor Constitution: States' Righters will be "forgiven," says Democratic National Committee Chairman McGrath.

Party harmonizers seem to overlook the pledges of the Democratic platform to enact anti-lynching, anti-poll tax and "fair employment" bills—pledges made in contemptuous disregard of the Southern delegates at Philadelphia. Although the bills are all clearly unconstitutional, few lawyers believe that the present Supreme Court will uphold the Constitution when they come before it for review.

The FEPC bill, of which Sen. Chavez is co-author, would impose fines and imprisonment without trial by jury. It is shocking that such a proposal was ever made by a political party of Jeffersonian traditions. It would be revolutionary even if we had no written constitution reserving to the states powers not specifically granted to the Federal Government. It is a reactionary, Asian monstrosity which pretends to cure injustices not remediable by law in a free country.

Doubtless Mr. Truman would like to forget and be forgiven. But backroom harmony cannot save him from a painful dilemma of his own making. There is no way to satisfy the believers in the Constitution and, at the same time, Negro leaders who hold the balance of power in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois. In 1950 and 1952, the "Democrats" will face the loss of all these states—or the loss of the Southern and Border States if the bills are forced on us. If that happens, the States' Rights Party will be stimulated and magnified to the exact extent of the Administration's own effort to discard the Constitution of our fathers.

Rebellious Democrats Nominate Wright of Mississippi With South Carolina Governor

'TRUE MINORITY PARTY'

Candidates Are Wildly Cheered by 6,000 Supporters in Contest on States' Rights Issue

Southern Democrats' statement of principles is on Page 2.

By JOHN N. POPHAM

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 17—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina was unanimously chosen today by a group of rebellious Southern Democrats as a Presidential candidate to lead them in a fight to defeat President Truman in the November general elections.

An uproarious rump convention attended by 6,000 fervent followers also named Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi as a Vice Presidential running mate on a states' rights Democratic ticket. It announced a grand strategy designed to establish the group as the "only true minority party" in Congress.

Both standard bearers, whose candidacies have the effect of putting a fourth party into the national Presidential campaign, have been leading figures in the South's bitter fight against the civil rights proposals that were first introduced in January by President Truman.

From the enthusiasm of the convention crowd and the presence of several top southern political leaders it was evident that the new ticket would have a powerful attraction for the nine electoral votes of Mississippi, the eleven electoral votes of Alabama and a scattering of such votes in Florida, South Carolina, Louisiana and Texas.

Second Meeting Oct. 1

The Times
New York, N.Y.

Immediately after the naming of the candidates the convention agreed to reassemble here on Oct. 1 to make further plans with reference to the electoral votes of the various states. It was requested that each state send official delegates equal in number to its votes. It was believed this was a plan to make the meeting one of Presidential electors likely to be pledged to the new ticket.

Sun

The convention ended with a burst of shouts, cheers and rebel yells, as well as countless parades on the convention floor, with a portrait of Gen. Robert E. Lee held high. These demonstrations followed speeches denouncing President Truman and his civil rights program as "threats to make Southerners into a mongrel, inferior race by forced intermingling with Negroes."

In a declaration of principles, the dissident group closed the door on the possibility of throwing their strength to the Republican party by calling for the defeat of Mr. Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

"We call upon all Democrats and upon all other loyal Americans who are opposed to totalitarianism at home and abroad to unite with us in ignominiously defeating Harry S. Truman and Thomas E. Dewey, and every other candidate who would establish a police state in the United States of America," the declaration read.

"Federal Interference Hit"

The Times

The declaration voiced opposition to the elimination of segregation, the repeal of miscegenation statutes and set forth a four-page criticism of "Federal interference" in the field of civil rights to support its conclusion that the actions of the National Democratic Convention in Philadelphia were "totalitarian."

Generally, it was a six-hour session marked by great bursts of enthusiasm inside the auditorium as speakers drew an oratorical picture of the future of the South if segregation barriers were removed. Outside there was brief picketing by ten representatives of the Southern Progressive party, who departed under a fusillade of catcalls and boos.

Sun

Governor Thurmond is 45 years old, a veteran of the second World War, leading with paratroopers in the invasion of Normandy. On May 10 he delivered the keynote speech when the states'-rights Democrats held their first gathering.

Governor Wright, 53 years old, started the states'-rights "revolt" and on May 8 he delivered a statewide radio address to the Negroes of Mississippi in which he told them that if they envisioned social equality with whites in schools and restaurants it would be better for them to leave the state.

Candidates Popular in South

Both men have large and enthusiastic followings throughout the South, and at each of the states' rights gatherings and on public appearances during the days of the civil rights' controversy they have been acclaimed by large crowds.

Governor Wright has had many indications that he represents the sympathies of most of the citizens of his state. There has also been political unity behind him. Senators James O. Eastland and John C. Stennis, and Representatives John Bell Williams and William P. Colmar, were at today's meeting.

Thirteen states were represented by placards on the convention floor. They were Virginia, North and South Carolina, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Texas, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky and Arkansas.

However, only a few had representation of real political power. Many seated in 'delegates' seats turned out to be college students, interested onlookers, and persons who had stopped off for the show while traveling through Birmingham on business trips or vacations.

There was no question about the strong representations of Mississippi and Alabama. They dominated the convention floor, overflowing their own allotment of space and taking up seats in sections set aside for other states. In this way every seat on the floor was occupied.

In the Virginia section there were four students from the University of Virginia and a young woman from Alexandria who said she had stopped off returning from a trip to New Orleans.

Some States Not Represented

In the sections set aside for North Carolina and Kentucky no one would identify himself as from those states. Oklahoma had three of its own in its section and former Gov. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray sat in the balcony.

The Times

Louisiana and Florida and Texas had delegations of from fifteen to twenty-five persons. It was reported that ten national convention delegates from Texas, three Presidential electors from Florida and two Presidential electors from Louisiana were present.

Three of South Carolina's delegates to the Philadelphia convention were on hand. Governor Thurmond brought a large retinue.

Tennessee was represented by four students from the University of Tennessee, six students from Cumberland College at Lebanon and five persons who said they were "sympathizers." J. H. Ballew of Nashville, a delegate to the national convention, sat in the rear of the hall under a placard that read "Other States."

At the first meeting of the states' rights Democrats in Jackson, Miss., on May 10, Tennessee had a strong delegation from Memphis, home of E. H. "Boss" Crump.

New York, N.Y.

Georgia, which pulled out as a participant in the states' rights movement in May, had no political representatives present. Eight men who sat in the Georgia section said they were just "interested" and "sympathetic."

Arkansas had about twelve persons present, one of them a delegate to the national convention at Philadelphia.

Some on the convention floor who explained that they were believers in the precepts of the states' rights Democrats said they were from Indiana, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

The convention got under way with a series of speeches by local political figures, all stressing opposition to President Truman and predicting national chaos if the South's segregation pattern was abolished. There was much old-fashioned oratory replete with colloquialisms that drew gales of laughter from the crowd. Said one speaker:

"We have no choice between the little man with the sickening smile and the little man with the little mustache."

One speaker kept repeating that if the civil rights proposals became laws the South would find both races "mingling in the beauty shops and the swimming pools."

Warning to Office-Holders

For the second day in a row the officials of the states' rights Democrats displayed their principal political weakness, when former Gov. Frank M. Dixon of Alabama told the convention crowd:

"Some of the office-holders in the South are afraid of losing their jobs if they follow us and if they think they can weasel their way through this and weather the storm we will soon retire them to private life."

Several convention officials boasted that they would have "enough money behind this move to match the Republicans or the Democrats." Leaders stressed that it was their hope to insure the defeat of Mr. Truman in November and then to gain enough support for their ticket in every state to make the states' rights Democrats the actual Democratic Party minority in Congress under a Republican administration.

"This way," they said, "we will be the dominant minority group and the northern city machines will have to come to us for their committee assignments. That way we will block this trend to knife the South."

New York, N.Y.

It was learned that the strategy of the new party's leaders would be to try to get the state conventions in all Southern states reconvened, if they have already been held, and have them name new slates of Presidential electors who are pledged against Mr. Truman or pledged to support Governor Thurmond.

Sun, 7-18-48

This move to "free the electors" is regarded as the new ticket's trump card in defeating Mr. Truman in the electoral college and giving it the dominant party position in the South.

Demonstration for Candidates

The delegates gave vent to a wild demonstration that spilled onto the speakers' platform with flags and pennants and state placards when Governors Thurmond and Wright appeared and accepted the nominations.

"We will not turn back," the Mississippi Governor said. "This is the South's big opportunity to show that we are the real Democratic party. Those who believed we would never be able to carry this fight on to a successful conclusion are beginning to tremble."

There were shouts of "no, no" when Governor Wright said he would "step down" when the states' righters met again on October "if a better candidate can be found."

Governor Thurmond said that "we have just begun to fight" and "if the South should vote for Truman this year we might just as well petition the Government to give us colonial status."

"President Truman has betrayed the South," he added, "and we Southerners are going to cast our votes for candidates who are true believers in states' rights principles. For our loyalty to the party we have been stabbed in the back by a President who has betrayed every principle of the Democratic party in his desire to win at any cost."

THURMOND OFF TO TEXAS FOR ACCEPTANCE

Columbia Record

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond expressed confidence in the States' Rights Democratic campaign to name him president today as he boarded a special plane for Houston, Tex.

Thurmond said that the party's headquarters in Jackson, Miss., reported the campaign to be "coming along splendidly." He said that the "people of South Carolina as well as many others in the South are responding to the principle."

Thurmond left this morning for ceremonies in his honor this afternoon prior to the official notification of his nomination by the States' Rights Democrats for president.

Accompanying him were Mrs. Thurmond, his press secretary, George M. MacNabb, State Sen. George Warren of Hampton, James H. Hammond of Columbia, and Robert McC. Figg of Charleston.

Merlin E. Jacobs, Jr., of the J. D. Reed Co., Inc., of Dallas, Tex., flew here this morning to transport the governor's party to the rally.

Governor Thurmond welcomed his special pilot today with a loyalty test—"Hello, sir, are you for Truman or Thurmond?"

The pilot, Mervin E. Jacobs, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, gracefully parried with a politician's own weapon—"No Comment." He added jocularly that he wasn't in politics.

Thurmond's friends, bidding him farewell as he left for Houston to accept formally the presidential nomiation, had teased him about the plane.

When he said it was being sent by headquarters, Sen. James H. Hammond quipped that he hoped he didn't mean "by Howard McGrath."

Thurmond and a party of five left today for Houston to attend a States' Rights Democratic rally.

Hard Victory Won To Get Negroes Admitted To Democratic Primaries May Prove to be Futile; Foes of Civil Rights to Take Over

Nashville, Tenn.

Birmingham, Alabama— Colored Democrats were conspicuous by their absence from the Dixiecrat convention here on Saturday of last week. it was a meeting the like of which has not been held in the South since a faction walked out of the 1860 Democratic Convention and launched a movement that split the nation into Union and Confederate States.

Fri.

As in 1860, the party split over the "Negro Question" but the latest crack up of the Democratic party is not likely to assume any such serious concern to the nation as the split in 1860. 7-23-48

But the plight of the colored man and woman who have fought valiantly in the South to become active members of the Democratic Party was rendered almost pathetic by the calling of the Dixiecrat convention and what is to result from it. The indications are that in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina and Mississippi, states in which ever so much money has been spent to force the admission of colored citizens into the Democratic Party, the Dixiecrats will control affairs. They issued what amounts to a demand to senators and congressmen that they come out and speak out in approval of the stand the Dixiecrats have taken on the civil rights issue. It is probable that these senators and congressmen will be forced to do this in order to hold their jobs. Thus the Democratic Party in the South will be based wholly on hostility to the Negro. No Negro will likely have either the desire or the courage to be a Democrat in any of the states that will be controlled by Dixiecrats.

It now seems probable that in most Southern States the regularly elected electors will take the advice of the Dixiecrat leaders and cast the electoral votes of their states for the two nominees of the Dixiecrat majority. This will mean that a colored voter will have no chance to express his preference for President Truman.

In those states where the chosen electors feel they must vote for President Truman, the Dixiecrats will call state conventions and choose new electors to go on the ballot. The Dixiecrats pledge 127 electoral votes to their own nominees, leaving no electoral votes in the South to President Truman If this happens a colored man's vote for Mr. Truman will be worse than wasted.

Globe and Independent

In Tennessee, the Dixiecrats will just about make it certain that the Republican electors will be elected. They are able to split the Democratic Party in twain, which means that they will deprive Mr. Truman of Tennessee's electoral vote. They are likely to accomplish the same thing in North Carolina and probably Virginia.

The big objective of the Dixiecrats of course is to make President Truman the worse defeated candidate for the president their party has nominated since the Civil War. They feel that Mr. Truman is not likely to carry any Northern states because of the Henry Wallace Ticket. Thus if the Dixiecrats can, deprive Mr. Truman of all of the Southern electors by taking a number of them for their own candidates and making it possible for Republicans to take the remainder, Mr. Truman will be "the worse beaten candidate." He will have many millions of popular votes but no electoral votes at all.

The one bright spot in a very dark picture is that the radical Dixiecrats nominated just about the worse ticket that could have been put together. Gov. Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Wright of Mississippi qualify as the most demagogic governors in the South. The states they govern are rated the most backward states in the South. It is probable that should the Democratic congressmen and senators of the South unite in providing electors for Mr. Truman in their states they could succeed in getting them elected. But at present it seems that senators and congressmen are either disposed to keep quiet or to oby the demand of the Dixiecrats that they speak out in opposition to President Truman.

The Dixiecrats, out of the mouth of one of their orators, got a slogan that is going to be heard thruout their campaign The northern wing of the party, this orator stated, was made up of "communicrats and mulattocrats." They bear down in opposition to the fair employment practices bill and pretend that their opposition to it is based solely on what it would do to help Negroes. But it is known that there never would have been an FEPC bill offered had it been for Negroes, only. It was meant to stop discrimination against Catholics and Jews, as well as Negroes. But they find it advisable to keep such views with in the hearing of fellow-bigots.

Nashville, Tenn.

Fri.

With the help of money contributed by Republicans, both white and colored, the battle to get Southern Negroes admitted as members of the Democratic Party of the South has been won. But for 1948, at least, Negroes of the South will not want to be members of the party of their choice. It will be because all liberal Southern Democrats have been rendered helpless and are being pressured to become full-fledged Dixiecrats, or else. 7-23-48

Race Issue Sole Plank of Bolters' Program

Mon. 7-24-48

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (NNPA)— Supporters of Henry A. Wallace paraded in front of the Municipal Auditorium at the opening session of Dixiecrats holding a States' Rights Convention here last Saturday.

They carried a variety of placards. One read, "End lynchings—Win with Wallace." Other placards read: "Fair Employment for All Workers—Win with Wallace," "You Can't Eat States' Rights" and "The Poll Tax Must Go."

Walter Sillers, speaker of the Mississippi House of Representatives who offered one of the States' rights proposals which were rejected by the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia, last week, was named permanent chairman.

Mon.

The statement of principles from the resolutions committee said:

7-24-48

"We oppose all efforts to invade or destroy" individual rights; we stand for segregation of the races and the racial integrity of each race; the Constitutional rights to choose one's associates; to accept private employment without Government interference;

"We oppose and condemn . . . a civil rights program calling for the elimination of segregation, social equality by Federal fiat;

"We call upon all Democrats and upon all other loyal Americans to unite with us in ignominiously defeating Harry S. Truman and Thomas E. Dewey.

The Fourth Party

This country's federal government is not well suited for the functioning of many political parties Our method of electing a president, vice president and Congress has developed the two-party system. No other system could long endure. In order for government as we know it to operate smoothly, it is necessary for some party to command a majority following among the voters and in Congress. A coalition government such as is known in France or Italy is not feasible, except in rare emergencies, under our laws and habits.

Third, fourth or fifth parties, therefore, can be little more than protest parties. Usually they are devoted to a single cause or a single idea. Supporters may nurse the hope of seeing their movement mature into a major party, but that has happened only twice in this nation's history. The Whigs, who elected two presidents, with a third inheriting the office on death of a president, and the Republicans offer the proof that a major party can grow out of a minor party. Those are rare exceptions, however. The pages of American political history are littered with the wrecks of minor parties.

Birmingham, Ala.

What will happen to the States' Rights Democratic Party, as it was officially named at a meeting of anti-Truman Southern Democrats in Atlanta? Leaders of the party declare they are aiming at a permanent organization and capture, no less, of the presidency. They see no temporary revolt in this movement which has led them out of the national Democratic Party which Jefferson fathered.

7-27-48

The News

Either they are gifted with vision far beyond the ken of ordinary men, or they are expressing wishes as facts, or they are talking big, for effect. This paper leans to the latter explanation. It is difficult to see where the fourth party has a chance in more than a few Southern states.

This revolt is without support in the North or West except for a few individuals. It does not represent a discontent so wide that it could lead to the rise of a new major party. States' rights is such a general term and possible of so many interpretations that it cannot capture, as a political standard, the imagination of any great block of voters.

For states' rights to mean anything to the average voter, the phrase must be translated in terms of concrete problems and issues.

Birmingham, Ala.

The issues of special concern to this movement do not reach in other areas the importance they have in the South. The Southern anti-Truman Democrats may make headway in influencing the rest of the nation to have more consideration for Southern opinion on regional problems. But whether the revolt is the best method of exerting such influence is a question not yet answered. We doubt if it will be answered by using the term states' rights with any implication that those opposed to the fourth party revolt are not also for states' righs. 7-27-48

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Editor The Advertiser:

The Advertiser

Gov. Thurmond says that he is not interested in the racial issues involved in the coming election. If he is telling the truth his candidacy presents some unusual political alliances. To anyone who accepts his statement at full value I wish to direct the following questions:

Wed. 7-22-48

1. Why is he traveling in company with Wright, McCorvey, Talmadge, and other advocates of white supremacy?

2. Why is he opposed to Truman only because of the civil rights program?

3. What is his attitude toward [illegible] RE[illegible] and other programs which require domination by the Federal Government?

Montgomery, Ala.

4. If Thurmond does not stand for white supremacy why was he nominated instead of Folsom? Folsom, you will remember, has been opposed to Truman for a long time. He believes in states' rights so much that he has advocated that our national defense be composed of 48 separate armies.

5. Would Thurmond address a non-segregated audience in New York or Pittsburgh? If so, what could he say?

A. GUY DUNCAN.

Glenwood, Ala.

★ 1—When Gov. Thurmond bluntly eschews the ugly term White Supremacy, he does so—or so we conjecture—because you can't export that stuff outside the South and because his essential cry is States Rights.

2—Would Thurmond address a non-segregated audience in New York or Pittsburgh? We [illegible] undoubtedly would. So has every Southern figure who has gone as a delegate to national Democratic conventions. The convention hall in Philadelphia, for example, was entirely unsegregated. Sovereign states, exercising States Rights, had seen fit to elect Negro delegates to that convention. They sat with the whites and shared all facilities.

The editor watched with a high degree of intrigue as such Alabama delegates as Bull Conner, of Birmingham; Miller Bonor, of Camden; Handy Ellis, Hardy Riddle, Tom King, of Aniston, sat in a section with Negro delegates to the front and rear of them, notably in the Michigan delegation. That was the way it was.—Ed.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

States' Rights Democrats And Heavenly Lightning

To the Editor of The News:

The courageous patriotic movement launched by the so-called "rebels," and "bolters" from the so-called National Democratic Party, is a crusade to recover constitutional government as the rightful heritage of the people of the United States.

This worthy and necessary crusade of the States' Rights Democrats is not a descent into political Avernus, as its detractors would have us believe. To the contrary, it is a determined ascent out of Avernus into which the true Democratic Party was lured by the downward drag of the New Deal Party—a third party—which absorbed, destroyed, then masqueraded under the time-honored banner of the Democratic Party. The News

The constitution in crystal-clear language emphatically provides that each and every state in the Union shall have the sovereign right to administer its own internal affairs without intermeddling on the part of the federal government. Indeed, Section IV, of Article IV of the constitution sternly enunciates the dictum that: Birmingham, Ala.

> "The United States shall guarantee to every state in the Union, a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion: and on application of the Legislature, or of the executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence."

Thus we come to realize that only to prevent invasion by a common enemy, and in case of domestic violence—and then, only at the request of the Legislature or of the governor of the state so disturbed—may the federal government obtrude itself in the domestic affairs of any state in the Union. It is intensely clear that federal authority must await the invitation of the Legislature or of the executive, before it precipitates itself upon any state whose right to sovereignty within its own boundaries, the constitution has guaranteed it. Fri. 8-6-48

The "bolters" from the New Deal are not insurgents. They are, in all truth, resurgents. Were this assertion not true it would not be made. The States' Rights Democrats, stigmatized "bolters," were splendidly "struck" by the bolt of idealism and patriotism — even though they were deep-down in Avernus.

There come times when prevailing popular abuses and misuses of power cease to be sufferable to those who have sensibilities with which to suffer. There come times when the subjugation of collective intelligence and inner sovereignty of those individuals who are so endowed, becomes so broad, so deep, so unrestrained and so rampant, that, from some direction a "bolt" inevitably strikes.

The conditions engendered by the employment of gang political machines and by the abuse of federal power over the domestic affairs of our 48 states, have forged at last, the "bolt" which will strike away the chains of tyranny, and cause to stand erect again, the Democratic Party which essentially is the party of the South.

IT MAY WELL be realized now, and accepted for the truth that it is, that the leaders of this movement to recover constitutional government from the hustings are not mere political tricksters adopting tactics for self-advancement and for shoddy political expediency. They are, instead, men of as fine caliber as can be found anywhere in our country. As the leaders in the onward-sweep of this magnificent current of action, Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, as the nominee for the presidency, and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, for the vice presidency, have been wisely chosen to head the States' Rights Democratic ticket. Both possess records of proved ability to govern and to lead, of patriotism and of loyalty. Both were educated in institutions of higher learning, and, of course, both are polished and urbane. Each is exemplary in character—each is steeped in the tradition, somewhat important in the South, that high office imposes high obligation—that a trust may not be betrayed, nor power abused. Perhaps this is a quaint and outmoded ethic, but it is a gleaming ethic nonetheless. Fri. 8-6-48

The ideal of states' rights is wrought into the very warp and woof of the constitution. If it be treason to seek a restoration of the right to dignity and sovereignty of the various states in the operation, each, of its own internal affairs, then the makers of the constitution likewise were guilty of treason. If the leaders of this resurgence of the principle of state sovereignty are "rebels," charlatans and ignoramuses, they enjoy communication with distinguished personages and have for guidance the precepts of great predecessors. Let us consider a few of the utterances of certain of those predecessors:

> Said Thomas Jefferson: "If ever this country is brought under a single central government, it will be one of the most extensive corruption . . . The states should be watchful to note every material usurpation of their rights; to denounce them as they occur, in the most peremptory tones. The time to guard against corruption and tyranny is before they shall have got hold of us . . . Our legislators are not sufficiently apprised of the rightful limits of their powrs; that their true office is to declare and enforce only our natural rights and duties, but to take none of them from us . . ."

Said Chief Justice Marshall: "We admit, as all must admit, that the powers of the government are limited, and that its limits are not to be transcended. . . . Though any one state may be willing to control its operation, no state is willing to allow others to control it. . . . No political dreamer was ever wild enough to think of breaking down the lines which separate the states and of compounding the American people into one common mass."

"The maintenance inviolate of the rights of the States', and especially the right of each state to order and control its own domestic institutions according to its own judgment exclusively, is essential to that balance of power on which the perfection and endurance of our political fabric depend." Lincoln, in his first inaugural address. 8-6-48

The ninth amendment of the constitution wisely provides that: Fri.

"The enumerations of the constitution of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people."

Nevertheless, the Supreme Court of today, through its decisions in racial matters does "deny," and it does "disparage" certain "rights" which many of the people claim the privilege of exercising.

ALL NATURE IS SELECTIVE, and it imposes upon every species of its own divine law—the law of selectivity. If this majestic law be violated the offending species will degenerate and it will vanish. The people of the South invoke this law; they invoke the right to observe or to enforce the law of selectivity, because, it is the law!

The States' Rights Democratic Party emphatically is not a fourth party. It is not a splinter party. It is, instead, the bone and essence of the unperverted, original Democratic Party which was created out of the tenets set forth in the constitution, and which was animated by Jeffersonian precepts. When this great American institution—the Democratic Party—was created, the agrarian element helped to create it. This was made possible by allowing this element the privilege of lifting up its voice in shaping the affairs of government, and by allowing the South the distinction of occupying a position of dignity and importance in government. But that voice has been hushed, the importance denied—that dignity despised, as abundantly proved at the "National Democratic Party" convention in Philadelphia, as well as by the Republican convention.

> No nation is any greater, any stronger than is the influence of its agrarian element in that nation's government. One of the chief causes of the fall of the Roman empire was the breaking up and the disregarding of her agrarian element. This republic was conceived and this government created out of the level-headed, sturdy calm, the peace-loving and down-to-earth ideals of an agrarian society. But the New Deal—the so-called National Democratic Party has despised and disregarded the agrarian influence; but has instead, 'industrialized' and so 'textalized' the dominating influence in our government, that the constitution has been machined into tatters and shreds. Fri.

Neither the national Democratic nor the Republican Party is to be commended for the sort of treatment which has been accorded the South. So alike in character have they become that each is as the end of the same stick. Birmingham Ala

"THIS COUNTRY with its institutions belongs to the people who inhabit it. When they shall grow weary of the existing government they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it. . . . The rule of a minority as a permanent arrangement, is wholly inadmissable; so that rejecting the majority principle, anarchy or despotism is all that is left." Thus spake Abraham Lincoln.

The States' Rights Democratic Party proposes to exercise the constitutional right of "amending" the abuse of power in both the Republicans and the national Democratic parties. If this purpose represents a "bolt" it must be admitted that the bolt is charged with "heavenly lightning." 8-6-48

Alabama Democrats are overwhelmingly agreed that the protection of basic states' rights is an urgent objective but they are far from united on how best to serve the cause. Birmingham News

The principle that government should remain on the local and state levels to the greatest extent compatible with the larger public and national interest remains sound, despite the increasing complexities and interdependencies of this age which tend to make for ever widening federal action.

Precisely because there are so many factors tending to make for greater centralization in government, there is all the more need for constant vigilance to prevent such action from going to extreme and unwise lengths. Birmingham, Ala.

> Many problems do call for federal attention nowadays and it would be obstructive of the public interest simply to stand out blindly against soundly conceived efforts to deal with such matters on the national level. But it is very easy to go too far in federal action and this paper agrees that President Truman's civil rights proposals present an example in point.

Southern racial problems are not going to be dealt with successfully by coercion.

There is no reason to believe that a federal anti-lynching bill would be constructive and its enactment would aggravate conditions it was intended to improve.

Fair employment practices in the South certainly are not going to be served by a program imposed from Washington.

Federal prohibition of a poll tax in national elections would enormously complicate the elective processes and involve serious constitutional questions. State action would be far better.

> Upon such things Southerners are in wide agreement. But how these purposes and convictions will be served by a break away of Alabama Democrats from the national party becomes still more difficult to conceive.

Arkansas Recognizes States'-Rights Party

Camden Journal

Little Rock, Sept. 24 (AP)—The States'-Rights Democrats were recognized as a new political party in Arkansas today and qualified for a place on the November 2 ballot. Sat. 9-25-48

Petitions nominating nine presidential electors were received and approved by Secretary of State C. G. Hall. Camden Ark quest by former Gov. Sparks, have suggested ideas for the party plank on civil rights. They generally emphasize civil rights. Suppose an acceptable plank were worked out and Mr. Truman was nominated, what then?

State Democratic Chairman McCorvey reiterates that Alabama electors will not vote either for Truman or Dewey. And at a dinner in Mr. McCorvey's honor a dominant note was that the South should seek to recapture its strong position in the party.

Well, how is that to be done by bolting the national party if Mr. Truman is nominated, as seems almost certain?

Mr. McCorvey himself sees little or no chance of blocking the president's nomination but clings to the hope that the election can be thrown into the House of Representatives. It could be, only if Southern Democrats held the balance of power and were willing to reject the opportunity for a Democratic victory.

Operating outside both of the major national parties, how could Southern Democrats hope to do their utmost for states' rights?

"BOLTER (NATIONAL)"

Mr. Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, has written us an avuncular but firm lecture on the use of the word bolter.

We say The Advertiser and Mr. McCorvey are bolters because we're keeping our vote away from Truman, nominee of the National Democratic Party. But Mr. McCorvey insists that he is a bolter, neither past, present nor prospective. And he says it after the following fashion:

Editor, The Montgomery Advertiser:

In your editorial in Sunday's Advertiser captioned "Bolters All," you are just about correct when you state that it causes me some anguish to be called a "bolter." The reason that I object to being called a bolter is because I am not a bolter, never have been a bolter, and never expect to be a bolter. Advertiser

Webster's New International Dictionary defines a bolter as "a voter who refuses to support his party." My party is the Democratic Party of Alabama, whose emblem is a crowing rooster, with the words "White Supremacy" above the rooster. That is the party whose nominees I am going to support. This is not the party whose delegates so insulted our people at the recent Philadelphia Convention.

Can you imagine the national Democratic organization having as a part of its emblem the words "White Supremacy"? I think not. Montgomery, Ala.

Of course, the Democratic Party of Alabama, which is the party which called our primaries, usually affiliates with the national organization which is, after all, a combination of the Democratic Parties of the various states. However, this year the Democratic Party of Alabama is not going to affiliate or even associate with the national Democratic organization.

While the 1896 bolt to which you refer was before my time, yet, when you went off and supported Palmer rather than William Jennings Bryan, you were not supporting the presidential electors who were nominated by the Democratic Party of Alabama. Wed. 8-4-48

If my memory serves me right, the Democratic Party of Alabama in that year supported William Jennings Bryan for president, and Alabama's electoral vote was cast for Bryan, and not for Palmer. Instead of supporting the presidential electors who were nominated by the Democratic Party of Alabama in 1896, which electors supported Bryan, you supported the Palmer and Buckner ticket. You were therefore surely a bolter. For this reason I don't think your illustration is very apt.

Personally, I cannot see how any Southern white man could think of such a thing as supporting Harry Truman for President of the United States after the indignities which were heaped upon the Southern people at the Philadelphia Convention, which indignities he certainly initiated, tolerated, advocated, and really permitted.

Consequently, please put me down in your book as not planning to "bolt" the Democratic Party of Alabama. I know my position is absolutely sound, and I believe that if you will think this matter over from the viewpoint above suggested, you will agree with me.

GESSNER T. McCORVEY.

Mobile, Ala.

First, something that is irrelevant: "Can you imagine the national Democratic organization having as a part of its emblem the words 'WHITE SUPREMACY'? I think not."

Neither can we. Nor, for that matter, can we imagine the Dixiecrats doing it either because of the fact that our standard bearer, Gov. Thurmond, has said repeatedly, "I am not one whit interested in WHITE SUPREMACY."

We hope Mr. McCorvey's pard, Horace Wilkinson, doesn't hear about that, but there it is. 8-4-48

But to get back to the question of whether Mr. McCorvey, like The Advertiser and everybody else who isn't going to vote for Truman, is a bolter.

The Advertiser, as was pointed out Sunday, bolted the Democratic Party in 1860 through revulsion for Nominee Douglas and again in 1896 through fear of Nominee Bryan and Free Silver. In this year of grace The Advertiser is bolting Nominee Truman for certain well known reasons, share and share alike with Mr. McCorvey.

Now in 1928, Horace Wilkinson and Tom Heflin ran out on Al Smith. They are called bolters and never was there any argument about it. In 1948 Mr. Wilkinson is running out on Harry Truman. Why isn't Wilkinson then a repeater? He was called a bolter for depriving Smith of his vote. Why isn't he within the traditional meaning of the word bolter once again when he deprives Truman similarly? When was the definition changed? Advertiser

Mr. McCorvey insists, as we have seen, that he escapes the stigmatic association with Wilkinson Hoovercrat bolters of 1928 by the fact that he's voting under the Rooster right on and the fact that Truman won't benefit is beside the point.

The national party might wish to ask us Alabamians what we're doing with the Rooster anyway. McGrath might point to the fact that when it was suggested that Alabama's walk-out faction take the Alabama standard with it, Chairman Handy Ellis said, No, it belonged to the convention and would have to stay planted after they were gone. 8-4-48 Accordingly, and we witnessed it, the walk-out half of the Alabama delegation took the standard as far as the door, but it was turned over to an alternate delegate who returned it to its stand beside the seats of the stay-put heirs of the walk-out faction.

But in deference to Mr. McCorvey, we cheerfully split the difference. He is a Democratic loyalist up to the State level; after that, and as far as the National party is concerned, Mr. McCorvey is a "Bolter (national)." Wed. 8-4-48

DIXON AND HILL

As far as we can detect, former Gov. Frank Dixon isn't doing a single thing to make life pleasant for Senator Hill and Senator Sparkman. 8-10-48

Dixon, a leader of the Dixiecrat movement, has announced that all Alabama's congressmen have assured him of their active support. Then, with the steely subtlety that is a Dixon characteristic, Dixon casually added that he hadn't heard a single word from Hill or Sparkman. Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

The fact is, of course, that Hill and Sparkman will put their mark under the Rooster, but their support of the Dixiecrat movement is grudging and is lent without belief in its future. The further fact after that is that Hill comes up for reelection in 1950, and the fact after that is that Frank Dixon and Lister Hill have personally detested and politically abhorred one another for years. It is one of the state's best established and most engaging feuds. Tues. 8-10-48

Wallace Wins Place On Ballot in South

But North Carolina Rules Out 'Dixiecrat' Party

New York, N.Y.

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 4 (UP). —The Progressive party today won the right to list Henry A. Wallace as a candidate for President on the North Carolina November election ballot, but the "Dixiecrat" party failed to gain a place for its Presidential candidate, Governor J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina.

The North Carolina Board of Elections unanimously certified the Progressive party on the strength of a petition containing more than 35,000 names of which 11,167 were ruled valid by county election boards in a required check.

The board refused to certify the states' rights group on the ground that its 18,861-name petition had not been checked and did not meet the requirements.

Wright Declares Constitution Is Jeopardized

Memphis, Tenn.

HITS OTHER CANDIDATES

Mon. 9-18-48

By The Associated Press

TALLULAH, La., Sept. 17.—Vice presidential candidate Fielding L. Wright opened the States' Rights Democrats' campaign in Louisiana Friday with the assertion that the Constitution is jeapordized.

Liberties In Balance

"These three men are going up and down the country asking for votes and promising a platform which would mean the destruction of the Constitution," Wright said, adding:

"Our Constitution is jeopardized, all of our liberties are held in the balance."

Wright said that Germans, lulled into a false sense of security, were led to destruction and despair through Hitler's "program very much akin to America's present day threat and which is referred to as the Civil Rights Program."

Southern Democrats were lulled into a false sense of security, the Mississippi Governor continued, before abandoning the two-thirds vote necessary to nominate candidates for President and vice president.

"When our power was gone the infiltrated groups within it commenced to kick us around," he said. "We were kicked about in Chicago in 1944. We were insulted in Philadelphia in 1948.

Cites Former Dangers

"Our Constitution is in danger today just as our Democratic Party was in danger when the sinister voice of infiltration whispered into our ears and robbed us of the two-thirds rule." Mon 9-18-48

Discussing Dr. Truman's Civil Rights Program, Wright said the AntiPoll Tax Bill was an invasion of States' Rights. He described the AntiLynching Bill as "another gesture of tyranny, another effort to centralize the power of government in Washington." Wright said the Fair Employment Practices Act "upheld by Dewey, advocated by Wallace and recommended by Harry Truman" was patterned after "a Russian law written by Joseph Stalin about 1920."

Wright said that the recent action of the Louisiana State Democratic Central Committee in putting the States' Rights Democrats on the ballot in place of the Truman-Barkley ticket "will lend encouragement to real Democrats everywhere."

A Light Dawns on Thurmond

Atlanta, Ga.

(Ralph Jones, whose column usually appears in this space, is ill.)

Fri. 7-23-48

South Carolina's Gov. Strom Thurmond, the rebel States' Rights Democrats' choice for President, is plainly troubled. At the Birmingham conference where he was nominated, he must have seen many a sign that everybody there did not stand on the high ground of constitutional principle which he claimed as his base.

The signs were everywhere. One of them was the small, hard core of the meeting's control. The thousands of visitors and "delegates" in the hall, mostly home-towners, cheered the Confederate flags and the impassioned reminders of Reconstruction and of recent slights at Philadelphia. But a handful of men behind the scenes ran the works, wrote the resolutions, picked the candidates, gave the cues to arise, shout and parade. They were easily to be identified as representatives of large interests of which Birmingham is a citadel.

Prejudice

There were signs, too, in emotions easily aroused to a kind of screaming hysteria, that the gathering was less concerned with principle than with native legend and prejudice. The cult of white supremacy ran riot. And hovering at the edge was the sharp-eyed Gerald L. K. Smith, who, after everything was over, gave his blessing to the movement and his own notion of its meaning. "Our followers," said he, "believe that the Negro and the Jew are exerting too much pressure in American politics."

Fri. 7-23-48

Now back home in Columbia, Gov. Thurmond adds up the score and is impelled to speak his mind. He wants to keep the movement respectable and Southern in the classic sense—in the sense of John C. Calhoun and Wade Hampton, who came out of the same soil as he; not in the sense of "Cotton Ed" Smith, another South Carolinian. This surely means that he already has become doubtful. He finds it necessary to say that he is "not one whit interested in white supremacy."

Incendiarism

True, Gov. Thurmond is himself partly to blame for the turn which he deplores, and for the necessity of disavowing Gerald Smith. His speech after he found himself stuck with the nomination had its own incendiary passages. He brought his listeners to their feet amid a vivid flutter of the Stars and Bars with his shout that there are not enough troops in the country to break down segregation in the South. His reminders that he had proposed repealing South Carolina's poll tax, that he stands for equal (though separate) facilities for Negroes were lost in the thunder of cheering for his more defiant words, both in Birmingham and at the Philadelphia convention.

Gov. Thurmond was also to learn afterward that Gov. Laney, of Arkansas, one of the triumvirate with himself and Gov. Wright, of Mississippi, who were engineers of the movement, had pulled out of it and was counselling Democratic unity and regularity. It could be that still another obvious truth came more clearly into light at Birmingham. This was that behind all the tumult, the shouting and the hotspur incitement, the movement is mainly a fight to win control of Democratic Party organizations in the States and the nation. In the States where the shouting is loudest, conservative groups have come into dominance for the first time since 1932, and mean to stay there. The formula of racial division is tried and true.

The Constitution

And so Gov. Thurmond tries hard to get the thing back on to high ground. He sounds a bit disillusioned, as if he fears he cannot do it. Atlanta, Ga. 7-23-48

Dixie Plans to Block Votes for Truman

Free Press Detroit, Mich

Fri. 7-16-48

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—The South's troubled Democrats indicated a plan to hamstring President Truman's election chances by leaving their electors unpledged.

The plan was outlined by former Gov. Frank M. Dixon and two members of the Alabama States' Rights Committee.

* * *

DIXON, Presidential Elector Horace Wilkinson and Sidney Smyer stressed that Saturday's meeting here of Democrats disgruntled over the national party's civil-rights plank would be a "conference and not a convention."

Wilkinson and Dixon said that leaving the presidential electors free to vote for whom they pleased would not mean throwing support to the Republican candidates.

It would mean, they said, that the electors could vote for any man.

Presumably the Southern states could unite in the electoral college as they did in the convention, when 263 votes went to Senator Russell, of Georgia, for the presidential nomination.

* * *

ALABAMA already has a delegation to the electoral college which is unpledged, except against Truman.

Fri.

Wilkinson said the support for his plan from 11 Southern states would mean 127 free votes in the electoral college.

7-16-48

He added that before November there still is time for any Southern state to change the status of its delegation now pledged to Truman.

Earlier, Gov Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi said the Birmingham conference was to nominate a specific presidential candidate.

The call to the Birmingham convention was issued by Wright and Dixon as the delegates left Philadelphia, where they were defeated twice.

BIRMINGHAM, July 18 (UP)—Leaders of the second bolt in Democratic Party history today planned an early conference to set up machinery for their presidential campaign. New York, N.Y.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, rebel nominee for President, said, "We are not bolting the Democratic Party. They left us." Mon 7-19-48

Thurmond was nominated amid rebel yells at a "Dixiecrat" convention here last night. It was the first mass walkout on the regular Democratic organization since insurgent southern Democrats nominated John C. Breckinridge in 1860.

Thurmond pledged a finish fight against President Truman's civil-rights program and against social equality for Negroes.

Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, "Dixiecrat" vice presidential choice, said he and Thurmond had agreed on an early conference to set up "co-ordinating machinery."

Dixie's Good-By

The Herald

"We bid you goodbye!"

Birmingham newspaper people didn't know to which the bigger headlines belonged Saturday—the meeting of southerners here or the events in Berlin. To the outside world it must seem self-conscious indeed that the South can be absorbed in a problem of its own when the planet is on fire. It seems that way to many of us in the South, too. That is one reason we are in revolution against a status which makes it necessary to concentrate on our Southern problem even when it denies us a voice in other issues of the nation and world.

Columbia, S.C.

Why shouldn't we be free to take sides among ourselves on foreign affairs, on social legislation, on the questions that divide liberals and conservatives? But we can't. Not when this southern problem is in issue. All else must be subordinated then to the awful necessity of putting this first thing first. To be emancipated for participation in other affairs, we need two new institutions, it seems to me. We need a two-party system. And we need, equally, a permanent southern organization (not new party) to make a weapon of the South's electoral college vote against either party or both when we are threatened in matters having to do without our Southern problem.

Tues. 7-20-48

When The Dothan (Alabama) Eagle came out after the convention with a front page editorial for Dewey and Warren, one of the finest traditions of the South for loyalty, courage and great "belonging"—spoke. Editor Horace Hall is one of the fighting Halls of Alabama whose best-known member was the late great Grover Hall, Pulitzer prize winner.

Mr. Hall is evidently able to find reason in his leap from the frying pan into the fire. The move, as I see it, is one part of the political revolution that has been touched off in these states. Another is the Birmingham meeting to deny the South's electoral vote to Truman and Dewey, too. Another, and let's not forget, is represented by those non-bolters who gave Senator Russell his amazing total of votes at Philadelphia and who at this moment honestly don't know what to do but are sure they can't support Truman. Out of all this the South's hope, it seems to me, is (1) the emergence of a genuine two-party system here and (2) in great addition, a permanent stand-by Southern organization which will not be a new party and will preferably exist under auspices of the state Democratic party and whose sole function will be protecting the South with its potential control of electoral votes. 7-20-48

We need two parties here, and we need an organization to guard us, at home and in the nation, against the control that can be exercised in both parties by the professional organizers of Negro minorities.

The Herald

Classic in southern history will be those words of dignity, restraint and cool resolve which Handy Ellis, of Alabama, spoke at Philadelphia. "At this time without hatred, without fear, but with disillusionment, we are carrying out our pledge to the people of Alabama. We bid you goodbye." They were the high words of a southern performance which was distinguished through the whole convention for calm, intelligence, and good manners. There was none of the ranting emotionalism, the cheap angers and rank speech which the South has on some occasions offered. These were first-class men, and their quarrel was fundamental, too "deep for sound or foam."

Columbia, S.C.

In history, too, will be the magnificent silence with which Mississippi withdrew. People expected speeches, a passionate defi, but when Handy Ellis announced that Mississippi, too, was withdrawing, the Mississippians simply stood up and moved out. A few moments when the state's name was called and there was no answer the effect was as dramatic as that empty table of South Carolina's at the Jackson dinner. Tues. 7-20-48

Angry Men Chart Plans, Seek Their Own Platform And Presidential Candidate

Fri. 7-16-48

Angry Southern Democrats, seeking a presidential candidate and a platform of their own, today forged plans for a conference in Municipal Auditorium tomorrow that will have the trappings, at least, of a party convention.

There will be coverage by newsreel men and the radio network at this meeting, which has been called by its leaders a conference in an "electoral college fight to save the South."

Bill Nappi's band will play in the auditorium at 9:30 a.m., and the conference will be called to order at 10 a.m.

* * *

STRENGTH OF THE MEETING was still a question. Louisiana and Georgia have announced their delegates will not attend.

Governors of South Carolina, Arkansas and Mississippi will be present, it was announced by Frank Dixon, one of two Alabama members of the Southwide States' Rights Campaign Committee.

One of the leaders of the conference, W. W. Wright (no relation to Gov. Fielding Wright), of Mississippi, said frankly the states' rights Democrats have no chance of winning in the general election in November.

Fri. 7-16-48

But, said Mr. Wright, who arrived by plane here last night, the conference can start the ball rolling to defeat Harry S. Truman's bid for reelection and "get control of the party back in the hands of the regular Democrats."

Mr. Dixon, former Alabama governor, and Horace C. Wilkinson, one of 11 presidential electors pledged against Truman, said their plan was to hamstring President Truman's chance for reelection by leaving the South's electors unpledged.

"This system of reestablishing the power of the South in the political council of the nation will be effective in this election only if the Republicans do not secure a majority of the electoral college," said Mr. Dixon.

The News

"Should the Republicans not secure a majority vote, the election would then go to Congress. The top three of those who had secured the most electoral votes would be voted upon by the congressional representatives, with each state having one vote.

Birmingham, Ala.

"THE PLAN MAY ultimately lead to a new party in the South, since there seems to be no room for us who live in the South in either of the parties as at present constituted with the beliefs they have.

Fri. 7-16-48

"The Democratic Party in all the years has been the party of states' rights. The party has changed its attitude, and there is no place in that for us as at present constituted."

Members of the Alabama and Mississippi delegations to the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia were on their way to Birmingham today.

Alabama's 11 presidential electors already are pledged to vote for someone besides Truman. Mr. Wilkinson said that if at least 10 other Southern states do the same thing, it will form a block of 127 electoral votes.

* * *

WHO WILL GET the states' rights nomination for president was a matter of conjecture. Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas and Gov. Wright of Mississippi were among those mentioned. Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia, who received 263 votes for president at Philadelphia, said he will not permit use of his name as the South's candidate at Birmingham.

The News

The conference in Municipal Auditorium tomorrow is a result of the South's Philadelphia fight against civil rights proposals incorporated in the Democratic Party's platform.

These include a fair employment practice act, anti-lynching, anti-segregation and anti-poll tax laws.

Mr. Dixon said the states' righters hope to muster enough electoral votes to throw the election into the House of Representatives. That happened once before, in the Hayes-Tilden campaign of 1876. Hayes was elected.

* * *

BIRMINGHAM radio stations will give on-the-spot coverage of the conference.

Tris Coffin, ABC commentator, is expected to arrive here today. He will be assisted by the WSGN staff in covering convention details.

Griffings Bancroft, CBS commentator, will have charge of CBS coverage through Station WAPI. U. S. Sen. John J. Sparkman, Huntsville, will discuss convention events over WAPI.

W. W. Chaplin, of NBC, will be in charge of a pre-convention program over WBRC at 9:45 a.m. tomorrow.

A 30-minute program over WAPI at 7:30 tonight will feature talks by Mr. Dixon and Gov. Wright of Mississippi.

There were different reactions over the state to developments at the Philadelphia convention.

Marion Rushton and Mrs. Lennard Thomas, both of Montgomery, said they would remain on the National Democratic Committee.

The Dothan Eagle declared editorially "We are fed up" and announced its intention of bolting the Democratic Party.

"Come hell or high water, we're supporting the Republicans," the paper said.

* * *

IN A ONE-SENTENCE editorial, C. M. Stanley, editor of The Alabama Journal at Montgomery, said:

"Many a Democrat is debating whether to jump from the frying pan into the fire." He did not specify what fire he was talking about.

Said The Tuscaloosa News:

"The coalition National Democratic Party shot itself and walked the plank in a double suicide that should mean the end of the national party as it has been constituted for the last 16 years."

THE WALKOUT of Alabama and Mississippi delegates at the Philadelphia convention was described as "mere window dressing" by Robert Travis, chairman of the Alabama Progressive Party.

Adoption of the civil rights plank which led to the walkout was intended, said Travis, "to give the Democratic Party a flase appearance of being a progressive party."

Travis predicted Henry Wallace will lead Truman in the November general election. Travis said he will lead an Alabama delegation of 26 white and Negro leaders to the New Party convention in Philadelphia next week.

Sparkman, Hill, Sparks, Claimed For Dixiecrats

The News
Birmingham, Ala.,

By The Associated Press

A States' Rights leader claimed today the support of Alabama Sens. Lister Hill and John J. Sparkman and Former Gov. Chauncey Sparks for the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

Horace C. Wilkinson, Birmingham attorney and one of the early organizers of the States' Rights movement, released copies of letters received from the three in which they said they would vote for the Democratic ticket in November.

Fri.

Wilkinson said that meant they would support Govs. Thurmond and Wright.

7-30-48

Alabama's Democratic elector nominees pledged themselves yesterday to cast the 11 electoral votes for the States' Rights slate.

Efforts have been made to place an additional slate of Democratic electors on the November ballot pledged for President Truman. Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael has held in an advisory opinion that this is not possible under Alabama law.

The attorney general said such a slate would have to be named at the time of the first Democratic primary held May 4.

State Sen. Joseph N. Langan, of Mobile, has called an Aug. 16 meeting at Montgomery in an effort to get a pro-Truman slate on the ballot.

WILKINSON, one of the 11 anti-Truman elector nominees, released a copy of a letter he received yesterday from Sen. Sparkman. This letter said in part:

Fri.

"With reference to the November election, you may recall in the first statewide radio broadcast that I made in my campaign in the Spring, I stated that when I qualified as a candidate I took an oath that I would support the nominees of the primary.

"You and the other 10 electors who were elected at that time were some of the nominees whom I swore to support. You may rest assured that I will abide by that oath. . .

"I have stated time after time, privately and in my campaign speeches that my vote would be under the rooster in November, and there it will be for all of the nominees on that ballot."

Wilkinson said he received telegrams prior to the May primary from Sen. Hill and Ex-Gov. Sparks. Hill and Sparks led the delegate race in the May primary on a platform opposing a walkout at the Democratic National Convention.

The telegram from Hill said:

"I am an Alabama Democrat and will always mark my cross under our rooster."

Sparks' telegram released by Wilkinson said:

"I have announced time and again my opposition to Truman and his civil rights and anyone who advocates them, but you know and I know I will not have an opportunity to vote for or against the nominee in November.

"Like all voters I am permitted to vote only for electors and will vote for Democratic electors including yourself, if nominated."

Laney Holds Fight by South on Rights Bill More Important Than Forming New Party

Times — New York, N.Y.

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ST. LOUIS, July 16—The immediate task facing the Southern states is to prevent Congress from passing civil rights legislation rather than the formation of a fourth political party, Gov. Ben T. Laney of Arkansas said here today.

A leader of the anti-Truman forces in the fight over the civil rights issue, Governor Laney said "the immediate danger is the possibility of the passage of this legislation."

"We must appeal to Congress, Democrats and Republicans alike, not to pass it," he added. "We think the imposition of this legislation means a new type of government for under no consideration could it be adopted and enforced without a change in interpretation of the Constitution and a complete abrogation of the states' rights principle."

Sat. 7-17-48

He came to St. Louis with his state's delegation en route home from the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia. Later, the Governor, Mrs. Laney and two of the delegates departed for Birmingham, Ala., and the states rights convention of Southern Democrats there tomorrow.

He appeared dejected in contrast to the happy mood he displayed a week ago when he paused here on the way to Philadelphia.

"The situation is a lot worse than I thought," he said. "When I sat in the convention and heard the states' rights plank voted down and booed and heard that extreme report adopted, then I found out how serious the situation is."

The South, he said, was "in a predicament between two men who are standing for something obnoxious to the South." The position of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican Presidential nominee, on the civil rights issue already is known, he pointed out, "so there is very little choice between the candidates on that question."

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—Alabama's 11 electoral votes were pledged Friday to the States' rights ticket of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi.

This action represented the first formal support of the presidential slate chosen by rebellious Southerners at the Birmingham States' Rights Conference in Birmingham July 17.

South Carolina Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, presidential candidate of Southern states rights Democrats, today carried the revolt a step further by resigning from the Democratic National Committee.

This development came as the standard bearer of rebellious Southern Democrats and his followers shaped plans for fund-raising and vote-getting drives throughout Dixie to accelerate their campaign against President Truman.

At Jackson, Miss., the Mississippi Democratic Executive Committee announced opponents of the states rights program would have a chance to speak when the state convention reconvenes there Aug. 3.

Meanwhile, hope was held out to Alabama Democrats who want to support the Truman-Barkley ticket may get a chance to vote for the president and his running mate, after all.

State Sen. Joe Langan, Mobile, who has called pro-Truman party members to a state convention to be held in Montgomery Aug. 16 to name a ticket of 11 presidential elector candidates, contended names of such candidates legally can be placed on the general election ballot. The Mobile lawmaker at first planned a write-in campaign for the electors to be named. But he argued that under Section 145, Title 17, Alabama Code, names of such electors could be certified to the secretary of state not less than 60 days before the Nov. 2 general election.

Birmingham Ala

LEADERS OF ANTI-TRUMAN states-righters insisted, however, that even if Langan were successful in this, which they doubt, the separate Truman-Barkley electors actually would have to go on the ballot as "independent" candidates. They pointed out that names of anti-Truman electors nominated May 4 will go on the ballot under the regular party emblem of the crowing rooster.

Gov. Thurmond announced he had mailed his resignation as Democratic national committeeman to Democratic National Chiarman J. Howard McGrath and William P. Baskin, chairman of the South Carolina State Democratic Executive Committee. That state's Democratic convention elected Thurmond to the national committee May 19 to take the place of Sen. Olin D. Johnston, who did not offer for re-election.

Both Thurmond and his vice presidential running mate, Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright, have announced their intention of "doing everything we can to assure the defeat" of President Truman, major aim of states' rights Democrats.

J. Knox Huff, chairman of the Mississippi Democratic Executive Committee, issued a formal call for reconvening of that state's convention Aug. 3. He repeated statements of Gov. Wright that the convention would give the Democratic organization a chance to approve or disapprove actions of delegates who withdrew from the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia.

Gov. Wright was quoted as saying that critics of the states' rights movement are "incorrect" in their charges that the campaign is supported by tidelands oil interests.

"Tidelands oil interests have not contributed one dime to our fight," Gov. Wright told reporters.

wed. 7-21-48

HOWEVER, THE MISSISSIPPI GOVERNOR was reported to have assured states' rights campaigners in Birmingham he could raise a minimum of $100,000 in his state to support the fight against Truman.

Wright told backers here he felt certain he could call on 100 men of his state for $1,000 each and get it.

Gov. Thurmond said at Columbia he would deliver speeches "in person and on the radio throughout many states" in a "vigorous" campaign to be made on the issue of states' rights. He said congratulatory messages had "poured in" since his and Wright's nomination at Birmingham, adding that "several hundred dollars" in contributions had been received.

The South Carolina executive said a campaign director would be named at once "because we are not going into this thing half-heartedly." It already had been revealed that a campaign finance director, probably a Texas banker, would be named soon.

The states' rights presidential standard bearer reemphasized that "We are not bolting the Democratic Party," but that "our efforts will be concentrated in the regular Democratic organizations" in each state.

"Those who believe in the principles of state sovereignty will be the real Democratic Party when this fight is finished," Thurmond declared.

wed. 7-21-48

"WHEN NOVEMBER HAS COME AND GONE the leaders of the present so-called National Democratic Party will be split 48 ways. They will be discredited and totally ineffective as a national party, but the South and all those who're going with her will be as solid as a rock."

Thurmond repeated that "our fight is not a sectional one" and "not based on racial hate or racial prejudice."

"There are millions outside the South who know the truth of our statement that constitutional government is being en-

Thurmond Praised For His Stand

The Record

John T. Graves

"In Dixie land, I'll take my stand...."

Editor Ralph McGill makes an unequivocal (for once) charge in The Atlanta Constitution that the band played "Dixie" at the Birmingham meeting. This is serious. Elsewhere it is charged that Confederate flags were waved, that a picture of Robert E. Lee was displayed, that there was emotion and, yes, that oratory was attempted. The FBI should look into this—not to discover who done it but what the crime and, if crime there was, to take action not only against this but against all political meetings in a time of events that try men's souls, quicken their pulses, warm their tongues, recall their history and dear loves.

Columbia S.C.

There was exaggeration at the Birmingham meeting, yes, and there is worse exaggeration in the hostile remarks against the meeting. The pity is that more of these should come from some of our own Southerners than from outsiders. With all its sins, the net result of a meeting that offers so sane and gallant a gentleman as Strom Thurmond for the consideration of Southern Democrats cannot be despised. Governor Thurmond has proved his Americanism in war and in peace. His enlightened stand for states' duties as well as states' rights identifies him with the only liberalism that can get anywhere in the South, not with Bilbo-ism and bigotry.

In course of the wide travel that has made him so free of our Southern provincialisms, Editor McGill must have heard the Iranians speak well of Iran. He may even have heard Californians praise California, and Brooklyn people confess to a love of the Dodgers. If he has it in his cosmopolitan heart to tolerate such localisms, why cannot he forgive his homeland, too, for occasional pride and song and self-defense?

There was exaggeration at the Birmingham meeting. There was sure to be. There is misunderstanding, too, I think, on the part of some who took part. No new party was formed or intended. The idea is an organization to withhold votes from one or both major parties when the South's vital position is menaced, to play one party against the other for fair treatment of the Southern minority position.

Editor McGill points out what Dorothy Thompson had already pointed out, that the Democratic Party nationally has become now the party of the big city, labor and leftist elements. Ralph's reaction to that seems to be that, since we have big cities in the South, and leftists, and industrial labor, we should string along. But it isn't as simple as that, even if our industrial cities were, or wanted to be, carbon copies of Pittsburgh, or patterns of Patterson, N. J. When you talk of a political party of the long future you have to consider the people who will be most numerous and dominant in the long future. They will not be industrial labor people or farm people, either. Because of machinery, proportionately fewer and fewer of these will be needed to produce the nation's goods and food. More and more of us are going to be engaged in the arts, professions, crafts and services, including that great service which dominates Atlanta—salesmanship.

Pearls Before Swine

News

To the Editor of The News:

With considerable interest I read in your newspaper the letters of Horace Wilkinson, defending the position of those who walked out of the Democratic National Convention. He posed several pertinent questions which I have yet to see satisfactorily answered.

A careful reading of Mr. Wilkinson's letters would have made unnecessary the counter questions which appeared in subsequent editions of your paper. Birmingham

It seems to me the plaintive wailers who accuse the bolters of being "cry babies" and "poor losers" are themselves the poor losers, as those gentlemen who departed from the convention were instructed to do so by the voters of Alabama. wed. 7-28-48

True Significance Of Dixie Revolt

Advertiser

The Arkansas Gazette

HOWEVER great or small its direct effect upon this year's presidential election may be, the Dixiecrat movement has a marked long-range significance for the South. Although complicated by considerations of race, or civil rights as the polite phrase goes, it still is the product of deep-rooted political differences among the Southern people, differences that may in time finally pull down the one-party structure.

Many factors went into building the South's concept of blind and uncritical loyalty to the Democratic Party, but the peculiar racial problems of the region account for its long survival. The one-party system provided a certain means of disfranchising the Negro and for many years the federal courts upheld it.

That day, however, is clearly done. Recent United States Supreme Court decisions have defined the party primary as an integral part of the general election and therefore subject to the suffrage provisions of the constitution. The old concept of white supremacy as a legal entity, as even the Dixiecrats have had to concede, is dead, presumably forever.

Moreover, at Philadelphia the Democratic Party adopted platform planks concerning racial minorities that differ in no important respect from those of the Republican Party, the traditional champion of Negro rights.

This means that the most compelling practical reason for maintaining the one-party system has in fact vanished, and, as the Dixiecrats have so clearly demonstrated, other issues may now come into full play in determining Southern political attitudes. The spectacle of a whole region in complete agreement on the basic economic, social and political policies of a single party—particularly one that has virtually been transformed in recent years—is patently absurd. The South has always embodied a wide range of political viewpoint, from radical to reactionary, but under its peculiar party system has never had an opportunity to express it.

AS THE old shibboleth of unquestioning party loyalty fades, as it certainly must in the coming years, Southern voters will have for the first time a free choice of national candidates representing varying and often conflicting viewpoints. Some Southerners will exercise that choice this year, and the more optimistic Republican prognosticators are predicting a GOP victory in at least four states on the basis of a protest vote against Mr. Truman. There are also signs that the Republican national organization, for the first time, is paying serious attention to the possibility of making and consolidating permanent gains in the region. This is not a flash-in-the-pan emotional reaction, such as that which sent some Southern states into the Republican column after a supercharged campaign built around Al Smith's Catholicism and espousal of repeal. There are all the elements of a grass-roots movement in this, the permanent breaking away of conservative voters who no longer find their position as Democrats tenable. [illegible]

This will not be a sudden process, certainly. With the added confusion of the Dixiecrat campaign no more than one or two traditionally Democratic states are likely to break out of the one-party bag in November. But it is the beginning of a massive political realignment in the South, one that in time will change the shape of the region's political structure, and change it for the better.

PAGING SENATOR CLAGHORN!

The C I O News

We're tellin' you, suh, that those Dixiecrats are plumb set on preservin' those good old Southern traditions.

Durned if they're goin' to have H. Truman and his bureaucratic notions about civil rights clutterin' up their lives.

No, siree! Washington, D. C.

Why, dad gum it, they'd bust up the whole dad blame Democratic Party before they'd succumb to Federal interference that might imperil their blessed states' rights. Mon.

That having been said, they held a convention of their own down in Birmingham and selected Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi as their presidential and vice presidential candidates. 7-26-48

And thus the "fourth" party was born.

Some clever writers who know nothing about the South or its problems hailed the fiasco as "a rebirth of the Confederacy."

The Birmingham meeting was spoken of as a gathering of the polltaxers, the "white supremacy boys" and the Ku Kluxers.

At least one paper gave considerable attention to the fact that hate-mongering Gerald L. K. Smith attended the convention.

These things would indicate the South as a whole has done a lot of back-sliding, but such is not the case.

THERE IS MORE THAN YOU SEE

It would be a bad mistake to confuse the real trend of events in the South with the political shell game which the Dixiecrats are trying to palm off on the public as an honest battle against Federal domination of the states.

Northern and Eastern controlled corporations, whose officers are Republicans, are in this thing up to their necks—and make no mistake about it.

So are union-fighting Southern mill owners.

These groups know that adoption of a real civil rights program would encourage the growth of unionism below the Mason-Dixon Line.

And this would result in the political death of many of the lackeys who do the corporations' bidding in the legislative halls.

Actually, the future political control of the South may be at stake.

Those in power view with alarm the campaigns which have doubled the CIO membership in the region in two years and added quite a few members to the AFL rolls.

They are frightened by the growing liberal groups which are fighting the "old Southern traditions" which have kept the region from advancing economically and in the field of education.

They are worried by the growing rebellion against "outside" corporate control of the South.

DON'T FORGET HUMAN RIGHTS

We can understand and appreciate the feeling of those who are fearful that there's a trend toward creation of a powerful "super" government in Washington which will dominate and eventually control the lives of this nation's people.

Consequently we don't want to see states' rights eliminated.

But we're completely fed up with the false cries of those who shout "preservation of states' rights" every time there is a move afoot to give real meaning to the human rights supposedly guaranteed by the Constitution.

We can't go along with the Dixiecrats or any other group which seeks to use "states' rights" to perpetuate crooked, boss-ridden political machines.

And, suh, we're downright opposed to those "states righters" who fight to subjugate human rights to property rights.

Keep Fighting

Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.
Sun. 7-25-48

Editor Constitution:—After reading Ralph McGill's editorial in Sunday's paper on, "What Can the South Do," it brought back to my mind a report card I once received in the third grade, which had large letters written across it that said, "Gives up too easy in effort." That is what I thing Ralph has been doing in recent months. His attitude on the civil rights question is, "If you cannot lick them, join them." I said at that time and I still mean it, as long as I lived that I would never receive a report card in school or out that said, "Gives up too easily," and I am saying now I shall never give up fighting this unconstitutional so-called civil rights program as long as I live on this earth. I sincerely believe that we of the South are going to win this battle, even if it means another Civil War, though I fervidly hope the situation will never become that drastic. 7-25-48

The time has come when a prejudiced U. S. Supreme Court is handing down decisions contrary to the basic principles on which the country was founded. A recent decision handed down by the high court, taking all forms of religion out of school, is going to be ignored by the South, and the teachers of America will still recite the Lord's Prayer to my child and yours. Atlanta Ga. 7-25-48

You say to me, in effect, that we have to give in to most of their principles in order to give our Senators and Congressmen more prestige in Congress. I say no! Let the politicians join the people. The civil rights program is so interwoven with roots of foreign ideologies that it ceases to be a mere political issue. Sun

Unique Politics

News

To the Editor of The News:

Birmingham occupies a unique position in the present political upheaval. Events that have occurred during the past years and especially during the last six months give to Birmingham this special quality of uniqueness. First, this city gave to the U. S. Supreme Court an ex-Klansman who in later years turned out to be probably the most liberal member of that great tribunal. Birmingham

A few months ago the City Commission refused to allow the Freedom Train. The City Commission evidently did not want U. S. Marines disseminating such "foreign information" as was to be found in the Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence.

Next we have a member of the United States Senate locked up for trying to enter the "wrong door" to address a group of American citizens. 7-28-48

A month or two later we have the famous ride of the white-sheeted-noble-100 right through a Girl Scout camp. Ala.

Then, came the Dixiecrat convention, during which Horace Wilkinson told the convention and radio audience about the Negro from Mississippi who visited President Truman at the White House and was treated so civilly. Then Gov. Thurmond told Gerald L. K. Smith that the race issue is not one of our grievances. A few days later former Gov. Sparks told the press, "Let me think things out and see what's the best for the South." The next day a four-line news item stated that a well-known Dixiecrat was threatening to start a Dixiecrat magazine and tell everything. But the well-known Dixiecrat would not allow his name to be used. Birmingham, Ala.

Why should that sort of convention have been held in Birmingham? Why not one of the old historic cities like Vicksburg or Jackson, Miss., Mobile or Montgomery, Ala.? The answer seems to be that about 30 per cent of the voters in Birmingham are Republican and every four years they look for an excuse to vote Republican and also to sweep along as many innocent Democrats as possible.

But why play Dixie so much? Makes me want to go out and look up towards Red Mountain to see if Vulcan is holding up the same hand today that he was holding up yesterday.

One Life To Give

7-28-48

To the Editor of The News:

In a recent letter to the Voice of the People a certain fellow-citizen, one Bob Andress, is yearning to give his life for the Old South. "I would like to change two words," he says, refering to the well-known remarks of a patriot who wished he "had two lives to give his country." Mr. Andress wishes to replace "my country" with "the South."

He further states that when the great showdown comes (the third Battle of Bull Run, I presume) there will be as many true Southerners fighting without the hood as with the hood, KKK cap and gown, no doubt. It was not made clear to this reader just what set of bellicose paraphernalia Mr. Andress would appear in when the Rebel ranks close in this coming blood-letting.

Being a true, 101 per cent son of the Old South who bows to the earth thrice daily, facing Montgomery (the Cradle) or Richmond, depending upon the wind velocity, humidity etc., I wish to offer some little assistance.

I have in my possession a Confederate muzzle-loading musket that was snatched from a falling soldier at Kennesaw Mountain, a cat-o'-nine-tails whip used to thrash sassy colored folks and carpetbaggers during Reconstruction and finally an embroidered pillowcase autographed by no less person than Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest himself. All of these are Mr. Andress' for the asking, if they will help him in his fight to preserve our Southern traditions, whatever they are. . . . Oh yes, $7,000 in Confederate notes will be found sewed in the autographed pillowcase.

If Mr. Andress is interested further in this offer he may contact me by tapping three times with a fiery cross on the Confederate monument on the Lee (Robert E.) County Courthouse grounds and whispering, "Beauregard sent me."

Just Like Silver Fox Furs

Atlanta, Ga.

Fri. 7-30-48

I see where one of those persons whose typewriter is a sort of streetwalking trademark even as the silver fox furs were a trademark for the young ladies along London's Bond Street, is currently soliciting (for pay, one may be sure) for the Klaghorns and the Dixiecrats and saying that the time has come when we must think ~~Southern,~~ act Southern and be Southern, and wear provincialism as the proudest mark of our mind and our actions.

Well, I don't know. I figure I am as Southern as cornbread, having lived, worked, studied and thought nowhere else. My immediate Confederate ancestors, and my Welsh ancestry, which cause me to weep over sad pictures, books and lost causes, are so much a part of me that when I sat down to write the story of the Southern demonstration at the Philadelphia Convention I was so emotionally upset I had trouble writing it fast enough. But that is a part of me, and it is not for sale, and I do not use it for streetwalking solicitation in my trade. It belongs to me and I honor it as mine. I do not offer it shamelessly in the market place.

Southern In fact, I honor it so much that I can't betray it. So I try to think first of all as an American, because the South is a part of America and is going to continue to be a part of America and must fit into the future of America.

Therefore, while I certainly would not have the South stultify itself by not fighting politically against the Harry S. Truman position, even to withholding the electoral votes, I still insist the South must present a Truman slate of electors as well, so that the people may choose. We cannot follow the Dixiecrats who want to prevent the people from having a choice, and we cannot think exclusively Southern, or act exclusively Southern, or we will grievously betray the South and its best interests.

Constitution

Americans But let all of us think as Americans and plan for the future of the South as a part of America. Provincialism has some admirable qualities, especially in cooking or architecture, but it is a frail reed for action or achievement. A provincial approach will be as fatal to the South and its future as was the provincialism of the pre-1860 era, when we fiercely clung to our ways and refused to develop manufacturing to go along with our raw materials.

Atlanta Ga.

We are an agrarian region. We have made great progress in getting industry. But let us face the facts that the rest of the nation has made great progress also and that our percentage of the nation's industrially employed is about what it was in 1938. We are in a position to make great progress in the future. The eyes of the industrial peoples are turned toward us. The atomic bomb is going to scare industry down our way—as note a large airplane plant which began to move from Connecticut to Texas last May and which has about concluded one of the unique industrial movements in our time.

Wed. 7-30-48

Mentality The Dixiecrat type of mind, and the Dixiecrat type of politics, as opposed to the politics of Sen. Connally, of Texas, and Sen. Russell, of Georgia, will set the South back 30 years or more.

The provincial, antebellum mind may think that in creating such an atmosphere they are being loyal to the South. I say they are not.

Look Let us look again at our region, which has suffered so much from leadership and decisions of the past which sought to take us out of America and to keep us out and which appears now to say we should isolate the South politically.

There are labor shortages in Southern farm regions, but as machinery increases they are already largely seasonal shortages.

Go ask the farm machinery dealers about unfilled orders for tractors, hay balers, combines, peanut combines, pea shellers and so on.

Figure out what that will mean to the future population of the South, white and colored. The farms will no longer need them. Migration will not remove the pressure on our cities and our economy.

Ask Then ask yourself if those who are trying to make us take the Confederate Flag, with all its glory and honor, and warp our minds and our politics and our political planning in those glorious folds, are being honest with the South and loyal to it.

Harry S. Truman likely will be defeated in November. If so, the plan to withhold electoral votes will be empty and meaningless. If he is elected he will last four years.

But the issues that motivate him and which motivated the big city machines are in our cities, too. And they will be issues long after 1948 is gone and Harry Truman is but a name in the World Almanac's list of Presidents and a page or so in the history books.

We are up against great social, political and, even more important, we are up against great economic changes. And not just up against Truman and the "machines," as so many seem to think. They will profoundly affect the South and its future, plus the well-being of every person in it. There need not be any social mingling of the races, or any talk of mongrelization. But the Negro—those who stay, and the South must hope that many stay to be a part of the future—must be able to work at skilled jobs and receive equal, if separate, facilities from his government.

The Best This will require the best in us. It cannot be solved in an atmosphere of violence or clamor. States' rights, and their future, will depend upon public opinion. We have already seen how our loudest Klaghorns have prejudiced our case and hurt us at the convention—making it impossible for the Northern friends of States' rights to join with Georgia and others who sought them orderly and with dignity.

Therefore, we must despise those who prostitute the Confederate Flag and the song "Dixie" to their own uses. The Confederate soldier left us an example of courage and honor. We can use them both in our new fight. We must think American, because we are Americans, and we must plan for America and make ourselves powerfully felt in American life and politics. It is no time for provincialism in mind or action.

Uproarious Conference Maps States'-Righters Plan to Beat Truman In Electoral College

The Courier-Journal

Sun. 7-18-48

By TARLETON COLLIER.
Staff Correspondent, The Courier-Journal.

Birmingham, July 17.—After a long emotional orgy, the States'-rights rebels of the Democratic Party unfolded their plan of vengeance for Philadelphia and civil rights.

Their conference here late today picked J. Strom Thurmond, Governor of South Carolina, to be supported for President in the Electoral College. Fielding Wright, Governor of Mississippi, is their vice-presidential candidate.

Avoid Any New Labels.

They carefully avoided the name and organization of a new party. They laid down, through resolutions uproariously adopted, the theory that the national party is a federation of state parties. Thus by extension to politics of their doctrine of States' rights, they insisted that they may give their electoral votes, state by state, to the candidates of their choice and still remain regular Democrats; indeed, the keepers of the only ture faith.

Text of the conference's "Declaration of Principles" and other stories concerning the rebel movement are on Page 6.

While proposing that all States "take steps to have the electoral votes of their respective states" cast for Thurmond and Wright, the States-righters made it plain that they had no hope for support in this venture outside the South. But this, in their repeated explanations, would be enough to recapture the Democratic Party for the South.

"We could take the Southern states," said Frank Dixon' former Governor of Alabama, the meeting's keynoter. "And Truman would lose the Northern states. Then who would be the Democratic Party?"

Keeps Hall In An Uproar.

The selection of the two Governors as the figures in the strategy brought a roaring climax to a day of exhausting frenzies, of parades touched off swiftly by the impassioned periods of the speakers. Thurmond, in his speech of acceptance, kept the crowded hall in a constant uproar, a condition bordering on hysteria, as he described the civil-rights legislation and challenged the Government to break down segregation in the South.

"There are not enough laws in the nation," he cried, "and enough laws cannot be put on the books, to change our way of life that means separation of the races. There are not enough troops in the nation to admit the Negro into our schools, our homes, our theaters, our swimming pools. We have just begun to fight."

Groundwork Laid Carefully.

Louisville Ky.

Thurmond taunted those wha had said that the Southerners, when they walked out at Philadelphia, didn't know where they were going.

"They forgot the Constitution," he said. "The Constitution gave us a place to go, and that place is the Electoral College."

The groundwork for this plan of action had been laid carefully in another resolution, which said: "We rededicate ourselves to the principles and traditions of the Democratic Party, and repudiate the blasphemy of those who would charge us from bolting."

Another resolution, expressing the vengeful spirit of the men who had been beaten in the national convention, called for a slate of electors opposed to Truman and Barkley in Missouri and Kentucky.

To Meet Again In October.

A statement of principles of the conference was adopted. It was the identical statement approved at the Jackson, Miss., conference in May, denouncing as threats to our form of government the proposal of federal control of tidelands oil, the Supreme Court's decision on restrictive real-estate covenants, and the right of Negroes to enter Southern colleges.

Finally, the conference voted to hold another meeting in Birmingham October 1, to follow the course of the appeal for electoral votes for its candidates.

NOW IS THE HOUR

EDITOR, The Advertiser: Former Gov. Frank Dixon stated many facts about these Civil Rights laws with which we should all become familiar. He explained how employers could be jailed for not hiring employes of their own choosing; how a provision of the anti-lynch law provides for a person to be taken away from his loyal community and tried in another place by a Federal judge without a trial by 12 local citizens; and how other individual rights could be taken away under threat of jail sentence.

Reflect for one moment. Do these laws have a foreign color? Are these laws in line with our heritage of free thought and action? Furthermore, Mr. Truman said he would ask for a special F. B. I. force to be set up under the Treasury Department to enforce his civil rights law. Had not we better think more deeply on the subject? Are these measures the cure for our defects in democracy? In this confusion haven't most of us overlooked the fundamental concepts of American life?

I say the Philadelphia delegates would have never put these evil rights into their platform if for one moment they thought these centralized powers would be used against them. No prognosticator or clairvoyant can tell when or where the powers will be used once they become legal tools of the government.

In each case where people lost their freedom they did not realize the full effects of centralization until too late. Look what it did for Europe—what more lesson do we need? Actually our country fought World War II over this very same principle. Yes, the underlying principle that Southerners term "State's Rights," or in essence, local self-government without federal control—we just didn't call it that. Current national politics will cause the South to be the first to feel the yoke of centralized government, but the North and West will have to take their turn along with us; they just do not realize it as yet.

Tue. 7-27-48

The basic cause of the split was the principle of local self government which lies far deeper and more serious than the incidental race question. With more political seasons ahead, the passage of the present evil rights program will not end the controversy; where will it stop? Had Mr. Humphrey understood the term "State's Rights," he never would have made the misstatement of "step out of the shadow of State's Rights into the sunshine of Human Rights." They are one and the same. The freedom of the individual in his local government is the very basic principle of human rights. Without this freedom there can be no true humanitarianism.

Aside from the basic principle involved, we Southerners received a shocking insult. Our so-called friends and potential allies at the Philadelphia Convention showed that they knew little of our problems and cared even less. When again will Southern delegates command respect if we stand for such treatment?

Today the South is in a sad political situation and most of us do not know what steps to take. We must admire the courage of the leaders who met in Birmingham, whether they are right or wrong. Certainly the answer to the South's problem is not to be a mute whipping post for Truman and McGrath. It is time for all serious thinking Southerners, whether conservative or liberal, to unite in a concerted effort to stand up for the principle of local self-government. It is folly to believe that we cannot have a liberal Southern movement and at the same time have local determination of our own affairs.

The Birmingham Conference according to all of the leaders is a movement within the Democratic Party. I have heard the cry, "Let us fight within the party." Certainly now the challenge has been flung in our face. The fight is here—now where are our fighters?

When reading your article, "The Road to Nowhere," I would have been misled about the Birmingham Conference had I not heard it. In spite of the fact that the conference was quickly gotten together, its conduct and statesmanship were much superior to the Philadelphia Convention. Before the conference it was "Go Fishing" or Dewey. Now at least we have another course. All of our leaders, conservative and liberal, should get together at the next Birmingham meeting and then we can direct a movement in the right direction, whichever way that is. If our leaders continue to do nothing and just say "What can we do?" and our papers bring condemnation upon men because they have the courage to act, our Southern states will continue to receive contempt and disgust from both major parties. Can you imagine either major party slapping the section of New England like they did the South?

Montgomery Ala

The Southern white man is the truest friend that the Negro has. Each year through our state legislature we give millions to educate the Negro and help him in a constructive way. I do not mean to imply that the Negro does not contribute to his own advancement. Our government spends billions abroad to help foreigners; why not spend millions in the South to help the Negro?

Tue. 7-27-48

It would be interesting to watch the reaction of Northern politicians if a large appropriation measure to be spent in the South would be introduced to start a real constructive program for him, one to improve his schools, hospitals and homes. This would benefit him far more than an empty, pyrotic victory from a civil rights law, a law that may some day be used against him.

The masses of politicians were not at the Birmingham Conference, but the people were there. Unless we have a definite constructive program to offer, we should not madly rush into destroy the step taken at Birmingham. The present evil rights program will not alone ruin America, but it is the beginning of a truly dangerous trend. The conference cannot lead us on a more dangerous road than the one embarked on in Philadelphia.

No, it is the "do nothing" people who are on the "Road to Nowhere," not the people at the Birmingham conference. They are on the "Road to Somewhere," at least to the respect of the people of our country.

I cannot and I shall not support Harry S. (Small) Truman and his evil rights program.

REPUBLICRATS

Editor, The Advertiser:

My neighbor, C. H. Billingsley, down at Tallassee is very much perturbed about the effects of the meeting of the Dixiecrats in Birmingham.

Advertiser

He writes, "I hope some plan can be worked out whereby we may have electors to vote for, who will cast Alabama's vote for the Democratic nominees." That was exactly what that meeting was for and Gov. Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Wright of Mississippi, were endorsed as nominees of the real Democratic Party.

Mr. Truman and his supporters are not Democrats. Would you say a man was a member of your church who did not accept and live up to its doctrines of your denomination. You absolutely would not.

Mr. Truman and his party are Republicrats, a political hybrid, or cross breed of the Republican Party and the Democratic in which the Republican characteristics predominate.

Montgomery Ala

I do not feel, and I can not understand why any one else could, that I am bolting when I refuse to support Truman and his party; in fact, they are the ones who are betraying the party.

~~Wed~~ Tue

The important question Mr. Billingsley, is not one of party fealty, but states rights, the foundation of the Democratic Party is in jeopardy.

You can readily see the trend of Truman's leadership. This is but the opening wedge. If it works, a "glut" will follow. If the national government continues to abridge or otherwise abrogate or deprive the states of their rights then Alabama or any other state could not govern itself without permission from Washington.

I never did nor will I ever blindly follow a leader whom I do not trust, party fealty or what not. If I feel that he is off the trail, and I am convinced Mr. Truman is, I'd desert him quickly. You no doubt have heard what the Good Book says about the blind that lead the blind.

You have heard it said, "If you bolt the party you'll be kicked out." That would just accelerate the speed by which I'd get out of a party that didn't live up to the principles upon which it stands.

Unfortunately so many voters know so little about the history of their country. They have only a superficial knowledge of the establishment of our form of government. I daresay if you should ask them why they are Democrats they could give no other reason than that grandpa was and dad was and therefore I am. To many it is a mere family tradition.

The News

To the Editor of The News:

Apparently the most sensible thing accomplished by the disgruntled politicians and would-be political dictators at the "rump" convention held in Birmingham was to fail to include a platform. Evidently they were aware that platforms are mere steps for reaching the threshold of public office and thereafter are of no further use.

Birmingham Ala.

The race issue seemed to be the featured football with states' rights as it side kick with reactionaries carrying the ball. As one contemplates the minds of those who occupied the "smoke filled rooms" at the Tutwiler while drawing up the resolutions a vivid picture of the progressive, liberal, democratic program of 1946 flashes into view and along with it a vision of those picturesque gentlemen who so vigilantly opposed and defeated it in the 1947 sessions of the Alabama Legislature. All this affords ample and just reason for questioning the sincerity of the "Rump Democrats," or Alabama bolters.

Tues. 7-27-48

One cannot reasonably conceive of the race issue as such a phenomenal monster standing in the path of states' rights when totalitarian, undemocratic, unscriptural and unjust inhibitions such as the poll tax and Boswell amendments stand guard over states' rights here in Alabama along with their first cousin, the Ku-Klux Klan. To back it up functioning effectively and in violation is the true spirit of the federal constitution. Majority rule so far as states' rights and majority mandates are concerned no longer function in the state of Alabama.

Tues. 7-27-48

Wouldn't it be more democratic, more humane, more in line with segregation policies and human rights established by the Creator and incorporated in the bill of rights to abolish the poll tax restriction on voting and abolish the Boswell amendment to the Alabama Constitution and substitute therefor an amendment providing that only members of the Caucasian race may hold public office in Alabama?

The News

Adoption of these measures would not change our policy of white supremacy. Adoption of these measures would only make it more difficult to control with dirty money the gullible vote of a low class white population who will sell a vote for a drink of liquor and the promise of a job. Adoption of measures of the kind would enfranchise those held in mind by the farmers of the federal constitution and at the same time guarantee white supremacy in Alabama. The only thing it does not guarantee is the election to public office of such reactionary and undemocratic greed and graft lovers and despoilers of human liberties here in Alabama as could be named by the dozens.

Representation From All States In Dixie Expected To Attend Conference

MANY PROBLEMS ARISE

Question of Nominal Leadership Posed For Leaders of States' Rights Group

McComb, Miss.

Philadelphia, July 15 — Governor Fielding Wright and the States' Rights Dixiecrats from Mississippi rolled out of Philadelphia tonight, headed for Birmingham and a special southern convention Saturday. Fri.

They were accompanied by a large number of Alabama, Louisiana and Florida delegates, a smaller number of Arkansas and South Carolinians, a very few Georgians, Texans, Tenneseeans and no North Carolinians or Virginians. 7-16-48

It appeared likely, however, that scattered representation from all the southern states would be on hand Saturday to observe, confer and consider the action of the Dixiecratic group.

The question of nominal leadership of the group was in doubt as they left Philadelphia. There is a growing feeling among many concerned that Governor Wright should be the presidential nominee chosen by the Birmingham convention. He is not seeking this honor.

Laney Better Regarded

Governor Laney of Arkansas, who backed out at the last minute at being the nominee before the national convention here, was restored somewhat to the good graces of the southerners today, many of whom were bitterly disappointed at his last-minute decision Wednesday night. Fri.

The stage had been all set for Senator John McClelland of Arkansas to nominate Mr. Laney. Governor Wright, Jim Hill of Texas and Charles Sheppard of Florida were to second his nomination. 7-16-48

Then the southern walkout was to come after Truman's nomination jus tbefore the night session began that he could not run after the adoption of the harsh civil rights platform plank, and so the Mississippi delegation and a majority of the Alabama group walked out on the convention before the nominations began.

Enterprise Journal McComb, Miss.

Russell Won't Attend

Just afterward, Senator Russell of Georgia was put in as an anti-Truman candidate and polled 263 votes from the southern states. Senator Russell said today, however, that under no circumstances would he participate in the Birmingham convention or permit his name to be used to oppose the regular nominees of the convention. This attitude rules a great many members of congress, and the Dixiecratic program is facing the opposition of many southern senators and representatives who are strong states' righters but believe the South must not bolt the party in the electoral college, as the Dixiecrats plan now to do. 7-16-48

Thurmond to Accept at Big Texas Rally; Place To Be Sought on All Ballots

New York, N.Y.

Special to the Herald Tribune

ATLANTA, July 24.—States rights Democrats decided in closed session here today to wage their fight against President Truman's civil rights program througout the entire United States.

Virtually becoming a new national party, the group announced that Governor J. Srom Thurmond of South Carolina and Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi would be notified of their nomination for President and Vice-Persident at a mammoth rally Aug. 11 in Houston, Tex.

The dissenting Southern Democrats, who assembled from seven states, voted to enter the names of Governors Thurmond and Wright as candidates in all forty-eight states. Plans will be worked out later, they said, for getting the names on the ballots—the procedures being different in the various states. Sun. 7-25-48

Governor Thurmond, meeting reporters after the four-and-one-half-hour session of the organization's steering committee, said he was running for President "with the expectation of winning." He predicted he would carry most, if not all, of the Southern states.

The States' Right Democrats, who officially adopted that name todaly, expect to concentrate their opening guns on Texas' twenty-six electroal votes.

According to Judge Merritt Gibson, of Longview, Tex., who attended today's meeting, the Texas States' Rights organization first will seek to obtain a referendum Aug. 14 to permit the people to decide whether States' Rights candidates' names will go on the ballat for the Aug. 28 primary. If that fails, he said, the group will seek to persuade the state Democratic convention at a meeting Sept. 14 to declare Governors Thurmond and Wright the state party's nominees. New York, N.Y.

Although the steering committee meeting was held in Atlanta, no Georgia delegate was present. Attending were thirty representatives, from Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Florida, Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana.

The states' Righters were greeted by an editorial this morning in "The Atlanta Constitution" which urged them to drop their organized fight and "return to the party and assist it in a united effort to present the most effective protest which may now be made."

"That protest," the paper said, "should be made within the party by each state offering a slate of independent Democratic electors, along wit hthe Truman slate, so that the people may choose."

Governor Thurmond said that a campaign committee would be named soon and that permanent campaign headquarters would be established, mostly likely in the South. Jackson, Miss., was a site suggested by conference delegates.

Governor Thurmond said he would continue to do his work as Governor of South Carolina while running for President.

"I imagine," he said, "that I can do it as well as Governor Dewey and Governor Warren."

He said pledges of support had come from all over the country. The South Carolina Governor said that, contrary to rumor, he knew of no financial support by oil interests. However, he added, he would welcome campaign contributions from oil interests or any one else.

Although his campaign is based primarily on states' rights, he said, he nevertheless would comment later on other national and international questions.

Name Presidential Candidates On 'Anti Civil Rights Plank

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Four days after the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia had renominated President Truman for the presidency with the party's forthright approval of his civil rights program, angered and rebellious southern Democrats meeting in Birmingham's city auditorium named two governors to head a campaign to defeat Mr. Truman in the Solid South in November.

THE BIRMINGHAM "REVOLT"

The Times

New York, N.Y.

An uninformed stranger in Birmingham, Ala., on Saturday might have thought that the War between the States was about to be resumed. Fortunately, it was not. The rebel yells, the waving of Confederate battle flags and the parading of a portrait of a nationally respected soldier named Robert E. Lee did not imply secession—not even the secession of the Solid South from the Democratic party. This was a mass meeting, not a convention. Its candidates can presumably count on the twenty electoral votes of Alabama and Mississippi, but whether they will get more than this will not surely be known until the new party, if it is a party, assembles again on Oct. 1. Whoever ran this gathering showed political astuteness in naming to head the ticket Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who opposes Federal intervention against lynching and against the poll tax but has fought for state action to suppress the one and put an end to the other.

Mon. 7-19-48

No such good sense was shown in the "states' rights platform" which this assemblage of self-appointed delegates and casual spectators adopted by acclamation. There is nothing in the Democratic platform which calls for "equal access to all places of public accommodation for persons of all races, colors, creeds and national origin." The words of this plank in the Birmingham program were actually borrowed from the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, which advocated that such guarantees be enacted "by the states." The Democratic platform merely asked Federal action to guarantee political equality, equality of opportunity for employment, security of person and "equal treatment in the service and defense of our nation." The Birmingham conference was shooting at something that wasn't there. Mon.

Something, of course, was and is at issue. In 1940 only 14.7 per cent of the potential voters of Mississippi actually voted. Some Southern politicians would like to continue the sort of government under which not only the Negro citizen but most white citizens either cannot or do not vote. There are liberal Southerners who do not believe the lot of the Negro—or of the disfranchised white man—can be improved by Federal action; and most of these liberals have been trying to improve conditions in their own communities. 7-19-48

But at present one would not say that this "revolt" has much political or moral logic in it. It might help to elect Mr. Dewey, who on his record and under the Republican platform is just as strongly committed as Mr. Truman to a civil rights program. And it might peter out, as did a similar "revolt" four years ago. The Birmingham demonstration is certainly not conclusive. 7-19-48

WASHINGTON—(NNPA) — Defeated in their efforts to get congressional approval of a plan to set up segregated regional schools, Southern Senators plan to make another stand to maintain racial segregation and discrimination.

The next fight will be over the issue of abolition of these twin evils in the armed services.

Defeated in the Senate Armed Services Committee, Senators Richard B. Russell of Georgia, and Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina, both Democrats, have offered an amendment to the selective service and training bill, designed to prevent President Truman, as Commander-in-Chief of the armed services from ordering the abolition of segregation. 5-22-48

Southern Leaders Hope To Use Regular Party Machinery Next Fall

By LEROY SIMMS

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.— (AP) — Rebellious Dixie Democrats hope to use regular party machinery to defeat Mr. Truman in the Solid South in November because of his stand on racial issues.

That was the method used in Alabama and Mississippi which turned their backs on the president before his nomination in the national party convention in Philadelphia.

The two Southerners nominated —Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, for president, and Mississippi Gov. Fielding Wright, for vice-president—made no concrete promises of any direct campaigning.

Their acceptance speeches yesterday did not hint at campaign strategy.

In many Southern states electors are named at state conventions. Backers of the Thurmond-Wright ticket say they will make determined bids in these states for the regular party electors.

Greatest Cheers

Whatever startegy is used, Southern nominees will run on a platform which specifically opposes a civil rights program. Speeches attacking anti-segregation proposals drew the greatest cheers at the meeting.

Former Gov. Frank M. Dixon, of Alabama, devoted major attention to the segregation issue in his keynote address. Nearly every other speaker of the day brought the overflow crowd to its feet yelling and waving flags, with attacks on segregation proposals.

One member of the States' Rights command, who would not permit use of his name, said the Thurmond-Wright ticket would have the backing of Democratic electors in Alabama, Mississippi, Florida, and South Carolina.

Mon.

These states, this informant said, could be won by the insurgent Southerners without a test by ballot against the Truman-Barkley regular party slate. This could be done through state party conventions or by direction in some states of the Democratic executive committee. He said several others "probably can be carried the same way" but did not name them.

The Advertiser

Test Is Planned

In the border states, he said, the Southern ticket probably will be placed on the ballot in a test of voting strength.

In these states, this leader declared, the States Righters will be trying to win for themselves.

If they can't win, they won't be unhappy if they get enough votes away from Mr. Truman to give these states to the Republican nominee, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York.

Montgomery, Ala.

Arkansas Gov. Ben T. Laney, who had been rumored as the possible presidential choice of the Southern Democrats, said the entire civil rights campaign henceforth should be handled "through Democratic organizations in each state."

Mon.

He also said, "it is not too late to avoid permanent division of our people."

7-19-48

The statement indicated disagreement with some of the policies adopted at the States Rights gathering. Governor Laney did not attend the session at the auditorium but was in several committee meetings.

Claiming 20 Electoral Votes, Rebels Led by Thurmond Plan Drive for More

REGULAR DEMOCRATS COLD

Laney Avoids Convention and Urges Action Be Confined to the Official Party

By JOHN N. POPHAM

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 18—Rebellious Southern Democrats, waving the flag of "white supremacy" and boasting an assured twenty Electoral College votes in Mississippi and Alabama, announced today that they would carry "a fighting campaign" to defeat President Truman into neighboring states.

J. Strom Thurmond, Governor of South Carolina and Presidential choice of the disgruntled Democrats on a "states' rights" ticket, was prepared to start a speechmaking campaign covering the solid South, the border states and "the backyards of President Truman and his running mate, Senator Alben Barkley."

Meanwhile, there were mounting indications that party "regulars," political bosses and even former "states' rights" enthusiasts were ready to dash cold water on the new ticket's hopes to gain support from a region that has solidly supported the Democratic party since Reconstruction days, except for the splintering in the Al Smith campaign of 1928.

Laney Opposes "Revenge"

Foremost in political significance among those who were taking a cautious attitude toward the Dixie "revolt" was Gov. Ben T. Laney of Arkansas, who was openly reported to be the favorite for President of the states' rights leaders up to a few hours before they selected Governor Thurmond.

Governor Laney, who remained in his hotel room yesterday rather than attend the states' rights nominating convention, issued a typewritten statement that went to the heart of the struggle ahead for the new party by declaring, "Whatever is done must be done through and by the official Democratic organization in each respective state."

Governor Laney said that he had offered his recommendation that the political dispute be kept within the party ranks to the leaders of the states' rights party as "a plea and a position" which would be his for "the present and the future."

He emphasized his belief that the South was right in opposing the civil rights proposals in the Democratic party platform adopted at the national convention in Philadelphia, but added that "the spirit of obstinacy and revenge is not the spirit of the Southland."

Warns on Permanent Split

He referred to yesterday's convention and remarked, "I do not know what the outcome of the Birmingham meeting will be." He then added that the results of the Civil War "even unto this day are well remembered" and pleaded with the civil rights proponents to act to avoid "a permanent division of our people."

The Times

Governor Laney has been a leader in the Southern opposition to the civil rights proposals introduced in January by President Truman. He was named chairman of the first States' Rights Democrats meeting on May 10 in Jackson, Miss. At the national convention in Philadelphia he announced his candidacy for the Presidential nomination but withdrew before balloting time.

N.Y.

Newspaper editorials in key southern cities today largely took a dim view of the wisdom of the "revolt" and the creation of a fourth party, but expressed sympathy with the feelings of those who insisted that the civil rights proposals had angered them to the point of rebellion.

There was wide discussion of the possibility that yesterday's convention, with speakers emphasizing the tenets of white supremacy and "the threats of racial intermingling," would add to President Truman's bid in the large industrial areas with heavy Negro voting strength.

Mon.

It was also being pointed out that recognized leaders of political machines, such as Edward H. (Boss) Crump of Tennessee, Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, Herman Talmadge of Georgia and Gov. Earl K. Long of Louisiana, had declined to take part in the convention and had not sent any emissaries.

Majority In Dixie Opposes Truman

Mississippian Says People Won't Be Browbeaten

Memphis, Tenn.

To The Commercial Appeal:

Every alarm has been sounded in an effort to "brow beat" the people of the South into supporting Harry Truman, when it is well known to everybody that the overwhelming majority of the Democrats of the South are determined that they will not do so.

If there are still those who are simple minded enough to believe that the South is in the bag for the National Democratic Party nominee, regardless of principles and personalities, then they may just wait and watch the returns from the November election.

The Republican National Convention repudiated its congressional leaders by passing up a number of senators and members of the House, in favor of two governors to head their ticket. The great majority of the Democrats of the South are determined that the people shall rule and if congressmen stand in the way, then the congressmen must go. This is written in the friendliest spirit toward all of our congressmen.

Missouri And Kentucky Part Of Plan At Birmingham—Many Onlookers Due

Memphis, Tenn.

By ROLAND DOPSON

United Press Staff Writer

BIRMINGHAM, July 16.—Rebellious Dixiecrats moved Friday night to invade President Truman's and Senator Alben Barkley's home states with opposing slates of electors in November.

Sat.

On the eve of an advertised "Dixie Conventilon," they planned to put up similar slates in 12 other border or Southern states. They claimed "reliable assurance" that they can get their electors on the ballot in those states as well as Missouri and Kentucky.

Eastland Sparks Fight

Senator Eastland (D., Miss.) predicted that the "States' Righters" assembling here can take the role of minority party away from the regular Democrats headed by Mr. Truman.

7-17-48

He urged that the Dixiecrats name a candidate for President "who can carry the banner."

"We will file candidates for presidential electors in every Southern state, every border state and some Northern states," he said. He declared the group will 'igve the people a chance to protect themselves in all states."

"I don't think Truman will get any electoral votes," Senator Eastland added. "Especially if we run a strong campaign in the border states. We wil then become the minority party — the real Democratic Party. Then we would make the minority party assignments on committees in the Senate and House."

"Individuals" To Attend

W. W. Wright, convention organizer, said "individuals" from Oklahoma, Georgia, Alabama, Virginia, South Carolina, Louisiana, North Carolina, Mississippi, Texas, Florida, Tennessee and Arkansas will be on hand for Saturday's 10 a.m. assembly.

Sat.

He emphasized the word "individuals." Whole-hog participation in a bolters' convention appeared limited to Alabama and Mississippi, with Arkansas and South Carolina expected to join in to a lesser degree.

Most of the rest emphasized they were onlokers, with no official mandate from their state Democratic organizations." One of the late arrivals, for instance, former Gov. Sam Jones of Louisiana, said he was an observer for a group "which is very much in the minority in Louisiana."

Delegates to the "states' rights" session held an informal caucus and resolved to push their revolt into the home states of the party standard-bearers.

Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham, said if the resolution is approved by the full conference a committee will be instructed to get up a slate of Dixiecrats to put on the general election ballot in Missouri and eKntucky.

The Commercial Appeal

Plan Is Explained

Under the plan, a Southern States Rights Committee would open offices in Ketucky and Missouri and round up slates of opposition electors. In most states, a certain number of petitioners are required to get electors' names on the ballot.

The Dixiecrats got a shot in the arm Friday when Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who reportedly had turned lukewarm, announced he would attend the Birmingham parley after all.

"I am whole-heartedly in favor of continuing the great fight in which we are engaged," Thurmond announced in Columbia.

Sat.

Doubt remained, however, whether Thurmond and certain other Southern state leaders will participate in an actual "convention" to choose separate nominees for president and vice president and, in effect, create a new party.

STILL FOR TRUMAN

The Advertiser

Editor, The Advertiser:

Will you kindly lend space for these few words? The "walkie-talkies" and lukewarms have had their say and have made a complete flop. Now I think the Democrats want to have a say.

First, eleven bolters have the people's vote in their hip pocket and plan to meet and throw them away—they might as well throw them in the river.

Montgomery, Ala.

However, if the Democrats will write the name of Harry Truman and Barkley on the vallot and a majority goes for them, this State will stay in the national fold. It will be legal for Carmichael ruled it himself, and we are neither morally nor legally bound to abide by a Democratic primary. I for one will vote a Democratic ticket come November.

Thurmond, Candidate of Rebels, Decries 'White Supremacy' Idea

The Times New York, N.Y. Tues. 7-20-48

By JOHN N. POPHAM

Special to The

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 19—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who was chosen on Saturday as the Presidential candidate of the rebellious Southern Democrats, cracked down on his "white supremacy" followers today in a surprise action.

He told reporters in a telephone conversation from the executive mansion in Columbia, S. C., that he was "a progressive Southerner" interested in bettering conditions for the Negro and that he would campaign on the "state's rights" ticket soley in support of his beliefs in "the sovereignty of the states as against Federal Government interference." 7-20-48

Admittedly perturbed at the attitude of some of his followers on the subject of "white supremacy," a theme which studded many of the speeches made at the nominating convention three days ago, Governor Thurmond pointed to his record in bringing about the arrest of twenty-three white men accused of lynching a Negro in Greenville, S. C., in January, 1947.

He also emphasized that in his inaugural address two years ago he had called for repeal of the poll tax and he insisted that "at all times I have advocated better facililites for the Negroes."

The Times

He said that he was "not interested one whit in the question of white supremacy" and added that he was anxious that "the rest of the country realize that we have some pretty good guys down here."

New York N.Y.

This new development highlighted the strange ambivalent character of the Southern attitude on the subject of race relations and struck a fresh note in the many paradoxes that have developed about the segregation pattern and its interpretations in the South. 7-20-48

Governor Thurmond has always identified himself as a "progressive," although he has seemed to shy away from the "liberal" label. His public statements during the recent controversy over the civil rights proposals of President Truman, however, lost him a large part of the liberal following that acclaimed him for his forthright conduct in the Greenville lynching case.

The Times

In all of his speeches Governor Thurmond has urged improvement of facilities for Negroes, but always with a subscription to the Southern pattern of segregation based on "equal" but separate facilities.

In the south Governor Thurmond has never been linked in ideological views with liberal leaders such as former Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia or newspapermen such as Hodding Carter of Mississippi and Ralph McGill of Atlanta.

At the same time he has not been an advocate of "white supremacy" tents on a level with Representative John Rankin of Mississippi, but his appearances as a leader in the civil rights "revolt" have publicly thrown his lot with some of the most ardent advocates of "white supremacy."

It appeared that Governor Thurmond was seeking to clamp the lid on the purveyors of bigotry who attended the nomination convention here and whose records of race hatred appear likely to make the political road ahead rough for the newly-formed state's rights ticket that is out to defeat President Truman in the solid South for his civil rights proposals.

There were no signs today to indicate that Governor Thurmond's assertion that he deplored the "white supremacy" following would cause any fundamental cleavage in the make-up of the new state's rights party, but it did draw attention to the white supremacy faction aligned with the new ticket.

The state's rights Democrats have shown their greatest strength in Alabama and Mississippi, where a combined twenty electoral votes are pledged against Mr. Truman and seem very likely to be cast for the new fourth party.

New York N.Y.

It was recalled that Mississippi's Governor, Fielding L. Wright, who is Vice Presidential candidate on the state's rights ticket, told the Negroes in Mississippi in a radio address last May 8 that if they envisioned any social equality with whites in restaurants and schools they had better leave the state.

Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi, who took a principal part in the nominating convention here on Saturday, is generally recognized as the "father" of a proposed constitutional amendment in Mississippi which calls for prospective voters to be of good moral character, widely revarded as a barrier aimed at Negro voting in Mississippi. 7-21-48

Frank M. Dixon, former Governor of Alabama and a leader in the state's rights party, spoke at the convention and repeatedly emphasized the "threat to the South" of the civil rights proposals, declaring that they would force the intermingling of the races and "make Southerners into a mongrel, inferior race." The Times

Horace Wilkinson, chairman of the resolutions committee for the state's rights group, told the convention a "joke" in which a Negro character delivers the punch line by telling "an occupant of the White House" that the white people of the South are "too high class" to mix socially with Negroes.

William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, 87-year-old former Governor of Oklahoma, called to the speaker's platform during the convention session, told the audience that "this country became great through Christian principles and the white man's brains."

New York N.Y.

Political opponents of the state's rights movement were hinting tonight that although Governor Thurmond would confine his campaign to the issue of state sovereignty as a principle of American government it had become necessary to distract attention from the loud chorus of "hiwte supremacy" views openly expressed at the nomination convention.

On other political fronts there was still a growing indication that political bosses and Democratic "regulars" were shaping their organizational strength to defeat the state's rights party's bid to split the South, which has been traditionally Democratic since Reconstruction days.

Tues. 7-20-48

James S. Peters, chairman of the Georgia State Democratic executive committee, said his organization would "take our stand on the question of Presidential electors at the proper time."

Mr. Peters, a strong supporter of Herman Talmadge forces in Georgia, walked out of the first state's rights Democrats meeting in Jackson, Miss., on May 10, because, he said, he regarded it as a "bolt" of the Democratic party.

A steering committee of dissident Southern Democrats, some veterans of the smokefilled room, met here yesterday to plan a presidential campaign. 7-25-48

Present were Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi and the same small group which engineered the Birmingham States Rights Convention a week ago.

At that meeting, Thurmond was acclaimed as the States Rights Democratic candidate for President and Wright for Vice President.

The man who placed both names before the convention, Horace Wilkinson, of Birmingham, was on hand along with former Gov. Frank M. Dixon, of Alabama; Sidney Smyer, Birmingham attorney; W. W. Wright (no kin of the Mississippi Governor), a Jackson, Miss., wholesale grocer.

The meeting was opened by W. W. Wright, who said that those present were there by invitation only.

"They were invited by those leaders who have been in the movement from the start," Wright said. 7-25-48

His reference to the invitation was aimed at press reports which have commented on the absence of Georgia's political leaders.

Wright said the meeting would be closed to the press so that matters pertaining to the campaign could be "thrashed out."

There were representatives present from Louisiana, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Texas.

The Texas representative is Merritt H. Gibson, of Longview, former Gregg County judge and now an attorney. Gibson said the Birmingham convention "seems to have crystallized the opinion" in Texas and that plans are afoot to hold a similar state-wide, States'-rights meeting in the Lone Star State.

The Texan said they will know definitely in a "couple of weeks" when the Democratic precinct conventions are held "how sentiment is running."

Thurmond was optimistic about his campaign yesterday. He is convinced, he said, that there is strong Southern sentiment for the ticket.

"If the Southern people will just stick together," he declared, "they have the finest opportunity since the War Between the States to gain the respect of the nation."

REHABILITATED?

A minor but highly intriguing speculation is posed by a paragraph from the column of John Temple Graves:

Advertiser

> . . . If I could have explained who and what Horace Wilkinson is, I would have added that Horace himself is trying manfully now to eliminate the word (nigger) from his vast vocabulary of song, speech and story. In view of the social responsibility that has come to him with his leadership in the States Rights movement he is trying.
>
> It is hard for him to break a favorite lifelong habit but I believe he is going to win out, rather than discredit the States Rights movement as it goes national.

Does that really mean, as it were, that Wilkinson is meaning to go straight?

This note from Columnist Graves smacks of the knowledgeable. It sounds for the life of it as if Wilkinson has been spirited away by his more comprehending friends and talked to, man to man. It sounds as if the hitherto irrepressible Wilkinson has agreed to repress himself, it being a time of war. Montgomery, Ala

We don't know whether this means that Wilkinson has gone underground, or has undergone a Turkish bath that has steamed out the poisonous juices in which his lard is soaked and steeped. Fri. 8-6-48

We had observed, prior to Graves' bland suggestion, that Wilkinson was conspicuously absenting himself from The Advertiser's letter column, whence he has so happily and so energetically shelled the editorial columns. We didn't know but what the abstention was simply a pause to consolidate before unleashing a new V-weapon attack of some nature.

Be all of that as it may, The Advertiser pledges to do all in its power to fortify this new rectitude of Wilkinson's. We do not underwrite it, but neither will we scout it.

The Advertiser, then, will consider that Wilkinson has ceased to burn incense in memory of the departed Bilbo and that he has entered upon a term of probation.

Let's Be Sensible About It

Sun. 7-25-48

Included in the reaction to the coming out for the Republican national ticket of the Dothan (Ala.) Eagle is a letter to the editor this week from a gentleman who signs himself H. M. Shelton, of San Antonio, Texas, in which he argues that rather than support the GOP, Southerners ought to secede from the United States in a manner comparable to the partitioning of Palestine and establish what he calls a "Southern autonomy."

It strikes us that the Texan's idea is about as sensible as the argument advanced by a Negro orator from Missouri—the home state of Harry Truman—at the Wallace convention in Philadelphia that the President should send the U. S. Army into the South to see to it that Negroes are protected in their right to vote!

TWO SUCH statements by men on opposite sides of the civil rights fence are sharp reminders of the heat that has been generated over the issue by the extremely foolish procedure of the left-wingers at the late but not lamented Democratic Convention in the Quaker City.

Of equal inappropriateness were some of the shoutings and rantings at the Birmingham Convention of the state righters. Governors Thurmond and Wright, of South Carolina and Mississippi, respectively, are very fine gentlemen, but the philosophy preached by some of the fiery spellbinders in Birmingham certainly did not reflect the best thinking in the South today. 7-25-48

The Morning News, in this connection, agrees one hundred percent with the Montgomery Advertiser's statement that the Birmingham meeting was something in the nature of "an ugly carnival scene" and that "the South doesn't want to be judged by what went on at Birmingham," in so far as the oratory was concerned, a type of speech-making that was so radical the radio networks were compelled to cut off their broadcasts of it.

LET Southerners resent wholeheartedly the treatment afforded them at the New Deal Convention in Philadelphia, but for heaven's sake let us be sensible and dignified about our methods and purposes in connection with solving the problems that have been raised.

News

To the Editor of The News:

No doubt the admirers of Sen. Lister Hill are very sad about the weakkneed fight he put up against the president's civil rights program.

Birmingham Ala

Sen. Hill has proved to the people of Alabama that Northern patronage means more to him than the feelings of the true Southerner. The Northerners have said all along that the civil rights program would blow over in the South and that the South would back Harry Truman in the end. Now let us think why they knew this. They knew it because they knew that weak Southerners such as Lister Hill catered more to the Northern purse-strings than to the people of Alabama who put him in office. Wed. 7-21-48

It must be known to the Northerners that there is a difference in a true Southerner and a person just being born in the South. Speaking for myself and other true Southerners, we don't intend to have the president's civil rights program forced down our throats, come what may! As one great statesman said, "I have but one life to give for my country." Speaking for myself, I would like to change two words in that statement and say, "I have but one life to give for the South," which I would give proudly for the preservation of Southern traditions.

Some have stated that the civil rights program would return the South to the days of the Ku Klux Klan, but there will be as many of us fighting against this civil rights program without a hood as there will be those with hoods! This will be one program that no true Southerner would want to hide his face to combat, with force, if necessary.

SCORE VICTORY, SETBACK

Laney In High Post Of Dixiecrat Party

Constitution, Atlanta Ga.

Wed. 7-30-48

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 29—(INS)—States' Rights Democrats both scored a victory and suffered setbacks today in their campaign for strength in the Southern faction of the Party.

The States' Righters hailed as a sign of gathering strength the appointment of Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney as General Chairman of the Party.

Gov. Laney reportedly had been cool to proposals of the Party to nominate presidential and vice presidential candidates for President to fight against President Truman and regular Democratic Party leadership.

But today, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights candidate for President, said that Laney has accepted the post of General Chairman of the Dixie faction.

The announcement came as the Southerners disclosed a complete campaign organization. Judge Merrit Gibson, of Longview, Texas, was named Campaign Director and national campaign headquarters were scheduled to be established at Jackson, Miss., on Aug. 9.

Gov. Thurmond and Gov. Fielding L. Wright issued joint statements that branch campaign headquarters will be opened at Washington and at Columbia. Wed

The States' Rights campaign will begin Aug. 11 at Houston, Texas.

Meanwhile, setbacks to the States' Rights campaign cause came in Louisiana and North Carolina. 7-30-48

The Louisiana attorney general ruled that only persons registered as Democrats may participate in the party primary. In Louisiana—as in most Southern States—the Democratic primary is tantamount to election.

The ruling was considered a blow to the States' Rights movement in Louisiana where leaders are striving for 1,000 signatures of persons registered as independents not affiliated with the Democratic or Republican Parties. Under the ruling, States' Righters, as independents, would be banned from voting for local and State officials.

A Democratic primary is scheduled for August in Louisiana to name U. S. Senators and Representatives and several local officials.

Meanwhile, North Carolina's Dixiecrat movement was shorn of any support it might have claimed from State Democratic leaders.

State Democratic Chairman Wilkins P. Horton, Gov. Gregg Cherry and Senator-nominee J. Melville Broughton served notice they are Democrats and intend to remain Democrats.

Chairman Horton charged that many of the so-called Dixiecrats are seeking "to hide their Republicanism behind the skirts of States' Rights."

Gov. Cherry said he "can see no good end to leaving the Party. Within it, our people can work out their own salvation."

Plot To Support Thurmond-Wright Seen By Observers

The Lighthouse and Informer

Columbia SC.

A plot to switch the votes of South Carolina Democrats from President Truman to Governor J. Strom Thurmond and Mississippi's Governor Fielding Wright, was predicted by political observers in South Carolina this week.

Significance was attached to the presence of state Democratic chairman, William P. Baskin, in Atlanta last week-end, where Thurmond and Wright mapped plans for a nation-wide campaign.

Moreover, the increased tempo in certain daily newspapers, usually the sounding board for big businesses and political bosses, indicated that such an undertaking was in the offing. Sun.

County Democrats at Sumter and in Jasper county are on record as supporting the states rightist Thurmond ticket, while scattered supporters are being paid huge sums to impress others to support the South Caroline leaders. 8-1-48

Simultaneously, first of the week, and announcement calling a second meeting of the state Democratic convention was expected from Chairman Baskin. If and when such a convention is held, it is predicted that a strong effort will be made to throw the the entire state party behind the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

A second prediction is that the new convention would attempt changes in rules which would recognize recent decisions returned by U. S. District Court Judge J. Waites Warning. Major changes expected would be those raising qualifications for voting and possibly the urging of a special legislative session.

These observers said the recourse was to have an independent ticket in the general election, backing the national party. While this possibility is known to be under consideration by several groups, there was nothing concrete on it late Monday.

Keep Fighting

Atlanta Ga. Constitution

Editor Constitution: After reading Ralph McGill's editorial in Sunday's paper on, "What Can the South Do," it brought back to my mind a report card I once received in the third grade, which had large letters written across it that said, "Gives up too easy in effort." That is what I thing Ralph has been doing in recent months. His attitude on the civil rights question is, "If you cannot lick them, join them." I said at that time and I still mean it, as long as I lived that I would never receive a report card in school or out that said, "Gives up too easily," and I am saying now I shall never give up fighting this unconstitutional so-called civil rights program as long as I live on this earth. I sincerely believe that we of the South are going to win this battle, even if it means another Civil War, though I fervidly hope the situation will never become that drastic.

'Dixiecrats' Plan to Carry Battle Into Border States

12 Delegations Assured As South Starts Birmingham Parley Today

From Wire Dispatches.

Birmingham, July 16.—Southern Democrats revolting against the national party on the issue of civil rights tonight named ex-Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama as temporary chairman for tomorrow's States'-rights convention.

The appointment was announced by W. W. Wright, Jackson, Miss., conference cochairman, after a preconvention meeting of early arrivals for the conference.

Wright said "we are assured" of representation from 12 states. He named these as Oklahoma, Georgia, Alabama, Virginia, South Carolina, Louisiana, North Carolina, Mississippi, Texas, Florida, Tennessee, and Arkansas.

Talk of Battle In Missouri.

The Courier-Journal

The Jackson attorney said preliminary plans were being drawn up pending arrival of Governor Fielding Wright of Mississippi and Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas.

"At the termination of the Philadelphia convention," Wright's statement said, "all delegates completed their authority to represent the Democratic Party of their respective states and, if any attend this conference, they will attend as individual States'-rights Democrats.

"The invitation extended to them was the same that was extended to the entire nation."

Earlier, the Southern revolters discussed plans to take their battle for anti-Truman electors into the President's home state of Missouri and at least a dozen other states.

Louisville, Ky.

Thurmond Decides to Go.

The decision by the caucus on the Missouri move also included a plan to have States'-rights electors on the ticket in Kentucky, home state of Senator Alben Barkley, the Philadelphia choice for Vice-President.

Sat.

The "Dixiecrats" were encouraged today when Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who reportedly had turned lukewarm, announced he would attend the Birmingham parley after all.

7-17-48

"I am wholeheartedly in favor of continuing the great fight in which we are engaged," Thurmond announced in Columbia.

Doubt remained, however, whether Thurmond and certain other Southern leaders will participate in an actual "convention" to choose separate nominees for President and Vice-President and, in effect, create a new party.

Alabama Senators Aloof.

So far only two states were going all the way—Mississippi and Alabama—and even Alabama's two senators, John Sparkman and Lister Hill, were remaining aloof. Mississippi's senators, John Stennis and James A. Eastland, were in the vanguard of the "Dixiecrat" arrivals.

Governor Laney steered away from fourth-party talk in a statement at St. Louis where he stopped on the way here.

Laney said Southern Democrats' main job now is to work against civil-rights legislation in Congress.

"We must appeal to Congress, Democrats and Republicans alike, not to pass it," Laney said. "Imposition of this legislation means a new type of government. It could not be adopted and enforced without a changed interpretation of the Constitution and a complete abrogation of States' rights."

One leader of the Southern revolt predicted the man nominated here tomorrow would "carry more states than Mr. Truman."

Sat.

This leader declined use of his name "until tomorrow's meeting." He outlined, however, a plan of action for the meeting.

7-17-48

Alabama and Mississippi, with 20 electoral votes between them, already are committed against Truman. He named as "certain E. Dewey, the Republican candidate.

Wright, Laney Lead Fields.

The Courier-Journal

In addition to working for anti-Truman electors from these states through regular state party machinery, he said a full slate of States'-rights electors would be placed on the ticket in such border states as Oklahoma, Missouri, and Maryland.

Louisville, Ky.

Early arrivals for the meeting huddled in various hotels, as final arrangements were made hurriedly. The States'-righters will meet in the City Auditorium, which seats 6,000.

Sat.

Two chief possibilities for the States'-rights nomination are Governor Wright and Governor Laney.

Governor Wright called the meeting "to begin the fight to save the South."

"It has been made clear at Philadelphia," he said, "that the greatest discrimination existing in this country today is not racial or religious, but discrimination against the South."

'Solid Against Truman.'

Sat.

An Alabama delegate, still smarting from the Philadelphia defeat, said on arrival:

"We will keep the South solid—solid against Truman and his obnoxious program to deprive us of control of our domestic affairs."

He was Albert Stapp, Birmingham businessman and delegate at large.

"The South feels like a mother who has been kicked out of her own home by upstart in-laws," Stapp said. "We were not even given a courteous hearing at Philadelphia.

"We will never forget it—and President Truman and the city-machine bosses will never forget it either. These cynical ingrates forget that we have kept the party alive through the dark years when they had no federal patronage to dole out. We are through with them."

Plan Mapped To Hamstring Truman Vote

11 States Are Needed For 127 Free Ballots At Electoral College

Support Is Urged

Purpose Of Conference Is To Regain Control By Regular Democrats

By BEM PRICE

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.— (AP) —The South's troubled Democrats indicated Thursday night, a plan to hamstring President Truman's election chances by leaving their electors unpledged.

The plan was indicated by Ex-Gov. Frank M. Dixon and two members of the Alabama State's Rights committee.

Dixon, Presidential Elector Horace Wilkinson and Sidney Smyer stressed that Saturday's meeting here of Democrats disgruntled over the national party's civil rights plank would be a "conference and not a convention."

Wilkinson and Dixon said that by leaving the presidential electors free to vote for whom they pleased would not mean throwing support to the Republican candidates.

Southern Unity

It would mean, they said, that the electors could vote for any man. Presumably the Southern States could unite in the electoral college as they did in the convention, when 263 votes went to Senator Russell (D), Georgia, for the presidential nomination.

Alabama already has a delegation to the electoral college which is unpledged, save against Truman.

Wilkinson said the support by 11 Southern States of his plan would mean 127 free votes in the electoral college.

Wilkinson said that before November there still was time for any Southern States to change the status of their delegations now pledged to Truman.

To Name Candidate

Earlier, Gov. Fielding L. Wright, of Mississippi, said the Birmingham conference was to nominate a presidential candidate.

Dixon, Wilkinson and Smyer were at the municipal airport here to greet W. W. Wright, of Jackson, Miss. (No kin to the governor), first of the Mississippi delegation to arrive.

Wright said the main purpose of the meeting here was to "get control of the Democratic party back in the hands of the regular Democrats."

He said also that "the convention was dominated by the big city machines who have taken temporary control of the party," adding, "but I think the November election will take that control away."

Wright admitted there was no hope of electing a Southern president, but said the conference was to "defeat the Philadelphia nominee."

The call of the Birmingham convention was issued as the delegates departed Philadelphia and the scene of the national Democratic Convention, wherein they were twice defeated.

The summons was issued by Gov. Wright and Dixon to all those opposed to the civil rights program and the renomination of President Truman.

Problematical

But whether these leaders would find the South united behind them was problematical.

The Mississippi delegation was scheduled to arrive in Birmingham at 8:10 p.m. Friday. Some of the Alabama delegates from the national convention at 10:45 a.m.

Florida said it would bring seven members and Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas said he "probably" would attend. Representatives of Texas and South Carolina also are expected.

Louisiana and Georgia already have said their delegates would not attend. Some of the other southern states, who also rallied behind Sen. Richard Russell (D), Georgia, for the presidential nomination at Philadelphia, have not yet stood up to be counted.

Russell, who garnered 263 votes in convention for president, has declined use of his name as the South's candidate at Birmingham.

And the senior senator from Georgia, Walter George, has said he doesn't see what the Birmingham convention can hope to accomplish.

As a by-product of the South's convention fight and opposition to the civil rights proposals—a fair employment practices act, an anti-lynching, anti-segregation and anti-poll tax laws—Russell forsees trouble for the South.

He predicted at his Winder, Ga., home the South would be kicked around considerably in the special session of Congress called by President Truman by both Democrats and Republicans bent on enacting a civil rights program.

Fri. 7-16-48

Russell also declared he did not believe the Birmingham convention the best thing for the party at this time.

Both Russell and Editor Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution said they believe the cleavage in the Democratic ranks would result in a major realignment of parties in this country.

McGill predicted the party 10 years hence would find its strength mostly in urban areas and be farther to the left than the party of Franklin Roosevelt.

There were other reactions to the developments at Philadelphia.

Two of the Alabama delegation, Marion Rushton and Mrs. Lennard Thomas, both of Montgomery, said they would remain on the national Democratic committee.

The Dothan (Ala.) Eagle in a page one editorial declared "we are fed up" and announced its intention of bolting the Democratic party.

Montgomery

What's more, said the paper, "come hell or high water, we're supporting the Republicans."

Other comment:

Advertiser

The Memphis Commercial Appeal: "Southern dissenters . . . are going to have a little difficulty breathing life into states' rights as an issue. Within their own ranks are many who oppose creation of a fourth party."

The Tampa (Fla.) Times: "The one party system has brought many ills and many insults and indignities to the South. . . . If the Philadelphia blow-up should mean the end of blind allegiance to old prejudices, perhaps in the long run it will have been worthwhile."

Fri. 7-16-48

Most of the comment from Southern newspapers ignored the Birmingham meeting to comment on the South's defeat in convention, some on the fact that the majority of the party had anticipated the Southern revolt by defeating it on issues dear to the South.

Gov. Wright, before leaving Philadelphia, said, the object of the Birmingham convention is to select a candidate "so that those who believe in states' rights can vote for him with confidence in November and remain within the Democratic Party."

Dixie's 'Spavined, Bedraggled Chickens'

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

H. L. Mencken In The Baltimore Sun

THE gallant Confederates who attempted a raid upon the late Democratic National Convention got a bad licking on the floor, but that licking did not dispose of them, nor even seriously punish them. What ails them now is a double handicap, both halves of it of Southern origin. The first is to be found in the fact that when they got home all the worst frauds in the South rushed up to kiss them and have since hung about their necks. The second half springs out of the general Northern assumption, unhappily well supported by recent history, that whatever originates in the South is half-idiotic, and hardly deserves to be heard.

Thurs.

That assumption is bitterly resented by enlightened Southerners, but the record is the record. The South, for years past, has been a sewer of imbecility. It has supported every major aberration, whether political or social, that has afflicted the country, and it has supported most of them with a degree of enthusiasm bordering on the delirious. I name the Bryan madness. I name Prohibition. I name Fundamentalism. I name the New Deal. I name the anti-Al Smith and Huey Long uproars. I name the two wars to make the world safe for democracy. 8-5-48

BUT there is no need to labor the list, for it would be hard to think of any lunacy that doesn't belong on it. Time was when the South, perhaps more than any other section of the country, was fertile in ideas, but even more fertile in first-rate men. But at least since the Eighties, nine-tenths of the so-called ideas that it has produced have been silly, and nine-tenths of the leaders shabby and preposterous fellows. When the last of its Civil War heroes died it went underground, intellectually speaking, and there it has remained ever since, entertaining the civilized world with such frightful burlesques of civilization as the Scopes trial, the Leo Frank lynching, and the share-the-wealth hubbub.

The result today is that the Dixiecrat movement is getting a great deal less sober attention than it deserves. It looks, from across the Potomac and Ohio, like nothing more than a fresh pestilence of Longs, Bilbos, Tillmans, Bleases, Talmadges and Pappy O'Daniels. It is, in fact, nothing of the sort, whatever the excrescences that now burden it.

It is fundamentally quite as serious in purpose, and quite as rational, as any other regional movement that has appeared in recent years, and some of its leaders are worthy of the highest respect.

Certainly it would be absurd to dismiss such men as Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, and former Gov. Dan Moody, of Texas, as windbags of the common sort. They are men of intelligence and they are men of honor, and when they take to the bush it is safe to assume that they have a genuine grievance.

The colored brother, it seems to me, is hardly more than a by-stander in the combat, though he will be injured no matter what the issue. If the embattled Confederates throw Truman and company off he will see a halt in the process of liberation that has been going on for some years, with the best class of Southerners supporting it. If if the damyankee politicians, with their eyes upon the Harlem vote, push their drastic "reforms" through, he will be the chief victim of the ensuing revival of Reconstruction.

IT IS this threat of another dismal dose of Reconstruction that chiefly alarms the more intelligent Southerners. They are painfully aware of what went on in the Seventies, and they are naturally fearful of a repetition, with northerner jobholders, most of them dishonest and nearly all of them jackasses, substituted for the carpetbaggers of the first canto. They believe that they have some civil rights, too, and they are resolved not only to protect those that remain but to regain those that have been already lost to New Deal totalitarianism. They hope to do it peacefully by an appeal to Article X of the Bill of Rights, but if that appeal fails they are willing to try stronger medicines.

I must confess that I sympathize with them, despite my life-long devotion to exposing their deficiences. It must be manifest that if the whole program of the Yankee messiahs, by the Force Bill of 1890 out of the Communist Manifesto, is put through with any vigor, life will become almost impossible in large areas of the South, and a third Bull Run will begin casting its shadows before.

The Advertiser

BUT the position of the intelligent Southerners, as I have observed, is greatly weakened by the stupidity of the South as a whole. Having supported the New Deal violently for 16 years, and profited enormously by its reckless looting of the North, including Maryland, it can't complain now that the North is preparing to give it a poisonous dose out of the same black bottle.

Thurs.

It is not possible to play the idiot for years on end and then suddenly turn Aristotle.

Montgomery, Ala.

It is not possible to wallow in the buncombe of Long, Bilbo, Pepper, Lister Hill, O'Daniel and the like until all the stomachs north of the Potomac begin to turn and then appeal to reason behind a facade of Thurmonds, Moodys and Harry Byrds.

The South had its chance to come out for intelligence a long while ago. Instead it turned to Bryan, Tom Watson, Prohibition, Fundamentalism and the Ku Klux Klan. It is now paying the devastating penalty. Its spavined and beraggled chickens are coming home to roost. 8-5-48

Birmingham's Baby

The News

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

Mrs. Birmingham, amid much shouting, brought forth what appears to be a healthy baby boy, possessing some of the virtues that are dear to the South as well as all of the evils contained in the father. He has been named "Dixiecrat."

But, alas, the poor child is destined to be short-lived, for we are told that the iniquity of the father will be visited upon the child,

Democracy At Home

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

The convention held in Birmingham by the Southern faction of the Democratic Party can be considered a disgrace to all civilized people. I am sure intelligent Southern people are peeved over the conduct of this convention.

People of color are no longer contented with second-class citizenship. We are ready to take our rightful place in a democratic society, and enjoy those inalienable rights we have fought to preserve. Bigotry, discrimination, and terrorism upon people of color are not the ideals and principles endowed by our constitution.

If these United States are expected to be considered the arsenal of democracy, and check the spread of communism, they will have to make democracy work at home. Now is the time that Southern politicians should realize that it is futile to continue to fight the Civil War. We are living in a new era in which man achieves by his merits regardless of race, creed, or color. The Southern states cannot hope to take their place among the leading states of this country as long as they cling to ancient ideals and ways.

I wish to thank Mr. Truman and Henry A. Wallace for their stand upon the issue to give the oppressed people of this great nation the full value of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. 8-5-48

Dixiecrats Snub Party By McGrath

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Fri. 8-6-48

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—(UP) A dozen Dixiecrat Senators boycotted a "no politics" private dinner given by Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath last night because of the civil rights issue.

Sen. McGrath gave the dinner at the swank Shoreham Hotel. All Democratic Senators were invited.

The invitations stressed it would be a personal get-together just for Senate Democrats. No speeches. No politics. Just food, fun, and talk. 8-6-48

But a few hours before dinner time, word got around that McGrath's Democratic National Committee had merged its Negro and white divisions.

EX-G. I. WANTS SOUTH TO SECEDE AGAIN

To the Editor of The Record:

The South has a chance that will never come again, to set up a separate republic with a president of its own. Other states will follow the lead. They are all tired of dictatorship.

The 48 have become too cumbersome, and too top heavy to function well any longer as a unit. They should be split up into four great republics, or rather, five. The five New England states as one, the Southern block as one and so on. Washington has become corrupt through too much responsibility, too much power, and too much money. It is turning into a dictatorship.

Let us leave Washington to stew in its own juice, and have instead, the United States of New England, the United Southern States, the United Western States, the United Middle Western States, and standing by itself, the states of New York, New Jersey and Delaware, which might be named the United Atlantic States. The South will cover itself with glory by taking the lead in this mc / and better government, and prosperity will return to the South by leaps and bounds when she is free.

Columbia, S.C.

Under Truman or Dewey we shall be slave states. The machine that has been running Washington has taken care to see that which ever side wins in November, it will be their man. Both Truman and Dewey will carry out the policies of that machine. We shall all be slaves, but especially the South. Secede now. Washington is forcing another war, in order to get back the powers for the president that he will never again relinquish. Truman or Dewey, whichever it is will be dictators. 7-27-48

Start campaigning for secession now, and give Truman such a headache that he will be unable to do any campaigning for himself. It will scare the daylights out of that bunch. Washington will not make war on the South as Lincoln did, nor will the North. Times have changed. The North and others are too tired of the Truman administration. They will support the South, and so will England, and the South American republic. It is not good to sign my name to a letter like this; but I am a Southerner, a retired G. I. and I will call myself Wayland Brookley. If the South gets up a campaign for cecession, just what how prices of all commodities, food and housing will tumble, and how jittery Washington will get. They will go on their knees to keep the South from seceding, and you can make your own terms, and let them be stiff ones. They will give you anything you want, just to keep you from that, and setting an example to the other states to bolt, [illegible] You will have them just where you want them. Try it and see.

Battle Launched to Take South from Truman

New Orleans, La.

(The Associated Press)

Birmingham, July 17.—Rebel Southern Democrats today named two Dixie governors to lead a fight to take the Solid South from Mr. Truman in November over racial issues.

Sun.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina was selected for president and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi for vice-president.

Earlier they had announced the Southern ticket would make the campaign in Missouri and 14 other states, including all of the Deep South, usually heavily Democratic.

The resolution nominating the two men also called another meeting of Southern revolters here October 1. Unlike today's session, the October meeting would be limited to delegates from each state numbering the same as their presidential electors.

7500 at Sessions

Today's sessions were noisy. Police Chief Floyd Eddins estimated the afternoon crowd at 7500, considerably more than capacity of the auditorium here. Eddins said several thousand more were outside, listening to the meeting over loudspeakers.

The morning attendance was estimated at 6000.

The meeting adjourned, subject to recall by the chairman, at 6:05 CST.

In seconding the two nominations, Sen. Eastland, D., Miss., made the forecast that "the race next November is between Gov. Thurmond and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey."

"Truman will not get a single electoral vote," he shouted.

Nomination of both candidates was by acclamation.

Tempers Flare

Tempers in the jampacked city auditorium flared when a self-styled presidential candidate, Herbert C. Holdridge of Washington, D. C., objected to the nominations of Thurmond and Wright. Holdridge, whose campaign literature described him as a "peace general candidate," shouted his protests and was quickly surrounded by a mob of shouting, excited delegates. He was not harmed, however, and left under police guard.

Thurmond and Wright were escorted to the platform at 5:50 p. m. (CST). Besides the usual state flags and banners, one of the demonstrators carried a framed picture of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

The band played "Dixie" as the nominees came in. In addition to the banners of the Southern states, one banner said simply, "Others." Convention Chairman Walter Sillers presented Gov. Wright first. He said he was introducing "the next vice-president of the United States."

'Great Opportunity'

Wright said "This is the South's great opportunity, it is a chance to prove to the nation that we are the Democratic party."

"We have saved the Democratic party in the past," he said, "and we will save it in the future. But we will not save it for those who have crashed into the party, seized control and led it astray."

Sun.

"These people thought we were bluffing," he added. "They thought they could bluff us. Well, we have called their bluff."

He praised Gov. Thurmond as the "type of man you will be glad to cast your votes for." He urged Southern states to pledge all their electors for the states' rights candidate

7-18-48

Not a Bolt Ticket

The Mississippi governor said repeatedly the Southern ticket "is not a bolt ticket." He contended it is the regular ticket of the Southern Democratic parties in the various states, and promised to "give you the best I have."

Sillers then introduced Thurmond as a hero of World War II. know there are some opposed to such actions as these here."

The pickets were booed and heckled by bystanders. They left after 15 minutes.

Former Governor Frank M. Dixon's keynote speech brought a parade of state flags and screaming delegates.

Dixon said the reason for today's meeting was apparent to "all of us who heard the jeers when Alabama and Mississippi walked out at Philadelphia . . . jeers from sections where not a single elective officer, not even a justice of the peace, is a Democrat."

The former governor termed the civil rights program "a shame and a fraud." He said it was a cheap political appeal for Negro votes in Northern industrial centers.

The end of segregation, Dixon said, "would mean Negroes teaching our children, from grammar school through college. The result of that program here would be just what it has been in the slum areas of the North, in which such a condition prevails."

Sillers Elected Chairman

Sillers, speaker of the Mississippi House of Representatives, was elected permanent chairman of the meeting. Ralph Lee, Houston, Tex., was named secretary.

Sillers said "we are here to show that constitutional government is not dead, despite what happened at Philadelphia."

The meeting was termed "a grass roots" movement by Dixon. Although state banners were posted, any person who desired might register as a delegate. Included in the list of Deep South political figures here were Governor Wright, Governor Thurmond, Governor Laney; Gessner T. McCorvey, Alabama state Democratic chairman; James S. Peters, chairman of the Georgia delegation at Philadelphia; Frank Upchurch, St. Augustine, Fla.; former Governor Sam Jones, Louisiana; former Governor William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, Oklahoma; Senators Eastland and Stennis, Mississippi; former Governor Hugh White of Mississippi, and many others.

Ruby Mercer, pretty opera singer from New York, brought on the first big demonstration when she sang "Dixie" at the opening of the meeting. Here for the outdoor opera season next week, she told reporters she was a registered Republican in her home state.

Split Will Hurt South, Says Hays

(The Associated Press)

Washington, July 17. — Any new party formed by Southern Democrats, Representative Hays, Democrat, Arkansas, said today, would hurt not only the South but the country's political system as well.

Hays told a reporter that he hopes that "cool heads will counsel allegiance to the two-party system, that nothing will be done to establish a parallel in America to the tragic misfortunes of Italy and France where radical and revolutionary groups seized power as a result of multiplication of political parties."

The Arkansas representative also said he thought it would be well to know who is financing the Birmingham meeting of rebel Southern Democrats.

Hays said he will support the Democratic nominees in the coming election.

However, he said, "if one admires Mr. Dewey more than President Truman, and believes that Mr. Dewey's policies will serve the nation and our state better than those of Mr. Truman, it is certainly his privilege to vote for Mr. Dewey's electors."

Sun.

Hays warned that "any hasty conclusions that the Democratic party is now disintegrating should be discarded."

"The Democratic party is still the only national party, and while we of the Southern states have a just grievance over the handling of the platform and the choice of a candidate, we must admit that honest efforts were made to compromise the differences and to avoid offending Southern delegates to the convention," he said.

Hays said since Truman announced an emergency session of Congress in accepting the Democratic presidential nomination "its political character is obvious."

"It was my judgment that the Republican leadership adjourned the Congress too soon. However, the convening of Congress under the circumstances indicates that the session can be little more than a political battle and might conceivably give the rest of the world a false impression."

Louisiana Group at Convention

(The Associated Press)

Birmingham, Ala., July 17.—Here are the names given by persons registering today at the states' rights convention:

Louisiana — Charlie Spaulding, David W. Ebeling, Mrs. Dave Ebeling, Ronald L. Ebeling, Edwin J. Rausch, W. T. Pou, John Barr, James T. Messer, all of New Orleans; W. Scott Wilkinson. D. D. Bazes, Frank J. Looney, Shreveport; Mrs. Patrick H. Jones, Monroe, Louis A. Coleman, Bogalusa; George H. Williams, George P. Harrell, West Monroe; A. W. Winstead, Natchitoches.

'Millions With Us'

"They call this a Southern fight," Thurmond added, "there are millions of Americans who are with us. We are Democrats. We voted as Democrats at Philadelphia, as real Democrats. There we were repudiated and held up to scorn. They said at Philadelphia 'Where can you go now?' When they said that, they forgot a document they have forgotten so often before. They forgot the constitution of the United States.

"Now we are going back to the real bosses of the Democratic party. We are going back to the people of the United States. In November, we shall vote together."

Turning to the civil rights program, he said "under this misleading banner, they seek to destroy the very foundations of local self government."

La

"Mr. Truman knows the so-called civil rights program is unconstitutional," he declared. "I am going to stand for an end to rule by the minority blocs in the United States."

The candidate then referred to this "damnable fair employment law."

Sun.

"If the FEPC law is ever put on the books by the Congress," he shouted, "state lines will practically be wiped out."

Turning to the segregation issue, he said Negroes in the South have made great and rapid progress in the South and will continue to do so.

"But I want to tell you," he said, "there are not enough laws on the books of the nation, nor can there be enough laws, to break down segregation in the South.

As the meeting proceeded, both the principal speakers and the resolutions committee's "declaration of principles" stressed resentment in this section over racial measures advocated by the president.

These proposals were endorsed by the Democratic convention earlier this week at Philadelphia. Half of the Alabama and all Mississippi delegates walked out in protest.

The statement of principles, similar to the usual party platform, devoted major attention to civil rights.

"We stand for segregation of the races and the racial integrity of each race," the committee reported. It also approved "the constitutional right to choose one's associates; to accept private employment without government interference, and to earn one's living in any lawful way."

HOUSTON, Tex.—Vigorous activity has begun in the South on behalf of the "States' Rights" ticket, headed by Governor J. Strom Thurmond of So. Carolina for President and Governor Fielding H. Wright of Mississippi for Vice-President. Thurmond has already announced major speeches in Greenville, S. C., and in Houston, Texas, within the next two weeks. Before the Democratic primaries just concluded in Texas (July 24), "states' righters" distributed inflammatory cards describing the terrible things that would happen if the civil rights legislation were to pass.

A half-page advertisement by the fascist multi-millionaire Geo. W. Armstrong of Fort Worth in the Houston Post denounced the Republican and Democratic platforms as being "internationalist" and for the "socialistic United Nations." "Both platforms," declared Armstrong, "are brazen and shameless appeals for Jew and Negro votes."

"THESE FEW EVENTS out of the thousands daily occurring throughout the South and in Texas expose the hypocrisy of those who are yelping that the states will take care of civil rights, and the equal hypocrisy of the "talk-but-do-nothing" Republican and Democratic Conventions.

We demand that you order an immediate investigation of the beating of John Roe, the arrest of the plantation owner, and afford protection to Roe's wife and child still on the Navasota farm. We demand that you create a special committee, to include representatives of labor and the Negro people, with the aim of investigating and exposing any and all violence against the Negro people and minorities in Texas, and denial of their civil rights. We demand that you instruct the State Department of Public Safety to arrest and prosecute local police guilty of beating prisoners under arrest."

SUCH ARE THE DEVELOPMENTS touched off by the convention in Birmingham, Alabama, where the descendants of the slaveholders raised again the flag of the Confederacy. But they were also raising in effect the slogan of the slavocracy: "Some are born with saddles on their backs, and others booted and spurred to ride them!" However, we must not mistake these descendants of the slaveholders; they are now the dutiful pensioners of Wall Street, the southern lackeys and lickspittles of the power trusts, the textile barons, the oil and chemical corporate monsters, the octupus banks that are draining away the blood and the wealth of the South.

New York N.Y.

These "states righters" are exactly the traitors who spare no effort to offer up the people and resources of their states upon the altar of Wall Street's greed.

★

IN RAISING THE BANNERS of the Confederacy, these "rebels" in Birmingham were no more calling for a "war between the states" than were their ancestors. This is "civil war," they are declaring, war upon the peoples of the South, and especially against the working class, the poor farmers and the Negro people.

Sun.

For the nightmare that haunts their dreams is not Truman on a white charger bearing a lance and banner, "Civil Rights." Their nightmare is millions of black and white calloused hands, clasped tight in unity!

Perhaps this new party of southern Copperheads will choose for its emblem the rope and faggot, thereby making clear its program for solving the Negro people's demands, the problem of labor unions and other such matters. It is not only natural, but also symbolic, that South Carolina and Mississippi should provide their chief executives for Presidential standard-bearers. In the roll of states, is not Mississippi 48th in the per capita income of its people, with South Carolina a close 47th? Does not Mississippi lead all the rest in the greatest number of lynchings between 1882 and 1946?

★

NOW THAT PRESIDENT TRUMAN, with his incantations over "civil rights," has raised this evil storm, what are he and his devoted adherents doing about it? Nothing—or, to be more exact, they have denied that they will do anything, that they mean to do anything. For example, Rep. Sam Rayburn, administration stalwart, fervently and vigorously denied during his primary race in Texas that he favored civil rights legislation.

Such denials, or a deathly silence, constitute the "reply" of the leading Truman forces in the South to the vicious rantings and increasing violence of the "rebels."

Sun.

However, to wait for the administration, or to tell the administration and then wait, would be stupid and dangerous. The trade unions of the South, the Negro masses, the third party forces, must unite their strength to rebuff and crush the "blitz" of the Thurmonds and the Wrights. Labor cannot do this so long as it trails sadly at the heels of the southern Democratic Party. It is always choosing "a lesser evil" and getting evil results.

THERE HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED a "division of labor" within the Democratic Party, especially suited to the needs of winning the elections and taking care also of "special situations" in the South. The Truman wing is to try to slip on the mantle of President Roosevelt, and, in this guise, to win labor, the Negro people, the progressive voters; the Thurmond-Wright wing is to work toward smashing, in brutal and violent fashion, the alliance of the southern white workers and farmers and the Negro people which always contains the dread potential of becoming an independent force, sweeping to power through the third party movement.

Yet, today, the desires and demands of the southern people are beginning to flood over the levees. The false, dead-end channels of Truman or Dewey will not serve. And, despite the Thurmonds and Wrights, it's too late for dams or dynamite.

Republicans and Democrats Accused Of Starting Police-State Tactics

Sun. 7-18-48

A "Declaration of Principles" reported by the resolutions committee of the States'-rights meeting in Birmingham yesterday follows:

We affirm that a political party is an instrumentality for effectuating the principles upon which the party is founded: that a platform of principles is a solemn covenant with the people and with the members of the party; that no leader of the party, in temporary power, has the right or privliege to proceed contrary to the fundamental principles of the party, or the letter or spirit of the Constitution of the United States; that to act contrary to these principles is a breach of faith, a usurpation of power, and a forfeiture of the party name and party leadership.

We believe that the protection of the American people against the onward march of totalitarian government requires a faithful observance of Article X of the American Bill of Rights which provides that: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

Recall First Platform.

We direct attention to the fact that the first platform of the Democratic Party, adopted in 1840, resolved that: "Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution." Such pronouncement is the cornerstone of the Democratic Party.

A long train of abuses and usurpations of power by unfaithful leaders who are alien to the Democratic Parties of the States here represented has become intolerable to those who believe in the preservation of constitutional government and individual liberty in America.

List 'Encroachments.'

The executive department of the Government is promoting the gradual but certain growth of a totalitarian state by domination and control of a politically minded Supreme Court. As examples of the threat to our form of government the executive department, with the aid of the Supreme Court, has asserted national dominion and control of submerged oil-bearing lands in California; schools in Oklahoma and Missouri, primary elections in Texas, South Carolina, and Louisiana; restrictive covenants in New York and the District of Columbia, and other jurisdictions, as well as religious instruction in Illinois. By asserting paramount federal rights in these instances, a totalitarian concept has been promulgated which threatens the integrity of the States and the basic rights of their citizens.

We have repeatedly remonstrated with the leaders of the national organization of our party, but our petitions, entreaties, and warnings have been treated with contempt. The latest response to our entreaties was a Democratic convention in Philadelphia rigged to embarrass and humiliate the South. This alleged Democratic assembly called for a civil-rights law that would eliminate segregation of every kind from all American life, prohibit all forms of discrimination in private employment, in public and private instruction and administration and treatment of students; in the operation of public and private health facilities; in all transportation, and require equal access to all places of public accommodation for persons of all races, colors, creeds, and national origin.

Point Out Hypocrisy.

This infamous and iniquitous program calls for the reorganization of the civil-rights section of the Department of Justice with a substantial increase in a bureaucratic staff to be devoted exclusively to the enforcement of the civil-rights program; the establishment within the F.B.I. of a special unit of investigators and a police state in a totalitarian, centralized, bureaucratic Government.

This convention hypocritically denounced totalitarianism abroad, but unblushingly proposed and approved it at home. This convention would strengthen the grip of a police state upon a liberty-loving people by the imposition of penalties upon local public officers who failed or refused to act in accordance with its ideas in suppressing mob violence.

Resent Island Plank.

We point out that if a foreign power undertook to force upon the people of the United States the measures advocated by the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, with respect to civil rights, it would mean war and the entire nation would resist such effort.

The convention that insulted the South in the party platform advocated giving the Virgin Islands and other dependencies of the United States "the maximum degree of local self-government."

When an effort was made to amend this part of the platform so as to make it read that the party favored giving the Virgin Islands and the several States the maximum degree of local self-government, the amendment adding the words "these several States" was stricken out and the sovereign States were denied the rights that the party favors giving the Virgin Islands.

Has Supported Party.

Sun. 7-18

We point out that the South, with clocklike regularity, has furnished the Democratic Party approximately 50 per cent of the votes necessary to nominate a President every four years for nearly a century. In 1920 the only States in the Union that went Democratic were the 11 Southern states. Notwithstanding this rugged loyalty to the party, the masters of political intrigue now allow Republican states in which there is scarcely a Democratic officeholder to dominate and control the party and fashion its policies.

As Democrats who are irrevocably committed to democracy as defined and expounded by Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, and Woodrow Wilson, and who believe that all necessary steps must be taken for its preservation, we declare to the people of the United States as follows:

1. We believe that the Constitution of the United States is the greatest charter of human liberty ever conceived by the mind of man.

2. We oppose all efforts to invade or destroy the rights vouchsafed by it to every citizen of this republic.

3. We stand for social and economic justice, which we believe, can be vouchsafed to all citizens only by a strict adherence to our Constitution and the avoidance of any invasion or destruction of the constitutional rights of the States and individuals. We oppose the totalitarian, centralized, bureaucratic Government and the police state called for by the platforms adopted by the Democratic and Republican conventions.

'Stand for Segregation.'

4. We stand for the segregation of the races and the racial integrity of each race; the constitutional right to choose one's associates; to accept private employment without governmental interference, and to earn one's living in any lawful way. We oppose the elimination of segregation, employment by federal bureaucrats called for by the misnamed civil-rights program. We favor home rule, local self-government, and a minimum interference with individual rights.

5. We oppose and condemn the action of the Democratic convention in sponsoring a civil-rights program calling for the elimination of segregation, social equality by federal fiat, regulation of private employment practices, voting, and local law enforcement.

6. We affirm that the effective enforcement of such a program would be utterly destructive of the social, economic, and political life of the Southern people, and of other localities in which there may be differences in race, creed, or national origin in appreciable numbers.

Louisville K.

Want Nominees Defeated.

7. We stand for the checks and balances provided by the three departments of our Government. We oppose the usurpation of legislative functions by the executive and judicial departments. We unreservedly condemn the effort to establish nation-wide a police state in this republic that would destroy the last vestige of liberty enjoyed by a citizen.

8. We demand that there be returned to the peaple, to whom of right they belong, those powers needed for the preservation of human rights and the discharge our responsibility as Democrats for human welfare. We oppose a denial of those rights by political parties, a barter or sale of those rights by a political convention, as well as any invasion or violation of those rights by the Federal Government.

We call upon all Democrats and upon all other loyal Americans who are opposed to totalitarianism at home and abroad to unite with us in ignominiously defeating Harry S. Truman and Thomas E. Dewey, and every other candidate for public office who would establish a police state in the United States of America.

SENATOR RICHARD RUSSELL of Georgia, who received 263 rebellious Southern votes for the Democratic presidential nomination in Philadelphia, said yesterday he would not attend or permit his name to used at the States Rights meeting in Birmingham, Ala.

Birmingham, Ala., July 15 (AP).—A troubled bnad of Southern Democrats, rallying to the cause of States' rights, headed for Birmingham today to name their own presidential candidate.

As they departed Philadelphia and the national party convention, wherein they were twice defeated, the call went out to all Southerners to meet in convention at Birmingham Saturday.

The summons was issued by Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi and former Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama to all those opposed to the civil rights prgram and the renomination of President Truman.

But whether these leaders would find the South united behind them was problematical.

Scheduled Arrivals

The Mississippi delegation was scheduled to arrive in Birmingham at 8:10 p. m. (CST) Friday night, some of the Alabama delegates from the national convention at 10:45 a. m.

Florida said it would bring seven members, and Gov. Ben Laney fo Arkansas said he probably" would attend. Repreesntatives of Texas and South Carolina also are expected.

Louisiana and Georgia already have said their delegates would not attend. Some of the other Southern States, who also rallied behind Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.) forthe presidential nomination at Philadelphia, have not yet stood up to be counted.

Russell, who garnered 263 votes in convention for President, has declined use of his name as the South's candidate at Birmingham.

And the senior Senator from Georgia, Walter George, has said he doesn't see what the Birmingham convention can hope to accomplish.

Trouble for South Seen

As a by-product of the South's convention fight and opposition to the civil-rights proposals—a fair employment practices act, an antilynching, antisegregation and antipoll tax laws—Russell foresees trouble for the South.

He predicted at his Winder, Ga. home the South would be kicked around considerably in the special session of Congress called by President Truman by both Democrats and Republicans bent on enacting a civil-rights program.

Russell also declared he did not believe the Birmingham convention the best thing for the party at this time.

Both Russell and Editor Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution said they believed the cleavage in the Democratic ranks would result in a major realignment of parties in this country.

MRS. EDR WANTS COMPLETE BREAK

Favors Leaving Dixiecrats Outside of Party

Tues 11-9-48

(The Associated Press)

New York, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt wants the Southern States' Righters kept out of the Democratic party from now on.

She also told a radio audience today "it would be much more logical if our political parties" were divided into liberals and conservatives.

"The Democratic party has seemed to me to be predominantly the party of liberalism," she said, "although sometimes . . . it embraced Southerners who number among their ranks some of the most reactionary men in public life.

"Similarly, the Republican party is traditionally the party of conservatism,' although it embraces some very fine liberals,' she said, adding:

"Now for the first time in history, the Democrats have won an election without the Solid South. Some of the more reactionary Southerners have chosen to break with the Democratic party, and I think it would be a good idea to make the break final. Possibly the Southern Conservatives would be welcomed into the Republican party with whom they have voted so often in recent years."

Mrs. Roosevelt made her comments in the first of a series of American Broadcasting Company programs entitled "Eleanor and Anna Roosevelt." The program features Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter, Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, in a "combination of forum and commentary."

Mrs. Roosevelt spoke from Paris where she is attending the United Nations sessions.

Party Calls For Dixiecrat Resignations

Bolters Asked to Quit Democratic Committee; First One Is Thurmond

Wash. D.C.

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Democratic National Headquarters yesterday called for the resignation of all Dixiecrat members of the Democratic National Committee.

Resuming its drive to clear out of the party organization supporters of the Thurmond-Wright ticket, the committee began with the Dixiecrat nominee himself—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.

It next opened fire at Col. Marion Rushton, Alabama State campaign manager of the Dixiecrats, and "any and all national committeemen and national committeewomen who are supporting candidates other than President Truman and Senator Barkley."

The statement was issued by William J. Primm, jr., executive assistant to Democratic Chairman J. Howard McGrath.

Recognition Offered

Acting for Chairman McGrath, Primm, himself an Alabaman, opened the Dixiecrat purge offensive Thursday by offering party recognition to "loyal" South Carolina Democrats who refused to vote for eight States' rights electors.

Sat 9-4-48

"In all honesty, Governor Thurmond, the presidential nominee of the States' Rights Party, should resign his position as Democratic national committeeman from South Carolina immediately," Primm said.

"I understand he recently tendered his resignation to the State committee, but it was not accepted."

Primm said there had been press reports of Colonel Rushton's resignation as national committeeman, but up to now the committee had received no official notification.

Would Commend Him

"Colonel Rushton is the State campaign manager in Alabama for the Dixiecrats and if he has resigned we commend him for his action, as we consider he has left the Democratic Party," Primm added.

Sat 9-4-48

Rushton later told Associated Press in Montgomery that he could not resign from the national committee "on my own motion.' He said he suggested to the State Democratic executive committee that it would no longer desire representation on the national committee, but it took no action. Later he said he advised Chairman McGrath of his offer to resign.

Rushton said Primm was "misinformed" about his being Alabama's campaign manager for the Dixiecrats.

The Democratic "war to the finish" with the Dixiecrats reached white heat as President Truman arranged to skirt Southern border territory en route West in mid-September, probably speaking in the South later on.

May Speak in Richmond

After a conference with the President, Gov. Roy J. Turner of Oklahoma, chairman of the National Truman-Barkley Club, told reporters Mr. Truman would speak in a number of Oklahoma cities en route West.

The White House also considered an invitation from a group of Young Democrats in Virginia for Mr. Truman to speak in Richmond before the election.

Another White House caller, Maury Maverick, San Antonio lawyer and former New Dealer told reporters Mr. Truman "will carry Texas, there's no doubt about that."

Sat 9-4-48

White House release of Mr. Truman's complete itinerary for his for his five-speech swing into Michigan Monday, meanwhile, booked a rear platform talk in Toledo Ohio, en route back. He will reach Toledo at 10:27 p. m., EST Monday and stay there 30 minutes.

On the GOP campaign front. Republicans continued to bang away at Mr. Truman on the Communist issue. GOP Chairman Hugh D. Scott, jr., demanded that the President say whether he accepted Communist Party indorsement in his 1944 vice presidential race.

Dennis Is Quoted

Scott quoted Eugene Dennis, Communist Party secretary, as saying in the Daily Worker on August 12, 1944, that Communists should refrain from indorsing candidates "unless this is done with full agreement with the given candidate and with our collaborators."

"If Mr. Truman did in fact accept or aprove such official indorsement of the Communists in the 1944 campaign," said Scott, "he owes it to the American people today to set the record straight. If there was a working agreement between Mr. Truman and the Communists in 1944, when was that agreement terminated?"

In reply to Scott, the Democratic National Committee quoted the late President Roosevelt as repudiating the support of Communists, Fascists or those committed to any other foreign ideology in a radio speech on October 5, 1944.

On the labor front, President A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, told reporters in Rochester the Wallace third-party campaign had "flattened out." Whitney predicted Mr. Truman would be elected.

As Democratic national headquarters slammed away at the Dixiecrats for the second straight day, so-called "loyal" Democrats arranged to meet Wednesday in Columbia, S. C., to choose a slate of Truman-Barkley electors.

Convention Due Later

A convention will be called later to formally nominate the slate and choose "regular" national committee members, it was learned.

Democratic national headquarters touched off the battle Thursday by promising this group party recognition over the Dixiecrat-controlled State executive committee, which named Thurmond-Wright electors.

Sat 9-4-48

Primm meanwhile denied that McGrath had said Senators and Representatives aligned with the Dixiecrat movement would lose their party status. He said the party could not oust "duly elected members of the House and Senate."

Dixiecrats Press To Get Out Vote As Alabama GOP Assails Movement

The News

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

States' Right Democrats today pressed their get-out-the-vote campaign, while Alabama Republican leaders continued to assail the Dixiecrat movement for Thurmond and Wright.

Horace Wilkinson, Dixiecrat spearhead, addressing a get-out-the-vote rally last night at Redmont Hotel, told precinct organizers:

"It doesn't matter whether or not we elect Thurmond and Wright in November, if we waken the public to the facts behind this fight."

Fri 10-22-48

Speaking at the same hour last night to a Republican courthouse rally at Ashville, in adjoining St. Clair County, State GOP Chairman Claude Vardaman fired new verbal blasts at the "Dixiecrat splinter party."

"With a proven administrator like the Republican Party offers the people, why should any Southerner follow a splinter party on a snipe hunt up a blind alley?" Vardaman asked.

B'ham, Ala.

WILKINSON TOLD the beat campaigners for Thurmond and Wright that if the Republicans win the Nov. 2 election, the "civil rights" issue will be shelved for the first few months of the Dewey administration.

"Then tremendous pressure will be exerted to force this villainous program on the South," he said.

Wilkinson proposed that aid of Southern housewives be sought in the affairs of the government with competency and efficiency, after the people elect them," the GOP chairman said. "As governor of New York, Dewey has proven that he can administer wisely and well. He is both seasoned and vigorous and he surrounds himself with men of outstanding ability—something poor old complaining Truman has never been able to do."

VARDAMAN, SLASHING away at the Dixiecrats, asked his Ashville audience a series of questions, one of which was, "Just what is the platform of the Dixiecrats?"

"Other than one plan, which is based on prejudice and hate, no one knows where they stand," the Republican chairman asserted.

"Where do the Dixiecrats stand regarding communism? Where do they stand on aid to farmers? What is their position regarding the United Nations?

Where do they stand on high prices and inflation? How do they propose to deal with Russia in the difficult years ahead? Where do they stand regarding aid to Western Europe? What is their position regarding federal aid to the individual states for highway construction?

Fri 10-22-48

"Since they have cut loose from the National Democratic Party, who do they expect to intercede for them in the next national administration, regardless of whether Dewey or Truman wins?"

* * *

SIDNEY W. SMYER, Jefferson County States' Rights Executive Committee chieftain, who presided over the rally at the Redmont, outlined the ideals behind the Thurmond-Wright movement.

"And when we vote for Thurmond and Wright, we are not bolting the Democratic Party," Smyer declared.

Smyer said the Dixiecrat movement is out just to defeat President Truman, but to set up a permanent national organization.

He called on precinct leaders to contact all persons in their communities and explain the program.

The executive committeeman asked that people of Jefferson vote under the rooster, "but we are appealing to the people of this county to go to the polls and vote Nov. 2, regardless of whether they vote with us for Thurmond and Wright. We want to get out a big vote."

* * *

VARDAMAN PRAISED Dewey and Warren and told the St. Clair rally that "the Republican ticket represents the supreme hope of our country."

"They are men who can direct broadening the campaign against "this anti-South program.""

He suggested they be asked to write Northern manufacturers to threaten a boycott of their products unless pressure was brought to bear on Northern congressmen hostile to the South.

Thurmond Invited Negro As Guest

The News

BY DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Believe it or not, but Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, whose Dixiecrat Party broke away from the Democrats over the Negro issue, once invited a Negro to be his house guest at the executive mansion in Columbia, S. C.

B'ham, Ala.

The incident came near going down as one of the worst social blunders in the history of the segregated South. Thurmond not only extended the hand of Southern hospitality to Gov. William H. Hastie of the Virgin Islands, but invited him to bring his family along.

Meanwhile, Thurmond's own States' Rights Party has bitterly criticized President Truman for staying as the official guest of the Negro governor during the presidential visit to the Virgin Islands last February.

Ironically Thurmond's invitation to Gov. Hastie was written on official stationery, bearing the great seal of South Carolina. Thurmond wrote:

"Dear Gov. Hastie: It was indeed a disappointment to me that you were unable to attend the Governors' Conference. . . .

"It is my earnest hope that, during my term of office, you and your family will honor South Carolina with a visit to Columbia and be our guests at the mansion."

The Negro governor was most tactful. Writing on his own official stationery from Charlotte Amalie, V. I., he said: "Dear Gov. Thurmond: I was happy to receive your gracious letter. . . . You may be sure that I share your disappointment that we did not have an opportunity to meet and discuss matters of common interest. . . .

"Thank you for your gracious invitation to me and my family to make a visit to South Carolina as your guests. Because it is relatively early in my administration and because we have quite young children in the family, it has not been possible for us to travel extensively.

"We do, however, appreciate your invitation and express the hope that you and your family may be able to visit the Virgin Islands and be our guests at Government House."

Since writing the letter, Gov. Hastie has taken official leave from the Virgin Islands to come to New York to campaign for President Truman. But the discreet governor does not plan to visit South Carolina.

Talks to Overseas Press Club in Only Northern Visit; Explains His Principles

Thur. 10-7-48

By John Chabot Smith

Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Dixiecrat candidate for president, made his only campaign speech north of the Mason-Dixon line here yesterday.

He said "all Americans" who want to protect their individual rights must join his States' Rights party in opposition to President Truman's "unconstitutional" civil-rights program.

New York, N.Y.

Governor Thurmond chose for his unique northern appearance an audience of 125 ex-foreign correspondents and friends at a luncheon of the Overseas Press Club in the Hotel Roosevelt. Five of his own friends who came with him did most of the applauding, but there was some applause and some sympathetic questioning from other parts of the room.

The Dixiecrat hastened to assure his audience that his motives in coming to New York were entirely different from those which took Henry Wallace, Progressive party candidate, on his egg-and-boo tour of the South. "I certainly did not approve any action which impaired Mr. Wallace's right of free speech and peaceful assemblage," said Mr. Thurmond, whose state was omitted from Mr. Wallace's itinerary.

Based on "Principles"

Mr. Thurmond said he came to New York to try and bring about a better understanding of the Dixiecrats' fight for state sovereignty and constitutional government in the United States.

"I appreciate the fact that I am addressing men and women of keen analytical minds, and I firmly believe if we can convince you our cause is right you will be intellectually honest enough to admit it," he said. "New York to some may be a city extremely foreign to the American way of life. I do not feel that way about it. . . . Many of your outstanding citizens have been through the years, and are now, Southerners."

Mr. Thurmond said his platform was based not on prejudice or racial antagonism, but on eternal principles. Without naming these principles, he said the Federal government had no right under the Constitution to pass the proposed anti-poll tax, anti-lynching, anti-segregation, and Fair Employment Practices bills, or to establish the proposed Civil Rights Division in the Department of Justice to enforce them. The latter, he said, would be "a long step toward a police state in America."

"Racial Integrity"

Mr. Thurmond said that while race prejudice was not the basis of his campaign, he did believe in "racial integrity" as opposed to "race integration." Asked to explain the difference between his theory of "racial integrity" and Hitler's theory of "racial purity," he answered:

"When I talk about racial integrity and purity I mean I believe in maintaining the purity of the white race and the purity of the Negro race. . . . I do not believe their blood should be mixed so as to form some kind of yellow race."

He was twice asked if he had ever disavowed the support of the Ku-Klux Klan. The first time he said he disavowed the support of all mobs and gangs. The second time he said there wasn't any Klan in South Carolina, so the question did not arise. Then he said that mob violence and Klan activity in the South were caused by race agitators from the North.

He also said that lynching was only a kind of murder like gang murders in New York. If New York does not want Federal legislation to stop gang murders, the South does not want Federal anti-lynch laws, he said. He compared the F. E. P. C. bill to prohibition, saying that South Carolina liked to be a dry state and New York liked to have a state F. E. P. C. law, but a Federal F. E. P. C. law would be as offensive as Federal prohibition was, besides being unconstitutional, totalitarian, and an invitation to Communist infiltration.

Mr. Thurmond predicted that he would get more than 100 electoral votes, and said this might result in deadlocking the Electoral College and throwing the Presidential election into the House of Representatives. There each state will have only one vote, and for the first time in history small states will enjoy the importance they deserve in Presidential elections, he said.

He named fourteen states—all traditionally Democratic Southern states—as likely to give him their electoral votes. To deadlock the Electoral College with his 100 votes he would have to take votes away from the Republican candidate. Regardless of Mr. Thurmond's popularity, Governor Thomas E. Dewey needs only 266 electoral votes to win, out of the total of 531.

The Radicals Are Trying Again

This is a quiz program—

The contestants will be asked to identify three men and explain what each is remembered for the accomplishments of each. No refrigerators will be given away and no candy bars are in the offing.

The three men are: Barnwell Rhett, William Yancey and Edward Ruffin.

There is not a person now living in America whose life has not been affected in some degree by these three men and their associates.

The philosophy and political action for which they fought—and which they managed to impose upon a people—has made inevitable much of our military, social and economic history.

Thousands of men died because of them and their philosophy. Thousands of widows and orphans resulted from their political course.

Property in vast amounts was destroyed. Fortunes were ruined. Sorrow and travail have followed their names to this day.

Few Americans indeed recognize the names and identify the men with history. There are not many Southerners, eating the bread of frustration and fear, who associate them with the causes of much that is maladjusted in the South today.

Fanatics

Yet they are the men who "made" the Civil War—the War Between the States. Neither Jefferson Davis nor Robert E. Lee nor Alexander Stephens, nor any of the others who were to fight in that great war, committed the States to war. Robert E. Lee denied the right of secession, calling it merely the right of revolution, and wished to have none of it. Alexander Stephens opposed that war strongly, and with great cost. Jefferson Davis argued against it. So did most of the Southern statesmen of that day. Not all—but most of them—wanted to avoid it.

But, South Carolina's Barnwell Rhett and William Yancey, and Virginia's Edward Ruffin (he traveled to South Carolina to fire the first shot at Sumpter), were the leaders of the Di[illegible] forces of that time which demanded secession and war, and who would have nothing else.

History is very plain about it.

The War Between the States was made by the fire-eating, no-compromise, States' Rights radicals. They had aroused the people; stirred them; given them a distorted picture.

Once they got what they wanted—war—they were finished. They could supply no leadership, no assistance, nothing that would contribute to victory. By their wild fanaticism they had insisted on war, if they could not have their way.

They got it.

Leaders

Then the conservatives had to take over. The men who didn't want the war had to fight it. They had to do the dying, endure the rains, the snows, the sorrows of battle, the fatigue of marching, riding, and of hunger.

Old Ed Ruffin, who had pulled the lanyard sending the first shell at Sumpter, his anger-twisted face lit by the flares, killed himself when it was done, being unwilling to face, as other and braver persons did, the whirlwind from the wind he and his kind had sowed.

The history books rarely teach this truth. Only the better historians so inform their classes. But it is a bitter and major fact. We tend to think too much of the war—and of the reconstruction cruelties and humiliations deliberately and radically pressed upon the brow of a defeated people—as growing out of the war. In a very real sense they did not. It was only when the radicals of the North, as radical in their way as Rhett, Yancey and Ruffin had been in theirs, got into power that they made of the South an occupied country under the heel of thieves, scoundrels and worse.

Repeat?

All that has been said about that period is true. It was a period of inhuman and unjust practices. But, while it explains the present, it does not justify or direct the present or future.

Fri 10-22-48

Today the radicals are trying again.

The South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi radicals are willing to destroy the two-party system if they cannot have their way. They are insistent on splitting the political system into many parties. They are playing into the hands of the scheming Communists who backed the Wallace Party for the same identical purpose—smashing this country's backbone—its two-party system.

They will be remembered, with their "party," in the footnotes of history.

The rest of us will pick up the check. And we haven't yet paid out the one Rhett, Yancey and Ruffin left us.

The Dixiecrats Won't Last

Mon 10-25-48

Atlanta Ga.

There are a lot of people going to vote the Dixiecrat ticket in November. Their votes are going to be wasted, however. No third party has ever lasted long in this country. There have been third parties over the years but they soon passed away. There was the Bull Moose Party, the Populist, and others which sprung up for various reasons, mainly that a lot of people did not like the way their parties were being conducted. These parties flourished for a short time but soon died and accomplished very little.

This is a two-party country and will continue so as long as we remain strong. A multiplicity of parties weakens the structure of government.

THERE has been for many years only one strong party in Georgia and that is the Democratic Party. This party has been divided into two factions for a long time. There is room in Georgia for another strong party and some have been urging that the Repuublican Party be built up in the State. It is argued that this would give better Government to have two strong parties. However, the Times believes the Democratic Party will continue to be the strong party. The Populists were at one time quite strong in Georgia but the party soon disintegrated.

Many Democrats are not pleased with the leadership of the National Democratic Party and are going to vote the Dixiecrat ticket. We think that nothing can be accomplished by doing this. It would only weaken the influence of our Democratic senators. The Dixiecrats are not going to get anywhere and you lose your vote when you cast a ballot for them. Those who want to reprove Mr. Truman should refrain from going to the polls or vote the Republican ticket, but we do not advocate the latter

The place to fight your battle with the party leaders is within the party. Remember the history of third parties.

Thurmond Hits At Bloc Votes

LYNCHBURG, Va.—(AP)—The American people will not tolerate "an invasion of the Constitution by politicians who seek to satisfy minority factions," States Rights Presidential Nominee J. Strom Thurmond said last night.

President Truman, Gov. Dewey, and Henry Wallace all have offered to violate the Constitution in "a cheap bid for the bloc votes of a racial minority," Thurmond told a meeting of States Rights Party members here.

They have done so, he said, because the "minority bloc . . . claims to be able to swing the election in doubtful States," although it "cares nothing for the preservation of the democratic way of life."

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 3.—(UP)—John U. Barr, New Orleans attorney and a States' Rights leader in Lounsiana, said Tuesday his —group has enoug hbackers to get the names of presidential electors pledged to the Strom Thurmond-Fielding Wright ticket on the state general election ballot.

Wed.

The signature of 1000 qualified voters who are not registered in affiliation with any political party, are needed. The States' Righters advertised last week asking those who favor the Dixiecrat ticket to register so as to qualify as petition signers.

Commercial Appeal

"I am confident that we have more than 1000 eligible signers in New Orleans alone," Barr said. "There are more than 500 in Shreveport, 150 in Alexandria, 150 in Lake Charles, and 140 in Baton Rouge."

Memphis, Tenn.

Barr said an intensive campaign would be waged to win support for the States' Righters.

"I honestly believe," he said, "that Thurmond will end up with more electoral votes than Truman."

Mississippi Democrat Thinks There's Hidden Objective

Commercial Appeal

To The Commercial Appeal:

I want to congratulate you upon your pertinent editorial of Oct. 17 wherein you indorsed the candidacy of Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican nominee for the presidency of the United States.

It is refreshing to find that even today it is possible to find openmindedness and sensitive consciousness, on and to the great issues which confront us as individuals and as a Nation.

The issues are not States' Rights as such, nor civil rights as such, but basic human rights and the dignity of the individual. Democracy as such imposes upon the individual certain restraints. The restraints imposed are a guarantee to the basic human rights and the dignity of other individuals in society.

Memphis Tenn.

The South has too long been shackled by old jealousies, cancer-out hatreds, and paralyzing prejudices. Our social system has become rigid. The term "Southern Way of Life" as such, applies to the way of life of a certain privileged few, who have sought and continue to seek preservation of their status, both social and economic, through control of the several states by utilizing the "one party system" and the overworked cliches of the past. The great need in the South is the need for intellectual honesty.

In the past, anyone who showed any degree of intellectual honesty was immediately labelled "nigger-lover," "radical," "rabble-rouser," "demagogue," "Yankee reformer," etc., and the great mass of our ill-educated people immediately took up the hue and cry, not knowing why they cried. But the crusade was on, and they went to the polls and voted like automatons to maintain a system which was actually denying to them the freedom, well-being, and progress both social and economic which they so sadly needed and so frantically desired.

I notice that quite a few people in Alabama are writing in stating that they will not vote for Truman nor will they vote the Republican ticket.

I wonder if these people have ever stopped to think that the Republican Party is at present the only political agency in the U. S. A. capable of defeating Truman's civil rights program. It may help their feelings, but it is poor politics.

SUPPORTS DEMOCRATIC TICKET

Editor, The Advertiser:

It has been my unhappy privilege to witness the disintegration of the Democratic Party. In my opinion, it will be a period of more than 25 years before a spirit of harmony will again prevail. I formed this opinion from observation of the so-called city machines led by politicians who hold up the banner of the Democratic Party but who are selfishly interested only in their own election and will maintain the power of their city machines regardless of principle or the effect that it may have on any part of the country.

Saturday and Sunday preceding the convention were filled with a continual round of caucuses to discuss various problems, mainly though to consider the organization of the Alabama delegation and to give thought to the platform. We were permitted to have read to us by ex-Gov. Sparks a preliminary report of the platform but were warned that more than likely the more drastic minority report (which was finaly adopted) would be brought out on the convention floor for a fight.

When the Alabama delegation was called together Monday morning to elect a chairman and other officers, presided over by the Hon. Marion Rushton, who definitely took a position to assist the 13 walk-out delegates, and with his assistance, they elected the various delegates of the walk-out group to all the places. The Hon. Handy Ellis likewise exerted steam-roller tactics by overruling every motion of the minority group and in so doing, gave us a complete licking by the above mentioned unfair tactics. Needless to say, there must be some remorse within them when they realize that the entire South was treated the same way by the Democratic convention that we, the non-walkers, were treated by them.

The platform adopted cannot ever be accepted by the South. The convention heard President Truman and Senator Barkley uphold this platform and the President made it a very definite part of his speech in calling a special session of Congress that he was going to insist on the Civil Rights plank being put through into law. He was sustained in this viewpoint by Senator Barkley. Our only hope of avoiding having this obnoxious program made into law is for both Democratic and Republican senators and congressmen to realize how unfair it is and cooperate not only to defeat the Civil Rights program but also to defeat every purpose of this call of Congress.

It also made me feel ashamed of the steam-roller tactics employed by the unfair ruling of Chairman Rayburn, of Texas, because in my opinion, he showed partiality to the Eastern and New England States.

Thur. 7-22-48

Convention Hall was in absolute disorder from the beginning until the convention adjourned—never did order prevail. The heat was terrific and there was not any comfort for any human being in the hall. There was very little respect paid to any speaker as the program had been pre-arranged weeks and possibly months ahead of time to do just what was done and the delegates were carried on a vicious snipe hunt.

I agree to the necessity of a fight for states rights, however I cannot agree to the idea of forming a states rights party because in so doing, an organization is formed of even a smaller minority than is represented by the Southern States who have membership in the National Democratic Party. I have no criticism to make of any of my fellow men here in Alabama or anywhere else who wish to form or become a party of a states rights party as far as I am concerned, I expect to continue my affiliation in the Democratic Party. At the present time, it is no worse than the Republican Party and frankly, I feel that it does not, at the present time, hold out any more hope for the South than does the Republican Party; however, we are already members of this party and that within itself does give us the right to express ourselves, whether we accomplish any immediate results or not.

The situation in Alabama is very disturbing, possibly more so than in any other Southern States, because of the fact that we have four or five potential candidates for governor who are so afraid that one will get prestige over the other until they do not object to the other fellow helping him load his gun, but each one wants to be the one that "killed the bear."

Thur. 7-22-48

I also find that there is a disposition on the part of some of the so-called states rights leaders and other democratic officials in Alabama to attempt to show animosity to Senator Lister Hill. This feeling is prompted by one outstanding pollywog and some other Democratic leaders who are, I fear, anxious to see a Republican victory. I do not know whether some of these leaders voted for President Roosevelt in the last election or not. Their expressions at this time would certainly leave room for doubt. In my opinion, Senator Hill and Senator Sparkman will both emerge from this chaotic condition much stronger and bigger men than any of their enemies.

I deeply appreciate the honor of having attended a convention; naturally I regret most sincerely that the convention I attended appeared to begin the disintegration of the Democratic Party. The hope of the under-privileged is in the Democratic Party and the machine politicians have deprived the under-privileged people from having a victory for many years. Our only hope for the situation, in my opinion, is to fight for states rights through the National Democratic Party.

Critic's View

The Constitution

7-26-48

Editor Constitution: Your editorial policy of reporting news in an opinionated and prejudiced manner is both disgusting and narrow-minded.

I refer to Editor McGill's front-page story in the July 15 issue of The Constitution which he headed "Georgians 'Protest'—'Crybabies' Quit."

I heard Mr. Bloch's speech to the convened Democrats. It was an appeal for recognition of Southern ideologies and for Party action accordingly. The speech, while it was admittedly excellent, also was colored with a rather plaintive appeal for a lost cause.

The action taken by the delegates from Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina was not only justifiable, but to my mind, admirable. This action was motivated by nothing other than supreme disgust and not, as McGill's reporting implied, running away in the face of overwhelming opposition. The thankless majority of the Democratic Party has repaid generations of devotion and solidity of the Southern Democrats by insisting on a so-called civil rights program, knowing well the repungnance we feel for such legislation. The South (Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina in particular) recognize this foul scheme for just what it is . . . a last-minute appeal to certain elements for the vote, with utter disregard for the misery and evil such a program most certainly would bring about, especially in the South.

Atlanta, Ga.

McGill's false reporting plays directly into the hands of radicals who are delighted to note dissension within the South, cleavage of the party and general ill feeling fostered by such views. McGill's column showed remarkably poor sportsmanship and poorer taste.

TEXAS DIXIECRATS VIE WITH TRUMAN FACTION

Enterprise Journal

8-3-48

McComb Miss

Austin, Texas, Aug. 1.—(AP)—States' Rights Democrats and party members loyal to the National Democratic Ticket counted delegates Sunday for a finish fight over control of Texas' 23 presidential electors.

The delegates were named in Saturday's turbulent county conventions which saw rival slates set up in Harris (Houston), Dallas (Dallas), and Tarrant (Fort Worth), three counties with heavy voting strength in the state convention. The convention meets in Fort Worth Sept. 14.

Loyalists Heavy

States' Righters, also called Dixiecrats, are trying to seize the electors for th ticket of J. Strom Thurmond and Fielding Wright.

Their success in the State convention may depend on whether their States' Rights delegations from Harris, Tarrant, Dallas and Harrison (in which two conventions also developed), are seated by the Credentials Committee.

Nominate Thurmond, Wright Candidates

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Sun.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(SNS)—A strange conglomeration of incensed political bed-fellows, angered at the civil rights platforms of the Democratic and Republican parties, Saturday, hatched an intended booby-trap for President Harry S. Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in shouting defiance at the candidates who have agreed to press for civil rights legislation.

7-

Despite the on-lookers from virtually all of the Southern states the conference in city Auditorium was almost a bi-partisan show cooked up by Alabama and Mississippi, with South Carolina striving to get into the act.

All day long, the delegates, egged on by 6,000 shouting spectators, peformed in a circusy, sideshow manner to the applauding eation of the crowd as speakers belabored Pres. Truman, civil rights, Negroes and promised almost unendingly "not to have this so-called civil rights rammed down our throats."

SOME SPECTACLE

It was a bewildering spectacle, which almost bordered on incoherence, as speakers repeated the same half-truths, distortions and fears regarding the true implications of the civil rights program and while they lamented encroachment of the federal government on states' rights.

In the end the States Rights' Conference nominated Gov. Strum Thurmond of South Carolina as their candidate to oppose the Democrats' Truman-Barkley ticket and the Republicans' Dewey-Warren slate. Gov. Fielding Wright, who almost singlehandedly birthed the "Fourth Party" movement, was designated the vice-presidential choice.

Daily World

Once this was done and the formality of bringing Gov. Thurmond to the platform completed, the South Carolinians burst into a harangue on Pres. Truman, while repeating the fears of "Negroes in our schools, theaters, and homes." Once this trade was finished the Conference hastily adjourned with a promise to meet again.

Walter Sillers, speaker of the Mississippi House of Representatives, was named permanent chairman of the conference after Alabama's race-baiting Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey opened the meeting. Ralph Lee of Houston, Texas was elected permanent chairman.

Atlanta, Ga.

The "secessionists" sported Confederate flags, pictures of Robert E. Lee, and various state standards as they paraded almost incessantly in the pandemonius-flooded auditorium.

Sun. 7-18-48

DIXON KEYNOTER

Former Gov. Frank Dixon of Alabama made the keynote address Dixon in a seditious speech attacked the civil rights pogram as "designed solely to catch the Negro vote of the North."

"We all know," Dixon stormed, "there is no lynching in the South today. Race riots have made some Northern cities famous, but we have none."

He described the meeting as being "made at Philadelphia when the convention advocated a social revolution in the South."

The States' Rights Chairman Walter Sillers thundered "We are here to show that constitutional government is not dead in this nation, despite what happened at Philadelphia.

BATTLE OF PHILLY 7-18-48

Speakers unceasingly fought "The Battle of Philadelphia in their addresses. So much so that it became repetitious as charges from the ridiculous to the impossible were grossly-magnified by the delegates whose supposed anger on civil rights was use to conceal their lobbying efforts for the tideland oil interests, which wants the federal government to hand bac kto the states the billion dollar deposits of sideland oil in Missisippi, Louisiana and Texas.

The 'puny' politicians effectively used the racial issue as a smokescreen. Unofficial candidates were present from Texas, California, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi (all in the tideland oil orbit) North Carolina, South Carolina, Maryland, Arkansas, Tennessee, Florida, Oklahoma, Indiana, Georgia, Virginia and Kentucky.

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

Gov. Wright Urges South to Teach Party a Lesson

The Times-Picayune

BY EDGAR POE

(The Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

Philadelphia—Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, the No. 1 leader and initiator of the "states' rights" movement, called on the South before heading homeward to withhold 100 or more electoral votes from "Candidate Truman." 7-18-48

"I think we should teach the radicals and minority groups that have control of the party machinery a lesson," said Governor Wright.

New Orleans, La.

The chief executive, described by fellow Mississippi delegates as "a man with courage and deep conviction," said that every movement at the convention dealing with the Mississippi delegates has been to "try and embarrass and insult us."

Two Charges

With former Governor Hugh L. White of Columbia leading the way, the Mississippians marched out of the convention hall at the Democratic national convention as a great roar of boos and hisses from non-Dixie states, thundered over the jam-packed hall of perhaps 16,000 people. Many in the galleries joined in the boos.

The 13 "states' rights" delegates from Alabama followed the Mississippians out of the hall into the slowly falling rain. Sun.

Governor Wright said the people in charge of the convention started out by permitting George Vaughn, Negro attorney from St. Louis to make a fight to unseat the delegation on the ground they were bolters and discriminators against the Negro race. Secondly, he said, they adopted an all-out civil rights plank.

"I believe" he said, "that we should teach them a lesson with about 100 electoral votes. 7-18-48

"Every movement they made indicated that the purpose was to snare the Negro vote, and make Mississippi a whipping boy in an effort to emphasize their movements.

"We have known all along that this fight was coming and I so stated in my inaugural message on January 20.

Cites Warnings

"The Democratic party has taken our electoral vote for granted and cold-bloodly planned its strategy to capture the minority groups in the North at the expense of the South, gambling our electoral votes against the balance of power with the large industrial groups of the North.

"We have recognized this and have warned the South continuously for the past five months. Today statements in the Northern newspapers confirm that and boldly say that it was deliberately done.

"They believe they can still retain the Southern electoral vote regardless of the insults of the South and by trampling under foot the principles for which we stand."

Governor Wright said that he thought the leaders who controlled the nomination of "Candidate" Truman are doing all they can to "wean from Henry Wallace the radical and so-called liberal vote."

The World War II veteran named four states in which he thought the Truman people are trying to gather the radical vote. "They are New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and California."

Sun.

Balance of Power

"Repeatedly," said he, "we have said that this is the South's big opportunity. In his acceptance speech, 'Candidate' Truman shot the works. He appealed to every minority group and offered a platform to appeal to all these groups. 7-18-48

"With that platform, which will not appeal to the vast majority white citizens of America, and with his convening of Congress, he is making a desperate effort to capture electoral votes. If the South will stand together, and I believe it will, our Southern electoral votes will be the balance of power."

Should neither Mr. Truman nor Governor Thomas E. Dewey get a majority of electoral votes, the presidential election could be thrown in the House of Representatives.

To be elected, a presidential candidate must get 266 of the 531 electoral college votes. A close election could give the South the balance of power.

Gerald Smith Spurned By His Dixiecrat Fellow Travelers

ATLANTA, July 19—(Special)—The totering Bourbon empire shunned an allie it would have gladly welcomed in previous times. The Southern Dixiecrats spurned the support of Gerald L. K. Smith, national director of the Christian Nationalist Crusade Monday. St. Louis, Mo.

Smith, who said his followers will hold a convention in St. Louis August 20-21, offered to crusade behind the Anti-Truman Democratic party revolters. He declared they are in sympathy because all 3,000,000 enrolled followers believe that the Negro and the Jew are exerting to much control in American politics.

Much to his chargrin, the Dixicrats pulled a "pot calling the kettle black" act. They bluntly stated no. Fri 7-23-48

Gov. Thurmond declared "We do not need the support of Gerald L. K. Smith or any other rabble-rousers who use race-prejudice and class hatred to inflame the emotions of the people." Fri.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who they nominated to oppose President Truman on an anti-civil rights platform at their bolters convention in Birmingham Saturday, assumed a sheep in wolf's clothing rol in his reply. 7-23-48

In a more complimentary vien, Smith said he stayed in the background at the Birmingham convention because "I was anxious to do nothing that would introduce extraneous controversy into the wholesome and historic gathering." The Argus

In Birmingham, Horace Wilkinson, chairman of the Diviecrats Resolutions Committee, said, "we're not going to fool with a bird like Gerald L. K. Smith." St. Louis, Mo.

Stapp Says Constitutional Government Is Up To South

Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala

"If constitutional government is preserved in the United States, it looks like it's up to the South to lead a fight in its behalf."

This was the observation made by one of Alabama's walkout delegates to the Democratic National Convention at Thursday's meeting of the Montgomery Exchange Club. Fri. 7-30-48

The speaker was Albert Stapp, Birmingham auto parts dealer and former state commander of the American Legion.

"They just don't want any part of state's rights," he said in reference to the National Democratic Party. "They've kicked us out of the party because of it."

Political Expediency

Stapp said the civil rights issue which was "flouted in our face" was political expediency on the part of its backers.

The South's answer, he said, was the recent convention of Dixiecrats in Birmingham.

"Now we've got it fixed so Democrats can vote for Southern candidates for president and vice-president and stay Democrats," he said. Fri. 7-30-48

Stapp, who was one of 13 Alabama delegates who staged a walkout after the Democratic platform was adopted at the Philadelphia convention, recommended that the South go ahead and build up its own party.

The former American Legion commander said he felt segregation and other racial issues covered in the civil rights program advocated by President Truman are something to be solved by evolution and education and not by legislation.

Will Continue

He noted that there has been gradual improvement in the lot of Negroes in the South. This, he said, will continue barring outside interference and efforts to 'stir up trouble" between the races.

Stapp said the South can become the minority group which will get the plums from the Federal government if Southerners continue to strengthen their new party.

He said there are thousands of potential "rebels" in every state that will flock to the cause of constitutional government and state's rights if they are given a chance

Vote Positively

The emotional appeal of the States' Rights Party, sincere and well-founded though it be, provides an ironical twist to the national elections in those states where the verdict will be close. Tennessee is one of those, and Missouri another. Sun 10-24-48

Commercial Appeal

It is a correct assumption to say that the chief objective of the States' Righters is that of rebuking President TRUMAN on his force-bill program and demonstrating to the National Democratic Party that the South no longer can be brushed off by the radical wing that has taken control. Yet, because many protest votes which would go to Governors DEWEY and WARREN now will accrue to the States' Rights candidates, the chances of DEWEY and WARREN carrying Tennessee are noticeably lessened.

Memphis, Tenn.

If the South is to have a strong two-party system, the only real and lasting hope for equity in national affairs, it cannot do it by wasting votes. The States' Righters know there is no chance to carry Tennessee. A vote for DEWEY not only is a protest against TRUMAN, but a step toward establishing the party as an instrument for further progress and effective effort.

In this crucial period the country needs administrators with the grasp and foresight, the understanding of domestic and international affairs, of the caliber of Governors DEWEY and WARREN. We should be thinking and voting in positive rather than negative terms.

'Dixiecrat' Ticket Claims Six States

Star
New York, N.Y.

WASHINGTON, July 18 (AP)—The entrance of a "Dixiecrat ticket" into the presidential field brought a disputed prediction today that President Truman may lose the support of up to six southern states.

Sen. John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) told a reporter he thinks the southern Democratic rebel ticket may take the electoral votes of a half-dozen southern states away from Truman and Sen. Alben Barkley, his running mate.

Mon. 7-19-48

Lists Six States

The new ticket—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi for Vice President—was put forth at Birmingham yesterday as one Dixie answer to the President's civil-rights program.

McClellan—who fought the President's nomination but did not walk out on the Democratic convention—named Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Tennessee as possible participants in a bolt. He contended that it was almost certain to result in the party's defeat.

He put Tennessee on the list, McClellan said, because of a sharp local division among Democrats there.

He said that if the Thurmond-Wright ticket got on the ballot in Arkansas it might split the Democratic vote in his home state and give the Republicans some chance.

But McClellan's prediction drew immediate fire from Sen. Carl A. Hatch (D., N. M.), close friend of the President.

Hatch Scoffs

Hatch said he didn't think the effort to place a fourth party in the field "will be effective in more than one or two states." Mon.

The New Mexico Senator predicted election of a Truman-Barkley ticket even if some of the southerners don't go along.

Hatch hinted that the Democrats believed there was some chance that Henry Wallace—scheduled to get the official nomination of his third party in Philadelphia next week-end—might not carry through until November. Wallace repeatedly has asserted, however, he has no intention of quitting the race. 7-19-48

Sen. Joseph O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), another friend of the President, said the Birmingham rump convention's action in nominating Thurmond and Wright could be "rather serious."

Star

"If the southerners carry out this fight," he said, "it means that the Democratic Party will have to campaign a good deal more diligently in the South than heretofore." He added that he did not think the entrance of the Dixiecrat ticket "will have the effect of taking the South out of the Democratic column."

To Bid for 137 Votes

O'Mahoney conceded, however, that if the margin between Democrats and Republicans was close in any single state, a third party ticket might cost the Truman-Barkley ticket that state's electoral backing.

New York, N.Y.

The Dixiecrat bolters made plans to bid for the 137 electoral votes of Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Texas, Virginia, South Carolina and North Carolina.

They cast around for help elsewhere in such areas as Missouri and Kentucky, home states of the regular Democratic nominees, Oklahoma and Maryland. Mon.

Thus far, however, the rebels apparently could depend only on Alabama's 11 and Mississippi's nine electoral votes, already instructed to back somebody other than Truman. Georgia still is to name its 12 electors in a primary. Arkansas will pick nine and Texas 33 in state conventions. 7-19-48

Irked 'Candidate' Nearly Mobbed by 'Dixiecrats'

Free Press
Detroit, Mich

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—A self-styled Presidential candidate, Brig. Gen. Herbert C Holdridge, was nearly mobbed at the states' rights convention after he protested the manner in which candidates were nominated.

Sun.

Police escorted him from the building. 7-18-48

Gen. Holdridge said later that "I came here in the hope of seeing democracy in action. I believe in the states' rights issue and I was willing to admit that on race segregation you could not solve the issue by bayonets and law.

"I listened to the nominations of Thurmond and Wright by the resolution committee and at that point I quit. It was Philadelphia all over again."

Biographical material handed out gave Holdridge's birthplace as Wyandotte, Mich.

Texas Dixiecrats Map Attack On Gov. Jester

The News
Birmingham, Ala.

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 2—(AP)—Texas Dixiecrats are planning a direct attack on Gov. Beauford Jester because he opposes a statewide referendum on the presidency.

Lloyd Price, of Fort Worth, a states' righter, said yesterday he was drafting a brief that would be submitted at a hearing of the Democratic State Committee here Aug. 9.

Mon.

Price said State Democratic Chairman Robert W. Calvert, Hillsboro, and House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn, of Bonham, would be criticized in the brief.

8-2-48

The anti-Truman faction was victorious in three of Texas' four biggest county conventions Saturday.

They are demanding that the Democratic State Committee let the people vote on Truman in the Aug. 28 runoff primary. The question would be whether Texas' 23 Democratic presidential electors should be pledged to Truman or Gov. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina.

Meantime, Republicans carefully picked some candidates to fight Democratic nominees in the November election.

The Revolt Convention

News

Birmingham is host today to a convention of Southern Democrats disposed to carry their dislike of the platform and nominees of the Philadelphia convention to the point of an open break. It may be an historic convention, marking a definite realignment of political forces in the South and even, perhaps, the nation. And it may be the beginning of the end of an abortive dream.

On the eve of the convention, one could find many signs pointing in one direction or the other. But matters were in flux and the outcome was uncertain. When the batter is being stirred, the cook does not know exactly how the cake will turn out. And when a movement is being born, one cannot tell at the time whether it will live or be stillborn.

The feeling that lies behind this convention runs deep. But it is not a new feeling. For generations, the South has stood for a large measure of states' rights. It has wanted more freedom in handling local problems than often has been available. The present civil right issue is merely the peg on which present action is based.

The history of this feeling makes a permanent break with the national Democratic Party less likely. There have been walkouts before, quite a few of them. The breach always previously has ultimately healed. Once the Civil War intervened and prolonged the breach. But when the war was over, it was to the Democratic Party that the South returned.

Birmingham, Ala, 7-17-48

But will the movement be able to take any effective action this year? That is the present question. There are doubts on that score. Even the bolters indicated that doubt when they changed from calling the meeting a convention to a conference. The movement still lacks organization that could be called Southwide. Some of the states are represented here only by individual sympathizers with the movement. Except for Alabama, Mississippi and one or two other states, the delegations are short of support from official party organizations or public officials.

News Birmingham, Ala

From that fact there arise some practical political considerations. The bolters, in most of the Southern states, do not have that control of the party machinery which is necessary to the firm establishment of a new party or even positive effect on this year's election. Can they gain such control? That is another question. 7-17-48

The South was able to poll a good vote at Philadelphia for its champion of states' rights. It can point to the united front it presented there, barring some defection from border states. But this convention here is another matter. That was a difference within the party. This is a break with the party. This is a refusal to accept majority action. That is a legitimate and sometimes a noble course to follow. But before one does it, one should be sure that the course is wise. Will it gain the ends desired? Will the price be greater than the value received? 7-17-48

The convention should consider these points. And it should be noted that it is for this purpose that it was called. The first order of business of the convention may be to determine whether the national party shall be followed, or whether the break shall be made. Up to the time of the meeting, there apparently had been no positive decision regarding a split. Perhaps, even yet, the leaders assembled will see the futility of breaking with the party over one issue and thereby increasing the likelihood of a Republican president.

Dixiecrat Ballot Bar Held Matter For Legislature

Fri. 11-12-48

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 11 (AP).—Whether the law that prevented States' Rights Democratic candidates from appearing on the Maryland ballot is wise must be decided by the Legislature, the Court of Appeals said today.

Wash. D.C.

The court issued its formal opinion explaining why it had turned down the States' Righters' bid last month.

Under Maryland law, nominating petitions must be filed with the secretary of state not later than 15 days before primary elections. The States' Rights Party was not formed until after the Maryland primary this year.

How To Defeat Your Candidate For President

Leading Democrats, especially those from the South, should author a book entitled: "How to Defeat Your Own Candidate for President." That is just about what they have done in their "bar-room" fight against the re-nomination of President Truman. Above all they have demonstrated, beyond all doubt, that the Democratic party in the South stands for moral and social decay, and the perpetuation of lawlessness against minority groups. They are so confused that everytime a "statesman," from that section opens his mouth, he steps in it. Ever since President Truman went before Congress and plead for decency in government; fair play and justice to all groups through the enactment of civil rights legislation, all southern governors and down to the most profane and petty politicians have joined hands to denounce him with every invective at their command. In fact, they have combined in a sort of "Southern Oligarchy" to run this country as they see fit—on a double standard, disregarding the Constitution—all for the whites, and only scraps and the leavings for the blacks.

Lucius Harper

An atmosphere of passionate indignation swept over the entire South following the issuance of the President's Civil Rights Committee report exposing the outrages and blunders in law enforcement typical of that section. To treat a Negro civilly has been branded as a "crime" by the governors who are now fighting Truman's re-nomination. They are making a last-ditch stand to involve Gen. Ike Eisenhower in their scheme to maintain a double-standard democracy. Ike, so far, hasn't fallen victim to the conspiracy.

In the event Gen. Eisenhower is led astray by these political idiots and offers himself as headmaster to carry out their conspiracies against good government, he will be the worst-beaten candidate in the history of this country. Unfortunately, Gen Eisenhower is vulnerable to political attacks. He has already coincided with the South on the Jim Crow plan. He has also stated that he was not in agreement with President Truman's Civil Rights Program; that he didn't believe that federal laws would make the South treat the Negro any better. He advocates the continuance of a Jim Crow army. If you doubt how he stands on the "Negro Question," read his testimony before the Military Affairs Committee which took place some months ago. No self-respecting Negro could afford to support him. If he did, we would recommend him most highly for the "Uncle Tom" award.

This corruption in the Democratic party is spelling ruin to its candidate, whoever he may be. The brawl has brought to the front all of the demoralizing forces in our political life, both in the South and some parts of the North. Imagine such a rotten, political dictator as "Boss" Hague of New Jersey naming the president of the United States. He wanted Eisenhower, but gave him "the kiss of death" by announcing his choice. This ruthless political clown had to be stopped by court injunction from suppressing free speech in his own state. He is in the same class with "Boss" Crump of Memphis. Both have made fortunes out of politics, and their records in public dealings may cause Gov. Dewey, if he's elected, to hold conference with his experts on income taxes. Who knows?

Further, this may be the very cause why so many leading Democrats want to back a "sure horse" in this presidential sweepstakes. It's not so much about civil rights of the Negro, but their own rights to dodge Uncle Sam on certain matters that have been running rather smoothly for the past 16 years.

* * *

You will note already that Gov. Dewey, who stated in his acceptance address, that he was under obligation to no man, has recently been holding some conferences with Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan. Probably he has him in mind for the Attorney-Generalship. If you want to know what type of prosecutor Senator Ferguson is, go to Detroit and inquire. As a judge there he sent the mayor, county prosecutor, commissioner of police, and every bigwig policy racketeer to the state prison. He vies with Dewey as the "great corrector." Probably the Democrats haven't overlooked this important item.

Launch Campaign To Raise Funds; Map Organization Plans

Fri. 7-30-48

Alabama today became the first state to see its presidential electors pledged to support the Thurmond-Wright States' Rights Democrats ticket.

Similar action is expected to be taken by States' Rights Democrats of Mississippi at Jackson, Miss., next Tuesday.

Alabama's 11 electors signified their pledge of support to the Thurmond-Wright ticket in a strongly worded resolution adopted at a conference in the Tutwiler Hotel yesterday afternoon.

The electors previously had been pledged not to vote for President Harry S. Truman for reelection.

Their resolution said they would support Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, for president, and Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, for vice president. It added the two are in hearty accord with States' Righters seeking "a return to constitutional government and preservation of rights of the (states), particularly in such domestic matters as law enforcement, voting, employment practice and segregation."

The resolution said further that "we believe the Philadelphia convention nominated a candidate for president that 90 per cent of the rank and file of the Democrats do not want.

"We are convinced the people do not want the nominees of the Republican convention or the nominees of the Democratic convention."

THE ELECTORS' SESSION followed a meeting of the executive committee of the Alabama States' Rights Committee. Plans were announced for a fund-raising drive in Alabama to assist the nationwide campaign.

The News

The committee urged that funds be mailed to Jesse M. Williams, treasurer, Bell Building, Montgomery.

Birmingham Ala

"Funds are now the urgent need to carry forward this campaign; to take the message to every crossroad and hamlet over the air and through the press requires campaign funds," the committee said in a statement.

These funds must come from the grass roots. What those here in Alabama give will be pooled with campaign contributions of those in neighbor Southern states to carry forward the South's fight."

Fri.

The committee consists of one member from each congressional district. Members are Marion Rushton, Montgomery, chairman; Donald Comer, Birmingham, vice chairman; Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile; Robert Albritton, Andalusia; Wallace Malone, Dothan; Tom Abernethy, Talladega; Walter Lusk Guntersville; Robert Knox Greene Greensboro; Charles Wiggins, Jasper; Norman Harris, Decatur; Sidney Smyer, Birmingham.

STATES' RIGHTS LEADERS said a campaign organization would be established in all of Alabama's 67 counties and in the 48 states.

Gov. Thurmond is scheduled to open the nationwide campaign in an address at a States' Rights rally at Houston, Tex., Aug. 11. He will formally accept the presidential nomination in this address.

Seven of Alabama's 11 Democratic elector nominees attended yesterday's meeting. Chairman John Lusk said the four who were unable to attend agreed to the pledge.

The News

Electors present were Mr. Lusk, Mr. Albritton, Walter C. Givhan, Safford; Mr. Harris, Edmund Blair, Pell City; Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.

Those not present were Ben Bloodworth, Decatur; Tully Good, Walter F. Miller, Tuscumbia.

Fri.

The resolution adopted unanimously yesterday by Alabama's Democratic presidential elector nominees at a special meeting here follows:

Whereas, we were nominated by the Democrats of Alabama in the primary election on a platform pledging that we would not cast the electoral votes of Alabama for Harry S. Truman for president, but would cast the electoral votes of Alabama for some Democrat acquainted and in sympathy with the problems of the South, and

Whereas, a conference of States' Rights Democrats was held in Jackson, Miss., on May 10, 1948, at which the Democrats in mass meeting assembled called on the Democratic Parties of the several states to take the necessary steps to have the electoral vote of their respective states cast for a Democrat in sympathy with the views of our people, and

Whereas, at a meeting held in Birmingham, Ala., on the 17th day of July, 1948, the Democrats of the South in meeting assembled recommended to the Democrats of the several states that they take the steps necessary to have the electoral votes of the several states cast for Hon. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, for president of the United States and for Hon. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, for vice president of the United States, and

Whereas, we have given due consideration to the recommendations made at the Birmingham meeting held on July 17, 1948, and are convinced that Hon. J. Strom Thurmond, governor of South Carolina, is the choice of the Democrats of the other Southern states for president of the United States and that Hon. Fielding Wright, the governor of Mississippi, is the choice of the Democrats of other Southern states for vice president of the United States, and

Fri.

Whereas, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond and Gov. Fielding Wright are in hearty accord with the platform upon which we were nominated and the views of States' Rights Democrats nationwide for a return to constitutional government and the preservation of the rights of the several states in domestic matters, personal rights and personal liberties, more particularly such domestic matters as law enforcement, voting, employment practices and segregation, and

Whereas, we regard it as vital and essential to the preservation of this republic that there be a return to constitutional government and due regard for the limitations placed on the federal government by the constitution of the United States and due recognition of the powers reserved to the several states by that historic document, and

7-30-48

Whereas, we believe the Philadelphia convention nominated a candidate for president that 90 per cent of the rank and file of the Democrats of the several states do not want. SOME MINOR ASPECTS

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala

Despite the grimmness of the present political circumstance, it is not unrelieved by its droll to funny aspects. Tue. 7-27-48

Consider The Dothan Eagle. Having a bellyful of the slings and arrows that have come from generations of reflex allegiance to the outrageous Democratic Party, The Eagle went Republican. It did so for the same reason Democrats went Dixiecrats—to insure the defeat of Truman. The difference is in method, not goal. 7-27-48

Therefore the Republican organ of the Wiregrass is entirely friendly to the Dixiecrats. Until now it has seemed that they were working hand in glove.

But now something has happened to cause The Eagle, speaking for the Republicans, to admonish its axis partner, the Dixiecrats, to keep a weather eye open lest the Alabama Truman Democrats grab it and growl.

The Eagle is worried about the results of the effort to get a slate of Truman electors on the ballot in November. The Eagle calculates that all good Alabamians will naturally vote either Republican or Democrat. It knows that their combined vote will be a majority of Alabamians. But The Eagle is apprehensive that the splitting of good Alabamians into two parties might allow other Alabamians to prevail with Truman.

The Eagle says:

> If the Langan-Truman-Federal patronage crowd can make any kind of showing atall, this particular party may be able to poll a plurality in November. And in the general election a plurality is victory, even though the Dixiecrat and Demo-Republican vote combined is a majority. In other words, though most Alabamians vote against Truman by voting Dixiecrat or Republican a minority voting for Truman may win.

Advertiser Montgomery Ala

Another whimsicality is the writhing discomfort of some Dixiecrats about being called bolters. They want and steadfastly insist that the National Democratic Party "has left us." It should not, they hold, even be suggested that Alabama has left the national party. Tue

The stigma of the term bolter, of course, arises from the 1928 Hoover-Smith campaign. A lot of Alabama Democrats spurned the nominee of the national party and went to the nominee of the Republican Party. Those who did not vote for the national nominee have always been called one thing—bolters. 7-27-48

But today those who are not going to vote for the national party's nominee, Truman, and are going to vote for the fourth party's Thurmond, are not bolters, and please get that straight, bub.

Every man has a right to be called by a name of his own choosing, and in recognition of that right, we offer our good offices. Let us not say that Alabama has bolted the party. Let it read: Alabama has disaffiliated. Further, bolters are not bolters, but disaffiliates.

WE ARE constrained to wonder if Gov. Strom Thurmond, the Dixiecrat nominee for President, approves of the Alabama ballot. Written on the rooster is the shibboleth, "White Supremacy." Thurmond, not once but twice, has spurned the use of "White Supremacy" in his campaign. Thurmond said Saturday, "We are not running on White Supremecy."

That's entirely acceptable to The Advertiser, but how is Horace Wilkinson going to vote for a man who says a thing like that?

Norman Harris Asserts They Contribute To Disunity

Fri

Rep. Norman Harris, Decatur, has charged two Birmingham newspapers—the News and Age-Herald—with contributing to "disunity" in the South.

Harris, who is one of Alabama's Democratic Party's 11 presidential electors, declared that the two papers refused to accept the will of the people of the state when they nominated 11 men who were pledged against voting for President Truman, the Republican presidential nominee or any other nominee who supported a civil rights program like the one advocated by Truman.

Not only are the papers contributing to "disunity" in the South, according to the state legislator, they have failed to offer "one constructive suggestion as to a means of defense the South could or should employ."

Effective Plan

Harris said the men who are trying to defend the South by peaceful and lawful means "are sincere in their conviction" and their plan is the only effective way of protecting the South.

"In justice and fairness to them and to your readers, please print this letter and with it please answer these questions," he challenged: 7-30-48 Fri.

"1. What in your opinion could the South have done or could it now do to defeat Mr. Truman's civil rights program?

"2. Did you participate in the May primary, and, if so, do you intend to honor the pledge you then made to support the nominees of that primary, including the 11 nominees for presidential electors?

"3. Do you advocate that the voters who participated in the May primary vote for presidential electors in the general election other than those nominated in the primary?

"4. If you intend to repudiate your pledge or advocate that others do so, how do you justify such action."

No Suggestions

"During the primary campaign you wrote thousands of words belittling and ridiculing the plan of the South's withholding its electoral vote from Mr. Truman," Harris further charged. "You did not, however, make one constructive suggestion as to a means of defense the South could or should employ?"

The legislator told the News and Age-Herald they apparently were not willing to abide by the results of the primary and were continuing to follow their same course in subsequent editorials and now "seem" to suggest the election in November of pro-Truman electors.

"This of course would require that a majority of the voters who participated in the May primary

Truman Fight Into Missouri

Texas Banker Talked As Finance Chairman For Southerners' Fight

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

Plans were projected today to hold an early Midwest conference of states righters, probably in Missouri, to carry the revolt campaign against President Truman to his home state and a dozen or more surrounding commonwealths.

Strategy is to make the Missouri meeting a regional conference similar to that held in Birmingham Saturday, when the Thurmond-Wright revolt presidential ticket was nominated.

It had been announced earlier that rebellious Southern Democrats would challenge the Truman-Barkley regular party ticket in the president's Midwestern bailiwick.

* * *

AN EARLY HUDDLE of states rights Democrats spearheading the fight to defeat Truman will be held here, with its aims to increase the momentum of the campaign behind the leadership of South Carolina Gov. J. Strom Thurmond and Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright as Dixiecrat presidential and vice presidential nominees.

Wallace W. Wright, Jackson, Miss., who had served as co-chairman of the states righters campaign group, was seen as certain to be moved up to general chairman. He thus would take the place of Arkansas Gov. Ben Laney, original Southwide chairman of this movement, who bowed out here Saturday when he split with chieftains directing the Birmingham conference.

* * * Mon

IN BREAKING AWAY from this group, Gov. Laney made a plea for unity, urging that "Whatever is done must be done through and by the official Democratic organization in each respective state." 7-19-48

The Arkansas governor reemphasized that the South's fight is "right" in opposing the "civil rights" plank adopted by the National Democratic Party at Philadelphia. But he posed the question as to whether the revolters had lost "reason and sanity."

And he took a crack at insurrection leaders, without calling any names, when he asked:

"Shall our nation be torn with unnecessary internal strife now, when unity of our people is so vital, merely for the sake of politics, or the personal satisfaction and ambition of any man?"

Date of the Midwest regional conference of anti-Truman forces has not been fixed, but group leaders here want it held soon. The convention fixed Oct. 1 as the time for another Southwide conference, which very likely will be held in Birmingham.

* * *

PROVISION ALSO was made in resolutions for a general finance chairman to take charge of a fund-raising campaign to finance the anti-Truman fight. A Texas banker, whose name will be announced, is a tentative choice of the states' righters for this post.

Horace Wilkinson, chairman of the convention resolutions committee, said a states' rights national campaign director also would be named. He said he did not know who would be picked for this job.

FANNING THE REVOLT flames are the anti-segregation, anti-lynching, anti-poll tax proposals embraced in the Truman-sponsored "civil rights" plank. And these were the issues that fired a wildly cheering throng of 7,500 who whooped it up in Municipal Auditorium Saturday when the president and his program were denounced and Thurmond and Wright nominated.

The Southern revolters are certain of 28 electoral votes—Alabama's 11, Mississippi's 9 and South Carolina's 8—which will be cast against Truman. Observers feel that as many as 89 probably will be freed and diverted from the president.

The News

Arkansas and Florida were viewed as definitely leaning toward the course charted by Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina. Texans caucused in Birmingham Saturday night to map a plan to switch Texas' 23 electoral votes from Truman to the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

There is some question as to whether Georgia and Louisiana can be won over to the revolt ticket. And there is even more doubt as to whether North Carolina, (which Republicans are confident of winning), Virginia, Kentucky, Maryland and Oklahoma can be persuaded to follow Thurmond and Wright in the rebellion. Regular Democrats and Republicans almost invariably have tough and close fights in the border states of Oklahoma, Maryland and Kentucky.

Birmingham

Smith and his organization were labeled "Fascist" in a recent Congressional report on "Fascism in Action" in the United States. Ala.

A burly, middle-aged man, Smith and his sleek, white-haired wife, who wore a red and green printed dress, invited the press to their Tutwiler Hotel suite today. Mon

The Nationalist leader said he will leave Birmingham this afternoon for Louisiana, where he will place a wreath on the grave of his late friend, Huey Long. 7-19-48

He plans also to urge Huey's brother, Gov. Earl Long, to join the Birmingham movement to defeat reelection of President Truman.

Smith expressed disappointment that Gov. Long and Herman Talmadge, of Georgia, did not attend Saturday's meeting.

"My old friends, Huey Long and Gene Talmadge, would have been there," he said.

* * *

RABBLE-ROUSING GERALD L. K. SMITH, director of the "Christian Nationalist Crusade," showed up in Birmingham after Saturday's convention, which he said he attended but "diliberately" kept himself in the background. He said he did this "because I was anxious to do nothing that would introduce extraneous controversy into the wholesome and historic gathering."

Wilkinson said Smith would not be permitted to have "anything to do with the states rights campaign, because we're not going to fool with a bird like Gerald L. K. Smith."

SMITH ANNOUNCED he had called a convention of his followers in St. Louis for Aug. 20-21, when he will "recommend to our leadership that they support the states' rights principle in every state." He said the "Christian National Crusade" is an exponent of white supremacy, adding that "We believe the Negro and the Jew are exerting too much control in American politics." 7-19-48

Meanwhile at Columbia, S. C., Gov. Thurmond, who made a rafter-rattling acceptance speech in Birmingham, was quoted as saying Southern Democrats "won't be kicked around." News

"This is the South's opportunity to show the leaders of the National Democratic Party that we won't be kicked around," Thurmond declared, adding that his nomination was "a complete surprise."

A High-Handed Convention

To the Editor of The News:

Well, Birmingham has had its states' rights conference and has gotten a load of free publicity. Men to whom politics is a business had a grand time making speeches and never failed to get a good response when such tried and true applause-getters as "Dixie" and "Robert E. Lee" were mentioned.

I hope the rest of the nation doesn't think that the South is solidly behind this revolt, for a look behind the scenes would show that the revolt was brought about and nurtured by a small group of dyed-in-the-wool conservatives to whom revolts from the common man's party, the Democratic Party, are no new thing. News

The bolters' main contention seemed to be directed against the high-handed way their wishes were flouted in Philadelphia, but, strangely enough, the old "steam roller" used so effectively there worked just as effectively in Birmingham. Birmingham Ala

A platform was presented for adoption by Horace Wilkinson, chairman of the resolutions committee, and was adopted in one, two, three order. Two candidates were presented by Mr. Wilkinson and noisily voted in. The one lone dissenter was silenced and removed from the auditorium. Was this a one-man convention? Was this whole thing the brain child of men to whom politics is a business and to whom bolts from the only party that ever raised a finger to help the South are no new thing? Was this a disguised maneuver to insure the election of a slate of Republicans this Fall? Isn't it strange that when the Democrats do nominate a weak ticket that certain men who make politics a business pull a "bolt" and actively campaign against the Democratic nominee? Sat. 7-24-48

Think about these things, Southern Democrats! The place for us to fight these obnoxious measures called "civil rights" is from within the party. Bolting the party will bring these measures on us more quickly than would anything else. Don't let these men who have the money to finance their own conventions lead you from the common man's party, the Democratic Party. It's our party; let's fight for it!

Dixiecrats To Fill Fund, Tactics Posts

News

News Staff Writer

A campaign director and finance chairman are expected to be chosen by states' rights Democratic leaders, who will meet in Atlanta at 10 a.m. Saturday to map their fight against President Truman and his "civil rights" program.

At the same time, pro-Truman forces in Alabama, led by Mobile State Sen. Joe Langan, were appealing to national Democratic leaders for funds and speakers in a campaign to carry this state for the Truman-Barkley ticket.

Meanwhile, Maryland's Atty. Gen. Hall Hammond held that voters of that state can cast their ballots for the Thurmond-Wright states' rights presidential ticket.

But he said they could do so only by writing in names of eight electors on their ballots.

WHILE SEN. LANGAN is attempting to get a slate of pro-Truman presidential electors on the Nov. 2 general election ballot in Alabama, some attorneys contend the only way voters of this state can cast their ballots for Truman and Barkley is by the write-in method. In such case, names of 11 electors would have to be written on the ballot. Birmingham

Langan, who appealed to Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath for campaign funds and speakers, wrote the national party chieftain he believed there was a good chance for Truman to carry Alabama. ala

The state senator has called a state convention for Aug. 16 in Montgomery to name a ticket of 11 elector candidates who would vote for Truman and Barkley in the electoral college.

Rep. Norman Harris, Decatur, one of this state's 11 anti-Truman pledged presidential electors, nominated in the May 4 Democratic primary, took issue with the Mobile senator. He pointed out that Alabama Democrats made the anti-Truman decision "after a full presentation and debate of the issues."

The News today he did not expect Laney to attend the Atlanta meeting. Wed. 7-22-48

But, he added, he had just talked with Gov. Laney on the telephone and the Arkansas executive "urged me to do everything I could to further the movement."

Sen. Langan said that if Truman electors are qualified and their names go on the ballot, he would suggest they run under the emblem of the National Democratic Party, the donkey. The crowing rooster is the emblem of the Alabama Democratic Party and it is under this emblem that the names of anti-Truman pledged electors will appear on the Nov. 2 ballot.

BOTH THURMOND AND WRIGHT, who the Mississippi executive took pains to explain, only had been "recommended" for president and vice president on the rebel ticket, will attend the Atlanta session.

Gov. Wright said he did not consider Thurmond and himself "candidates" because they had not been nominated by any political party.

He predicted this state's votes in November would go as they did in May—against Truman.

Wed. 7-22-48

"IT IS NOT SURPRISING," Rep. Harris said, "that Sen. Langan is not satisfied with the results of the primary election. He was a candidate for delegate in the primaries and was soundly defeated."

The Mobile senator was beaten in the June 1 runoff for one of two delegate posts in the First District.

Langan said he would leave it to Secretary of State Sibyl Pool to ask Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael for an opinion on whether pro-Truman electoral candidates can be placed on the ballot now.

Those opposing Truman contend that such elector aspirants must have been entered as candidates by last May 4 — same requirement made of 11 Wallace elector candidates whose names will be on the November ballot.

Catch The Bus

Like an unlucky horseplayer who lives in hopes of beating his bookie, the professional Southerner is forever championing lost causes. He never knows when he is up against the impossible and his passion for maikng a purse out of a sow's ear drives him beyond all reason into a realm of make-believe and fantasy. The horseplayer winds up a bum and the professional Southerner becomes a simple fool.

Last week Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina who is the presidential candidate on the Dixiecrat ticket addressed a luncheon meeting of the Overseas Press Club in New York. Among the many silly things he said, was that his platform was not based on racial prejudice.

He said he stood for racial integrity and stated "When I talk about racial integrity and purity I mean I believe in maintaining the purity of the white race and the purity of the Negro race. . .I do not believe their blood should be mixed so as to form some kind of yellow race."

We wonder if the governor has ever visited the city of Charleston in his home state. If he hasn't he certainly has a surprise in store. He will discover that his cause was lost several generations ago and, according to some reports, he better not risk having his own ancestry examined too carefully. Be that as it may, the good governor must know how ridiculous it is to lock the barn door after all the horses have fled.

We do not hate the governor, we pity him. If he takes his views seriously, his life will bring him unending grief. The white slave masters of the South may have believed in the principle of racial integrity as the governor defines it but they acted upon that principle much like their sons are now acting upon the principle of equality of opportunity. Sat 7-3-48

The professional Dixiecrats have confused the words democracy and hypocrisy. They not only tell lies but they believe their own lies, and that is unforgivable. We hope the day will come when white Southerners will stop kidding themselves and get off that racial merry-go-round. It is high time they caught the bu

Georgia Votes States Righters Spot On Ballot

But They Lose Round In Louisiana Battle; Barred By Injunction

Montgomery Ala

Action Completed

Thompson Is Expected To Sign Bill Today With Blast At Assembly

ATLANTA — (AP) — States' Rights Democrats were assured a place on Georgia's presidential ballot Friday, but they lost, temporarily, at least, the advantage of being listing as regular Democrats in Louisiana.

A special Georgia legislative session completed action on an election reform bill opening the presidential ballot to all candidates except Communists. The action was unanimous.

The net effect was to help States' Righters. Democrats, Republicans and Progressives already had taken steps to appear on the ballot.

Georgia voters thus will get a free hand but there is no guarantee that their choice will receive the state's 12 electoral votes. Dominant legislative forces of Governor-Nominee Herman Talmadge refused to pledge presidential electors to vote for thehir party nominees.

State District Court Judge Charles Holcombe granted a temporary injunction at Baton Rouge restraining the Louisiana secretary of state from listing the States' Rights Democratic nominee — Governors J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi—on the ballot as the Democratic candidates. Hearing on a permanent injunction was set for next Wednesday.

The legal action also seeks a court order directing the Democratic State Central Committee to qualify Mr. Truman and Senator Alben Barkley, his running mate, as the Democratic nominees instead of Thurmond and Wright.

Committee To Meet

Gov. M. E. Thompson has indicated he will sign the Georgia measure Saturday, although he may take a few pot shots at the assembly for striking his proposal to pledge electors.

Georgia's Talmadge-dominated State Democratic Executive Committee also meets today to name Democratic electors. Most observers expect the candidates to be pro-Truman. But they also said some members of the committee were banking either on a victory by States' Righters in the state, or failure of any candidate to get a majority.

In the latter case, the Georgia legislature would reconvene in November to choose electors itself.

Louisiana's committee, meeting Sept. 10, declared the Thurmond-Wright States' Rights ticket to be the State Democratic Party candidates, knocking Mr. Truman off the ballot completely.

Bears 150 Signatures

A petition qualifying Mr. Truman for the Louisiana ballot was filed Friday afternoon with the secretary of state. It bore 150 signatures and was filed by Perry Turner of Baton Rouge, an AFL union official.

The ticket was headed simply "The Truman - Barkley ticket" without Democratic or further designation.

Democrats From SC Off To Meeting

Columbia Record

Sat 7-17-48

Hasty Trip Scheduled

The South Carolina Democratic party continued its anti-Truman fight today as resolved members headed for Birmingham and a hastily called "States' Rights" conference.

Suddenly changing his plans, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond announced yesterday that he would attend, and today led the state delegation.

Prior to his arrival in Columbia yesterday morning from the national Democratic convention, Thurmond had declared he would not attend the conference. He had stated there would not be enough time between the national convention and the Birmingham conference.

The Alabama meet was called by Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright shortly after the Mississippi delegation had walked out of the Philadelphia convention.

Notice was served, however, at a preliminary States' Rights meeting at Jackson, Miss., May 11, that a conference would be held at Birmingham after the national convention if President Truman or a similar civil rights sympathizer were named on the Democratic presidential ticket.

Although officials of the Birmingham meeting have stated the occasion will be one of conference, the event has been boomed within two days to a convention of considerable proportion.

Arrangement officers have hired a band and have prepared standards declaring the Dixie position, although the conference is slated to last only a few hours.

The conference procedure was not clear, but delegates are expected to formulate some definite course of action designed to drive a wedge in the campaigns of both the Truman Democrats and the Republicans.

Sat 7-17-48

Senator Richard Russell of Georgia, who received 263 votes for the Democratic nomination, has announced he will not attend the conference.

The meeting is expected to be attended by delegates from at least 12 states.

Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas, who was named permanent chairman of the State's Rights group before the Jackson convention recessed, is slated to preside at the Alabama meeting.

Thurmond was to inspect the 228th AAA group, a South Carolina National Guard unit, now in training at Camp Stewart, Ga., prior to visiting Birmingham.

The chief executive and his party left Columbia at 7:55 a. m. today. Thurmand was accompanied by Brig. Gen. James C. Dozier, State Senator R. M. Kennedy of Camden; Cliff Harper of Columbia; J. W. Hicks of radio station WCOS, Columbia; William D. Workman of Columbia, and George MacNabb, the governor's press secretary.

The group was expected to return to Columbia tonight by way of Anderson, where Governor Thurmond is due to make an address at Five Forks high school at a Masonic meeting.

DIXIECRATS TO STAGE DRIVE FOR $1,000,000

Headquarters In Washington Open Near White House

Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(INS)—AntiTruman "Dixiecrats" opened Washington headquarters Friday near the White House and predicted they will win 100 electoral votes for Presidential Candidate J. Strom Thurmond.

Sat 8-14-48

The States' Rights Democrats said they will launch a county-by-county "grass roots" drive to raise a $1,000,000 war chest for the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

Half-a-mile away from Dixiecrat headquarters, White House sources indicated that President Truman will fly to Detroit on Labor Day for his "kickoff" campaign speech.

The President is expected to make an all-out bid for the labor vote in his address in the union-strong motor capital of the world. He is expected to emphasize that the Democratic Party is pledged to repeal the Taft-Hartley Labor Law.

W. Austin Seay of Winona, Miss., assistant national campaign director for the Dixiecrats, asserted that the fourth party hopes to capture at least eight Southern states for Thurmond, South Carolina governor, and Fielding Wright, Mississippi governor and Thurmond's running mate.

Sat 8-14-48

Seay listed states "likely to go for Thurmond and Wright" as Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Georgia, Texas, Florida, Arkansas and Louisiana. He conceded that North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia "are in doubt."

States' Righters Lose Ballot Spot In Indiana Voting

Columbia Record

Wed 9-8-48

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 8—(UP)—A court order restrained the Indiana state election board today from placing the States' Rights ticket of candidates on the state ballot.

Marion county circuit Judge Lloyd Claycombe issued a temporary order at the request of an Indianapolis voter, [illegible] Hanley, who charged that the party's policy and philosophy violates the Indiana and federal constitutions.

Columbia S.C.

Hanley sought a permanent injunction to keep the party off the ballot. He said the party "seeks to discriminate against minority groups." The election board already had given the States' Righters a place on the ballot.

Sen. Hill Says States' Rights Not Only Issue

Senior Legislator Tells Of Beneficial Laws Passed By Congress

The Advertiser

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. —(AP)— Sen. Lister Hill (D-Ala.) wants the South to consider "other rights" along with states' rights.

In a Labor Day address, the senior Alabama Senator said:

"To talk about states' rights and go no further is to tell only part of the story. There are also other rights, other duties and other responsibilities."

Tues 9-7-48

Hill said he had fought for states' rights in the Senate for 10 years and would continue to do so, but he devoted the major portion of his speech to outlining steps taken under federal laws.

Backs States' Rights

He has announced he would vote for the States' Rights ticket in November.

"Our federal government outlawed child labor and the sweat shop," he said, "gave to labor its right to collective bargaining, and provided minimum wages and decent hours of work."

He said the housing shortage could be met only by federal legislation.

Montgomery Ala

Hill listed as federal benefits, which could not have come from the states, the GI bill of rights, old age pensions, federal waterways, elimination of freight rate discriminations, federal aid to hospitals, and to education.

"Above all rights, stands the right of the people to live in peace and freedom and human dignity," he said. "As we fight for states' rights, let us fight for all rights which will help to build a strong, a free America and a world of lasting peace.

"For if war comes—atomic war in all its horror and destruction—these will be no states' rights nor any other rights upon this earth."

States' Righters Open Campaign In Louisiana

TALLULAH, LA. —(AP)— Vice President Candidate Fielding L. Wright opened the States' Rights Democrats' campaign in Louisiana Friday with the assertion that the constitution is jeopardized.

Wright, governor of Mississippi, spoke on Constitution Day at the annual deep south cotton carnival. He accused President Truman, New York Gov. Thomas Dewey and Henry Wallace of "campaigning for the presidency on a platform of unconstitutionality."

9-18-48

"These three men are going up and down the country asking for votes and promising a platform which would mean the destruction of the constitution," Wright said, adding:

"Our constitution is jeopardized all of our liberties are held in the balance."

Wright said that Germans, lulled into a false sense of security, were led to destruction and despair through Hitler's "program very much akin to America's present day threat and which is referred to as the civil rights program."

Southern Democrats were lulled into a false sense of security, the Mississippi governor continued, before abandoning the two-thirds vote necessary to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

"When our power was gone the infiltrated groups within it commenced to kick us around," he said. "We were kicked about in Chicago in 1944. We were insulted in Philadelphia in 1948.

"Our constitution is in danger today just as our Democratic Party was in danger when the sinister voice of infiltration whispered into our ears and robbed us of the two-third rule."

NC Dixiecrats Expect To Get Needed Names

Columbia Record

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 19—(UP)—North Carolina Dixiecrats were expected to have 10,000 certified signatures of registered voters when Wake county Superior Court opened hearings tomorrow on their suit to place Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina on the November ballot as a presidential candidate.

Thurs 8-19-48

Columbia S.C.

Raymond Maxwell, executive secretary of the state board of elections, said today county boards had certified 6,844 of the signatures on the party's petitions for a spot on the November ballot. He said 13 counties, including populous Gaston and Mecklenburg, had not yet reported on checks of party petitions. But he said "it is probable" that the Dixiecrats will have 10,000 certified names by tomorrow.

The Dixiecrats' suit contended 10,000 signatures of certified voters were all that state law required.

But Attorney General Harry McMullan said the state would defend regulations of the state board of elections which were the basis for turning down the Dixiecrats' petition on Aug 3. He said the board was within its authority in passing rules early this spring to govern formation of new parties. One of those rules disallowed signatures of voters who participated in either primary. The other required that the petitions of hopeful parties must be checked and certified by county boards of elections at a cost of 10 cents per name before the petitions were turned in to the state board of elections by midnight August 3.

Thur. 8-19-48

The Dixiecrat attorneys asked that the Wake county Superior Court declare those rules unreasonable and invalid and recognize the party's right to a place on the ballot.

The Progressive part won a place on the November ballot for Henry A. Wallace, the board of elections ruled their petitions filed August 3 met all requirements.

Here It Is

EDITOR, The Advertiser: I am disturbed about your attempt to put yourself in the same class with Gessner T. McCorvey and the writer by claiming that all of us are bolters. If there is any danger of your getting entirely on our side, I want you to notify me in advance so I can change my plan of action. I can think of nothing more catastrophic than having the approval of The Advertiser.

You charge that:

"Now in 1928 Horace Wilkinson and Tom Heflin ran out on Al Smith. They are called bolters and never was there any argument about it."

My Webster insists that a "bolter" is:

"A voter who refuses to support his party."

In 1928 I did not enter the Democratic primary and refused to do so. I merely state that for the records. Not that it makes any difference because my stand has been vindicated by history. I never attempted to influence the election of electors by the Democratic Party in Alabama for its 1928 primary further than to appeal to the Democrats of Alabama not to enter the primary. It is true we were called "bolters" by The Advertiser and others, but God forbid that what the Advertiser calls people should be taken as true.

Montgomery Advertiser

I notice that Henry Wallace has jumped the Republican and the Democratic Parties. For some strange reason, The Advertiser has never referred to him as a "bolter." I presume that Henry's pink tinge makes him sacred in the eyes of The Ad-

Montgomery, Ala

I wish I could accept without reservation your statement that The Advertiser is bolting Nominee Truman for certain well known reasons "share and share alike with Mr. McCorvey."

Sun. 8-8-48

I may be wrong about it but it is impossible for me to conceive of The Advertiser being motivated by the same high patriotic impulses that influence Gessner McCorvey. It is possible that you are both traveling in the same direction but that is all that is possible.

The hardest blow delivered to the States Rights campaign in Alabama was when The Advertiser decided to support the nominees of the Democratic Party for presidential and vice-presidential electors. We are unable to understand why this misfortune was visited upon us.

If one more newspaper like The Advertiser supports the States Rights program, it might have to fold up. 8-8-48

PROPER TO GET EXCITED

The Advertiser

Editor Ralph McGill of The Atlanta Constitution protests that he is "for" States' Rights, always has been and always will be, but complains that too many Southerners would cloak "States' Wrongs" behind "States' Rights."

Perhaps Mr. McGill has correctly put his finger on a few of our professional champions of wrongheadedness, such as rabble rouser Gerald L. K. Smith who tried to horn in on the first Birmingham States' Rights meeting. But Mr. McGill certainly overemphasizes that complaint and has not employed with equal vigor the alliterative art to complain that too many Northerners use the phrase "Civil Rights" to cloak "Civil Wrongs."

Mon. 8-16-48

Montgomery Ala

Semantics aside, States' Rights are worth getting excited about whenever they are threatened. They are certainly being threatened today in many different ways.

There are certainly as many, if not more, wrongheaded people who would impose a Civil Disturbance program on the nation in the guise of a "Civil Rights" program than there are wrongheaded ones who desire that States' Rights be protected for the fancied purpose of perpetuating wrongs.

When the Constitutional Convention finished its work on the basic body of our laws, it was immediately apparent that acceptance of the Constitution depended upon the inclusion of ten amendments. These ten amendments have come to be known as the Bill of Rights, and the tenth was a States' Rights amendment. It reads:

ARTICLE X. (Rights of States Under Constitution)

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

The framers of the Constitution were constantly in fear of creating an instrument which could be perverted to enslave the citizens instead of insure their freedom.

Being astute and realistic men, they also realized that there must be some unit of government which allowed to the people the democratic choice between a free government and a despotism. They tried by every means at their command to make sure that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to ever pervert the Federal Government into a despotism without resort to armed force. They wrought well.

The next level of government was to be the states, and it was realized then that these units could democratically decide to become despotisms. It so came to pass in Louisiana during the days of Longism.

Today we generally use the term "police state" to describe a despotic form of government.

Mon. 8-16-48

When the Constitution was being constructed despotic kings occupied the places now held by totalitarian dictators. Then as now, they were equally offensive to free men.

But the Constitution would, so most of its framers thought, assist states to recant if by some mischance a misguided people voluntarily chose to turn a representative state government into a despotism. That has also proved to be true. Nowhere else in the world is that decision a peacefully reversible one.

The foundation of any despotism is an all pervasive police force at the command of a single man. The real danger in the proposals which would abridge States' Rights is the fact that enforcement of them would require the existence of a larger and larger federal police force.

For all his sins and ineptitudes, President Truman would never misuse such a police force. It is likewise unthinkable that Mr. Dewey, if he becomes president, would misuse such a force. But there stops our vision. Beyond the horizon there are other men who will inevitably occupy that office. It is too much to assume that there is not a scoundrel among them.

That is the basic reason why one should, if he values his and his sons' freedom, get excited and heatedly oppose arrogation to the federal government of rights reserved to the states.

Down The Dark Road To Nowhere

Birmingham News

An Editorial In The Montgomery Advertiser

The South will get nowhere with the Dixiecrat movement. It is the road to nowhere.

Its leadership is bankrupt.

It quite evidently does not even command a wide Southern following.

It is entirely negative in its approach. Its inflamed and uninspired leaders did little more than bellow and cry "nigger." That is far short of an answer to the South's grave problem.

Birmingham, Ala

The Advertiser has no doubt that the South's standing has been greatly damaged by that which boiled out of the nation's radio sets from the Birmingham cauldron.

The Advertiser belives that we are more than ever estranged from our allies, present and potential.

Thurs. 7-22-48

As a result of the Birmingham convention Sen. Claghorn is a less fictional character to the nation than before. Like it or not, we have got to have the goodwill of the people of other regions of the United States. We will not avail ourselves of it by shouting "nigger." We cannot win friends by hoarse blasphemies and the appearance of unreasoning obstinacy.

* * *

The Birmingham convention even lacked the intelligent leadership to make it plain to the nation that we in the South mean to give the colored man his break, that we are providing him schools and health protection and encouraging his economic advancement.

Instead of this constructive and impressive approach, the Dixiecrats featured the wild and crude Horace Wilkinson with his lewd "nigger" stories.

The meeting was of a kind such as attracted the clammy and sinister presence of Gerald L. K. Smith, who mutters darkly that the Jews and Negroes are getting too much power.

By 1 o'clock the American Broadcasting Company had cut the convention off its network because it was too inflammatory.

Thurs. 7-22-48

The convention was by no means representative of the South. Few states had full delegations.

Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas was in Birmingham but held to his hotel suite and did not fully participate in the proceedings. He declined to be the nominee of the convention.

Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia, who has so often and so ably carried the fight against civil rights measures in congressional struggles, sent word aforetime that he would not allow his name to be used.

Alabama's two senators remained away from the meeting, as did its congressmen with the exception of Birmingham's Laurie Battle.

The governors, senators and congressmen of other Southern states were not in Birmingham. They were conspicuously absent. The South's leadership was not attracted.

* * *

As The Anniston Star says, it was more a "Roman holiday" than convention.

The convention shouted "nigger" and burned President Truman in effigy. That is not the kind of things to disarm and convince the people in other regions that the South is responsible and decent.

The leading newspapers of the South are unanimous in deploring the ugly carnival scene.

The South does not want to be judged by what went on in Birmingham. But in large and melancholy degree it will be so judged, and at a time when we need to command the maximum in good will. We will be hobbled by malice and glee over the grotesque marathon spluttering. Gov. Laney said:

"The spirit of obstinacy and revenge is not the spirit of the Southland."

But the convention will make a lot of people think so.

Alabama's presidential electors are pledged to withhold Alabama's votes from Truman, but they are not pledged to travel with these vengeful despoilers of our dignity and good name.

HILL AND AN ALL-DAY SPEECH

Montgomery Advertiser

Senator Lister Hill and former Gov. Frank Dixon are two of Alabama's most effective enemies of the Civil Disturbance proposals. But at the same time Hill is holding back the avalanche on the floor of the United States Senate, Dixon is subtly putting the screws to the senator as a malingerer in the Dixiecrat cause.

The Advertiser isn't at all inclined to compromise its neutrality in the matter nor to take sides, for both of these gents are more than able to take care of themselves. They're both tough babies, ruthless and unsparing. Montgomery, Ala.

But we call attention to what Dixon, McCorvey & Associates are trying to do to Hill because their success or failure has heavy bearing upon the destiny of the Senate seat now occupied by Hill. In what we trust will be the lush and prosperous Spring of 1950, Hill will be standing for reelection. Wed. 8-11-48

It is manifest that an effort will be made to demonstrate that Hill was a Summer soldier and a sunshine patriot of the Alabama Democratic Party.

It will be charged that he faltered, zigged and zagged in the effort to abort Truman's nomination.

It will be charged that he ratted out on the Dixiecrat cause, that he was no real enemy of the Civil Disturbance proposals.

This much is indisputably true of Hill and every other delegate Alabama dispatched to the Democratic National Convention. Hill, in Philadelphia, acted in precise accordance with his campaign pledge to the people of Alabama. He bore himself as the voters commissioned him to bear himself.

We witnessed that, it's in the record, it's unchallengeable.

DIXON is entirely privileged and justified in seeking to make Hill reveal whether he is Dixiecrat malingerer or Grenadier.

It is altogether in the public's interest that politicians seek to fry each other's fat.

We will even proceed to observe that Dixon is on a warm trail, for we conjecture that Hill takes a very dim view of the Dixiecrat defection and its future. We cannot imagine him being cuffed into active support of the Thurmond-Wright ticket, which he regards as a protest device and nothing more.

If that is true, if Dixon and associates can exploit that to Hill's detriment—so be it. Wed. 8-11-48

But that is apart from Hill's performance in Philadelphia. There, like all the other delegates, Hill proved faithful to his covenant. He even said that if nobody else would nominate Senator Russell for President, he himself would do so.

Alabama's walk-out faction could not nominate an opponent for Truman, because by the time nominations were called for, they had stalked out of the convention.

Hill's detractors like to suggest that he is lukewarm in his opposition to Civil Disturbance. While these insinuating suggestions were being sprayed about, Hill was on the floor of the United States Senate as a star performer of the 21 filibusterers obstructing the Truman proposals.

ON TUESDAY, AUG. 5, during the special session, Hill spoke the entire day to block action on the Truman anti-poll tax bill. Hill told the Senate, where laws are enacted or rejected:

> Mr. President, I am unalterably opposed to the bill making unlawful the requirement for the payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite to voting in a primary or other election for national officers. I am one of the members of this body who have banded themselves together to use every parliamentary means and every power at their command to prevent the passage of this bill . . .
>
> The Congress has no power under the Constitution to pass such a bill. To do so would be to rape the Constitution . . . and if the Congress should once commit this rape, it would be opening wide the door; no one could foretell how many other illegitimate interferences there might be by the Congress . . . how many rapes there might be of the rights of the states as safeguarded and protected by the Constitution . . .

HILL spoke the rest of the day to this issue. He and associate filibusterers, 20 in number, blocked the Truman assault. Hill was in the front rank of the South's battle.

At the same time, Dixon and his associates were fighting the South's battle on another front with the Thurmond-Wright offensive.

Thus, Hill and Dixon are each defending Southern interests according to his opportunities and lights.

We don't care a hoot below what Dixon, McCorvey, et al do to make the most of Hill's Dixiecrat malingering. 8-11-48

But as a matter of fairness, this newspaper considers it a duty to point out that Hill in Philadelphia acted in accordance with the people's mandate, and that on the floor of the United States Senate last week he struck the blows that count.

States Rights Dinner Slated At Manning

Thur. 9-23-48

Record

MANNING, Sept. 23.—Clarendon States Righters will have a supper Friday night, September 24 at White's Streamliner in Manning.

An estimated crowd of over 200 is expected to attend. The price for each plate is $10. 9-23-48

The chairman is Charlton DuRant, Sr., one of the two presidential electors at large of the Thurmond-Wright Carolina Democracy. D. C. (Rudy) DuBose is treasurer.

James H. Hammond of Columbia, will be guest speaker at the supper. Columbia S. C.

The governor has written a letter in which he says: "I am delighted to hear that my Clarendon friends are preparing to have a supper in Manning Friday night. There is nothing more important before our people at this time than a clear definition of their rights as American citizens. I am greatly encouraged by the cooperative attitude of our people and I hope the sturdy citizens of Clarendon county will support our effort with that enthusiasm which has always characterized them."

DIXIECRATS DEMAND OKLAHOMA LISTING

[illegible]

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 14 (AP)—States Rights Democrats of Oklahoma renounced today the national Democratic party and cheered the candidacies of two Southern Governors for President and Vice President.

William H. (Alfa Bill) Murray, former Oklahoma Governor, opened the morning session and called for the defeat of President Truman.

About 150 persons attended the convention to find a way of placing on the ballot the States Rights candidates, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi.

Ross Lillard, Oklahoma City attorney, elected permanent chairman, said that if the Dixiecrats failed to get a place on the ballot they would undertake a "paste-over" campaign.

"If we can't do anything else we'll print a million ballots and they'll be placed in the hands of every voter in Oklahoma," he declared. "Then the ballots with names of our candidates will be pasted over the names of those who claim to be the constitutional Democrats."

The state election board has said, however, that "paste-ons" would be considered mutilation and would cancel the ballot.

Thurmond Blasts Three Opponents

Advertiser

Sat 10-2-48

BALTIMORE—(AP)—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond said Friday night the nation needs deliverance from the three politicians —Dewey, Truman and Wallace."

Montgomery Ala

He declared that all three, by stupidity or by desire, are engaged in a traitorous, dishonest attempt to buy the presidency with the force bills designed to catch the votes of minority groups.

Thurmond came into a state where his States' Right party has no official place on the ballot.

He got a welcome from Gov. William Preston Lane, Jr., as chief executive of a sister state but "not as a candidate."

Sat 10-2-48

The States' Rights Democratic nominee for president said that in an effort to buy the presidency the three politicians he listed "have devised a vote-getting program which hides the most vicious assault upon representative government ever launched in this country.

Republican Support

To the Editor of The News:

It occurs to this writer that an opportunity confronts us, Republicans in Alabama, to give some weight and effect to our November voting by indorsing now and voting with the "Dixiecrats" in the forthcoming election. Now, as in the past, no number of votes cast for our national ticket, short of a majority of all votes cast in the state will have any weight and effect, and since it is well known, there is little possibility of the majority vote going to the Dewey ticket, that vote could and should be directed where it will at least have some weight. And that end could be obtained by joining the "Dixiecrats." It could be that these same "Dixiecrats" would have much to "say" in the electoral college and in the event their nominees could not win, they would be more inclined to the Dewey ticket than to the one whose head "stabbed them in the back."

Alabama Republicans are Southerners as well as Republicans and have as vital interest in the so-called "civil liberties" question as have the others. The unbroken record of their party of always sending white delegations to their national conventions indicates their attitude on the race question.

The office-holding crowd in the Democratic Party and those who want office and power will probably wage an undercover, pussy-footing campaign for the "boy who plowed the straightest furrow in his county" and it is possible the "Dixiecrats" might really heed this Republican help.

An intelligent Republican may come from the voting booth, swelled with pride for his loyalty, but what he has really done is to commit an absurd act, that of throwing his vote to the winds. Under the present setup, a vote for the Dewey ticket in Alabama means simply nothing. The voter must take his pay in pride and satisfaction.

THURMOND EXPECTS 100 ELECTOR VOTES

States' Rights Candidate Says Ballot May Go to the House, Where He Has a Chance

New York Times

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Presidential candidate of the States' Rights Democratic party, predicted today that he would get more than 100 electoral votes, enough to throw the election into the House of Representatives.

He stressed that in this event the House must then choose among the top three tickets, and that with the small states holding the balance of power, he stood a good chance of election since each state delegation would cast a single vote.

The States' Rights candidate refused to forecast the exact states he would carry, but said that he would win "most, if not all, of the Southern states." He will appear on the ballot in eleven Southern states, which have a total of 127 electoral votes.

Sat. 10-2-48

In addition, he and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, his running mate, are on the ballot in Kentucky with eleven votes, North Dakota with four and hope to be on in Maryland with eight and Oklahoma with ten.

Mr. Thurmond denied to reporters that his party was being financed to a major degree by oil interests of Texas, or that the net effect of his candidacy would be the election of a Republican President.

"If we had not entered this campaign," he said, "Governor Dewey would have carried a great part of the South. So, instead of helping Governor Dewey, I'm actually taking votes away from him."

If elected, the candidate asserted he would see to it that members of his Cabinet were "true Americans—persons who put love of country above politics and the welfare of the country over the ballot box." He said that he would be "pleased to ask Jim Byrnes back as Secretary of State."

The Governor said that he believed the Taft-Hartley Act needed some amendments that "can be worked out," and that he had favored Federal aid to education, but had "become uneasy since the civil rights proposals were made and he had seen where they could lead."

Sat. 10-2-48

Before replying to questions Mr. Thurmond read an 1,800-word statement in which he denied that his party was founded by racial prejudice.

"Racial integrity as well as peace and good order," he said, "requires laws providing for the separation of the two races. We believe in racial integrity and are opposed to racial 'integration.'"

Student States' Rights Groups Are Developed

Mon. 9-27-48

Record 9-27-48

Organization of student groups of States' Rights Democratic supporters at colleges in the state is being pushed by a group of University of South Carolina students.

Mon.

Raymon Schwartz, Jr., of Sumter, a student and temporary chairman of the university's 200 organized student States' Righters, said the group was seeking formation of similar organizations in other colleges in the state.

He said his group would meet Oct. 5, with the 4,200 student body invited, to perfect formal organization of the University's States Rights club.

Say President Bent On Wrecking White Supremacy In U. S.

Sat. 5-15-48

JACKSON, Miss. — Fresh from his blast at Negroes and civil rights, Sunday, Mississippi Gov. Fielding Wright was set to lead those southerners who would follow him into a 'stand-by party following a rump meeting here Monday.

Based on the idea that President Truman because of his civil rights stand, is the deadly enemy of white supremacy, the fourth party is being formed to withhold all southern electoral votes from the President in the event he is renominated for office.

Governors from four southern states, and high ranking Democratic officials from half a dozen others were represented at the session. The meeting was strictly hush-hush, but it was learned on good authority that their strategy will follow four general points.

1. Organize a "States' Rights" party based on opposition to the President and his civily rights program, and opposition to centralization of power in the Federal government.

2. Keep the new party standing by until the results of the Democratic convention can be foreseen. This means until it is known whether anti-Truman and anti-civil rights demands will be met.

3. Stage a walkout of all southern Democratic delegates if President Truman's nomination becomes a certainity, and call a rival rump convention.

4. Name a presidential candidate, and launch a nationwide campaign for his election. Some of the proponents hope a split in the electoral vote will throw the election into the house of representatives.

Most reticent to comment, was Gov. Wright himself, who is the spiritual and physical leader of the revolt. His caginess suggested that he is not sure of full southern support of his plan. He did say he is sure a program will be laid down to withhold the south's electoral vote from the Chief Executive however.

Other governors either present ar represented at the meeting in Municipal Auditorium were Ben T. Laney of Arkansas, J. Storm Thurmond of South Carolina, who made the keynote speech, and James E. "Kissing Jim" Folsom of Alabama.

Gov. Beauford J. Jester of Texas is still wavering, although Texas Democrats were in the audience. Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia did not attend, but the group is counting heavily on Virginia's support.

Virginia's Electors May Vote Truman Ticket; Dixie Still Has Hopes

Wed. 8-25-48

Montgomery Ala

WASHINGTON—(AP) — States Rights Democrats opposing President Truman received a jolt Tuesday with word that Virginia's 11 Democratic electors probably will string along with the Truman-Barkley ticket.

Southerners working for the Thurmond-Wright presidential ticket as a protest against Mr. Truman's civil rights program, said they are still hoping, however, to get on the Virginia ballot—as independents, if not Democrats.

Another Dixie Democrat development was the refusal of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, States Rights Party candidate for president, to call a special session of his state legislature to revise election laws. He said it would be "inadvisable."

May Be Challenged

A Greenville County Democratic executive committee requested the session. It contended that unless the legislature outlines the method for selecting presidential electors, the state's electoral college vote this year may be challenged in court. A law providing for nomination of electors by the state Democratic Executive Committee was repealed in 1944.

Thurmond left Columbia, S. C., Tuesday for campaign conferences and a speech Thursday in Arkansas.

Wed. 8-25-48

The major party candidates were quietly working out campaign plans—President Truman on the yacht Williamsburg, and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey at his farm at Pawling, N. Y.

Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party candidate, was campaigning in Kentucky and Ohio. In a speech at Louisville, Wallace asked Mr. Truman to defer the draft and turn the present Moscow talks into a "great conference" on all differences with Russia.

Calls Civil Rights Program a 'Political Trick'

New York N.Y.

MADISONVILLE, Ky., Sept. 25 (AP).—Governor J. Strom Thurmond of North Carolina, States' Rights Democratic Presidential candidate, said here today "I'd rather be right than President" in "this age of political expediency."

Sun. 5-26-48

Governor Thurmond recalled the Kentucky resolutions of Thomas Jefferson declaring "the indestructible rights of states."

"Those rights," he said, "and those of us who follow the course made clear by the United States Constitution, find our pathway obstructed by a new and evil kind of political doctrine.

"Today, the candidates of the Republicans, the radical Democrats and the Wallace reds claim to have discovered the road to great new freedoms and human rights.

"But the detour they ask us to take is the road to totalitarianism. These candidates pose as bearers of the torch of liberty. But the flame they carry is a firebrand from the steppes of Russia."

He called the civil-rights program "a cheap political trick designed to buy the votes of small but powerful racial minorities in big-city states." He said opposition quickly developed in the Southern states, "the cradle of American democracy."

Dixiecrat

The Constitution

Editor Constitution: I have just read your editorial by Ralph McGill entitled "Her Mouth Is Smoother Than Oil." I agree there isn't any Communism on either side, but what is the real purpose of your continued attacks on the Dixiecrats? If Georgia should vote the Dixiecrat ticket, thereby taking the electoral votes from Truman, would it not have the same effect as voting the Republican ticket? Personally, I do not object to voting the National Republican ticket, but prefer to vote for some of the Democratic nominees locally. There are some, however, who are unalterably opposed to Truman but consider it an unpardonable sin to vote Republican.

Mon. 9-27-48

If the Democratic Party has drifted so far from its early tenets and is controlled by large city machines it is no longer a party for the masses and should probably be broken up and reorganized on sounder principles. I do not say the Dixiecrat Party is the best instrument for accomplishing this. There may be better means. The Dixiecrats would be unknown today except as a protest to the President.

Atlanta Ga.

If the ticket for the general election should be arranged so the voters can vote the Dewey-Warren ticket for President and vote for the Georgia Democratic nominees, there will be no occasion to leave the Democratic Party and Georgia can be kept independent.

Dixiecrats 'Hold Fire' Under Negro's Attack

The Constitution 7-9-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 8—(AP)—Southern Democrats held their fire today as a Negro leader called them "bigots" and demanded that President Truman's civil rights program be written into the 1948 Democratic Platform. Fri.

The Southerners not only kept quiet but one of them predicted that a compromise will be reached in the battle over racial issues which has started a small war within the Democratic Party.

Sen. Hoey, of North Carolina, told a reporter:

"I am confident that we can reach an agreement on civil rights that will be satisfactory to President Truman and probably satisfactory to the South. We do not, however, expect to satisfy the extreme elements of either end."

Walter White, of New York, Executive Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the Democratic Platform Drafting Committee: 7-9-48

"The Democratic Party has been too much dominated by those who have attained and held power through disfranchisement, lynching and racial discrimination. The day of reckoning has come when the Democratic Party must decide whether it is going to permit bigots to dictate its philosophy."

The CIO also urged that the Truman program be adopted—including laws to ban poll taxes, lynching and racial discrimination in hiring. This is the program the Southern Democrat leaders don't like.

The CIO asked the Democrats to adopt a "Roosevelt platform." And the CIO spokesman, Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey, rapped the '48 Republican platform as "one of deceit, designed to fool the people." He said there is nothing in the GOP platform that attracts the interest of labor.

The CIO proposals included repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor act, price controls, broader social security, Federal housing, Federal aid to education, health insurance, an excess profits tax and other measures.

Joseph A. Beirne, President of the Communications Workers of America, also asked for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and proposed a lot of other planks. But unlike the CIO he said nothing about lynching, poll taxes and fair employment practices. Fri.

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, a Negro religious leader from New York, appeared with Walter White. They said they spoke for 21 national Negro organizations with 6,000,000 members. 7-9-48

The handful of Southerners on the committee said not a word. It was a surprising contrast with the stormy reception White and Tobias got when they testified before a Republican platform committee here last month.

SAYS DIXIE FEARS 'REGIMENTED LIFE'

Wright States 'Race Problem Only Side Issue

The Times-Picayune New Orleans, La.

(The Associated Press)

Washington, July 3.—Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi declared today that "the race problem is only a side issue" in the fight which he and other Southerners are waging to maintain states' rights.

The major issue, he said in a signed article in the July American magazine, is "whether America shall perpetuate and maintain the system established by the nation's founders." Sun.

"This system guarantees that the people, through their respective states, shall continue to rule themselves," he said. "Its surrender would mean eventually that a regimented, centralized government would be in a position to dictatate the course of the lives of our citizens." 7-4-48

He described the Southerners' program as "a grass-roots campaign against centralization and regimentation in government—against snooping federal 'fieldmen' sticking their noses into the business and social activity of free American citizens."

Wright served notice that the states' rights group will carry their fight to the floor of the Democratic national convention which opens in Philadelphia July 12.

Regardless of what happens there, he said, the states' righters will carry on their campaign "until the threat of a dictatorial centralized government has been removed.

Wright declared that the anti-lynching, anti-poll tax and so-called fair employment practice legislation sought by President Truman is unconstitutional as well as an invasion of states' rights.

"There are numerous Southern leaders who feel that the poll tax should be repealed, but that it's not a prerogative of Congress to repeal it by legislation," he said. "Federal repeal of the poll tax may come legally only through a constitutional amendment."

Discussing the proposed fair employment practice legislation, which would bar discrimination in employment because of race, creed or color, the Mississippi governor said: Sun. 7-4-48

"The government has no more right to tell an employer whom he must hire than to dictate to a worker the job he must take.

"Except in emergency, such as war, free Americans have the legal right to be employes, go into business and become employers, or loaf, as they see fit."

Concerted Southern Action Foreseen In Truman Battle

Montgomery, Ala.

The Advertiser Sat 7-17-48

By GEOFFREY BIRT

Alabama Journal Writer

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—More and more angry Southern Democrats were arriving hourly in Birmingham Friday night for a big states rights conference or convention, here Saturday.

No positive program had been decided on late Friday afternoon, except for a unanimously expressed determination to keep President Truman out of the White House during the next four years. And, also, to force the national party to recognize the claims of the South.

Regain Control

All delegates converging on Birmingham seemed equally determined to try and set up a lasting Southern Democratic organization which would have the effect of regaining the lost control of the leadership of the party. Despite considerable talk in the hotels along these lines, there was, privately, and "off the record" some doubts expressed as to whether or not these objects could be obtained. Sat.

Early Friday morning, the conference began to look like a possible "fizzle" which was being organized under chaotic conditions. By 4 o'clock this afternoon, however, the conference looking very much alive, was taking shape, and ideas were crystallizing. 7-17-48

Here is a diary of events as they have occurred here Friday:

First real action in this Birmingham Dixiecrat convention or conference occurred at 10:45 Friday morning when the Silver Comet train drove into the Magic City bringing home some of the defeated Alabama delegates. A sizeable group of news, radio and camera men were on hand to receive them. One newsman said it looked as though they were waiting to receive the retreat from Gettysburg.

Flays West

There was no spirit of defeat about Birmingham's Safety Commissioner Eugene "Bull" Connor, however, when he arrived. "Bull" seemed as happy and excited as an Alabamian returning from the Rose Bowl after a Crimson Tide victory. Connor, nevertheless, vented his spleen in particular on California and the West for their alignment with "the big city bosses, political machines and Negroes who have seized control of the party."

"Bull" suggested that the South now start a political agitation and force the West to feed its starving Indians, and force them, also, to let the same starving Indians vote, which they are not allowed to do now.

Favors Laney

Slow speaking, methodical Albert Stapp, who, like Connor, had also been a delegate from the state at large, agreed that one of the chief objects of the conference would be to keep President Truman out of the White House "but first we must find an outstanding man in the South and the nation, such as Gov. Laney, for a presidential candidate," he said. The Advertiser

A delegate from the Ninth Congressional District, Jess Edwards, mayor of Brighton, said that Southern Democrats should now band themselves together and organize for the future. He thought the future rather than the present, would be the program of the Saturday meeting.

When his attention was drawn to the fact that so far only three Southern States—Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas—were apparently to be represented actively, and that Georgia and Louisiana were absenting themselves altogether, Edwards replied:

Concerted Action

"There are conditions in other states preventing their active participation at this point—such as gubernatorial races—but eventually all Southern States will band together and swing into action."

Edwards believed that Saturday's meeting was for the purpose of making a start in that direction. He hoped, also, that Alabama would remain united in such a cause. Montgomery Ala.

While these, and other delegates, were being interviewed, a committee was hastily trying to organize Birmingham's large City Auditorium for the meeting. No one knew who was to attend, or how many would be present. Most of the 6,000 seats, it was surmized, would be occupied by onlookers—just as was the case in Philadelphia, it was stated. Sat.

Even A Band

Some of the trappings to make it look like a real convention hall were being hastily assembled. Even a band has been hired. Electricians were putting down wiring for spotlights, and for the use of film companies and radio networks. 7-17-48

In another part of Birmingham, former Governor Frank Dixon, as Alabama's States Rights chairman, assisted by Horace Wilkinson and Sidney Smyer, were trying to arrange a definite program.

Important details could not be decided, however, until Governor Laney arrived. Laney is general chairman of the whole Southern States Rights Movement.

The gentlemen from Texas arrived here after lunch. Among them was Palmer Bradley, who looks like a big time cattle man, but is really in oil. Bradley had just come in from Philadelphia.

Texas Support

Officially, Texas is down as merely sending a group of "observers" to this conference or convention. "Well [illegible] other Texas delegate, Ralph B. Lee, said. "You should have heard of the argument we had in the hotel room before the roll call."

"Yep," said Bradley, "don't go making a hero out of Morrow. He was prepared to vote for the Democratic nominee whoever he was. Some of these chaps don't seem to realize that the people are against it down here."

Then Bradley added: "If we can all stick together we've got between us 140 votes sewed up, and we can run the country. Texas believes the same as you, and we are with you. We've got to get together."

Another Texan, J. C. Underwood, an up-state retired lawyer, said the Texas delegation had been sent to Philadelphia "to fight Truman and his principles to the last ditch—then support the party's nominee."

"But when it came to the point," he said. "there was very strong sentiment against that final action" and the votes went to Russell

To Offer Leader

Underwood believes that "the only thing we've got which we can do at this Birmingham meeting is the chance of putting up a man for president—"someone like Laney," he said.

The first visible sign of the conference's opening was the registration of delegates to the meeting in the ball room of the Tutwiler Hotel. First man to register was Bob Neblett, of Jackson, Mississippi.

The Advertiser

Northern newspaper reporters and radio men are also arriving.

The Floridians reached Birmingham about 2 o'clock. Those talked to are in favor of organizing. Those spoken to have indicated that they will take part in any debates that develop. John A. Stewart said he was in Birmingham "helping to form a program."

Montgomery, Ala.

Stewart, who comes from the far south of Florida, said that he was like other members of the Florida party, "Just one uninstructed private citizen who could speak for himself, however."

At least one Louisiana representative will be present in a private capacity—State Rep. Erwin J. Rausch, who said he was taking part "in a purely private capacity."

Sat.

By 3 p.m. numerous Alabama leaders had begun to arrive. Among these were Marcus E. McConnell, Jr., Livingston, and Robert F. Darrah, Emille, Ala. "We must combat the Democratic National Party," said McConnell, "by forming a 'wing' of the party, and thereby regaining control. Leadership has always in the past been in the South. When we've organized we shall be 'back in the saddle' within four years." he said, "and," added Darrah, "those in the North will be sending us flowers."

7-17-48

Whatever the final results, Saturday's states rights conference here in Birmingham looks as though it will produce some fireworks.

Our Common Perils

All who attended or heard by radio the proceedings of the Birmingham meeting Saturday to mobilize opposition to President Truman's civil rights proposals must have been impressed profoundly by the intensity and sweep of the feelings there manifested.

Such emotions have great power. They can lead to high achievement—or to terrible depths of peril.

Birmingham, Ala.

This newspaper hopes, with the deepest earnestness, that wisdom, insight and sound judgment will govern the course of this movement.

* * *

The aroused and resolute opposition in the South to this program—the conviction that it embraces grave menace not only to our racial relations but to the fundamental rights of states' self-government—have been acutely sharpened by the National Democratic Convention's specific endorsement of action along the very lines proposed by President Truman. This was very unwise extremism in a situation already disturbing and dangerous.

But Southerners opposing this program must be ceaselessly on guard lest in reaction to that extremism they resort to methods and measures that will only make matters worse and more perilous.

Mon.

Remember the security of this nation and its freedom are menaced by ominous developments in the world situation.

Remember that the security and the freedom of us all—and of other peoples throughout the world—depend upon American strength and unity.

In all our differences and contests, let us never forget that.

* * *

Just what the launching of a new national ticket headed by Gov. Thurmond, of South Carolina, and Gov. Wright, of Mississippi, will mean we do not now undertake to predict. It is obvious that tremendous forces of emotion could be unleashed. It may be that great numbers of Southerners will decide to give support to this ticket. That it could win is out of the question. That these leaders and their followers find no comfort in the Republican ticket and platform is obvious. Whether this movement would choose to bring about Dewey's election and Truman's defeat, if that became the showdown choice, we doubt. The hope expressed by some of its leaders is that it will find itself in control of a balance of power that could be exercised to bring the defeat of both and the election of an acceptable president. But, we believe, that chance is very slight. It seems all the more likely now, in any case, that Gov. Dewey will be elected.

* * *

Gov. Laney, of Arkansas, one of the original leaders in the movement, in a statement explaining his break with other leaders, made some very important and significant points. He said: "We know we have been brutally mistreated—we are getting accustomed to that—we are licking our wounds today, but our spirit is not broken, we are Americans."

The News

He asked: "Shall our nation be torn with unnecessary internal strife now, when unity of our people is so vital, merely for the sake of politics, or the personal satisfaction and ambition of any man?"

7-19-48

He declared: "What is done must be done through and by the official Democratic organization in each respective state."

Thus from one of the outstanding upholders of states' rights, one of the staunch opponents of an imposed civil rights program, a leader who might have had the endorsement of this movement for president, comes sober and wise warning.

Birmingham, Ala.

Gov. Laney sees the perils of extremism in carrying on the fight. All our people should strive with utmost realism and devotion to our country to see such perils and govern themselves accordingly.

Southern Politics Complicated Business This Year

The Columbia Record

As to what might have happened in the South if the election had been, as it is outside of the South, simply a contest between the Republican party and the Democratic party everybody is, of course, entitled to guess and nobody can know whether the guess be right or wrong.

Governor J. Strom Thurmond, South Carolina's candidate for president on the States' Rights ticket, speaking at Augusta, Ga., Thursday night made the flat statement that Governor Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican candidate, "would have carried nearly every Southern state" if "our ticket"—the Thurmond-Wright ticket—had not entered the field.

Tue. 9-28-48

"Let not your hearts be troubled by false reports that the States' Rights ticket is helping Governor Dewey by splitting the Democrats in the South," he said. "If our ticket had not entered the field Dewey would have carried nearly every Southern state. We do not believe now that he will carry a single one."

Columbia, S.C.

The Record, of course, does not believe that the Republicans could have had any honest expectation of carrying nearly every Southern state before Birmingham. It would have been too much to expect that overnight the Republican party in South Carolina could have been built up from 4.8 per cent of the voters to better than 50 per cent or that the Republican party of Mississippi could have climbed up from 6.8 per cent of the voters to more than 50 per cent.

But Governor Thurmond is right to the extent that the Republicans would have received a respectable vote in every Southern state except for the States' Righters and might have even won the electoral votes of several of them, either with direct help of dissident Democrats or their passive help in staying away from the polls. After all this is a Republican year.

And Governor Thurmond is right also in thinking of the States' Rights party as giving those Southern Democrats, who cannot vote for President Truman, a candidate for whom they can vote without casting their ballots for the Republicans, a candidate opposing both Truman and Dewey. They have a place to go, even if it turns out to be nowhere.

But both Dewey and Truman still have a chance to carry some of the Southern states. Kentucky apparently is warming up for a nip and tuck battle and so is Tennessee. The Republicans have hopes in Maryland, Arkansas, North Carolina, Virginia, Florida and Texas. And in some of these states the entry of the States' Rights ticket will help the Republicans, in others help the Democrats. In Maryland the States' Righters are not on the ticket and will have to write in the names of their electors. They would have to get only 3.9 per cent of the vote, allowing for no change in the 1944 division between the two maor parties, to make it possible for the Republicans to win. Of course the Republicans expect to carry Maryland without this aid. In Arkansas where there will be three tickets—the Democrats, the States' Rights and the Republicans—a Republican victory would be possible with only a 3.5 per cent gain in votes if the States' Righters and the loyal Democrats were to divide the normal Democratic vote equally. In North Carolina only a 0.1 per cent gain would give the state to the Republicans if the States' Righters and the Democrats split the Democratic vote equally.

Tue. 9-28-48

In Texas, however, the entry of the States' Righters will work to the advantage of the Truman-Barkley ticket. The hope of a Republican victory in Texas depends upon the Republican party's being able to attract the votes of a considerable number of anti-Truman Democrats. And the States' Righters by dividing the anti-Truman vote may keep Texas in the Democratic bag.

Politics is getting to be a complicated business this year.

Totalitarianism Seen If Local Control Lost

Basis Of Party

Numerous Abuses And Usurpation Of Power Cited

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.— (AP) — The following is the "declaration of principles" reported by the resolutions committee of the States Rights meeting Saturday:

"We affirm that a political party is an instrumentality for effectuating the principles upon which the party is founded; that a platform of principles is a integrity of the states and the basic rights of their citizens.

With Contempt

"We have repeatedly remonstrated with the leaders of the solemn covenant with the people and with the members of the party; that no leader of the party, in temporary power, has the right or privilege to proceed contrary to the fundamental principles of the party, or the letter or spirit of the Constitution of the United States; that to act contrary to these principles is a breach of faith, a usurpation of power, and a forfeiture of the party name and party leadership. 7-18-48

"We believe that racial and religious minorities should be protected in their rights guaranteed by the Constitution, but the bold defiance of the Constitution in selfish appeals to such groups for the sake of political power forges the chains of slavery of such minorities by destroying the only bulwark of protection against tyranical majorities. The protection of the constitutional rights of a minority does not justify or require the destruction of constitutional rights of the majority. The destruction of constitutional limitations on the power of the central government threatens to create a totalitarian state and to destroy individual liberty in America.

To States, People

"We believe that the protection of the American people against the onward march of totalitarian government requires a faithful observance of Article X of the American Bill of Rights which provides that: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states, respectively, or to the people.

"We direct attention to the fact that the first platform of the Democratic party, adopted in 1840, resolved that: 'Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several states, and that such states are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution.' Such pronouncement is the cornerstone of the Democratic party."

Individual Liberty

A long train of abuses and usurpations of power by unfaithful leaders who are alien to the Democratic parties of the states here represented, has become intolerable to those who believe in the preservation of constitutional government and individual liberty in America.

The Executive Department of the government is promoting the gradual but certain growth of a totalitarian state by domination and control of a politically minded Supreme Court. As examples of the threat to our form of government, the Executive Department, with the aid of the Supreme Court, has asserted national dominion and control of submerged oil-bearing lands in California, schools in Oklahoma and Missouri, primary elections in Texas, South Carolina, and Louisiana, restrictive covenants in New York and the District of Columbia, and other jurisdictions, as well as religious instruction in Illinois. By asserting paramount federal rights in these instances, a totalitarian concept has been promulgated which threatens the national organization of our party but our petitions, entreaties and warnings have been treated with contempt. The latest response to our entreaties was a Democratic Convention in Philadelphia rigged to embarrass and humiliate the South. This alleged Democratic assembly called for a civil rights law that would eliminate segregation of every kind from all American life, prohibit all forms of discrimination in private employment, in public and private instruction and administration and treatment of students; in the operation of public and private health facilities; in all transportation, and require equal access to all places of public accommodation for persons of all races, colors, creeds and national origin.

Police State

"This infamous and iniquitious program calls for the reorganization of the civil rights section of the Department of Justice with a substantial increase in a bureaucratic staff to be devoted exclusively to the enforcement of the civil rights program; the establishment within the FBI of a special unit of investigators and a police state in a totalitarian, centralized, bureaucratic government. 7-18-48

"This convention hypocritically denounced totalitarianism abroad but unblushingly proposed and approved it at home. This convention would strengthen the grip of a police state upon a liberty loving people by the imposition of penalties upon local public officers who failed or refused to act in accordance with its ideas in suppressing mob violence.

We point out that if a foreign power undertook to force upon the people of the United States the measures advocated by the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, with respect to civil rights, it would mean war and the entire nation would resist such effort.

The convention that insulted the South in the party platform advocated giving the Virgin Islands and other dependencies of the United States: "The maximum degree of local self- government."

"When an effort was made to amend this part of the platform so as to make it read that the party favored the Virgin Islands and the several states the maximum degree of local self-government, the amendment adding the words "these several states" was stricken out and the sovereign states were denied the rights that the party favors giving the Virgin Islands.

Loyalty Cited

"We point out that the South, with clock-like regularity, has furnished the Democratic Party approximately 50 per cent of the votes necessary to nominate a President every four years for nearly a century. In 1920 the only states in the union that went Democratic were the 11 southern states. Notwithstanding this rugged loyalty to the party, the masters of political intrigue now allow Republican states, in which there is scarcely a Democratic office holder, to dominate and control the party and fashion its policies. 7-18-48

"As Democrats who are irrevocably committed to Democracy as defined and expounded by Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and Woodrow Wilson, and who believe that all necessary steps must be taken for its preservation, we declare to the people of the United States as follows:

"1. We believe that the Constitution of the United States is the greatest charter of human liberty ever conceived by the mind of man.

"2. We oppose all efforts to invade on destroy the rights vouchsafed by it to every citizen of this republic.

"3. We stand for social and economic justice, which we believe, can be vouchsafed to all citizens only by a strict adherence to our Constitution and the avoidance of any invasion or destruction of the constitutional rights of the states and individuals. We oppose the totalitarian, centralized, bureaucratic government and the police state called for by the platforms adopted by the Democratic and Republican conventions.

Racial Integrity

"4. We stand for the segregation of the races and the racial integrity of each race; the constitutional right to choose one's associates; to accept private employment without governmental interference, and to earn one's living in any lawful way. We oppose the elimination of segregation, employment by Federal bureaucrats called for by the misnamed civil rights program. We favor home rule, local self-government and a minimum interference with individual rights.

"5. We oppose and condemn the action of the Democratic convention in sponsoring a civil rights program calling for the elimination of segregation, social equality by federal fiat, regulation of private employment practices, voting and local law enforcement.

"6. We affirm that the effective enforcement of such a program would be utterly destructive of the social, economic and political life of the southern people, and of other localities in which there may be differences in race, creed or national origin in appreciable numbers.

"7. We stand for the checks and balances provided by the three departments of our government. We oppose the usurpation of legislative functions by the executive and judicial departments. We unreservedly condemn the effort to establish nationwide a police state in this Republic that would destroy the last vestige of liberty enjoyed by a citizen.

"8. We demand that there be returned to the people, to whom of right they belong, those powers needed for the preservation of human rights and the discharge of our responsibility as Democrats for human welfare. We oppose a denial of those rights by political parties, a barter or sale of those rights by a political convention, as well as any invasion or violation of those rights by the federal government.

"We call upon all Democrats and upon all other loyal Americans who are opposed to totalitarianism at home and abroad to unite with us in ignominiously defeating Harry S. Truman and Thomas E. Dewey, and every other candidate for public office who would establish a police state in the United States of America.

Candidate Winds Up Drive In Nettleton Speech

Special to The Commercial Appeal

TUPELO, Miss., Aug. 23.—Winding up his campaign for First Congressional District representative at Nettleton Monday night, Claude Clayton, combat veteran of World War II, said, "I am a strong believe in States' Rights, down to the smallest unit of government. Mississippi is a white man's country, and as your congressman, I intend to work to keep it a white man's country. We need no help from Washington or New York in handling our problems."

He denounced the FEPC as a piece of legislation that would completely destroy "our democratic way of life."

He said he was for the Tombigbee-Tennessee Waterway as much as any man in Mississippi, and would work unceasingly for an appropriation to build it.

"I firmly believe that if I had been in Congress the past two years I could have gotten an appropriation for the building of this waterway. As it is, not one cent has been appropriated," he said.

Mr. Clayton predicted the veterans of the district would support him strongly.

"I am the only candidate in this race with any real military experience. I know the veterans' needs. I am their friend. I will work with and for them to eliminate red tape and equalize benefits for all veterans." Opposing Mr. Clayton are in incumbent, Representative John Rankin and Circuit Judge Raymond T. Jarvis.

He again emphasized the need for immediate aid to the farmers by the passage of an adequate parity price bill. He urged his 11-point program.

Mr. Claytotn also spoke at Kossuth, Rienzi and Saltillo. He was heard over a five-station radio network at 7:30 Monday night.

UNIVERSITY, Miss., July 27.—Behind doors closed to the uninvited, an Ole Miss States' Rights Democratic organization was formed at the University of Mississippi Monday night.

John H. (Buddy) Brown of Greenville, star Rebel blocker, was chosen in absentia to be permanent chairman. Numbering 30 students, most of whom went to Birmingham July 17, the organization reaffirmed its belief in the platform adopted at the Dixiecrat convention. Wed. 7-28-48

The students were read a letter from House Speaker Walter Sillers of Rosedale, Ole Miss alumnus, who said "It was most inspiring and encouraging to know that our young men of today are so determined to stand by our cause and fight for the fundamental principles of American Government."

Lamar Triplett of Louisville was named vice chairman; John Murray of Brandon, secretary, and Miss Bonnie Mills of Carthage, treasurer. Commercial

The group devised three types of memberships; full membership to student States' Rights Democrats over 21; associate membership, students under 21; and participating membership, faculty members believing in "States' Rights."

States Rights Hurt by Klaghorns

Sun. 7-25-48

The issue of States' rights has a lot of friends. They are to be found in the West and North, in the Democratic and Republican Parties.

The painful truth about the States' rights fight, as lost at Philadelphia, is that it was lost chiefly by, and through, those most loudly claiming to be its friends. They sabotaged, presumably because of their own State political ambitions, any chance of the friends of States' rights to fight shoulder to shoulder for those rights.

The plain truth is—and it needs to be said and widely known—that the Dixie-crat element in the South did more than any other one factor to bring about the nomination of Harry S. Truman and the adoption of a strong civil rights plank in the platform.

When the civil rights message went to Congress on last February 10, the more responsible Southern leaders warned against any bolt on the subject and urged their associates to let it sink quietly into the political waters into which it was cast.

Their advice was rejected. Let us honestly face what followed.

Issue In the South the Thurmonds, the Wrights, the Rankins, and others, apparently sensing a chance to make themselves local heroes, insistently and defiantly determined to make it an issue—and to keep it loud and clamorous. Certain interests made it easy for them to do so.

Thus, the fat was in the fire. Thus the fight was lost.

The more they went rushing to Tallahassee and Jackson, with threats and defiance, the more the administration was compelled to meet the issue and fight it through.

Every plan to organize a walkout against Harry S. Truman, compelled the rest of the Democratic Party to support Truman's position the more. Sun. 7-25-48

The more they insisted the extreme of the Southern position the more these loudest of our patriots aroused the Northern wing of the Party to defend its position.

Defeat So, step by step, the Thurmonds, Wrights, Rankins and those who shouted in their wake, heedlessly, but inexorably, compelled the nomination of Harry S. Truman and created the forces which were able to push through a strong civil rights plank and which may be able to write them into law. The more responsible Southern leaders were driven into silence or into going along.

The Southern people need to know this and be guided by it, now and in the future. If States' rights are to be saved in any degree they will have to be saved on the floor of Congress and they will surely be lost there if the clamorous "Dixie-crats" continue as heedless as before.

States' Rights There are, as stated at the beginning of this article, many persons who want to hold on to States' rights.

Such national figures as Gov. Earl Warren, of California, now the Republican Vice Presidential nominee, for years has vigorously opposed the lessening of State authority and "rights."

New York's Governor Tom Dewey reportedly has said privately that he believes the FEPC is a matter for States—(as the Federal employment offices have been turned back to the States)—and he has proved it by putting in an FEPC in New York State.

We in the South are not alone in the fear that Federal authority may become so centralized that local government—the wellsprings of democracy—may be destroyed.

Ill-Fitting But, the truth is—and this, too, the South must know—that when those who spoke for Mississippi, South Carolina and the walk-out group from Alabama, tried to put on the armor of States' rights in their fight, it simply didn't fit.

It was rusted and full of holes. The spectre of special interests such as the Tidelands Oil business, showed through. So did the racial prejudice problem appear through the rents in the armor. The Ku Klux Klan could be seen beneath it. These things may be dear to many and certainly are hateful to many. But they are not States' rights.

There were many in the Northern wing of the Party equally jealous of States' rights. There were many who wanted to help the South. There were others who, knowing that the South lags behind public opinion on the race question, as the North runs ahead of it, wanted to avoid any violent disruptions of Southern concepts.

Many were aware of the difficult problem in the South where is the majority of the Negro population and where also is to be found the fewest jobs and the least income.

But all these were thrust aside by the bolters and the "Dixie-crat" type of thinking. To have pleased these elements the National Convention would have had to disavow the entire civil rights concept and the whole American tradition of equal rights and privileges for all.

Klaghorns There were a few voices raised from the South which received attention. Georgia's Charlie Bloch was heard. Cecil Sims, of Tennessee, was heard. But it was too late. The fight was lost before a single delegate got to Philadelphia. The Klaghorns had defeated the Blochs and the Sims'.

There are many Southerners now committed to helping build a Republican Party in the South—a true second party. They mean they have repudiated the Klaghorn "Dixie-crat" type of thinking The Democrat has got to do that, too—to realize that the case for States' rights has many friends in all sections of the country. But they will not follow John C. Calhoun any more today than they did in his time. The Klaghorns have been with us too long anyhow—frightening off the best Southern voices with their noise and their threats.

Who are the real friends of the South? Those who deal with the realities or those who destroy what can be done by losing what can't be won?

Clearing Up Some Of The States Rights Confusion

The Record

Columbia S.C.

Wed. 7-28-48

The Dixiecratic movement, born at a Birmingham mass meeting, seems to have been troubled from the beginning with a certain confusion, which now may now be eliminated.

Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina has been insisting that he was actually named as the group's choice as nominee for President at the Birmingham conference-convention. But Governor Fielding Wright of Mississippi, the vice presidential nominee, has been saying that he was not nominated, but merely recommended.

The Birmingham mass meeting had no authority to name candidates except for itself. But apparently Governors Thurmond and Wright are now agreed that they will call themselves candidates.

At a conference, held Saturday and attended by 28 former Southern Democrats, the two candidates and their advisors, from seven Southern states—no Georgian apparently participated even though the meeting was held in Atlanta—agreed to set up a fourth party, of which they would be the candidates.

The party is to be named the States Rights Democrats—it is an improvement over the headline name, Dixiecrats, heretofore worn by the Southern dissidents since it does not erroneously identify them with all of the Southern states, some of which haven't yet joined the movement. It also plans to conduct a nation-wide campaign, according to the Atlanta announcement, an announcement which clears up the confusion caused by Governor Thurmond's statement of last week that the movement was not a "bolt."

You cannot set up a fourth States Rights party, composed of former Democrats, without admitting that it is a bolt.

The trouble with the group is that the conference-convention acted too hastily at Birmingham, without planning, without even thinking. The States Rights leaders have had to do their thinking and planning since Birmingham.

And now is the time for a little more thinking. The splinter party movement is a mistake. It is the guarantee that the South will be back in the bag in 1952. And it's a bigger mistake if its campaign is to be made on the issue of state rights, if the Southern party is to be called, as it is now proposed to call it, the States Rights Democratic party.

For the Republican party today is the state rights party as the Democratic party used to be. Governor Earl Warren of California, the Republican vice presidential nominee, has been a vigorous opponent of all invasions of state authority. Even Governor Tom Dewey of New York is committed by his record to support F. E. P. C. only on the state level. It would be perfectly consistent with his support of the New York fair employment practices act and consistent also with Republican state rights doctrines for him to insist now that the whole matter of employment practices is a matter for the states; it was the Republican party which turned back the federal employment offices to the states. Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican leader in the Senate, is on record as opposed to the enactment of the F. E. P. C. Wed

The Republicans, of course, may not carry their advocacy of state rights as far this suggests. The South now has no real representation is the Republican party, no real voice in party affairs. It cannot have until it sets up in the South the two-party system prevailing elsewhere. But the Republican party is on record in its platform as supporting the Gossett-Lodge amendment to the constitution which would abolish forever the minority threat in national elections.

But the South, at least, should wait and see what develops in the special political session of Congress. If any considerable number of Republicans stand by the South or join with Southern Senators in preventing the imposition of cloture—and the South has always heretofore been able to find enough Republican aid to do this—it will supply an acid test of the Republican state rights intentions. And it will be a test conducted under the most unfavorable of conditions. The Republicans also want Negro votes in the coming campaign—the Gossett-Lodge amendment isn't yet a part of the constitution—and the South is offering them nothing, except a chance of Republican victory in those Southern states in which the States Rights Democratic party cannot hope to make headway.

And the States Rights leaders should not get too far out on the limb until they know what is to happen. For this may be the year for the South to get itself out of the bag forever, not simply for one election.

S.C. Democrats Told to Admit Negroes

CHARLESTON, S. C.—(U.P.)—Federal Judge J. Waties Waring angrily ordered South Carolina Democrats to admit Negroes to their party.

Waring, nemesis of the State's "white primary" advocates, signed a preliminary injunction opening the party registration books to Negroes. Jail awaits any party leaders who defy the writ, the jurist said.

* * *

THREE-FOURTHS of the crowd in the small United States District Courtroom were Negroes. Also present were about 25 of the 87 defendants named in the Negroes' suit for political equality.

Speaking to the defendants, Judge Waring said: "It is a shame and a disgrace for a case of this kind to come to court. We do not need a judge to tell us if we are Americans."

The suit was filed on behalf of Negroes who said their names were purged from the party books after they had registered in accordance with the United States Supreme Court decision giving them equal ballot rights.

Rebels May Get 6 States, Senator Says

The Courier Louisville

Hatch Disputes Southerner's Prediction

Washington, July 18 (AP)—The entrance of a "Dixiecrat" ticket into the presidential field brought a disputed prediction today that President Truman may lose the support of up to six Southern states in the November election.

Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) told a reporter he thinks the Southern Democratic rebel ticket may help take the electoral votes of half a dozen Southern states away from Truman and Senator Alben Barkley, his running mate.

The new ticket—Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President and Governor Fielding Wright of Mississippi for Vice-President—was put forth at Birmingham yesterday as one Dixie answer to the President's civil-rights program.

'Sharp Split In Tennessee.'

McClellan — who fought the President's nomination but did not walk out of the Democratic convention — named Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, and Tennessee as possible participants in a bolt he said is almost certain to result in the regular Democratic Party's defeat in the presidential election. 7-19-48

He put Tennessee in the list, McClellan said, because of a sharp local division among Democrats there.

He said that if the Thurmond-Wright ticket gets on the ballot in Arkansas it may split the Democratic vote in his home state and give the Republicans some chance of winning there.

Hatch Disagrees.

McClellan's prediction was immediately challenged by Senator Hatch (D., N. M.), close personal friend of the President.

Hatch said he doesn't think the effort to place a fourth party in the field "will be effective in more than one or two states."

The New Mexico senator predicted election of a Truman-Barkley ticket even if some of the Southerners don't go along.

Hatch hinted the Democrats think there is some chance that Henry Wallace—scheduled to get the official nomination of his third party in Philadelphia next week end might not carry through until November. Wallace repeatedly has asserted he has no intention of quitting the race.

The Courier Journal

O'Mahoney Foresees Struggle.

"I'm not so sure about what Wallace is going to do," Hatch said. "Politics is in such a state of flux now that no one can say just what will happen in the next month or two."

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), another friend of the President, said the Birmingham rump convention's action in nominating Thurmond and Wright could be "rather serious from the standpoint of the Democratic Party."

"If the Southerners carry out this fight," he said, "it means that the Democratic Party as a whole will have to campaign a good deal more diligently in the South than it has heretofore." He added he does not think the entrance of the Dixiecrat ticket in the field "will have the effect of taking the South out of the Democratic column."

Louisville

O'Mahoney conceded that if the margin between Democrats and Republicans is close in any single state, a third-party ticket might cost the Truman-Barkley ticket that state's electoral backing. 7-19-48

Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York has indicated he may make a direct bid for Southern votes. Tentative plans have been made for him to campaign in Virginia, where he got 38 per cent of the vote in his 1944 race against Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Dixiecrat bolters made plans to bid for the 137 electoral votes of Alabama, Arkansas, Missisipi, Louisiana, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Texas, Virginia, South Carolina, and North Carolina. 7-19-48

Only 20 Votes Are Sure.

They cast around for help elsewhere in such areas as Missouri and Kentucky, home states of the regular Democratic nominees, Oklahoma and Maryland.

Thus far, however, the rebels apparently could depend only on Alabama's 11 and Mississippi's nine electoral votes, already instructed to back somebody other than Truman. Georgia still is to name its 12 electors in a primary. Arkansas will pick nine and Texas 33 in state conventions.

Rump Convention, Full of Sound And Fury, Is Gone With the Wind

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Mon. 7-19-48

A Dozen Men Staged It All

By TARLETON COLLIER.

Staff Correspondent, The Courier-Journal.

Birmingham, July 18.—The veneer of noise, restless movement, and Confederate relics melted away swiftly. It was gone minutes after the conference of rebel States'-rights Democrats adjourned here at 6:09 last night. And the foundation was to be seen as a thing of flimsy props, the handiwork of hardly more than a dozen men.

Three doughty Governors who had kept the States'-rights movement alive had dwindled to two. Ben Laney of Arkansas might have had the States'-righters' nomination as President for the taking. It was he who had headed the movement since the conference in Jackson, Miss., in May. But some kind of light struck him at Philadelphia.

Ben Laney Drops In.

He was detouring Birmingham on his way back to Little Rock when he reluctantly decided to drop by the conference and speak his conviction. This was that the fight against civil rights must be made within the party, that "permanent division of our people" should be avoided.

This left only Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Fielding Wright of Mississippi as the bitter-enders. But there are signs that Governor Thurmond also was going to stay away from Birmingham. As late as Friday night it was announced that he had business in Columbia, and that the South Carolina state-party chairman would appear for him. Mon. 7-19-48

Thurmond Not Too Happy.

However, he showed up about midway in yesterday's conference and found himself tapped as the Southerners' choice for President. He seems to have been not altogether happy about it.

Although there were 6,000 or so persons in Municipal Auditorium, the tapping was done by the resolutions committee of the conference. As late as 1 p.m. yesterday the little group behind the scenes had been unable to get together on a plan of strategy, even a set of candidates to substitute for Truman and Barkley.

Dixon Does a Coolidge.

After Laney became unavailable—disqualified by his strange new talk and by his decision to have no part of the rebellion—there was a turning to Frank Dixon, the former Alabama Governor who whipped the conference to a shouting demonstration by his keynote speech and its warnings of mongrelization of the race. But Dixon did not choose to run.

The Courier Journal

Scurrying between the auditorium and the Tutwiler Hotel, the resolutions committee at last came out with the Thurmond-Wright ticket. As a matter of fact, the two Governors didn't have a chance to escape. They were in the enterprise so deep that the draft became a matter of saving face.

Louisville Ky.

Crowd Kept In Dark.

The big crowd in the convention hall knew nothing of all this. There were a few badges announcing "Laney for President" and a placard here and there with the penciled slogan, "Win With Ben."

Later, however, when the resolutions committee brought in the word that it was Thurmond and Wright, the college boy with one of the placards simply wrote, "Thurmond, Not Truman," on the other side and dashed whooping into the parade. "Win With Ben" remained, but you might have seen in the fact a fair symbol of the day's confusion.

Everybody's In the Act.

Everybody was a delegate. Galleries as well as the main floor joined in voting. It cost nothing and it was a lot of fun. Most of the thousands there were local citizens and their wives and children who had heard the proceedings over the radio early in the day and came along for the show. It was the coolest spot in town, too. 7-19-48

Actual registration was only about 600, but that didn't matter. Everybody was a States'-righter eager to help out. The sign marking the seat of the Kentucky delegation (a stage prop, obviously) was carried up in one of the parades by a Birmingham housewife who once lived in Paducah in another, by an Ole Miss student in black sombrero and red band. All day yesterday only one person registered as an "official" delegate from Kentucky. The name was C. H. Blumer, Louisville.

Campaign to Be Different.

The States'-Righters' choices for President and Vice-President will not be candidates in the usual sense of barnstorming, speechmaking, and appeals to massed multitudes. Their message will be for the presidential electors and the state Democratic organizations. The point will be mainly to win votes in the Electoral College and not at the polls.

It is likely, of course, that Thurmond-Wright slates of electors will be on tickets to oppose Barkley-Truman slates where late primaries still are to be held.

The States'-Righters hope to do this in Kentucky, for example, though with only the vaguest of notion how it may be done.

Talk Brave, Hopes High.

Dixon

Thurmond and Wright doubtless will get the electoral votes from Alabama and Mississippi, where electors already are named and committed to vote against Truman. They should get South Carolina, with that state's native son as a candidate. 7-19-48

The other states have yet to be won, but there was brave talk from start to end of the conference that Truman wouldn't get a state in the South. Senator Eastland of Mississippi went out on the longest of limbs in a flat prediction that Truman would draw a goose egg in the Electoral College, without even the Democratic equivalents of Maine and Vermont for salvage.

Thurmond Spurns Class-Hate Group

Record, COlUMbia. S.C.

Endorsed For President, S. C. Governor Slams Gerald L. K. Smith, 'Rabble-Rousers'

Record

"We do not invite, and we do not need, the support of Gerald L. K. Smith or any other rabble-rousers who uses race prejudice and class hatred to inflame the emotions of our people," Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, endorsed by the Birmingham conference of Southern Democrats for president, declared this morning.

His statement came in reply to a request for his reactions to the proffer of support made by Gerald L. K. Smith, Christian Nationalist crusader.

Columbia S.C.

"I have never met Mr. Smith, and I was totally unaware that he was in Birmingham," Governor Thurmond said. "He had no part whatever in the conference of Southern Democrats Saturday."

The South Carolina Governor said the Southern fight is not a race fight but an effort to protect the principle of States' Rights, "without which the United States government cannot exist under its Constitution."

MON. 7-19-48

Governor Thurmond said he is "deeply concerned" over the effort of opposing groups to "smear our efforts with the false trapping of race hatreds. We are interested solely in protecting the rights of States to manage their own internal affairs, which is a fundamental guarantee of the Constitution of the United States," he declared.

"I call upon all true Americans to study our form of government in order to determine the true issues in this fight. They will be on our side unless they want a Federal totalitarian form of government, and I do not believe they want it."

Smith, nationalist director of the Christian Nationalist Crusade, said today he would recommend "to our leadership" taht they support the states' rights or Dixiecrat movement in every state.

Smith revealed that he was a "silent" delegate who attended the convention here Saturday, when dissident Southern Democrats endorsed a candidate for president and vice president.

He said he and his wife registered as delegates as "Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Smith of Oklahoma." Smith was not recognized in the audience.

He said he would recommend the states' rights principle because "Our three million enrolled followers believe that the Negro and the Jew are exerting too much control in American politics."

"The Southern Revolt"

Herald Tribune

To the New York Herald Tribune:

Your July 19 editorial, "The Southern Revolt," is sadly disillusioning. Over a period of many years the Herald Tribune has established a reputation as outstanding champion of civil rights. You demonstrated inspiring courage in winning that reputation. Publication of the magnificent Bert Andrews exposure of the "Washington Witch Hunt" was a supreme example of this courage because it was costly to you. It caused the unfortunately large number of people who think that civil rights are something only for those who agree with them to murmur about the Herald Tribune. You must have been aware that you would provoke this whispering campaign when you published the Andrews articles. That's what makes your courage genuine.

But in the July 19 editorial on the Southern revolt you show a disheartening willingness to ditch civil rights in order to slap Truman. You argue that Truman's civil rights program was "in general well conceived." You hail "the plank in the Democratic platform supporting it." But you condemn Truman for lacking "leadership," "sense of timing," "magnanimity," "an enlightened understanding of the Southern point of view," and "an awareness of the sources of national unity." And you conclude with this rejection of your initial approval of Truman's civil rights position: "Yet the unity of America is itself a transcendent good, and this can be breached when small men, seeking partisan advantage, push even a good cause to dogmatic extremes."

New York H.T.

Mon.

7-26-48

This sentence is not only a renunciation of the Herald Tribune's dearly purchased reputation as a champion of individual freedom, but it is inaccurate in its implication. The President cannot be said to have "pushed" a good cause to dogmatic extremes. In fact, Truman backed the more moderate statement on civil rights sponsored by a majority of the platform committee, but amended by the convention

But 20 Electoral Votes Assured

Columbia S.C.

Wed. 8-4-48

The North Carolina board of elections recognized the pro-Wallace Progressive party of the state today but refused to recognize the anti-Truman States' Rights Democrats.

Board Chairman Hubert E. Olive said in handing down the denial that, "I think it is clear that the petition of the States' Rights Democrats doesn't comply with rules and regulations of the board."

There was no way to determine today that qualified voters had signed petitions asking that the names of Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi be placed on the general election ballot. Thurmond is the new party's presidential candidate; Wright, its vice presidential candidate.

The States' Righters previously had said they would carry their cause to the courts if a denial were issued by the state elections board.

Olive today requested Attorney General Harry McMullan to cooperate with the new party in bringing a test case into the courts. He thought the case would be presented to the state supreme court by September 1.

Thurmond Silent

Governor Thurmond said today he would rely on his North Carolina friends to push the splinter party's cause.

He refused any other comment on the Tarheel state's election board action.

Wed. 8-4-48

Twenty Electoral Votes

Despite the seaback in North Carolina, today saw 20 electoral college votes assured for the States' Rights Democratic ticket of Thurmond and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi.

The Mississippi Democratic convention yesterday pledged its nine elector candidates to support Thurmond and Wright for the presidency and vice presidency.

Alabama's 11 Democratic electoral college votes previously were placed in the Thurmond-Wright column. Democratic nomination in both the states is equivalent to election.

There seemed little doubt that the governor's home state's eight votes would be cast for him, although the nominees have yet to be selected and directed by the state party's executive committee.

A group of 18 college students at the Mississippi convention protested that it was placing the state "in opposition to the moral trend of the nation."

Wright silenced hecklers by asking that the visitors be given a "courteous hearing."

Second Convention

In Washington, United States Rep. L. Mendel Rivers of Charleston urged a second state Democratic convention to pledge this state's eight electors to Thurmond and Wright.

8-4-48

The May 19 convention instructed its electors, to be named by the state party executive committee, to vote against President Truman because of his civil rights proposals.

Rivers said in a telegram to executive committee Chairman W. P. Baskin that the convention should meet again "so that in connection with the election in November no federal judge can impose his views as a substitute for the unmistakable will of the duly elected delegates of the Democratic party of South Carolina.

"There is no question in my mind that the people of South Carolina want an opportunity to repudiate Truman just as he has repudiated us."

Wed. 8-4-48

Meanwhile, Calhoun county's party executive committee became the fourth in this state to endorse the states' rights candidates. The decision was unanimous, state executive committeeman J. A. Merritt reported.

Similar action has been taken by Anderson, Greenwood and Charleston county committees.

Writer Says South Must Defend Self

States' Rights Sacred, Declares J. Cinegarer

To The Commercial Appeal:

I think Mr. Charles G. Hamilton makes himself look strange-bizarre in his deductions on the matter of "states rights." Says he: "The war with Mexico was to protect the rights of citizens in disputed areas."

The war with Mexico was to steal Texas, Arizona and other states from Mexico. Those "citizens" in Texas were very few compared with Mexicans at that time.

Again: "The American Revolution was fought not for separate colonies but for 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness' for the people."

Not exactly, brother. The colonies could have enjoyed "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" under British rule if the Brits had allowed us representation in Parliament. Canada enjoys "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" under British rule. Washington, Jefferson, Franklin and others had no idea of separating from Britain. Tom Paine's insistence on "separation" was the urge to push "separation." And all this was not strictly for human consideration. It was political only.

Again: "We fought for the human rights of Cubans in 1898." Not exactly. Cubans had as much human rights under Spain as now. We simply got mad at Spain because of the sinking of our Battleship Maine and wanted to thrash her—and it never has been proved that Spain sank the Maine.

Our government simply forgot, in toto, that during our Revolution Spain drew all of Europe into an armed neutrality which kept England in check. They were very few in Cuba who raised their voices for independence. Spain was better to us than we were to her.

The good Brother brings our immortal L. Q. C. Lamar into the picture to prove his (Hamilton's) idea that we should stick to the Democratic Party — "Northern Yankeecrats" — and swallow the President's civil rights program which Lamar would fight as viciously as a lion if he were living. Lamar was not confronted with the things we are today.

If the good Brother wants to see the Yankeecrats—in the future—force the South to have black teachers in our schools, mixed with the whites—force employers to hire black labor against their wills—force the sheriffs in the South to pay heavy fines for a "mob-killer," something beyond the sheriff's and county's control—send Federal soldiers down here to enforce these things, then he can go ahead and vote for Truman or Dewey.

Above all, the South is not going to sit down, spineless, and vote for anyone who may (potentially) crucify our beloved South on a cross of Federal bayonets.

I stand for States' Rights under the Constitution and white supremacy. Away with the demagogs. For me, it is Thurmond and Wright.

WHITE SUPREMACY WAGON?

Editor, The Advertiser:

Much is being done by the Truman forces, if the handful of people supporting him can be called forces, to deliver the state's electoral vote to the nominees of the National Democratic Party. . . .

I note certain politicians are announcing their support of the nominees of the May primary, but are failing to lend active support to the Thurmond-Wright ticket. States' rights Democrats do not need the half way support of such politicians; these publicly elected straddlers are going to have to make their stands a little clearer to Alabama Democrats. All of our senators and congressmen are either going to have to get on or get off the Thurmond-Wright wagon.

Those who fail to get on the Thurmond-Wright wagon of white supremacy and states' rights are going to get voted out of office by Alabama Democrats at the first coming primary election.

The 'States'

There is much talk right now about "states' rights," especially here in the South. Much of this talk is charged with political emotion, which obscures perspective on the problem.

The News

Amid such talk it is of value to have the clear, cool perspective of the scholar. A world authority on the subject of federal government—of which the "states' rights" problem is a feature—is the Australian scholar, K. C. Wheare.

In a book called Federal Government, Mr. Wheare—now Gladstone professor of government and public administration in the University of Oxford—has studied the governments of four federations: the United States, Canada, Australia and Switzerland.

Birmingham, Ala.

There is one general tendency in all federal governments which is apparent from Mr. Wheare's study—the general governments in all four federations have grown stronger.

Mon. 7-19-48

Why is this? "The general governments have grown in importance in comparison with the regional governments, because they began from nothing and because they were endowed with control over most of the important matters with which governments have to deal."

Except in the case of Switzerland, the general governments have not been given considerable new areas of jurisdiction. They have simply developed, through practice and interpretation, more and more intensively the area which was assigned to them originally.

Among the areas they have so developed are the control of defense and the power to make peace and war, powers over foreign relations, particularly over international trade, and in the sphere of finance.

* * *

The chief forces which have caused general governments to increase in strength at the expense of states, as Mr. Wheare sees them, have been fourfold: war, economic depression, the growth of social services and the mechanical revolution in transport and industry.

"To express the same things in different words, they were power politics, depression politics, welfare politics and the internal combustion engine." Today Mr. Wheare might have added, ". . . and atomic energy."

To survive through war and economic depression, all federations have had to submit to large measures of unitary control. "The price of victory in war and the price of economic recovery is at least temporary unification."

Consequently war, or power politics, and economic crisis, or depression politics, are the enemies of states' rights. Peace and prosperity are prerequisites for the successful exercise of states' rights.

The growth of social services, Mr. Wheare believes, need not prove destructive to states' rights.

The News

"The defect in the federal systems in the past has been largely that the regional (state) governments lacked the financial resources necessary to carry out the social services which had been committed to their jurisdiction by the constitutions. This may be remedied by a reallocation of financial powers, and the federal principle can be safeguarded even if grants from the general governments are part of the reallocation, provided that the grants are guaranteed by the constitution so that the regional governments are not left to depend upon the good will of the general government."

Birmingham, Ala.

The increasing strength of general governments has made regional or state governments more self-conscious and self-assertive. Strong desires to be separate and independent still animate some regional or state governments—witness Quebec in Canada, Western Australia, the Swiss cantons and the Southern states of America.

It is true that the rights of the states are often used to defend economic interests which do not desire to be regulated by the general governments or by any other governments. But in many respects the concern for the rights of states is genuine and desirable.

Mon. 7-19-48

"One of the most urgent problems in the world today," writes Mr. Wheare, "is to preserve diversities either where they are worth preserving for themselves, or where they cannot be eradicated even if they are not desirable, and at the same time to introduce such a measure of unity as will prevent clashes and facilitate co-operation."

That is the problem for Southern thinking on states' rights.

Many Viewpoints

To the Editor of The News:

My heart bleeds for Mr. Horace C. Wilkinson.

Re the space which you devoted to Mr. Wilkinson's tirade in your Voice of the People, congratulations again on being fair and democratic in publishing all sides of a question.

The News

Re the content of the letters in which Mr. Wilkinson poured forth his ire, NUTS! (and I use that term with all due respect for its incomparable usage at Bastogne).

Is Mr. Wilkinson Mr. Alabama? Is Mr. Wilkinson Mr. South?

If I may digress for a moment, I should like to say that I have lived in Alabama for two and a half years and expect to be here for three more months. During this time I have been an avid reader of the Voice of the People. I have noted with pleasure the practice of The News to present all sides of controversial issues and I feel that the editor's stand on them is commendable. It is unequivocal and forward-looking. True, it treads lightly in some cases but not so lightly that it can be accused of marking time. This is understandable.

Birmingham, Ala.

Until now, I have never offered a contribution to your column though I have often been prompted to do so. But now I cannot pass up the desire to comment upon Mr. Wilkinson's letters since they seem handily to roll into one unattractive ball all of the lamentable attitudes of at least one stratum in the South.

There is, first, Mr. Wilkinson's well phrased and important question: "When, should we ask ourselves, is the South ever going to become of age politically?" I echo that feeling precisely.

Mon.

When, indeed? When?

Certainly that will never be until it rids itself of the self-centered, disappointed spoiled-child, sorry-for-itself approach to the things which affect the development of the country—the things which every section of the country should and must meet squarely and seek to solve constructively.

Certainly that will never be so long as certain of its people believe they are Southerners carrying a cross first, and citizens of the U. S. A. second.

Certainly that will never be so long as the major vein of its political thinking evolves from the ideas behind "our traditional way of life" instead of advancement.

Certainly that will never be until competent leaders bring about the understanding in all people that a lot of country exists beyond their front gates and that they, by virtue of being Americans and shareholders in a country to which the world looks for leadership, have a deep responsibility to fulfill.

Certainly that will never be until a mature approach to social and economic responsibilities displaces a way of thinking which prompts a vociferous minority to run away from the political community, insulted because the President of the United States (no less than nearly 200 years after this has been the United States of America) advocates rights which are the basis of our government and which are the foundation of the Constitution.

Mon.

Certainly that will never be so long as any group of individuals thinks it can override the rights and privileges of even one American.

7-19-48

And another quote from Mr. Wilkinson's letter: "That vote can be delivered with clock-like regularity for the Democratic Party if that party stands for the decent things in life." Mr. Wilkinson has the gall to say that when, in another letter, he asks: "Cannot Alabama gain more by withholding its electoral vote from every candidate who favors civil rights, than it can by the unconditional surrender of the right of children yet unborn to be free from federal domination and control of such domestic matters as voting, lynch, segregation, and employment practices?"

How can Mr. Wilkinson think that voting and lynching are not matters of concern to the federal government, to the country as a whole?

States' rights? Surely states' rights, but with them people's rights. What a travesty when some people shout "states' rights" when many of their fellow citizens, underprivileged white as well as Negro, aren't allowed God-given and constitutionally endowed rights.

I do not absolve other states in other sections of the country of guilt on this count. But I do believe that the Southern ones have produced more than their share of examples. Does Mr. Wilkinson perhaps view people's and states' rights as did Huey Long in Louisiana who was so often quoted as saying, "I'm the constitution in this state!"

The News

I should like it understood that I am not an iconoclast when it comes to traditions and ways of life. I firmly believe that certain traditions should be inherent in the ways of life of the many regions in the country—but traditions which reflect honor, dignity, and human understanding. Those in conflict should be swept away, buried in shame. In the South that has too long been left undone.

Too long delayed has been the approach to an attitude which says, instead, "Let's quit whimpering and stand on our own two feet to do with our potential what can and should be done with it!"

Too long have young people been trekking away from the South feeling that they must go elsewhere in order to prove their worth.

I fully recognize and happily acknowledge the advances which are making themselves known in the South today, nurtured by people like Hodding Carter and Ellis Arnall. May these advances multiply 10,000 fold! And they will—

Birmingham

When the South grasps the mature reality that it takes knowledge and education to spearhead progress and to provide a happy and secure life for every individual.

Ala.

When it realizes that for every one of its citizens, Negro and white, who advances himself, it, too, benefits and takes one more unerring step toward the position it justly deserves and which it is responsible for attaining.

Mon. 7-19-48

No offense intended, but for Mr. Wilkinson's information, I am not a "damyankee." I was born in New Orleans and have lived in the South all my life except for some time spent flying over Germany during the recent war.

STATES' RIGHTS HOPES SURGE HIGH WITH PLAN FOR ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Chairman Sillers Thinks New Party Will Take Place Of New Dealers

Memphis, Tenn.

ORGANIZATION IS SHAPED

More Than 125 Electoral Votes Predicted — Thurmond Will Launch Vigorous Speaking Tour Soon

Mon. 7-19-48

By JOHN R. HENRY

International News Service Writer

BIRMINGHAM, July 18. — The chairman of the new Jeffersonian Democratic Party said Sunday that it has "an excellent chance" to become a major political power.

While preliminary plans for an all-out campaign are being mapped, Walter Sillers asserted:

"I beieve we have an excellent chance to displace the bosses of the New Deal Democrats so that the Jeffersonian faction will be recognized as the real national Democratic Party."

Faction Organized Now

Sillers, speaker of the Mississippi House of Representatives, explained:

"We have a real organization now, and we are in position to carry the fight into every Southern state—even into Harry Truman's backyard." He added:

Mon.

"We believe we can obtain more electoral votes than the New Dealers. And if we do, then the Jeffersonian States' Rights Party will become the real Democratic Party of the Nation." 7-19-48

Sillers said it is possible for the States' Rights candidates, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, to obtain more than 125 ballots in the electoral college.

Thurmond was indorsed for the presidency and Wright nominated for the vice presidency in the Birmingham meeting of the States' Righters through the Democratic Party organization of each state.

These state political organizations will be asked to instruct their electors to vote for Thurmond and Wright and, by all means, against President Truman, the Democratic nominee, and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, who carries the Republican banner.

Thurmond To Campaign

In addition, the South's battle against the Democratic convention's iron-fisted civil rights policy will be taken directly to the voters.

Governor Thurmond announced that he would launch a vigorous speaking tour in "the not too distant future." Commercial

Thurmond and Wright said they would confer at an early date to arrange speaking engagements and other campaign tactics. Appeal

Sillers, meanwhile, said that the battle against civil rights would be activated in each state by separate committees—one to prosecute the campaign and another to raise funds for it.

He said that these committees had not been appointed. They are expected to be named within the next two weeks. 7-19-48

As the Jeffersonian Democrats organized at Birmingham, they adopted an eight-point program of "principles." Memphis, Tenn.

These include a seathing denunciation of the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia last week and a staunch stand against Federal laws controlling employment and abolishing poll taxes.

Arkansas Governor Heads States Rights Executive Committee

New York, N.Y.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 28 (UP) —Gov. Ben T. Laney of Arkansas was named general chairman of the executive committee of States Rights Democrats today. Thurs

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, States Rights candidates for President and Vice President, announced campaign personnel in a joint statement released here and in Jackson, Miss. 7-29-48

They named fourteen other members of the executive committee which will spearhead their national drive — two each from seven Southern states.

The committee included former Gov. Frank Dixon and R. T. Goodwyn of Alabama, J. O. Emmerich and Everett Truly of Mississippi, Frank Upchurch and C. E. Shepherd of Florida, Arch Rowan and Palmer Bradley of Texas, John Daggett and C. E. Parker of Arkansas, William P. Baskin and George Warren of South Carolina, and Judge Leander Perez and Frank J. Looney of Louisiana.

Judge Merritt Gibson of Longview, Tex., was appointed national campaign director and George C. Wallace of Jackson, Miss., national campaign treasurer.

Dixiecrats Defy 'Rights' Plans

Memphis, Tenn. Memphis World

Tues 7-20-48

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(SNS)—A strange conglomeration of incensed political bed-fellows, angered at the civil rights platforms of the Democratic and Republican parties, Saturday, hatched an intended booby-trap for President Harry S. Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in shouting defiance at the candidates who have agreed to press for civil rights legislation. Tues

Despite the on-lookers from virtually all of the Southern states, the conference in city Auditorium was almost a bi-partisan show cooked up by Alabama and Missippi, with South Carolina striving to get into the act. 7-20-48

All day long, the delegates, egged on by 6,000 shouting spectators, peformed in a circusy, sideshow manner to the applauding eation of the crowd as speakers belabored Pres. Truman, civil rights, Negroes and promised almost unendingly "not to have this so-called civil rights rammed down our throats."

SOME SPECTACLE The World

It was a bewildering spectacle, which almost bordered on incoherence, as speakers repeated the same half-truths, distortions and fears regarding the true implications of the civil rights program and while they lamented encroachment of the federal government on states' rights. Memphis, Tenn.

In the end the States Rights Conference nominated Gov. Strum Thurmond of South Carolina as their candidate to oppose the Democrats' Truman-Barkley ticket and the Republicans' Dewey-Warren slate. Gov. Fielding Wright, who almost singlehandedly birthed the "Fourth Party" movement, was designated the vice-presidential choice.

Once this was done and the formality of bringing Gov. Thurmond to the platform completed, the South Carolinians burst into a harangue on Pres. Truman, while repeating the fears of "Negroes in our schools, theaters, and homes." Once this trade was finished the Conference hastily adjourned with a promise to meet again.

Walter Sillers, speaker of the Mississippi House of Representatives, was named permanent chairman of the conference after Alabama's race-baiting Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey opened the meeting. Ralph Lee of Houston, Texas was elected permanent chairman. Memphis World

The "secessionists" sported Confederate flags, pictures of Robert E. Lee, and various state standards as they paraded almost incessantly in the pandemonius-flooded auditorium. Memphis, Tenn.

DIXON KEYNOTER

Former Gov. Frank Dixon of Alabama made the keynote address. Dixon in a seditious speech attacked the civil rights pogram as "designed solely to catch the Negro vote of the North." Tues.

"We all know," Dixon stormed, "there is no lynching in the South today. Race riots have made some Northern cities famous, but we have none." 7-20-48

He described the meeting as being "made at Philadelphia when the convention advocated a social revolution in the South."

The States' Rights Chairman Walter Sillers thundered "We are here to show that constitutional government is not dead in this nation, despite what happened at Philadelphia.

BATTLE OF PHILLY World

Speakers unceasingly fought "The Battle of Philadelphia" in their addresses. So much so that it became repetitious as charges from the ridiculous to the impossible were grossly-magnified by the delegates whose supposed anger on civil rights was use to conceal their lobbying efforts for the tideland oil interests, which wants the federal government to hand bac kto the states the billion dollar deposits of sideland oil in Missisippi, Louisiana and Texas. Memphis, Tenn.

The puny politicians effectively used the racial issue as a smoke-screen. Unofficial candidates were present from Texas, California, Louisiana, Alabama and Missisippi (all in the tideland oil orbit) North Carolina, South Carolina, Maryland, Arkansas, Tennessee, Florida, Oklahoma, Indiana, Georgia, Virginia and Kentucky. 7-20-48

"The Southern Revolt"

Herald Tribune

To the New York Herald Tribune:

President Truman may "lack leadership, the sense of timing and the semblance of magnanimity which might have made endurable to the South his emphasis on civil rights," as stated in your editorial of July 19, "The Southern Revolt." Yet what other President, since Lincoln, has had the courage of his convictions on an issue that may prove dynamite to a large political group?

There are thousands who feel that the timing, at least, is perfect. While millions of dollars are being spent for European rehabilitation, while the United Nations concerns itself with the troubles in Palestine, while America is settling down to peace after a long and hard war, when is the time more ripe than now for bringing to a close the long, unnecessary suffering that has been inflicted on millions of Negroes through segregation, social injustice and bigotry? New York, N.Y.

Continuing to soothe the South at the expense of the safety and comfort and liberty of the Negro race will never solve the problem of civil rights. Negroes have waited patiently for a leader who will act, not talk, and who, at the sacrifice of popularity, political prestige and even party unity, will endeavor to give to every man his due—"Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." 7-24-48

'IT'S NOT NEW PARTY,' WRIGHT POINTS OUT

Seeks Electoral Votes With Thurmond, But They Are Not Candidates

Memphis, Tenn.

By The Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss., July 21.—Governor Wright Wednesday insisted that he and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina are not "candidates" for the offices of Vice President and President, respectively. 7-22-48

The Mississippi Governor explained he did not consider the Birmingham States' Rights Conference last Saturday the formation of a new party.

"We have not been nominated as candidates by any political party," the Governor said.

Recommended To Party

"We were recommended to the Democratic Parties in the various states as men suitable to be President and Vice President, and in accord with the principles of the States' Rights movement," he said.

Reminded by newsmen that he and Governor Thurmond are considered by many voters to be candidates in effect, Governor Wright said:

"There has never been a nomination and so far as I know there will be none on Oct. 1."

On Oct. 1 a States' Rights Conference of presidential electors is scheduled to be held in Birmingham to solidify the electoral strength for the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

Governor Wright pointed out that if the Electoral College fails to give a majority of its votes to one man, the three receiving the greatest number then go into an election in the House of Representatives, where each state has one vote.

Only Moral Obligation

The Commercial Appeal

"Electors are free agents," he said. "Their pledges are a moral obligation, not a legal one. The electors who are already chosen can vote for whom they please."

The matter of getting electors to support the Thurmond-Wright ticket is being handled in each state in accordance with the individual party regulations in those states, Wright said. Memphis, Tenn.

He said the Mississippi Democratic Convention which will be reconvened here Aug. 3 is likely to "pledge" its electors to the Thurmond-Wright ticket, but may leave them "unpledged." Thurs.

Governor Wright later announced the States' Rights leaders will meet in Atlanta Saturday to plan their campaign of opposition to President Truman and his civil rights program. He said Governor Thurmond would attend the meeting. 7-22-48

Glen Taylor Plans Bill to Repeal Draft

Herald Tribune

Will Introduce Measure at Session Today

New York, N.Y.

PHILADELPHIA, July 25 (UP). —Senator Glen H. Taylor, Progressive party candidate for Vice-President, said tonight he will introduce a bill to repeal the draft law when the special session of Congress opens tomorrow. Mon

"The bill to repeal the draft will have the support of millions of Americans who cherish peace," the Idahoan told "The Young Progressives of America." The Young Progressives, meeting here, are preparing a campaign to mobilize youthful backing for Henry A. Wallace and Senator Taylor all over the country.

Representative Leo Isacson, American Labor party, of New York, has already promised to sponsor a draft-repeal bill in the House when Congress convenes.

Senator Taylor called the peace-time draft law "the culminating act of the joint Republican-Democratic drive toward a new world war." He said his repealer will be "the first legislative act" of the Progressive party.

"At the same time, we will press for elimination of segregation in the armed services," he added.

The Progressive party platform demands an anto-segregation law and repeal of the draft act.

'In Dixieland I'll Take My Stand'

The C I O News Washington, D.C

Mon. 7-26-48

By ARTHUR RIORDAN

POLITICS was boiling so heavily last week that it appeared for a while that Henry Wallace's group might lose the claim to the title of third party.

While Henry's followers gathered in Philadelphia to vote "ja" on a ready-made platform and nominate Wallace and Sen. Glen H. Taylor, the anti-Truman Dixie Democrats were already campaigning to unsolidify the Solid South.

Nominated at Birmingham, Ala., as standard-bearers for the Dixiecrats were Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina (famous for his confused metaphor at the Democratic convention: "I guess I'm giving you medicine you don't like to hear") and Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi (of whom the Atlanta Constitution said: "It would be interesting to know if Gov. Wright knows what part the tidelands oil interests have in promoting him and his fourth party?").

THE States Rights Democrats at the Alabama gathering included delegates from Maryland, South Carolina, the District of Columbia, Virginia, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Florida, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Kentucky and Tennessee and—surprisingly—from California, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana and Colorado.

Among the "notables" present: Rev. and Mrs. Gerald L. K. Smith, Alfalfa Bill Murray, Big Jim Folsom, and Frank Ellison Best (who peppered the Democratic convention in Philadelphia with literature urging that he be nominated for President and that only whites be allowed to vote).

Conspicuously absent: Gov. Earl Long, of Louisiana, and Herman Talmadge, candidate for governor in Georgia.

Gerald Smith was sad when the Dixiecrats decided that he was too hot even for them. In a statement Thurmond disavowed Smith's support. Smith, founder of the Christian Nationalist Crusade, was even sadder for "I kept myself deliberately in the background because I was anxious to do nothing that would introduce extraneous controversy into this wholesome and historic gathering."

But, he wasn't deterred. "I have called a convention for Aug. 20 and 21 in St. Louis of my followers and there I shall recommend to our leadership that they support the States' Rights principles in every state."

In a statement Thurmond denied that the issue was white supremacy. He declared he believes in improving the Negro's lot, but insisted that segregation was necessary.

In rejecting Smith's aid, he said: "We do not invite or need the support of any rabble-rouser who uses race hatred to inflame the emotions of the people.

"We are interested solely in protecting the rights of states to manage their own internal affairs."

Mon. 7-26-48

THE Dixiecrats held their rump session in protests against the strong civil rights plank adopted over their violent objections at the regular Democratic convention.

The keynote was the first of a number of oratorical blasts at Truman and his civil rights program. Ex-Gov. Frank Dixon, of Alabama, did some fancy keynoting. He cried: "The people of the South are determined, thank God, to preserve the basic principles of democracy and to prevent the establishment of a police state, vicious as are all police states vicious, and to prevent the end of human and personal freedom throughout this land."

The C I O News

Dixon is a corporation lawyer.

The oratory waxed warmer and warmer. And, every orator knew how to bring a lagging audience to its feet in a shouting demonstration. All they had to do was mention the magic name "Robert E. Lee" or the magic name "Jefferson Davis." Other sure-fire cheer-getters: "a stab in the back for the South" and the playing of "Dixie" by the band.

How did one get to be a delegate? All you had to do was walk in, find yourself a seat and join in the shouting. A lot of people did.

Washington, D.C

What does the fourth—or maybe it's third—party expect to do come November? Well, listen to Sen. James Oliver Eastland (D., Miss.): "Mr. Truman won't get a single electoral vote. The people of America respect integrity and honesty and they won't vote for Harry Truman."

7-26-48

In 1942, Eastland was elected to the Senate with the votes of only 51,355 of Mississippi's population of 2,183,796.

One surprise of the Dixie conference was the bolt from the gathering by Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas. Laney, who had been a leader of Southern opposition at Philadelphia, declared:

"The spirit of obstinacy and revenge is not the spirit of the South. The hasty action at Fort Sumpter and the ultimate results, even unto this day, are well remembered. We are right in our opposition to the platform planks on civil rights. But we in the South are outnumbered. We are licking our wounds, but our spirit is not broken. We are Americans."

The crowd was belligerent against any dissension. When Brig. Gen. Herbert Holdrige, a retired officer who was an announced candidate for president at Philadelphia, rose to his feet and tried to make some unheard protest, the audience screamed "throw that Communist out." A police escort helped Holdridge out of the hall. (He is NOT a Communist.)

lina standard, "because someone's got to carry it" . . Texas' banner was carried by a woman who said her father had been a Philadelphia delegate and that she had come to Birmingham to meet him. . . . 55 collegians from "Ole Miss" College kept chanting "to hell with Truman." . . . When resolutions were read, the chairman would ask: "Is there any discussion?" There never was . . . When the vote was put there never was any opposition, either. . . .

It seems that the famous British historian, Arnold Toynbee, had lectured at Birmingham Southern College recently. . . . State Sen. Lloyd Price, of Florida, told the Dixiecrats he didn't like Toynbee's designation of the South as a backward section . . . "There isn't a Negro student in the whole South who doesn't know more history than Toynbee," Price declared. "He's the favorite of the lee-be-ral, leftist, in-te-lec-tua; people in this country."

7-26-48

The name of Franklin Delano Roosevelt was never mentioned at the Dixiecrat convention.

THE PROSPECTS

On the present face of things, The Advertiser has seen no permanent, long-range answer to the South's grievous problem in the diversion of electoral votes to a Dixie Dummy (as yet unnamed: Thurmond was not actually "nominated" in Birmingham). But it is for every citizen to make his own assessment of the possibilities. Here is the status of the electoral votes:

Montgomery, Ala

ALABAMA—11 electoral votes already pledged against Truman.

MISSISSIPPI—9 votes, also committed to vote for someone besides Truman.

LOUISIANA—10 votes not committed, but former Gov. Sam Jones says state Democratic committee can instruct electors.

Sat. 7-24-48

TENNESSEE—12 electors chosen in convention, States' Righters say convention has power to remove electors; therefore can make them vote any way it wants.

GEORGIA—12 votes. Electors still to be named in primary election.

TEXAS—33 votes. Electors will be chosen by Democratic convention and can be instructed.

ARKANSAS—9 electors to be named in convention and can be pledged against Truman.

VIRGINIA—11 representatives in electoral college. Already chosen by convention and pledged for Truman, but anti-Truman forces contend party can instruct them otherwise.

SOUTH CAROLINA—8 electors to be chosen by State Democratic executive committee. Electors will be pledged against Truman by state convention resolution, but subject to change because of yesterday's court ruling that the Democratic Party is open to everybody. That may result in a new convention and widespread changes.

The Advertiser

NORTH CAROLINA—14 electors. Chosen in convention and not pledged but can be.

Montgomery Ala

The question is how many of these votes can be withheld from Truman. One of the handicaps is time. Another is the unspoken but indicated opposition of many high-ranking officeholders, particularly congressmen and senators. Such ones as Senator Byrd of Virginia, Senator George and Russell of Georgia, as well as Gov. Laney of Arkansas—all of whom the bolters had looked to for important help—have spurned the diversion project.

The South's New Party?

Rebellious Southern Democrats, sulking and steaming over the inclusion of a strong civil rights plank in the Democratic platform and the nomination of President Truman as the National Democratic Party standard bearer, met in Birmingham, Saturday, July 13, adopted a set of principles and nominated a Southern States' Rights ticket. 7-20-48

Many of the prominent figures in this rump "conference" were retired politicians, defeated public officers and klan-spirited leaders. But Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolnia and Arkansas had their state party leaders on hand. However, Arkansas' Governor Ben Laney, shortly after the conference adjournment, broke with the States' righters. Tues. Atlanta, Ga.

The conference was called to work out strategy to make the South count politically, to devise new barriers against human rights, to build new defenses for "white supremacy" and to provide a comeback for waning and discredited politicians. The meeting barred Negroes. The delegates were nearly all of one mind.

No spirit of democracy or sportsmanship prevailed at the conference or convention. A tight little group did all the planning, imposed het nomination of their flag-carrier and alowed no opposition.

Birmingham police were used as storm troopers. They ejected dissenters, persecuted pickets, drove Negro reporters away, in a terrible exhibition of bad policemanship. The policemen as such are blameless because they obviously carried out orders of their superiors.

If such a move by the bolters is not fatal, it is nevertheless futile. Once it puts out a ticket it becomes a party. As a party it is subject to the various Supreme Court decisions. The Thurmond-Wright ticket is most certain of court challenge in Alabama because it was done in a convention that violated the rights of Negroes. The party leaders should read the implications of Judge J. Waites Waring's recent decision on the Negro vote question. Tues. But of course, the Negro would want no part of this new program.

The two-party system is being dynamited by the Dixiecrats. Their action is a challenge to the calm, better judgment of the Nation and particularly the south. The two-party system is the answer to the situation. Then the south could bargain between the two major parties. 7-20-48

EDITOR, THE ADVERTISER: Your editorial this morning misses the point of our conversation in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel following the Philadelphia convention. An ambassador (as I called myself by way of illustration) cannot recall himself any more than a lawyer or other representative can abandon his case without notice and consultation with his client.

Just because the going gets rough I cannot quit on my motion or give up my credentials without authority from those who gave them. I have notified Senator McGrath that I have "ceased to function," to use your phrase, and tendered my resignation to the State Democratic Executive Committee, and hold myself subject to its action.

There has never been any doubt in my mind how I personally felt or would act in the coming campaign. I voted in the May Primary for electors who pledged themselves never to cast Alabama's electoral votes for Truman. I expect to vote for them again in the General Election in November. If it comes to a choice between the rooster and the donkey I am for the rooster always.

I AM convinced that the National Democratic Party is no longer an instrument of policy for Jeffersonian Democrats. At Philadelphia it became crystal clear through caucuses, platform drafting and other committee meetings as well as in the convention, that the presently powerful elements in what was once our party have never come to grips with the race problem, and never will, until the Negro becomes a larger percentage of the population in their states.

These gentlemen regard states' rights, or local self government, which has been the foundation of the South's immemorial faith in the Party, simply as stumbling blocks in the establishment of the single centralized government through which they hope to run this country from Washington, all according to a single pattern. In conference they frequently used such words as "obsolete," "outworn refuge of Bourbons," "vermiform appendix" and "dodo" to refer to a governmental plan of government, which is very much alive today. Certainly the United States would never have signed the United Nations covenant in 1945 unless we were assured that we retained control of our domestic affairs. In fact, the Big Five, the United States, Russia, Great Britain, France and China, insisted on veto powers in addition to restrictive covenants. 7-24-48

If the United States, the most successful federation of sovereignties which the world has yet seen, establishes the precedent that in such organizations the central government will eventually swallow up the component states, you may well foresee forced upon us in the future the customs and habits of the Russians, Chinese, or even the Africans. I am a convinced states-righter, yesterday, today and tomorrow.

I AM not "marking time," as you (jestingly, I hope) suggest. I know that already this is a "shooting war" in which the survival of our right to govern ourselves and to develop in our own way is at stake. I expect to do my part in that war. I know that the vigor of our protest will be the measure of our success and that if we fail now we will be a sadder position in 1952 than that in which we find ourselves today. Sat.

Now let me ask you a question. How do you propose to resolve your "political unhappiness"? Are you going to lie down and take the bitter dose served up by that quondam Democrat, Truman, or swallow the identical dish if only it is served up by the Republicans? 7-24-48

I hope that you will join hands with those who see quite clearly the practical aspects of the situation in a concededly lost Democratic year, and realize that while northern Democrats can out-talk and out-vote us in convention they still have respect for votes in the Electoral College. The more of those we put beyond their reach in November the more respect the South will command in the future.

Sen. McClellan Thinks Half Dozen States May Desert Truman

Post.

By The Associated Press

The entrance of a "Dixiecrat ticket" into the presidential field brought a disputed prediction yesterday that President Truman may lose the support of up to six Southern States in the November election.

Senaotr McClellan (D., Ark.) told a reporter he thinks the Southern Democratic rebel ticket may help take the electoral votes of a half dozen Southern States away from President Truman and Senator Alben Barkley, his running mate.

The new ticket—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi for Vice President—was put forth at Birmingham Saturday as one Dixie answer to the President's civil rights program. Washington D.C.

States Are Listed

McClellan — who fought the President's nomination but did not walk out of the Democratic convention—named Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Tennessee as possible participants in a bolt he said is almost certain to result in the regular Democratic Party's defeat in the presidential election.

He put Tennessee in the list, McClellan said, because of a sharp local division among Democrats there. Sun.

He said that if the Thurmond-Wright ticket gets on the ballot in Arkansas it may split the Democratic vote in his home State and give the Republicans some chance of winning there. Mon. 7-19-48

Hatch Sees Truman Victory

But McClellan's prediction drew immediate fire from Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.), close personal friend of the President, who said he doesn't think the effort to place a fourth party in the field "will be effective in more than one or two States." Washington D.C.

The New Mexico Senator predicted election of a Truman-Barkley ticket even if some of the Southerners don't go along.

Hatch hinted the Democrats think there is some chance that Henry Wallace—scheduled to get the official nomination of his third party in Philadelphia next week-end—might not carry through until November. Wallace repeatedly has asserted he has no intention of quitting the race. D.C.

"I'm not so sure about what Wallace is going to do," Hatch said. "Politics is in such a state of flux now that no one can say just what will happen in the next month or two."

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), another friend of the President, said the Birmingham rump convention's action in nominating Thurmand and Wright could be "rather serious from the standpoint of the Democratic Party."

"If the Southerners carry out this fight," he said, "it means that the Democratic Party as a whole will have to campaign a good deal more diligently in the South htan it ha sheretofore." He added he does not think the extrance of the Dixiecrat ticket in the field "will have the effect of taking the South out of the Democratic column." MON. 7-19-48

O'Mahoney conceded, however, that if the margin between Democrats and Republicans is close in any single State, a third-party ticket might cost the Truman-Barkley ticket that State's electoral backing.

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) said he doesn't think the Dixie rebellion will make much difference in the November outcome.

"The Dewey-Warren ticket will make such a sweep that it can win without help from the South," he predicted.

Nevertheless Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York has indicated he may make a direct bid for Southern votes. 7-19-48 Tentative plans have been made for him to campaign in Virginia, where he got 38 per cent of the vote in his 1944 race against Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Dixiecrat bolters made plans to bid for th 1e37 electoral votes of Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Texas, Virginia, South Carolina and North Carolina.

'Father' of Party Split Accepts Revolt Offer

States' Rights Group Puts Wright in Second Spot

(The Associated Press)

Jackson, Miss., July 17. — Mississippi Governor Fielding L. Wright, the states' rights Democratic vice-presidential candidate, fathered the 1948 party revolt.

Wright sounded the keynote for the break with the national Democratic party in his inaugural address as governor here last January. He warned national party leadership then the South would break with them if they continued sponsorship of "anti-Southern legislation." Sun.

The quiet-mannered, 53-year-old, grey-headed, cigar-smoking governor is a native of Sharkey county—the home of some 11,000 Negroes and about 4000 white persons. His philosophy of government calls for fair treatment of the Negro in keeping with the traditions of the South. 7-18-48

His acceptance of the nomination at Birmingham, Ala., came as something of a surprise to Mississippi political observers because, from the start of the movement, he has said he wanted no such nomination. Early in the movement when the Florida Anti-Truman Club attempted to "draft" him, as presidential nominee, he declined to be "drafted."

Negroes on Juries

Wright was born in Rolling Fork, Miss., the son of a county sheriff. He attended Webb school in Bellbuckle, Tenn., and later the University of Alabama, where he was graduated in law.

He likes to tell of the days 28 years ago when he began practice of law in Rolling Fork. Seldom, he says, was there a jury chosen in Sharkey county which did not have Negroes as members. His first capital case jury, in adjoining Issaquena county, where there are four Negroes for every white person, had 11 Negroes and one white man on the panel.

Wright began his political career in 1928 when he was elected to the Mississippi Legislature. Since then he has served as presiding officer of both houses, as lieutenant governor and as governor. He became governor in November, 1946, on the death of Gov. Thomas L. Bailey. Last year he was elected to a full term of his own by the largest majority ever accorded a Mississippi chief executive. 7-18-48

Wright and the late Sen. Theo G. Bilbo were the only men who have ever been nominated as Democratic candidates for governor without a run off primary.

Served as Private

The bespectacled Methodist governor was long a political foe of Bilbo, but during his 1947 campaign he received the backing of most of the leaders in "the man's" campaign organization.

He served in World War I as a private, returning to civilian life in 1919. During the next three years he "hired out" to semipro baseball teams in the Mississippi Delta. He served as a National Guard captain from 1925 to 1928 when he resigned to accept a seat in the state Senate. He was elected lieutenant governor in 1944.

Wright is an outspoken opponent of anti-poll tax, anti-lynching, and anti-segregation legislation and particularly of the FEPC. A fair employment practices law, he says, would lead to bloodshed in the South.

He is married and has a son, Fielding L. Wright, Jr., a young attorney; and an adopted daughter, Elaine. Though he and his family maintain official residence in the governor's mansion here, he maintains his permanent residence in Rolling Fork.

Another Party Emerges

Technicalities of names aside, the meeting yesterday of Southern States' Righters in Birmingham means the emergence of a fourth party in the field—always supposing HENRY WALLACE and GLEN TAYLOR are still running on their No-Name trail.

The event is the culmination of long effort on the part of Southerners to obtain what they considered fair and adequate recognition of their consistent loyalty to the Democratic Party and of their point of view on political theories and social customs. It is, therefore, to be regarded with far more interest and respect than if it had been jumped up overnight in the heat of sudden anger.

The ticket of GOV. J. STROM THURMOND of South Carolina for President and Gov. FIELDING WRIGHT of Mississippi for Vice President reflects the sentiments of those responsible for the choice. It also means that two states which have been in the forefront of the movement all along now take the lead in its further prosecution. Commercial Appeal

The men who promoted the Birmingham meeting and carried it through are experienced political realists. They are fully aware that there is no chance for the election of their candidates this year, but they mean the drive as far more than a mere gesture of protest. The possibilities are interesting. Memphis, Tenn

What now appears to be the most practical proposal for the members of the new group is that of obtaining more electoral votes than President TRUMAN can secure. This, they argue, will make them legally the minority party in the next Congress and give them whatever powers and committee assignments that go along with that position. 7-18-48

If what has hitherto been regarded as the Solid South remains solid this year, the States' Righters may get a minimum of 127 electoral votes. If their proposed invasion of the so-called border states such as Kentucky, Oklahoma and Missouri should pay off, they would pick up a far more impressive total. At this writing, however, it seems improbable that they can get anywhere in several of the border states for one reason or another. In Kentucky and Oklahoma it appears that legal requirements would prevent their getting on the ballot.

If present plans go through, the States' Righters will carry their gospel into a number of states well outside the South and its borders, but that would fall into the category of promotion for the future rather than otherwise. Sun. 7-18-48

With 531 electoral votes to be cast, it now seems unlikely that the Southern group can muster enough strength to throw the election into the House of Representatives. That comes about only when no one man voted for in the college obtains a majority of the votes.

At the most, the campaign started in Birmingham might change the political complexion considerably. At the least, it does offer the rest of the Nation a striking illustration of the feelings of a substantial segment of the country and of the vigor with which it is prepared to defend them.

ATLANTA, July 24—(AP)—The States' Rights' Democrats Saturday decided to enter a presidential ticket in all the states of the nation.

The action was announced in a formal statement released through George McNabb, press secretary to Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.

Thurmond was recommended at the Birmingham states' rights convention July 17 to carry the South's fight on civil rights against President Truman.

His running mate, selected at the Birmingham meeting, is Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, the vice presidential candidate.

The meeting served, however, to emphasize that most of the support for the states rights movement is coming from Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina.

Alabamians were former Gov. Frank M. Dixon, Horace Wilkinson, Sydney Smyer and Olin Horton. The first three are attorneys: Horton represents the Alabama Mining Institute.

Birmingham, Ala., July 17.—The Ole Miss delegation to the Dixiecrat convention here will play an integral part in the Mississippi campaign committee being formed to carry the states' rights candidate to the people of Mississippi, J. Noah Sweat, Alcorn county legislator from Corinth and spokesman for the 95-man Ole Miss group, said that the delegation to Birmingham will act as a committee to inform the students of Mississippi educational institutions of the states' rights platform.

Delegates from Rebel-land had their pictures on the front pages of two newspapers today. Frank Barber and Danny Mac Currie of Hattiesburg were posed with William "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, former governor of Oklahoma. A sextette of students with their black planters' hats were also featured. They were John Murray, Brandon; Andrew Sullivan, Macon; Bernard Triplett, Union; Bobby Gene Jones, Moss Point; Cleveland Davis, Cleveland, and Eddie Wilson, Ruleville.

REBELS CLAIM 127 ELECTORAL VOTES

Southern Delegates Give Estimates of Strength

Sun. 7-18-48

(The Associated Press)

Birmingham, Ala., July 17.—States' rights leaders say they can pick up as many as 127 electoral votes—perhaps more—in the November election.

Here is a state-by-state survey, based on the way delegates talked at today's anti-Truman conference of Southern Democrats:

Alabama—11 electoral votes already pledged against Truman.

Mississippi—9 votes, also committed to vote for someone besides Truman.

Louisiana—10 votes not committed, but former Gov. Sam Jones says state Democratic committee can instruct electors.

Tennessee—12 electors chosen in convention, states' righters say convention has power to remove electors; therefore can make them vote any way it wants.

Georgia—12 votes. Electors still to be named in primary election.

Florida—8 electors already chosen in primary. No way to instruct them, states' righters concede, if they want to support Truman.

Sun. 7-18-48

Texas—33 votes. Electors will be chosen by Democratic convention and can be instructed.

Arkansas—9 electors to be named in convention and can be pledged against Truman.

Virginia—11 representatives in electoral college. Already chosen by convention and pledged for Truman, but anti-Truman forces contend party can instruct them otherwise.

South Carolina—8 electors to be chosen by state Democratic executive committee. Electors will be pledged against Truman by state convention resolution, but subject to change because of yesterday's court ruling that the Democratic party is open to everybody. That may result in a new convention and widespread changes.

7-18-48

North Carolina—14 electors. Chosen in convention and not pledged but can be.

Sun

In addition, the states' righters hope to win support in Oklahoma, which has 10 votes, and Maryland, with 8, and plan to enter anti-Truman elector candidates in Missouri and Kentucky, home states of Mr. Truman and his running mate, Sen. Alben Barkley.

A victory in Missouri would give the states' rights move 15 electoral votes, and Kentucky could add another 11.

Rebel Whoops Re-Echo From Dixicrat Parley

BIRMINGHAM, July 19—Southern Democrats may have been outshouted at the National convention in Philadelphia early last week, but it was a different story when they were playing on their own home grounds in Birmingham Saturday.

Today, the Alabama city still resounded from the din created by more than 7,000 persons who whooped the States Rights convention to a noisy high that would equal any other political meeting in the nation.

Whatever the Southerners lacked in political strength, they made up in noise, enthusiasm and spirit. In two days the meeting had developed from a conference of Dixie Democratic leaders to a massive convention that drew representatives from all Southern states and four others.

From the time the convention got under way until it closed, the slightest denouncement of President Truman was enough to set off a demonstration.

The crowd, which packed the Birmingham Municipal auditorium and overflowed into the street, was in a mood of tense expectancy and upon the slightest provocation would take to the aisles to show its approval of the spoken derogation.

The hall had the political convention atmosphere although delegates were present in name only. The floor of the auditorium had been divided into sections for the ates and standards carried their names.

Klieg lights lined the railing of the balcony and illuminated the rostrum with their glaring rays as television cameras ground. News photographers by the dozens flitted from platform to door in constant search of new subjects.

Say NAACP 'Fighting' Ad Stiffened Demos' Backs

NEW YORK — Moral strength was loaned to northern and western delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia, by a six column advertisement placed with the Philadelphia Bulletin by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, according to convention observers.

It was said to have contributed to the successful fight for a strong civil rights plank in the party platform.

The article entitled "Let 'Em Walk" declared, "There may be times for compromise, for concessions that do not sacrifice moral integrity or endanger the great and objective, but there is no room in Philadelphia in July, 1948, for compromise on human rights in the Democratic party platform."

The ad advised the convention to remain undisturbed if these southern delegates would rather walk out than agree to basic tenets of democracy.

"If a set of men wants to organize a political party on a platform of letting lynching take care of itself, or permitting disfranchisement, or maintaining discrimination and inequality in employment, or enthroning segregation and the doctrine of superiority of one man over another on the basis of mere skin color, it is free to do so.

"In the attainment of the great end objective of a free, truly democratic nation and a free world for all men, they are a hobble, not a help. Their going would be a blessing, not a blow. Let 'em walk."

DRIVE IN MISSOURI IS SET

New York, N.Y.

But a Leader of Birmingham Conclave Admits Opposition From Office-holder Class

Sat. 7-17-48

By JOHN N. POPHAM

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 16—States'-rights Democrats, meeting in caucus on the eve of their convention which is designed to solidify Southern resentment against President Truman and the civil-rights issue, made a gesture of political bravado today and also disclosed their major weakness as potential vote-getters.

Horace Wilkinson, chairman of the resolutions committee of the States'-rights Democrats, announced a move to "carry the fight into Harry Truman's back yard" by having state campaign committees name a slate of Presidential electors on the ballots in Missouri and Kentucky. These would be pledged against Mr. Truman and his running mate.

He said that a resolution calling for adoption of this bold stratagem would be offered "right off the bat" at the opening session of the convention, which will get under way at 10 A. M. tomorrow in the city's municipal auditorium.

From the standpoint of organizational strength based on political patronage, the Achilles heel of the States-rights Democrats was epitomized when W. W. Wright, campaign committee chairman of Mississippi, declared that "all opposition to this movement in the South is coming from Federal and state office-holders."

Russell's Stand Involved

Mr. Wright made his statement after a newspaper reporter had asked him for an opinion on the assertion of Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia who received 263 votes at the national convention, that he would not accept a Presidential nomination from the States'-rights Democrats and would remain loyal to the national Democratic party.

"While we would like to have and want to have the support of the office-holders," Mr. Wright continued, "the will of the people and the principles involved here cannot be suboridnated to their wishes."

Sat. 7-17-48

Meanwhile, enthusiasm continued to run at a high pitch in this industrial city as delegates and interested on-lookers continued to arrive. They crowded the hotel lobbies, dressed chiefly in shirt-sleeves and broad-brimmed hats characteristic of the people of the deep South in midsummer.

Convention officials repeatedly announced that they had received personal confirmation that Governors Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, Ben T. Laney of Arkansas and J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina would be on hand late tonight or early tomorrow.

United States Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi, a champion of states'-rights precepts, arrived this afternoon and held a brief conference with the states'-rights leaders on hand.

It was reported that Senator John C. Stennis of Mississippi, who fused liberal and conservative forces in Mississippi last fall to win election to the Senatorial seat of the late Theodore G. Bilbo, advocate of white supremacy, would arrive here tonight.

For the second day in a row the vagueness of official statements and the conflicting reports from states'-rights leaders in other areas combined to leave up in the air the exact purposes for which the convention was being called.

Among the officials at today's caucus there was a noticeable division of opinion on whether to name a Presidential candidate at tomorrow's session or to emphasize plans for having the Presidenial electors in Southern states withhold their electoral votes and try to force the national election into the House of Representatives on the theory that the South could wield the balance of power in such a development.

One group argued the best strategy would be to start a campaign "to free the Presidential electors" so they would not be bound to vote for the nominee of the Democratic party and could "exercise their own judgment."

The other group went along on the scheme "to free the electors" but insisted that it would be wiser to name also a Presidential candidate to attract the attention of the voters and "symbolize our cause."

Indications today were that delegations at tomorrow's conference with any likely political strength would come principally from Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina and possibly Florida. It appeared that all other Southern states were frowning on the convention as a solution to the South's dissatisfaction with the results of the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

Large Crowd Is Awaited

At the same time it seemed very likely that a large crowd would be on hand when the session opens. However, the loose manner in which delegates are seated by merely pledging support to the ideal of states' rights led many to believe that most states would be represented by persons with enthusiasm rather than political power.

During the day convention officials, headed by Mr. Wilkinson, former Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama; John Lusk, a Presidential elector from Gadsden, Ala.; W. W. Wright of Mississippi and Handy Ellis of Alabama, met behind closed doors to "work out a plan of conduct."

This group later announced that its members were also making plans for building the states'-rights Democrats' organization into a permanent organization "to carry on this fight for the next four years."

"Our feeling is that this is a battle for our life down here," W. W. Wright asserted, "and it is something that is not going to be settled in this coming election."

There were reports today of a counter-move by supporters of President Truman and behind the scenes there was political sniping at the background and motives of some leaders in the states'-rights movement.

State Senator Joseph N. Langan of Mobile urged that Truman supporters in Alabama hold a meeting on Aug. 16 and name a slate of Presidential electors favorable to Mr. Truman. Names of the electors, he said, could be written in on Election Day in November.

Political opposition began to circulate rumors today that the States'-rights Democrats were "political outs" wh ohad gone down to defeat in the early New Deal days and were seeking to regain political stature by using the State's-rights Democrats for demagogic purposes.

They said that Mr. Wilkinson, an Alabama Presidential elector pledged against Mr. Truman, was leader of the forces which supported Herbert Hoover in Alabama in 1928. They also charged that former Governor Dixon and Eugene (Bull) Connor, police chief of Birmingham, had political aspirations and wanted control of the state machinery. They further alleged that a number of the States'-Rights Democrats in Alabama were closely associated with organizations known for reactionary views.

COLUMBIA, S. C. — The rump convention of dixie rebels was a blow to American democracy, declared James A. Rodgers, editor of a Florence, S. C., paper, before a meeting of the Rotary Club, last week.

After reminding his audience that one of the great concepts of American thought is that all men should share the benefits of democracy, Rodgers said that in practice, many whites still argue that some citizens are not entitled to them.

Sat. 7-31-48

In meeting the issue of civil rights and democracy throughout the world, the U. S. must broaden the base of democracy at home, he said. "The best defense against communism is to demonstrate that democracy is workable where we live and work," he added.

"I do not believe that the wrath which exploded at Philadelphia and resulted in the circus at Birmingham, which resulted in a reactionary platform of racism, is the kind of medicine needed in the south and the nation to fight communism." Rodgers declared

"We are in a great crisis in South Carolina on the nation and the world. The time has come when the non-political ordinary men need to gather their resources and fight against forces which are gnawing away at our foundations," he continued.

Atlanta Conferees Agree States' Rights Will Get Emphasis In Campaign

Nationwide Battle

Thurmond And Wright Formally To Accept Nomination In Houston

By BEM PRICE

ATLANTA—(AP)—The issue of states' rights Saturday drove some angry Southern Democrats to form a fourth party. They will try to enter a presidential slate in all states.

Candidates of the party, officially named "the States' Rights Democrats," are Gov. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, for president, and Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, for vice-president.

Precisely how the party intends to go about obtaining places on the November general election ballots in the 48 states was not disclosed.

Immediately after the decision by the steering committee, named after the July 17 states' rights convention at Birmingham, Thurmond said, "we are running for president and expect to be elected."

He emphasized that "we are not running on white supremacy, racial hatred or class prejudice. We are running primarily on the issue of states' rights."

The 46-year-old South Carolinian said other problems, domastic and foreign, would be met "at the proper time" by adding that steps would be taken to set up a party organization immediately.

American Way of Life

A typewritten announcement by the committee said the decision to campaign was "to give millions of real Americans the opportunity of voting for these candidates and to preserve the American way of life . . .

"This," it continued, "is the most feasible way to preserve our American way of government . ."

Thurmond said he would make his first campaign speech at the Cherryville, S. C., watermelon festival July 31.

Thus did dissident Southern Democrats answer President Truman for his civil rights proposals and the national party for incorporating them in a national platform.

The Advertiser

Earlier, a necessarily anonymous spokesman left the meeting and explained the states righters' aims thus:

"The national party is shot, the Republicans will win, but the Southern Democrats by sticking together may well become the majority of the minority party.

To Pick Up Pieces

"Therefore, when the Republicans win, the well organized Southerners will be on hand to pick up and dominate what is left of the national Democratic organization."

Montgomery Ala.

The announcement came a few minutes after Oliver Emmerich, McComb, Miss., newspaper publisher, and Merritt H. Gibson, of Longview, Texas, announced state conventions would be reconvened in South Carolina and Mississippi in early August to pledge support to Thurmond.

7-25-48

Gibson, former county judge, also disclosed that THhurmond and Wright had agreed to accept the Birmingham nomination formally at a statewide rally in Houston Aug. 11.

Exactly how much support the fourth party movement has is problematical. The Birmingham meeting drew a crowd of around 7,000, mostly from Alabama.

Saturday's meeting, however, served to emphasize that most of the support for the states' rights movement at present is coming from Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina and Texas.

Men from these states dominated Saturday's caucus, but there were some present from Florida, Louisiana and Arkansas.

West Virginians Missing Their Chance

CHARLESTON, W. VA.—(AP)—Gov. Clarence W. Meadows has informed Dixiecrats that it is too late to get their slate of presidential electors on West Virginia's election ballot.

The Governor disclosed that he also told the Dixiecrat presidential candidate, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina:

"We are interested in fighting the Republicans in the general election, rather than fighting among the Democrats."

Montgomery Ala.

Meadows said Thurmond called him by telephone and that he explained that under West Virginia law, petitions containing the names of more than 7,200 voters would have to have been filed by May 10, the day before this year's primary election, in order to gain a place on the state's ballot.

You'd Better Not Bolt, McCorvey Warns

By MERCER BAILEY

Associated Press Staff Writer

Alabama's political pot, boiling furiously all year, is feeding on flames from two new sources today.

Sun.

1—Democratic National Committeeman Marion Rushton has turned in his resignation in a protest against the party's strong civil rights platform. The Montgomery attorney said he will stick with the states' rights group.

2—State Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey apparently set out Saturday to spike a move to throw this state's support to President Truman.

7-25-48

Alabama's 11 Democratic presidential electors are pledged not to support President Truman. State Senator Joseph N. Langan, of Mobile, however, has proposed an independent slate of pro-Truman electors.

The party chieftain's counter move came in a statement to the Roanoke, Ala., Leader. He warned that persons opposing Alabama's primary nominees might be denied places on the party ticket in 1950.

It was a thinly veiled threat. He indicated that Alabama Democrats who support the national party this year would be committing political suicide. In the past, independent candidates have had little luck trying to buck the state Democratic organization.

They Take An Oath

Since the 1928 election, McCorvey reminded, the state executive committee has required would-be primary candidates to take an oath that they did not "openly and publicly" oppose the state party nominees in the general elections.

It was in 1928 that Senator Tom Heflin, of LaFayette, came out against the Democratic presidential nominee, Al Smith. The party refused to let Heflin run on its ticket for the U. S. Senate.

Heflin made the race as an independent, however, and was beaten by the late Senator John H. Bankhead, Jr., the party's choice.

The Advertiser

Langan has called a meeting of pro-Truman forces in Montgomery Aug. 16 to name a slate of independent electors. He said he invited Senator Lister Hill and former Gov. Chauncey Sparks to attend the convention.

Hill and Sparks were two of Alabama's 13 delegates to the national convention who refused to walk out. Langan himself was defeated for a delegate post on an anti-walk platform.

"Stop, Look, Listen"

McCorvey warned "any Alabamian with political ambitions to stop, look and listen before fighting the nominees of our Democratic primaries."

A copy of the statement was mailed to Langan.

Langan admitted his oath as a party primary candidate bound him to support the primary nominees, but asserted these do not include presidential electors.

"The electors are merely the instruments by which the people vote for a party. Therefore, I own no more loyalt yto them than to a ballot," he declared.

The secretary of state's office has said it will ask Attorney General A. A. Carmichael to determine whether an independent slate can be placed on the ballot if one is presented. Carmichael was a non-walk delegate at the Philadelphia convention, narrowly defeating McCorvey for the post.

Montgomery Ala.

Little Time Left

Sept. 2 is the deadline for certifying candidates to the secretary of state, so Langan's forces would have only a little more than two weeks to get up a slate and qualify members. The Attorney General's opinion would take up time.

There is a possibility, a recognized legal authority said, that either side could go directly into court for a ruling on the independent slate. Langan probably could ask a writ of mandamus to compel the secretary of state to place the slate on the ballot. His opponents could ask for an injunction to prevent the names from being listed.

Sun.

Both sides, this authority said, could ask declaratory to determine the law concerning such matters.

7-25-48

Then, too, write-in votes could be cast for the independent elector candidates if they didn't get on the ballot.

Meanwhile, National Committeeman Rushton's resignation rested with the 72-man state committee. Rushton, who has held the post since 1939, said Friday he doesnt think Alabama wants representation in the national party.

No Truman, Thanks

He reasoned that Alabama—along with other Southern Democrats—is strongly opposed to President Truman and his civil rights program.

In a letter to McCorvey, the former army colonel criticized the party for refusing to "include the time-honored Democratic states rights plank, which has been the foundation of the South's faith since its organization."

Writing to Senator McGrath, chairman of the Democratic national committee, Rushton declared:

"I was elected . . . upon a platform of opposition to interference by the federal government in matters reserved to the States specifically in opposition to President Truman's civil rights program. . . .

And Not Mrs. Truman

"I regret no way has been found to impress other components of the party with the fact that the tragic problems of the South are not to be solved by congressional fiat, but by evolution, education and patience."

Mrs. Lennard Thomas, Alabama's national Democratic committeewoman, Saturday announced in a statement that she would not resign.

Her statement came a few hours after the state's national Democratic committeeman, Marion Rushton of Montgomery, sent his resignation to Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of Mobile.

7-25-48

"How can we work toward a United Nations if we do not work toward a United States?" Mrs. Thomas asked. "I am an American above a partisan."

Southerners Fear Loss of Patronage

Free Press

Detroit, Mich.

BY EDWIN A. LAHEY

Of Our Washington Bureau

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—The strong tug of Federal patronage is taking a lot of strength out of the revolt of the Confederate wing of the Democratic Party.

Organizers of the revolt admitted that their states'-rights conference was getting the cold shoulder from Federal jobholders and patronage dispensers, with the exception of a few die-hards.

"All the opposition to this movement in the South is coming from officeholders," said W. W. Wright, a Jackson (Miss.) wholesale grocer, who is one of the leaders of the rebels.

Sat.

* * *

"THIS IS a people's movement, dealing with a question that affects the people."

"While we would like to have the support of the officeholders, the will of the people cannot be subordinated to their wishes."

The first objective of the states'-rights group, which will hold a conference here Saturday, is to tie up the 127 electoral votes of the 11 states of the solid South by getting unpledged electors in the electoral college.

7-17-48

The rather vague strategy, if the rebels could get unpledged electors, would be to punish President Truman by withholding the Southern votes from him in the electoral college, or force him to abandon his civil rights.

* * *

WRIGHT AND Horace Wilkinson of Birmingham, one of the Alabama presidential electors who are already "unpledged," said that every state in the South would be represented in the conference.

They estimated that 1,500 or more individuals would show up.

The only public officials who could be reported as present or enroute to the conference were three governors, Fielding Wright, of Mississippi; Ben Laney, of Arkansas, and J. Storm Thurman, of South Carolina. One United States senator, Eastland of Mississippi, was here.

Eastland's colleague, John Stennis, the junior senator from Mississippi, was expected by the conference leaders, but had not shown up Friday night.

Govs. Wright and Laney are chief possibilities for the nomination.

* * *

THE REBEL leaders laid stress on the statement that this was not a temporary flareup of Southern resentment against the northern wing of the Democratic party.

"We're building for the next four years," said W. W. Wright, who is not related to Mississippi's Gov. Wright.

"This is a battle for our life, and it won't be settled by this election."

Wright and Wilkinson said that the resolutions committee at the Saturday conference would instruct the states' rights campaign committee to take steps to have anti-Truman electors put on the ballot in Missouri, the President's home state, and in Kentucky, the home of Truman's running-mate, Senator Barkley.

Former Gov. Frank M. Dixon, of Alabama, was named temporary chairman for the convention.

The appointment was announced by W. W. Wright.

Alienating Friends

The News

To the Editor of The News:

Is it not about time for Alabama Democratic voters to review with appreciation the efforts of their old Democratic friends, principally of the Middle West? These old friends established a record in favoring Alabama that has no parallel in American political history. Let us review this record.

Sen. Norris, of Nebraska, was the daddy of the TVA. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, a great crusading American newspaper, joined Norris in this endeavor. Very soon thereafter Sen. Jim Reed, also from Missouri, stepped up to the firing line to help out. These individuals and this distant newspaper crusaded under difficulties for over 20 years to help establish for the South this project that cost millions of dollars. Birmingham

The major difficulty encountered in this effort was that congressmen and senators from Tennessee, Arkansas and Alabama joined up with the power companies and desperately fought the TVA. Ala.

It can therefore be seen that the Democrats of the Middle West had the unsolicited human welfare interest and balance of power to make this TVA idea an actual reality. Later, through the guiding hand of President Roosevelt, Central City, Elyton Village and many other projects came to Alabama with regularity. This successful record of cooperation cannot be questioned, but facts are at hand today which threaten the continuation of this friendship. Fri. 8-27-48

Our local Dixiecrat and States' Rights leaders are the same old politicians who for years have preached race hatred. These well-fed brethren always appeal with feeling for their way of life. Let us review the way of life they have planned for us common white voters. They have had passed by state legislative action the following laws: The Boswell amendment, the granting of a charter to the Ku Klux Klan and a law about three years ago forbidding the government to build in Jefferson County with taxpayers' money any more low-rent housing projects. This last hypocritical law was passed to favor loan companies and real estate people. These Dixiecrats believe that the state should have the right to deprive a voter of cheap rent provided by government money. They contend this same taxpayers' money should be lent by the government to the loan companies and real estate people so they can sell and rent the voters houses at a profit to themselves.

If a voter would take a trip around Birmingham, he will observe a gigantic housebuilding program now in progress. Most of the money financing these projects is government taxpayers' money.

It is an accredited opinion that loyalty to your friends is a virtue, whereas ingratitude is a cardinal sin. The writer knows that President Truman wound up his haberdashery business in the bankrupt court. Twelve years after this bankruptcy he paid off in full all these old bills. I know he will not lie or steal from you, that he has unlimited courage and is loyal to his friends. These old-fashioned American qualifications insist that I believe Truman the best man for president.

NORTH CAROLINA AND ALABAMA

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala

The Thurmond-Wright ticket is experiencing the same difficulties in North Carolina as the Truman-Barkley ticket in Alabama. Neither is having any luck so far winning a place on the ballot.

In Alabama, it's all over. Alabama has already cast its November vote. Alabama has accomplished its purpose of voting against Truman. Sat. 8-21-48

It is not so clear in North Carolina. There, it is a race between Dewey and Truman. There is agreement among observers that Dewey has a good chance of carrying North Carolina.

The Raleigh News & Observer, a pro-Truman paper, is impatient with the effort to add the Thurmond-Wright ticket to the North Carolina ballot and dismisses the effort thus:

> In all the discussion of the effort of the Dixiecrats to form a new political party in North Carolina, there has been too little discussion of the actual issues.
>
> The present effort is not being made in good faith. The inherent right of every voter to vote as he pleases has been deliberately confused with an altogether different right—the right of a candidate to appear on the official ballot.
>
> The latter right is not inherent, but is statutory. To exercise that right any citizen, or any group of citizens, must comply with the law . . . In North Carolina, the official ballot is limited to recognized political parties or those petitioned for by 25 per cent of the qualified voters . . .Surely it does not lie in the mouths of a group whose only avowed issue is States Rights to deny the State of North Carolina the authority to make its own laws or to ask the State Board of Elections or the courts to change those laws. . . .

Which is to say, the State Board of Elections denied the Thurmond-Wright ticket a ballot place. Now the Thurmond-Wright element is seeking relief in the courts. Sat. 8-21-48

The Winston-Salem Journal takes a contrary view to that of The News & Observer:

> If the Dixiecrats can qualify in proper manner, we would like to see the group obtain a place on the ballot. Democracy functions best when it affords every individual and group a fair choice in the selection of public officials . . . Those who want to vote for Gov. Thurmond should have a chance to vote for him.

The Winston-Salem Journal takes the wise attitude there, it seems to us. Here in Alabama, the anti-Truman electors and The Advertiser wish Truman the worst, but we do not object to his name on the ballot. The difference is that in North Carolina the Thurmond-Wright ticket would attract powerful support.

Dixon And The Truth

The News

To the Editor of The News:

Many persons who are opposing Mr. Truman's election are basing their opposition on the civil liberties program which he has recommended to Congress. In view of the importance which most voters have properly attached to the program it is extremely unfortunate that its contents have been misrepresented.

Frank Dixon, former governor of Alabama, discussed the program at length in an address to the Dixiecrat conference in Birmingham July 17. According to the text of his address appearing in States' Rights, Mr. Dixon said: "What is this so-called civil rights program which Truman, our Democratic president, has recommended to Congress? I do not want any misunderstanding about it among the Southern white people. Here is part of it:" Mr. Dixon then listed nine points, five of which (concerning abolition of segregation) do not appear in the president's recommendations, another of which (also concerning segregation) is largely inaccurate, and two of which state as fact highly hypothetical consequences of a Fair Employment Practices Commission. Mr. Dixon's ninth point included the assertion that "all Negroes (are) to be registred to vote without regard to intelligence or capacity." Nowhere has the president made such a recommendation.

In an address at the University of Alabama on Aug. 9, Mr. Dixon again expressed his concern for correct understanding among Southern whites and again enunciated the nine points (according to the manuscript of his speech). He concluded with the statement: "Truman sent this report to Congress with the request that its recommendations be enacted into law." Birmingham, Ala

On both occasions the speaker apparently confused the president's recommendations with the proposals which a 15-member committee on civil rights made to the president in October, 1947. The committee's report made 41 proposals, contained in 35 numbered recommendations under six general headings. In February, 1948, the president made recommendations to Congress incorporating 15 of the 41. Mr. Dixon spoke as though the president had urged the adoption of the entire program suggested by the committee. The president deliberately ignored a long list of proposals which dealt with segregation. He made only one recommendation to Congress pertaining specifically to segregation. He requested legislation making it unlawful for discrimination and segregation in interstate transportation facilities to be enforced by company employes. A Supreme Court decision had already declared that state laws requiring such segregation are unconstitutional. Fri. 9-3-48

Mr. Dixon's two speeches dealt with the most controversial subject before the Alabama electorate. The only admissible explanation of the serious errors they contained is that the author was not fully acquainted with Mr. Truman's recommendations to Congress. The text of the president's message, which contains his only proposals on the subject, appears in the Congressional Record of Feb. 2, 1948. The report of the civil rights committee can be obtained from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for $1.

University, Ala. ALEXANDER HEARD.

The Fourth Party Troubles

No matter what one feels about the controversy, there can be no argument but that from their viewpoint the Democratic National Committee members are correct in saying that the Dixiecrats are a fourth political party and that Democratic office seekers will not be regarded as Democrats if they join up with the new fourth party.

No amount of sophistry about who has left whom removes the fact that the Dixiecrats are refusing to accept the results of the Democratic convention and the party decisions.

Constitution, Atlanta Ga.

The Atlanta Constitution has been pointing out this horn of the dilemma from the first. Without attempting to here discuss the Truman proposals, on which we many times have made ourselves clear, we do wish to say again that the States themselves cannot in State elections determine anything about the civil rights proposals. That is up to Congress and, finally, to the Supreme Court of the United States. Tue. 9-7-48

The Southern States, Georgia among them, must make up their minds whether they will risk the committee position and the prestige of their Congressmen and Senators by throwing them into a fourth party with consequent loss of position. They are the troops who must win or lose the civil rights battle in Congress. They require, it seems to us, full support to do the most efficient job. Senator Richard B. Russell, for example, can do more as a Democrat than as a Dixiecrat. He can hope to attract help from Democrats from other sections so long as he is in the party. As a Dixiecrat no Democrat from States outside the South could afford to join him.

The National Committee action may be anything you wish to call it, high-handed, arbitrary, and so on, but from the party viewpoint there is no other course the Committee can take.

Let us look before we leap.

Montgomery Advertiser

LISTER'S GUN-BEARER

Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael is the first major politician in Alabama to make an unreserved, slamming attack on the States' Rights Party. Senator Lister Hill made some semi-defiant observations about the movement, but it remained for Albert Augustus to say it like they both mean it.

The speech of the attorney general before a parliament of Methodist clergymen illustrates two points which have been made on this page from time to time:

1. The attorney general is likely to say anything. Montgomery Ala.

2. The Alabama bolt it going to be an issue—perhaps, even, the issue—in the 1950 races for governor and the United States Senate. Fr. 9-3-48

There is no doubt, we believe, that Carmichael is completely sincere in his hostility to the fourth party movement. As a delegate to the Philadelphia convention and acting as Senator Hill's gun-bearer, Carmichael was forthright in that hostility.

But what he has done appears to be a bold gamble. We do not believe that he would have made the attack unless he had decided to run for governor in 1950 (and not for Justice Brown's Supreme Court seat).

Carmichael is betting that the Thurmond-Wright ticket will make an unimpressive showing in November and that people will take a dim view of the experiment. By 1950 Dewey will have been in the White House for a year and will, no matter if he conducts himself with the devotion of Pericles, have done many unpopular things.

Carmichael will not have to defend the hapless Truman, who will be long gone. He can simply pot-shoot Dewey, all the while contending that things would be otherwise had the States' Rights deserters stood by the national party.

All of which is speculation on our part and is advanced as nothing else.

What is certain is that Carmichael has registered a first class act of defiance of the Thurmond-Wright sponsors in Alabama. He has, incidentally, done it with a pungence and saltiness we didn't know he commanded.

But also, he spoke with the delusive recklessness of a man who believes his political enemies are everyone equipped with cloven hoof and forked tail. Carmichael represented the Thurmond-Wright movement in Alabama as "a giant conspiracy controlled directly by the national committee of the Republican Party."

It is a "giant conspiracy" only in the sense that a vast majority of Alabama voters on May 4 made it. They voted against every candidate who showed a disposition to want to support Truman, which would have included Candidate Carmichael had he spoken up then, instead of now.

On The States' Rights Group

The News

Birmingham Ala.

The charges made this week by Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael that the States' Rights Democratic Party was born out of special interest motives put no new idea in some Alabama minds. Many persons have contended for some time that the anti-Truman revolt to a considerable extent was synthetically evolved by Democrats who have never liked New Deal liberalism and are making use of the civil rights issues mainly to gain support for their aims. Fri.

The significant part about the Carmichael charges is their source. They come from a state official who is willing to risk promising political prospects by opposing a movement that is just now in the ascendancy. They provide a point about which can rally all those who are against dividing the Democratic Party in the state. 9-3-48

They come, too, from a man whose loyalty to the South and Southern traditions and to the Democratic Party is beyond question. He can match background and tradition with Gessner McCorvey and Hugh Locke and all the rest. Here is a son of the South challenging the States' Righters who claim to be the sole defenders of Southern ways of life. And to demonstrate once more that he is a Democrat, he will vote the ticket in Alabama.

* * *

But what of these charges Mr. Carmichael made? What are the real motives and purposes that lie behind the States' Rights leadership? On this point, one cannot make a blanket indictment. There are many honest and sincere and conscientious persons backing the Thurmond-Wright ticket. Some of them are motivated by a conviction that the South should be given more of a voice in the national Democratic Party and that now is the time and here is the opportunity to gain that voice. Some of them strongly oppose the tendency for more and more authority to move from the state governments to the federal. Fri.

Some of them, however, have been led to read into the Truman civil rights proposals ideas and recommendations which are not there. Scarecrows have been raised where none existed. To what extent are leaders stooping to demagogic methods for selfish, narrow purposes? 9-3-48

It is hard to answer such questions. Mr. Carmichael makes positive charges laying to Thurmond-Wright leaders the purpose of special service to big business. To some extent, Mr. Carmichael stoops to demagogic appeal hardly to be distinguished in nature from those so frequently heard from Thurmond-Wright speakers. Perhaps politicians are like that, but it is regrettable that in a question so grave there cannot be, all around, more appeals to reason and fewer to passion.

* * *

The Carmichael charges tend to put the States' Righters upon the defensive. They cannot now pose quite so easily as the sole possessors of Southern patriotism. Their leadership is in question. To some extent, the Carmichael speech has been like water upon a lot of flame. We may be seeing more clearly soon whether the flame will be enduring or whether it is being fanned by persons whose purposes raise serious questions. 9-3-48

11 States' Rights Electors Named For Virginia

The Post

Richmond, Va., Aug. 22 (AP).—Names of the 11 States rights party presidential electors for Virginia were announced today by Frank P. Burton, jr., State chairman of the party backing the Thurmond and Wright presidential ticket.

John P. Barbour, Fairfax attorney and one of two surviving members of the Virginia constitutional convention of 1901, was named an elector-at-large, along with Burton.

Named from the State's nine congressional districts were: First, William McLeod Ferguson, Newport News attorney; Second, John Twohy, member of the Norfolk City Council; Third, Channing Hall, former Mayor of Williamsburg from 1934 to 1947; Fourth, William Gravatt, Blackstone; Fifth, Grasty Crews, Danville lawyer; Sixth, J. J. Bower, Roanoke manufacturer; Seventh, James M. Thomson, Gaylord, Clarke County, former newspaper owner; Eighth, D. Paul Petty, head of the Charlottesville Marble and Granite Co.; Ninth, A. G. Lively, lawyer and retired judge of Lebanon, Russell County. Mon 8-23-48

Believe They'll Have Control Of Democratic Portion

Memphis Tenn

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Southern Democrats are considering a little reorganization of their own in the House when the new Congress convenes next January.

The victims of the projected party "purge" may be Democrats from north of the Mason and Dixon Line—the so-called Truman and New Deal wing of the party.

Up in arms over the Truman Democrats' advocacy of Civil Rights legislation which led some Southerners to bolt the Democratic National Convention, the Dixiecrats believe next January will afford an excellent opporutnity to reorganize for party control.

They are confident they will be in the majority among House Democrats at that time. Regardless of what happens in the national elections, Southren Democrats figure they are certain to be re-elected in November. Mon 8-2-48

It could be a different story for Northern Democrats when the votes are counted.

"There will be some changes made in January," a leading Southerner said Sunday. "It's certain that there will be more Southern than Northern Democrats in the House. Then is when we will move in and take over the party, for if the Democrats lose the White House, party control will be lodged in Congress, and that means in the Dixiecrats." Mon 8-2-48

Some Southerners are urging that in such a case, Northern Democrats who have been clamoring for civil rights legislation should be deprived of choice committee assignments.

Arkansas Deserts States' Rights Plan

Fri 9-24-48

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—(AP)—A plan to capture Arkansas' Democratic presidential electors for the States Rights ticket was discarded Thursday.

The result apparently will be that slates of electors for both the Truman-Barkley Democratic ticket and the States Rights ticket of Govs. J. Strom Thurmond and Fielding Wright will appear on the November general election ballot in Arkansas. Montgomery

This development came shortly after the Democratic state convention opened a two-day stand here at noon. Ala 9-24-48

John L. Daggett of Marianna, a member of the States Rights Democratic executive committee, announced to the convention that an effort to have Democratic electors in this state pledged to Thurmond and Wright would not be pressed on the convention floor. Fri.

Daggett said that, instead States Righters would qualify their electors for the ballot by a petition to be filed with the secretary of state today.

This left the convention free to name electors pledged to the national Democratic presidential and vice-presidential nominees, President Truman and Senator Barkley, to name uninstructed electors. The Advertiser

Daggett said a planned convention fight had been abandoned by the States Righters in hopes of preserving "harmony within the Democratic Party of Arkansas." Montgomery Ala.

He added quickly, however, that it is the "solemn conviction of States Righters" that "any Arkansas Democrat loyal to our party traditions and principles must also oppose" President Truman. Fri 9-24-48

2 Dixiecrats Say They'll Campaign For Candidates For Upper House

By The Associated Press

Two Southern Senators who fought the nomination of President Truman said yesterday they expect Democrats to regain control of the Senate in the November election.

Senators Sparkman (D., Ala.) and Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) told a reporter in separate interviews that despite their opposition to Mr. Truman they feel free to go out and campaign for Democratic senatorial candidates.

"I think our chances are excellent to recapture control of the Senate this fall," Senator Sparkman said. "I'll feel free to campaign for any Democratic nominee for the Senate or House."

Republicans now hold 51 Senate seats and Democrats 45 so that a switch of four could give the Democrats a narrow control and chairmanships of all the committees as well as leadership.

Hopeful in Tennessee

Republicans have been saying they will make heavy gains in the House and will also gain in the Senate. Yesterday GOP party chiefs said chances were good for them to pick up a Senate seat from Tennessee.

Senator Johnston summed up for the Democrats:

"It looks mighty good. Our chances are excellent to take Republican seats in Kentucky, Oklahoma, West Virginia and Wyoming. We also have an even break in Minnesota, Illinois and Delaware."

A third Democrat, who is supporting Mr. Truman, Senator Elmer Thomas (Okla.), agreed his party has a chance to upset the present GOP control of the Senate.

Mon. 8-23-48

Depends on Trend

"But it depends largely on how big a Republican trend there is," Thomas said. "If Governor Dewey sweeps Oklahoma and other border and northern States, he probably will carry the Republican Senate places with him."

Sparkman, who is seeking reelection in Alabama, is pledged to support Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for the presidency, along with other States Rights Democrats.

Johnston has made no announcement about supporting either Governor Thurmond, the Dixiecrat presidential candidate from his home State, or Mr. Truman since their nominations. But he was one of the most active anti-Truman leaders prior to the Philadelphia National Nominating Convention.

Rights Candidate Charges 'Hitlerism' In Fairfield Speech

BY FRED TAYLOR

The "civil rights" proposals of President Truman, Gov. Dewey and Henry Wallace are a "vicious bid for power at the expense of human rights," Gov. J. Strom Thurmond charged in a Labor Day address prepared for delivery at Fairfield this afternoon. 9-6-48

The South Carolina governor and States' Rights Democratic presidential candidate, accompanied by Mrs. Thurmond, was scheduled to arrive at Roberts Field by plane early in the afternoon.

Gov. Thurmond had a morning Labor Day speaking engagement at Wildwood, Fla., where the Wildwood Labor Day Committee, composed of Railway Brotherhoods representatives, planned a holiday celebration.

In his Fairfield speech, which was to be delivered at 4 p.m. in the city park, Gov. Thurmond assailed the standard-bearers of the national Democratic, Republican and Progressive Parties, branding measures advocated by them as "seeds of race and class hatred." 9-6-48

* * *

THE STATES' RIGHTS presidential aspirant likened the efforts of his three opponents to the "schemes of Adolph Hitler, who gained control by destroying the authority of local governments and then wormed his way into power."

"The German people were foolish enough to believe that human rights could be enlarged upon by sacrificing constitutional rights," Gov. Thurmond's prepared speech pointed out. "They soon learned that constitutional rights are in themselves human rights and that when constitutional rights are gone all human rights are destroyed."

Warning that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, Thurmond declared: News

"These candidates (Truman, Dewey and Wallace) have approved measures which are in violation of constitutional precepts. All three are the mongrel conceptions resulting from the cross of cheap political demagogery and that fraudulent sense of expediency which knows no bounds in insincerity and which has no place in the patriotism of any people." News

GOV. THURMOND AGAIN assailed the FEPC, anti-lynching and other proposals in the "civil rights" program of Truman, Dewey and Wallace, asserting the anti-lynching law is an "insult to the South and a threat to the nation as a disguised measure enabling the federal government to seize local police powers."

"The founders of our country deliberately denied the federal government any police powers over the states," Thurmond declared in his prepared speech, "because they knew, as we know, that to concentrate police powers within the federal government is to open the way to dictatorship and tyranny.

"Yet, we have President Truman's word for it that he is now training federal police to enforce the anti-lynching bill and the FEPC as soon as they become the laws of the land. Birmingham

"Only one lynching last year—think of it. And yet Harry Truman and his associates are willing to break away from constitutional government, create a police force, invade the rights of the individual states, and all this under the guise of preventing lynching." Ala

Gov. Thurmond likewise criticized the proposed "separation of the races" measure, contending that the "people of a local community have the right to use the means and methods that will best promote harmonious relations." He added that the bill is a result of "clamor from agitators and socially maladjusted persons who do not care about or understand the conditions existing in the many communities in the United States."

HE BRANDED THE FEPC proposal a "Russian-patterned measure" and said it would not "work in free America or in any free country where the dignity and worth and liberty of the individual is respected." 9-6-48

"The FEPC contains a fundamental threat to our American way of life," the South Carolina executive added. "This proposal calls for an army of federal police, empowered to spy into the affairs of each business enterprise in the United States, to control the hiring and firing of employes, promotion and demotion of employes, and to enforce rules and regulations which govern the relations between employer and employe."

States' Rights Candidate Hits Truman Program

RAPS DEWEY, WALLACE

Sun. 8-1-48

By The United Press

CHERRYVILLE, N. C., July 31. — Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina opened his campaign for President here Saturday night with a scalding attack on civil rights and a tongue-lashing of his political opponents.

He said civil rights would mean "a virtual revolution in the Southern States." Sun. 8-1-48

Speaks At Festival

The 46-year-old Governor, candidate of the States' Rights Democrats, spoke at the annual Cherryville Watermelon Festival. He told the crowd "I did not risk my life on the beaches of Normandy to come back to this country, and sit idly by, while a bunch of hack politicians whittles away your heritage and mine. As for me, I intend to fight!"

He denounced Democrats and Republicans for failing to guarantee States' Rights in their platforms.

One by one he took up and mauled the civil rights proposals. He struck at the antipoll tax law. "I have advocated that we repeal the tax in my state," he said. "But I cannot agree that the Federal Government has the right to force any state to abolish this tax if the people of the state want it."

He condemned any Federal anilynching law. He asked "Is there anyone left who does not know that the South also most wiped out lynching without outside assistance?"

Hits Segregation Critics

Thurmond snapped at the proposal dealing with separation of races. "If the segregation program of the President is enforced, the results in civil strife may be horrible beyond imagination," he declared.

"Let us tell them that in the South, the intermingling of the races in our homes, in our schools, and in our theaters is impractical and impossible," he added.

He said FEPC would make private business a thing of the past.

Thurmond attacked the other three presidential candidates. He called them "birds of a feather flocking together."

He said: "Tom Dewey has already set up the FEPC in New York State. Harry Truman is demanding that the so-called civil rights be forced upon every state. And Henry Wallace is the daddy of them all."

Dixiecrat Chieftains Announce Plan Here For 7,000-Mile Tour

States' Rights Democratic chieftains late Saturday climaxed a Southwide meeting in Birmingham by announcing plans for a 7,000-mile Thurmond-Wright presidential campaign tour into 14 states.

The States' Rights executive committee members, after a day-long session, expressed confidence that more than 100 electoral votes would bewon for their standard-bearers, Govs. J. Strom Thurmond and Fielding L. Wright, who met with them. Sun. 8-29-48

South Carolina's Gov. Thurmond, the States' Rights presidential nominee, assailed the candidacies of Truman, Dewey and Wallace and the "un-American measures they openly advocate."

"The FEPC approved by all three national conventions held in Philadelphia," is copied from Joe Stalin's code for government of the Russian people," charged by Thurmond in a statement issued at the close of the executive session.

"We will take our message by radio to all the people," added Thurmond, "and the executive committee is considering a 7,000-mile railway tour into 14 states in October, making 37 principal rallies and almost 200 back platform speeches."

Adopt Campaign Budget

THE STATES' RIGHTS campaign leaders, including more than a score executive committee members, attorneys and business men from 14 Southern states, adopted a campaign budget. But they declined to say how much money had been budgeted for the campaign, aimed primarily at defeating President Truman.

States' Righters, who mapped campaign plans behind closed doors at the Tutwiler Hotel, said they received reports on the status of the Thurmond-Wright ticket in 14 Southern states, as well as campaign developments in states outside the South.

"Optimism prevailed in all Southern states, with a spirit of realism tempering all reports," their statement said.

Gov. Thurmond repeated his assertion that anti-lynching and anti-poll tax proposals of Truman, Dewey and Wallace "will foster a police state on all Americans and lay the foundation necessary for communistics control of our local and state governments."

"Last but not least is the elimination of segregation promised by Truman, Dewey and Wallace," declared the South Carolina governor. "This proposal would force all races and creeds together in schools, churches, hotels, restaurants and all other public places under threat of federal prosecution. Sun. 8-29-48

Horace Wilkinson Sues Mobile Labor Journal

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 28—(AP)—Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham States' Rights leader, Saturday filed suit in Mobile Circuit Court asking $100,000 damages from a Mobile weekly labor publication.

Senator Reviews Demo Gains, Hits GOP In Ensley Talk

Birmingham Ala
News

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News Staff Writer

States' rights are all right and worthy of strong support but the rights and benefits which come directly from the federal government far outnumber them, Sen. Lister Hill pointed out in a Labor Day speech prepared for delivery today in Ensley.

"As we fight for states' rights," the senator asserted, "let us fight for all rights which will help to build a strong, a free America, and help build a world of lasting peace." Mon 9-6-48

The seator's address was set for delivery at 3 p.m. at a meeting in DeBardeleben Park under auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion.

"Much of what we read and hear today is about states' rights," Sen. Hill declared. "I believe in states' rights. I firmly believe that the rights of the states should be fully recognized and fully protected.

* * *

"DURING THE PAST 10 years, ever since I have been your senator, I have been fighting for the rights of states. I have been one of the group of Southern senators banded together with the fixed determination that we would use every power at our command to protect the rights of states."

Sen. Hill said his first speech on the Senate floor was against the anti-lynching bill. The second longest speech he has ever made, he added, was in the Senate against the FEPC bill. His longest speech, the senator continued, was delivered last month in the Senate against the anti-poll tax bill.

The senator explained that while he favors repeal of the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting he believes that such repeal should be by the state of Alabama and not by the federal government. 9-6-48 Mon

On that occasion, Sen. Hill said he spoke from noon until 7 p.m and immediately thereafter the fight for the bill collapsed.

"No man can predict what the results will be as to these measures if the Republicans elect a president and secure control of both the Senate and House," he continued. "They have solemnly announced their promise that if they win they will change the rules of the Senate. They declare they will deny free and unlimited debate and that they will pass the measures."

The senator then began an outline of the benefits which he said are rights that come to the people directly from federal sources.

"This very meeting here today to celebrate the cause of labor," Sen. Hill continued, "points out to us that to talk about states' rights and go no further is to tell only part of the story. This very meeting tells us that as much as we believe in states' rights and as determined as we are to defend and safeguard these rights, there are also other rights, other duties and other reponsibilities."

* * *

THE SPEAKER DECLARED that this meeting should remind all that the federal government recognized its responsibility to labor and in the Clayton act decreed that labor should be considered as a product of human beings and not as a mere commodity.

Child labor and the sweat shop were outlawed by the federal government which also gave to labor its right to collective bargaining and provided minimum wages and decent hours or work, the speaker added.

"Those benefits did not come from the states," he stressed "because only the federal government can protect the rights of labor.

"We know that it was our federal government that met its responsibility to our veterans and passed the GI bill of rights. No states' rights could provide these benefits."

Sen. Hill declared it "is a shocking thing" that three years after the war the world's richest nation has not provided houses for veterans, for workers and for the growing population.

He reminded his audience at that point that it was the Republican controlled Congress that passed the Taft-Hartley act "to weaken and impair labor's right to organize." Also, that the same Congress defeated the general housing bill.

"The rights of the people to be protected against the hazards of old age, of unemployment and disability, disease and death, were recognized by our federal government when it established the social sesurity program. In spite of the delays and the obstructions of our Republican-controlled Congress our federal government must increase old age and survivors' insurance benefits and extend the protection of social security to all workers not now covered, in the office, in the factory and in the field."

Birmingham Ala

IT WAS THE FEDERAL government, Sen. Hill continued, that gave Alabama its development of the Warrior River and Birmingham Port, linking the Birmingham area with Mobile "and the commerce of the seven seas."

The federal government, in addition, he said, has authorized full development of the Tombigbee River. The states, he insisted, could not give Alabama those developments. 9-6-48 Mon

The senator pointed as another federally bestowed right to the fact that the ICC and the U. S. Supreme Court had eliminated freight discriminations against the South.

States, he continued, cannot protect the many new, small independent factories and business enterprises against "the stifling hand of monopoly." The federal government, on the other hand, gives this protection.

It was the federal government and not the states, he added, that gave the states the benefits of soil conservation. States' rights, he declared, have not strung up a mile of REA lines.

"Do I need to remind you that prices today are higher than they have ever been?" he asserted. "And they are still going up. Many families are consuming their wartime savings to buy the necessities of life. Last year 3,000,000 families exhausted their savings. One-fourth of all American families have no savings of any kind for sickness, accident or other emergencies.

"Is it surprising that the American people are going into debt to the tune of $1,000,000,000 a year? Since stabilizing controls were ended two years ago a 30 per cent rise in prices has added more than $42,000,000,000 to America's cost of living.

"THE STATES are helpless before the gathering whirlwind of inflation. While we battle for states' rights let us remember that protection against inflation and all its dangers is being denied by the Republican Congress."

Sen. Hill listed among other benefits coming directly from federal authority the Hill-Burton hospital and health center construction act.

The federal government would be aiding education in the states, he added, if it had not been for the work of Republican leaders in Congress.

Sen. Hill charged Republicans in the House with attempting to sabotage America's foreign policy by seeking to deny adequate funds for the Marshall plan.

In addition he charged Republicans with "seriously crippling" the reciprocal trade agreements act.

Mississippi Democrats Now Will Direct Energies Toward Piling Up AntiTruman Vote In Fall

Aug 8-29-48

By KENNETH TOLER

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 28.—Now that the Democrats have settled their state primary differences, they will probably turn to the national aspects of their status as States' Righters. Every contest in last Tuesday's party primary was settled finally without the necessity of a runoff.

An intensive campaign is expected to be waged between now and the November general election to bring out a big vote for the Thurmond-Wright States' Rights presidential ticket. It is expected to be opposed by a Truman-pledged group, along with the two sets of Republicans and possibly nine candidates for electors bearing the standard of Henry Wallace.

Mr. Toler

If the nonsegregation policies of Wallace are carried out in the electoral slate, then Lewis Henderson of Bay St. Louis, former state publisher and onetime head of the Farm Security Administration's information division, will have to make selections on both sides the racial fence. In that connection, the socalled "black-and-tan" Republican faction, the one recognized by the national convention and headed by Perry Howard, negro attorney, has an all-white set of presidential electors, although most of its members are negroes.

Old line politicians are staying in the background in the movement to qualify a Truman set of electors. They are letting the younger newcomers to politics handle the front office while they stay in the back to work the manipulations. However, not all of those supporting the Truman electoral movement are politicians by any means.

'South Won't Profit'

In connection with the States' Rights movement, Representative Will Whittington of the Third (Delta) Congressional District, told the Rotary Club at Greenwood this week that "there is no reasonable chance that Thurmond will be elected president . . . or for the election of president to be thrown into the House of Representatives." He said the South would not profit by that course as it has 1-59 of the total electoral vote now and would have only 1-48th under the other.

Representative Whittington said "in common with the people of the South, I oppose the election of Harry Truman and in voting for the Thurmond-Wright ticket I feel that I am voting for them within the Democratic party." He said the candidacy of the two governors "is a protest campaign and a vote for them is a protest vote."

The Deltan took occasion to answer some of the things being said about those members of the delegation who have not been altogether "outspoken" on the states' rights proposition.

"It has been stated that Southern senators and representatives with one or two exceptions have not been outspoken in the states' rights campaign because they are office holders interested in patronage and seniority," he said. "Governor Thurmond, as are many of the leaders in the states' rights movement, is an office-holder, and I know of no more perpetual candidate than Governor Thurmond."

Seeks Senatorship

Representative Whittington asserted that "it is generally understood that he (Thurmond) is a candidate for Senator from South Carolina."

As to the loss of patronage, the Deltan said "there will be no patronage for Southern senators and representatives from now on for unfortunately I think Dewey will be elected."

Mr. Whittington commented that "it is strange some are criticizing Southern senators and representatives in one breath and in the next breath are advocating that the same representatives elect a president of the United States and a vice president by the election being thrown into the House of Representatives."

What Representative Whittington was "striking at" were reports that some state leaders felt he was not sufficiently outspoken on the States' Rights issue and that he might face an independent opponent in November. The latter, however, is completely out of the question, although one Deltan, a former member of the Legislature, gave it a quick turnover in his mind.

Representative Whittington believes that "sooner or later, and the sooner the better," there will be a realignment and a reorganization of the two major patries. He said the Democrats and Republicans of similar views will compose the one party that will probably be known as the Conservative party, while those of socalled liberal views in both parties will compose the other party that will probably be known as the Liberal Party.

"In either event, the party must be national with a national viewpoint,' he said. Aug 8-29-48

About The Capitol

Re-election of Representative John E. Rankin two weeks ago was doubtful, but after he got on the stump, it was just a question of counting the votes . . . A survey of the district revealed he had strengthened his fences, although because of the background of his two opponents, it was believed he would be forced into a runoff . . . A politician of many years in office, President T. A. Burgin of the Lowndes County Board of Supervisors, called two of the elections almost two weeks before the prihary . . . He said Representative Rankin would win in the first primary, and that John Greene Jr., of Starkville, would be named 16th District Circuit Judge . . . He was not expressing his personal views but "giving out" with what he heard at his filling station at the crossroads of Federal Highways 82 and 45—West at Mayhew.

Commercial Appeal

More than just Governor Wright's appointment in the supreme court vacancy figured in the victory of Circuit Judge Percy M. Lee of Forest . . . The eastern sector of the Central District has had a long drought of not having a member on the bench, and felt the Delta had had it long enough . . . A check of the county returns bears that out Memphis Tenn

Circuit Judge Raymond T. Jarvis' statement conceding the election of Representative Rankin had a "futuristic" twist . . . He thanked those who "supported me in this, my first race for Congress" . . . Likewise, Representative Tom Abernethy in the Fourth will probably have to again face State Representative John Aldridge of Winona, who was making his first race for that post.

Southern Revolt Is Not Spontaneous

Courier Journal

By ERNEST K. LINDLEY

IT WOULD not be surprising if the Southern "States Rights" rebels could make good the boast of one of them that they can outdo the Democratic National Committee in raising a campaign fund. For some of them have close ties with special interests which have money and are usually ready to spend it to obtain or hold special privileges.

The Negro question has been exploited time and again by the right-wingers of the Democratic Party in the South. Under present circumstances it might be exploited rather successfully. For the strong civil rights plank adopted by the Democratic National Convention, combined with the President's decision to call a special session at which cloture almost certainly will be invoked to break a Southern filibuster, has put the more progressive Southerners at a temporary tactical disadvantage in their own States.

7-30-48

Louisville, Ky.

Liberals Are Not Bolting

It is the Negro question—and that almost alone—which divides such Southern liberals as Senators Hill and Sparkman of Alabama, Estes Kefauver and the other liberal Democratic congressmen from Tennessee and many others of like kind from other parts of Dixie from the progressive Democrats of the North and West.

In the last analysis, it was the desire to conserve the influence of such men that led many of the Northern States to oppose the A.D.A. civil rights plank in the resolutions committee at the Democratic National Convention. When the fight was carried to the floor, however, the populous Northern and Western States with diversified populations and especially those with large numbers of Negroes, had to vote for the stronger civil rights plank.

Senator Hill did not bolt. He headed the Alabama delegates who stayed behind. By announcing that Alabama yielded to Georgia he made the first formal move on the convention floor toward nominating Senator Russell of Georgia for the Presidency.

One Southern speaker after another at Philadelphia declared that the Democratic Party could not win national elections without the South. Actually, Roosevelt did not need a single Southern electoral vote in any of his four victories. Had every Southern electoral vote been transferred to his Republican opponent, Roosevelt nevertheless would have won.

Courier Journal

7-20-48

Control of Section In Balance

It is true, however, that without the support of most of the Southern delegates Roosevelt would not have been nominated for the Presidency in 1932 and so probably would never have become President. He was known then as a progressive—although the fact that he had carried the State of New York in the Republican landslide of 1928 and had been re-elected in 1930 by a plurality of 725,000 was perhaps more influential in the minds of some of his Southern supporters at the convention of 1932.

Louisville, Ky.

Roosevelt, Wilson, Bryan—all three of the great Democratic progressive national leaders of the last half century—owed their nominations in large measure to the South. The South provided many of the votes in Congress which put through their progressive reforms and, in addition, was the backbone of support of their foreign policies.

It appears that the more progressive elements in Southern democracy intend to stay in the Democratic Party. That is where they belong. The important question is not whether Mr. Truman loses some electoral votes this year but who will control the machinery of the Democratic Party in the South in the near future—the Wilson and Roosevelt Democrats, on the one hand, or the reactionaries.

A Flaming Issue Begins to Lose Heat

Courier Journal
Thurs 7-29-48

ONE fact stands out clearly in results in Democratic primaries in three States where the so-called Southern tradition claims loyalty. It is a fact that ought to give pause to the States Righters, the anti-TRUMAN, anti-civil rights forces. In neither Texas, Oklahoma nor Arkansas was the issue very effective for candidates of the rebel point of view.

Louisville, Ky

The issue was most clearly drawn in Oklahoma, where former Governor KERR was opposed for the senatorial nomination by GOMER SMITH. A rabble-rousing defender of the State's segregation laws, SMITH tore hotly into the fray with the banner of White Supremacy. This was regarded as a particularly live issue in Oklahoma, where feelings had been stirred by a recent Supreme Court decision that a Negro woman must be admitted to the State University's law school. And in Tulsa is one of the most active and prolific transmission belts of the Christian Nationalist Crusade, a front of the racist, anti-Semitic movement headed by the Rev. GERALD L. K. SMITH. Yet KERR won by a fairly wide margin.

In Texas the issue was raised by the opponents of SAM RAYBURN, former Speaker of the national House of Representatives. They charged him with betrayal of tradition by his activity for the TRUMAN-BARKLEY ticket and his service as chairman of the convention that nominated it. He won easily, getting more than twice the combined vote of two opponents.

In Arkansas, where four candidates for Governor ran neck and neck for two places in a second primary, the issue was only incidentally projected. This fact may be seen as unusual, because Arkansas' Governor LANEY was one of the early sparkplugs of the "Southern revolt," and went to the first conference of States' Righters in Jackson, Miss., with the word that his State was on fire. However, the principal point aired in the campaign was improvement of the highway system, and a debate on the familiar conflict between pay-as-you-goers and bond advocates.

Courier Journal

Only one of the four leaders (in a field of seven) tried to make anything of his opposition to the TRUMAN program—and he barely managed to get into the run-off against a young war hero and county prosecutor, SIDNEY MCMATH. The States' Rights champion is JACK HOLT, former Attorney General. It looked like a contest largely of personal followings.

7-29-48

Another glance at the Texas race shows a surprising strength for conservative, silent COKE STEVENSON, the former Governor who never got out on a limb. To succeed the unsavory "Pappy" O'DANIEL as senator, he ran well ahead of active, progressive Representative LYNDON JOHNSON, who will fight it out with him in a second primary. The final outcome doubtless will be decided by the way the third candidate's vote of nearly 200,000 is split. He is GEORGE PEDDY, a Houston lawyer, who tried to wake up Texas by his views on the international situation (he was against isolation). Texas is guessing that JOHNSON will get more of them than the non-committal STEVENSON, but whether enough to overcome the latter's 70,000 lead is to be seen. Texas is a big State, where currents run deep. Nearly 1,250,000 votes were cast in last Saturday's primary.

Discuss the Dixiecrat Ticket

Columbus Ledger The most charitable view to take of those Democrats who met in Birmingham and purported to nominate candidates for the presidency and vice presidency is that they were deeply angry after the South's humiliation at Philadelphia, and spleens can become quite swollen in the sort of weather we have been having lately.

Sat 7-24-48

Those of us who live down South know that the Birmingham meeting was not in any way representative of all the Southern States. Indeed, only three States—Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina—were represented officially, although volunteer hangers-on did show up from some other places, with or without invitation.

Anyway, the so-called convention was strictly "rump," and the pity of it is that the whole Deep South gets the name of acting crazy because a few folks in three States went off half-cocked.

Any Democrat in his right mind knows that Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, and Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, are not really candidates for the presidency and vice presidency, and it will be a terrible mistake if any Southern State permits their names to go on the ballot, to the exclusion of Harry S. Truman's name.

Neither of these two men stands the remotest chance of occupying the White House and, as candidates, they cannot do the South the slightest good.

Atlanta Ga.

Albany Herald The Birmingham rump convention has produced what was expected of it—no more and no less. Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, was nominated for the presidency and Mississippi's Gov. Fielding Wright was named as his running-mate. It is certain that these two men can control the decisions of their States' members of the Electoral College, and it is probable that they will find support in Florida and Alabama. But to accord that ticket any more real strength is conjectural, although feelings in 10 Southern States regarding Mr. Truman's proposed "civil rights" program are hostile. It is significant that Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, who was one of the most outspoken against a civil rights plank in the Democratic platform, would have nothing to do with the bolters at this time. And our own State of Georgia, which managed its resistance to the President extremely well at Philadelphia, is not Birmingham-minded.

There is no gainsaying the political possibilities within easy reach of this protest Southern ticket. If the special session of Congress is a particularly rough one with respect to the civil rights issue, desperation, coupled with indignation, can rally many voters around the Thurmond-Wright team. In the event that the race between Mr. Truman and Mr. Dewey is close, the dissenting electors from the Southern States could conceivably throw the election into the House of Representatives. But this is not probable because the Dewey strength in other sections of the country seems overwhelming.

For the South itself, it would have been far better if the Birmingham convention had not been held at all. For the ticket has a voice, but it is a voice of anger. And it has none of the other physical parts necessary to the making of a real political party. In short, this ticket can spread resentment, discouragement and dissension, but it can offer nothing constructive to the issue at hand. It will not make our Southern Congressmen, who will have to fight the issue in Washington, any stronger as they seek allies to bolster their cause. Rather, it will weaken them and ultimately betray their position.

A foreshadowing of this uncomfortable situation is the prompt indorsement of the Birmingham convention by that rabble-rouser and race baiter, Gerald L. K. Smith. He finds this a good opportunity to "warn" the American people against an unholy political coalition between the Jews and the Negroes. Mr. Smith calls this upholding States' rights. Yet it is nothing more than the Hitler technique of persecuting helpless minorities.

Unquestionably, there will be those in Congress who might ordinarily be sympathetic to the Southern stand against restrictive Federal legislation, particularly with regard to FEPC. But they will think twice before espousing a cause which is associated in any fashion with a person of Gerald Smith's character. That is the hurtful aspect of the Birmingham revolt. It does not bring reason or compromise to our problem; it brings only emotions which can destroy the dignity of our protest. We have a just case for local responsibility to present, but it cannot be presented fairly if the angry men, the little men, the vicious men are allowed to seize the issue and distort it for personal advantage.

The Constitution

'Dixiecrat' Strength Seen as Doubtful

BY EDWIN A. LAHEY
Of Our Washington Bureau

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—The strength of the white supremacy caucus of the Democratic party is an extremely doubtful quantity, for a number of reasons.

The delegates who nominated Gov. J. Storm Thurmond, of South Carolina, and Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, for President and Vice President on a program of "States Rights" were in Birmingham purely as individuals.

The "Save Dixie" conference had none of the formal trappings of a convention.

* * *

HOWEVER, the industrial interests of the North, from whom the Republican Party generally gets some support, were strongly, if indirectly, represented at the conference.

The leadership of the rebel conference was heavily sprinkled with corporation lawyers who are to some extent the Southern custodians of Northern property interests in steel, railroads, oil, and coal.

There were between 100 and 200 college students at the conference, from Southern schools, the largest delegation coming from the University of Mississippi.

* * *

IF THESE students, who were on a semiserious lark, and the corporation lawyers, who think in terms broader than the racial issue, are disregarded, a composite picture of a delegate to the states rights conference would show a middle aged man in a seersucker suit, tieless, red necked, and leather faced.

He is the easily inflamed type whose idea of civic mindedness would be to volunteer for night duty to chase an organizer out of town.

The only upper bracket politicians active in the movement which launched a strange new party Saturday are the Governors of South Carolina, Mississippi, and Arkansas, the two United States Senators from Mississippi, and about half of the Mississippi delegation in Congress.

* * *

IF THE PARENTS of the new party seem to be a motley collection, their opposition in the South is an unstable bloc torn between political selfinterest, economic interest, and the emotionalism of race.

The hierarchy of the Democratic party in the South is overwhelmingly opposed to the rebel group, not because of any sympathy for the Truman civil rights program which precipitated the revolt, but because of their dogmatic views on party regularity.

Democrats in the South have bolted the party before, and were punished severely in later elections by defeat and loss of patronage.

* * *

ON THE RANK and file level, the opposition to the group which met here Saturday would normally be pretty strong. There is a "populist" fringe among the small farmers in the South, whose economic radicalism evokes most of the "wool hat" demagoguery among Southern politicians.

While the South is still far from organized, there is a reasonably large group of union members in the newly industrialized area. The AFL, the CIO and the unaffiliated mine worker leaders in Alabama claim a total of 250,000 members.

Under ordinary circumstances, workers and small farmers in the South would look with suspicion upon any political movement launched by corporation lawyers and a group of men with the faces of special deputy sheriffs.

* * *

BUT THIS political issue, like all political issues in the South, gets all tangled up with that pervasive, explosive, soul-corroding question of race relations.

If that question gets heated up enough, it becomes impossible to suggest how the workers and small farmers of the South might vote.

To all but a few Southerners who like to live dangerously, segregation is not an evil, but the immutable pattern of what is called the "Southern way of life."

* * *

TWO OF THE proposals in the Truman civil rights program, antipoll tax and antilynching legislation, are irritating, but not much more than that, to the average Southern white man or woman.

But the Truman proposal for Federal legislation to outlaw discrimination strikes a chill in the heart of the Southerner on the street.

Extremely lurid pictures of life in the South under a Federal fair employment practice act are drawn by the leaders of the white supremacy caucus, and it would be unreal to assume that these accounts do not have an impact on the Southern mind.

Solid South Predicted For 'Dixiecrats'

Columbia Record

WASHINGTON, July 27—(AP)—A [illegible] states rights ticket will carry the solid South in November was made today by Rep. Williams (D-Miss).

Columbia Record

He said he expects the states rights ticket headed by Governor Thurmond of South Carolina and Governor Wright of Mississippi, to win more electoral college votes than President Truman.

"It may be," he told a reporter, "That Truman won't carry a single state. Thurmond will get more electoral votes than Truman, that's certain. We should carry 24 states—we will have our ticket on the ballot in at least that many."

Williams said he has no fears that representatives from Southern states will lose choice committee positions because they support Thurmond in November instead of backing President Truman, the regular Democratic nominee.

After the election, he said, Southern civil rights Democrats will make up the bulk of the house Democrats.

"We will be the Democratic party in the House," he said. "We will be the ones who will make the Democratic committee assignments. The northern Democrats will have to come to us—we won't have to go with them."

Williams said he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination to Congress from his district and also is the states rights party nominee. After the Democratic primary in August, he said, he plans to stump the South in behalf of the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

Dixie Democrats Called To States' Rights Meet

Columbia Record
Thu. 7-15-48

By FRANCIS M. LE MAY

PHILADELPHIA, July 15—(AP)—Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi issued a call today for "every man and woman who believes in states' rights and who opposes Harry S. Truman and the things he stands for" to meet in Birmingham on Saturday.

Some but not all of the rebel Southern Democrats—slapped down on the race issue yesterday at their party's national convention—packed off for the southern city today, there to name a "grass roots, states rights" candidate for president and write a states' rights platform. him with confidence in November and remain within the Democratic party."

Southern delegates suffered a resounding defeat here yesterday when the convention rejected their states rights plank and then amended the convention platform to stamp full endorsement on Truman's civil rights program.

It was this civil rights program—anti-lynch, anti-poll tax, anti-discrimination and fair employment practices—that started the Southern Democratic rebellion earlier.

Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas, who withdrew at the last minute his states' rights presidential candidacy in the Democratic convention, said he is undecided whether to attend the Birmingham meeting.

TRUMAN-BARKLEY TICKET

PHILADELPHIA, July 15—(AP)—President Truman countered a Democratic civil rights split today with a dramatic call for a July 26 special session of Congress and a smashing attack on what he termed the "poppycock" of Republican promises.

Mr. Truman asked for action within 15 days after the lawmakers meet, on anti-inflation and housing legislation.

An hour before he took the stage of Philadelphia's convention hall early this morning to fling a challenge at the Republicans to make good on their Dewey-Warren platform pledges, Mr. Truman had been nominated by his party on the first ballot.

Thu. 7-15-48

The vote, indicating the wide breach opened in party ranks by the bitter, last-ditch fight over civil rights was:

President Truman, 947 1-2.
Senator Richard Russell of Georgia, 263.
Paul V. McNutt, 1-2 vote.
Not voting, 23.

Unanimous Vote

The convention, after a 38-minute ovation for the President, gave Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, 70-year-old minority leader of the Senate, a unanimous vote for vice president.

Unanmimous, that is, except for a group of Mississippi and Albama delegates. They had walked out earlier over the racial issue—turning their steps to Birmingham, Ala., and a Saturday call for a states' rights convention of their own.

But Mr. Truman took the bit in his teeth in a fighting acceptance speech.

He said he will recommend that the GOP-controlled special session, among other things, act on civil rights legislation.

While embattled Southern delegations sat silent, the arm-waving chief executive told the delegates:

"Everybody knows that I recommended to the Congress a civil rights program. I did so because I believe it to be my duty under the constitution.

"Some of the members of my own party disagree violently on this stand. The Republicans all profess to be for these matters, but the 80th Congress failed to act.

"They had enough men and they had cloture (a rule under which Senate debate can be gagged to shut off a filibuster). There were enough people that would vote for cloture."

Some Southern Democrats, angry over the convention's adoption of a stiffer civil rights plank than its own platform committee had urged, said they believe the Republicans will lose no time in putting a civil rights bill before the Senate at the special session.

Columbia, S.C.

Promise Long Debate

These same Dixie law makers promised the same long-winded debate that has bottled up such moves in the past.

Republicans regarded the prospect of a Democratic filibuster with more glee than they seemed likely to register over Mr. Truman's demand that they solve the housing and inflation problems—and pronto.

Declaring at the start that "Senator Barkley and I will win this election and make these Republicans like it." Mr. Truman said the special session will show whether the Republicans "can fool the people with such poppycock" as he said was in their platform.

As his party members thundered their approval, the President told the delegates:

"Now, what that worst 80th Congress does in this special session will be the test. The American people will not decide by listening to mere words or by reading a mere platform.

"They will decide on the record, the record as it has been written, and in the record is the stark truth that the battle lines of 1948 are the same as they were back in 1932 when the nation lay helpless and prostrate as a result of the Republican inaction."

This removed the last doubt that the President intends to make the record of Congress the full keynote of his campaign against Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Gov. Dewey and Mr. Truman developed an indirect argument about foreign policy.

Dewey said in Albany yesterday that he had canvassed with John Foster Dulles, his prospective secretary of state in the event of a Republican victory, "the tense Berlin situation and the problems which may result from the extremely partisan and provocative assertions concerning foreign affairs in the draft platform of the Democratic party."

Dewey didn't spell out his objections.

The Democratic platform said the Republicans had "crippled" the reciprocal trade agreements act, "denied" a loan to the United Nations to build its headquarters in New York City and showed "reluctance" by party votes in the House to provide funds to support the European Recovery program.

Will Dixiecrat Movement Gain Votes?

7-18-48

In a division of the Southern vote on the Civil Rights issue most editors expect the bulk of that vote to remain in the Democratic Party, with the Dixiecratic Party receiving too few electoral votes to throw the presidential election into the House of Representatives. Some editors see the Dixiecratic Party continuing after the coming campaign as a separate party. But the majority opinion is that the greatest long-range effect of the Democratic Party split will be an increased sentiment—and vote—for a strong Republican Party in the South to give the South a bargaining position between the two major parties.

Atlanta Ga

Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald-Journal (Ind.): "Assuming the embattled Southern Democratic States . . . succeed in obtaining 127 electoral votes for their States' rights candidate (Gov. Thurmond, of South Carolina) for President, Mr. Truman obviously would be sunk politically. But it remains to be seen whether these States that have been in the Democratic column ever since the Civil War actually will bolt. That national Democratic leaders are busy behind the scenes pulling strings to keep them in line is certain. If some of the prophets of old were around today perhaps they could tell us what the results will be, but without their assistance we'll have to give it up for the moment."

The Constitution

Norfolk Virginian-Pilot (Ind.-Dem.): "Our own guess is that . . . the Birmingham war dance . . . will amount to practically nothing . . . There is no evidence that it was more representative of the South's responsible Democratic leadership than the Jackson (Miss.) convention that was its parent. The same three Governors that came to Jackson—Wright (of Mississippi), Thurmond and Laney, of Arkansas—came to Birmingham (and Laney withdrew) . . . Absent from the Birmingham meeting were all the other top-drawer Democratic leaders of the South, including Sen. Russell, of Georgia, whom all but a handful of the Southern delegates supported for the presidential nomination at . . . Philadelphia . . . "

If the South wants to make its protest meaningful and effective it will have to shift not from the Democratic Party to the Dixiecratic splinter party but to the Republican Party."

LIGHT THROUGH A SMEAR OF OIL

The sneer that big "oil" money financed the States Rights party birth in Birmingham has twice been made by The Atlanta Constitution. Ralph McGill, editor of The Constitution, said in Philadelphia that he had heard such a rumor and believed it true. He wanted to know what we thought. At that time we did not consider it of such a major concern that it was worth thinking about while the old Democratic Party was disintegrating.

Since The Constitution reiterated the rumor (undoubtedly McGill had it from what he considered a trustworthy source) it has been emphatically denied by several leaders of the States Rights movement. Apparently the denial will stand unless someone can definitely prove that "oil" interests contributed heavily.

The Advertiser.

This sideshow issue illustrates the general ignorance of what the Tidelands Oil controversy is really about. It seems that even Editor McGill, as well informed as he is on a multitude of matters, has something of a blind spot concerning the "tidelands" issue.

Montgomery, Ala.

The reason up to now the issue has been designated "tidelands" with the quotations around it is that it does not really refer to oil deposits under true tideland areas. It refers to oil and other mineral deposits which might be found in the offshore areas contiguous to any coastal state out to any distance where the depth of water does not foil development. It also refers to mineral deposits of any character to be found beneath the navigable waters of any state if an early and comprehensive claim put in by the federal government be granted.

Essentially, the conflict is between sovereign states and the federal government over the ownership of mineral resources. Any sensible review of the case from that angle leads to the conclusion that the states are sovereign in the matter.

Thurs. 8-5-48

THE Supreme Court on June 23, 1947, issued a now famous decision, 6 to 2, which definitely did not make sense and showed that the Court did not really study the essentials of the matter. As has that Court often done in the last five years, it sat as a super-legislative body sensitive to political considerations. The case before it was the Justice Department against the State of California. The Justice Department, on the behalf of the United States, claimed U. S. proprietorship of all offshore lands and the oil thereunder.

The Supreme Court, skirting the essentials and listening to political considerations, ruled that California did not own the lands and that the U. S. "has paramount rights in and power over that belt, an incident to which is full dominion over the resources of the soil under that water area, including oil." This decision was rendered in the favor of the U. S. because of reasons of "national security" and the "conduct of international relations," a thin excuse for federal ownership of all resources, natural and man created, if the Court should desire to so interpret it.

Despite specific pleadings from both contending parties, the Court refrained from saying that the U. S. actually owned the lands and the minerals under them. This left many things up in the air.

It is not hard, in the light of long unquestioned rights which have been thoroughly exercised by every state, to conclude that the states do own and have right to control all mineral resources within their boundaries. It is also clear, under the terms Texas asked and got without question in 1845, that coastal states have rights over their coastal lands. In the case of Texas it was stipulated that the boundaries extended 10 1-2 miles into the Gulf of Mexico. Having been granted to Texas without question, it would seem obvious that all states must get equal treatment.

The Advertiser

Thus the federal government was seeking to take from the states some of their mineral resources.

It must be here introduced that all states have set aside a considerable portion of their basic resources for the use of all the people. In Alabama sixteenth sections (which means one-sixteenth of all natural resources of Alabama) were set aside for use of schools. Many of the sixteenth sections were looted from the state during the Reconstruction period, but the state had, and exercised, the right to set those sections aside. With the development of other natural resources, Alabama has levied a severance tax which calls into the general treasury a portion of all resources developed. This portion is used for all the people.

Montgomery, Ala.

THE only three states which have significant present development of "tideland" oil resources call for one-eighth royalty to be paid to the state. This money generally goes to public education.

Thurs.

Up to now the situation seems rather dry but, to anyone not collectivist minded, rather clearcut. Here is the cloudy part of the picture:

8-5-48

Various oil companies have been leasing and developing offshore oil lands. The leases have varied greatly in price, perhaps as greatly as the ultimate worth of the leases will vary. Those offshore developments cost a great deal. It is a gamble whether they will pay off. One thing is certain, the leases may be too low priced or they may be too high priced, but if oil is found, the states will get their 12 1-2 per cent royalty. That seems a fair deal for the states and a fair protection for all the people.

The Advertiser

The main basis for the government claim to ownership is "national security." This seems odd in the light of the fact that an undeveloped oil resource is an unknown resource and the federal government is ill-equipped to do any wildcatting. Further, in time of national emergency, an undeveloped resource can be written off as worthless just because it has not been developed and cannot be used. In time of stress, wildcatting for oil has to be stopped and known resources drained to the immediate bottom.

Montgomery, Ala.

THOSE who immediately react to the word "oil" as if someone had made an offensive noise never quite seem to realize that their repugnance is founded on the scandalous frauds uncovered in the federal government's stewardship of the Teapot Dome and Elk Hill oil reserves. By adroit inversion, propagandists of collectivism such as Harold Ickes, would have the public believe that the fedaral government is the only reliable steward for oil resources and that the states are incompetent to handle such matters.

Thus it is clear that a resolution that mineral resources found under "tideland" areas and under navigable waters is a proper thing for a States Rights Party to resolve about. It was also found to be a proper thing for the Republican Party to resolve about, and it so resolved in its platform.

Thurs. 8-5-48

The basic issue has been besmeared with oily half-truths since Mr. Ickes, as secretary of interior, reversed himself in 1937. (Up to that time he had supported in writing the right of states to such resources and land.) Those who do not THINK but simply REACT unfavorably to any mention of "oil" have supported the campaign of misrepresentation which has pictured any advocate of state control of such resources as no less than a robber of and traitor to the United States.

The fact is that the states have basic rights and the citizens have basic rights as citizens of states. But there are forces within the United States which would break them down. Those forces always speak more reverently of "collective security" than of "individual liberties." They want the federal government to own everything and think that "tideland" oil is as good a place as any for that policy to begin.

RALPH McGILL'S DOUBLE TALK

Perhaps this editorial could be more appropriately entitled "Talking out of Two Sides of the Mouth at the Same Time." It is a report on the editorial efforts of Ralph McGill who has had so much to say in opposition to the program of the States' Rights Democrats.

Enterprise Journal

The following is reproduced from the Constitution's editorial page:

> "The Atlanta Constitution believes that the greatest threat to local government lies in the proposal for enactment of a Federal Fair Employment Practices Committee with police powers.
>
> "No American can object to the principles, or objectives, of fair employment practices, but every thoughtful American must be alert to the fact that if a Federal bureau, with its own police power greater than that of the individual states, is given jurisdiction in so controversial a field, it will be the beginning of the end of local government, which is the source of all democratic government. We will, in effect, be distroying majority rule in an effort to protect the interests of the various minority groups."

8-2-48

Obviously, Mr. McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution recognizes the grave situation which confronts the South and the nation. Yet instead of doing something constructive about it, Mr. McGill has made a diligent effort to sabotage the work of those within the South who have shown a willingness to cope with the problem.

McComb, Miss

Mr. McGill said editorially a few days ago, "There meets in Atlanta today, for some strange reason, the small group calling themselves Dixiecrats." That "strange reason," Mr. McGill should know, is to combat the danger which he and the Constitution have so freely admitted does exist. And these men and women do not call themselves "Dixiecrats," as Mr. McGill fallaciously reports, but are banded together under the banner of States' Rights Democrats. The "Dixiecrat" misnomer suggests sectionalism and this movement is nationwide.

"There is also a doubt about the financing of this strange creation outside the party," cried Mr. McGill. Repeatedly he has charged that the movement is being financed by the tideland oil interests. This kind of demagoguery in journalism is lower than the demagoguery which Mr. McGill condemns in politics. Mr. McGill has made no effort to ascertain the facts about the financing of this movement. He could have called at the States' Rights Democrats' Headquarters and he would have discovered that he had no reason "to suspect." But Mr. McGill was too intent upon making his smear campaign to waste any time in searching for the truth. And, incidentally, why is Mr. McGill having so little to say about the financing of the Democratic Party as headed by the bigwigs of the Philadelphia convention?

Enterprise-Journal

Mr. McGill charges that the men behind this movement are politically ambitious. The truth is that most of the politicians over the South have feared this States' Rights movement. They have been afraid that participation might jeopardize their interests within the established Democratic Party and their committee assignments in Congress. But here are two questions for Mr. McGill. (1) Is he assuming that the men who defend the Philadelphia convention are without political ambitions? and (2) if so few people are behind this movement then how does he reason that the leaders within it are lending a helping hand to promote themselves politically? But again Mr. McGill seems to prefer to be the journalistic demagogue, the smear artist, unconcerned with truth so long as his distorted view is chronicled.

8-3-48

On May 10 there was a South-wide States' Rights meeting in Jackson, Mississippi. Three governors were present, (Governors Thurmond, Wright and Laney). Mr. McGill spouted [illegible] again [illegible] that the movement was fizzling out; stating that it had started with nine governors in Tallahassee but that it dropped to three governors in Jackson. The truth is that Governor Fielding Wright could not get a second to his motion of protest in Tallahassee. So actually the movement was up 300% at the very time when Mr. McGill was charging loudly that it had dropped from nine governors to three.

McComb, Miss

Said Mr. McGill in a melodramatic journalistic outburst, "We call upon them to note that only approximately 2,000 persons registered for the Birmingham convention which thought it was forming a new party. This the gentlemen cannot deny."

Mr. McGill [illegible] a reporter to be in ignorance of the fact that there were many thousands of persons in excess of the two thousand who registered. He is bound to know that the crowd was so much larger than was anticipated that the registration clerks could not cope with the throng. The fact that there was no seating nor standing room in the Birmingham municipal auditorium paints a gloomy picture of Mr. McGill's [illegible] the Birmingham auditorium holds more than 6500 people and that it was filled beyond capacity. And he knows that a couple of thousand enthusiastic listeners stood on the outside hearing the proceedings over loudspeakers.

Enterprise Journal

Typical of Mr. McGill's fallacious reporting is his statement that States' Rights Democrats are seeking to form a new party. The resolutions unanimously passed by that Birmingham meeting were mimeographed for the members of the Press and those resolutions were very definite on this score.

8-3-48

The South and Mr. McGill know that the principles for which for a century the Democratic Party has stood were thrown into discard by the Philadelphia convention. There are thousands of people within the nation who want these principles restored within the Party. They know that the Democratic Party cannot win with Harry Truman; that the Party is destined to become the minority party after the election. These people are confident they can win their party back . . . and here is the battleground.

The South hopes to see their States' Rights candidate get more electoral votes than Harry Truman receives. . . . Then the citizens who uphold the principles of States' Rights will at least control the majority of the minority party. This is their hope of returning their Democratic Party to respectability.

McComb Miss

Mr. McGill, true to his custom of loose writing, comments on the candidates "nominated" at the Birmingham "convention." If Mr. McGill were not so hell-bent on sabotaging the cause of the South, he would know that no candidates were nominated at Birmingham. On the contrary, two candidates by resolution were recommended for nomination to the Democratic Parties of the respective states. And it was not a convention as he says, but a conference of men and women who concur with the editorial in the Constitution that the Philadelphia convention program is "The greatest threat to local government."

We would like to ask this question. What is Mr. McGill, and the Atlanta Constitution, doing about this threat which they editorially acknowledge does exist? Is their vicious effort to sabotage the program of those southern patriots who are willing to do something about it, their conception of combatting an admitted danger? Mr. McGill is hampering the best interests of the South which is a far cry from the patriotic journalism championed by that earlier Constitution editor, Henry Grady, ardent advocate of local self-government and fighting foe of any who threatened this safeguard to American freedom.

8-2-48

We repeat that we feel that Mr. McGill seems to be practicing journalistic demagoguery. He seems to be trying to bend the truth to fit his presumption. He appears to have gotten himself out on a limb and now does not manifest the good grace and sportsmanship to admit an error. . . . And all the while the respect and esteem of the Atlanta Constitution is held in the balance within the hearts and minds of thousands of Southern people. This we regret for the career of Henry Grady somehow created within our minds a respect which attributed something of what may be termed journalistic sacredness to the Atlanta Constitution. It is disillusioning to see so great a newspaper fall short of so high a standard.

Dixiecrats Are a Threat In Kentucky

Courier Journal

The States' Righters, according to polls, have left Truman a narrow margin in state; Chandler is called their spiritual leader

FRANKFORT, Ky., Oct. 9.—Present prospects and past experience show that the States' Rights Party is a real threat to President Truman's chances to carry Kentucky in November.

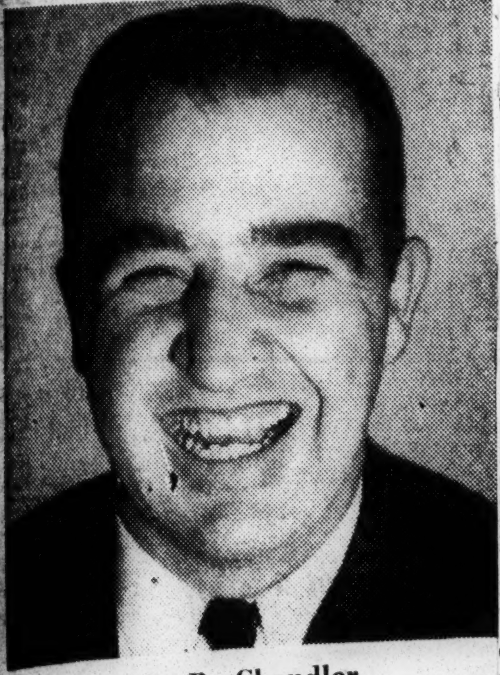
Sun 10-10-48

The Gallup Poll for Kentucky shows 5 per cent of voters favoring the third party. That means from 40,000 to 50,000 votes for Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, and his running mate, Governor Fielding Wright of Mississippi.

Louisville, Ky

Since the Republican Party was organized in 1856, Kentucky has gone Republican in three presidential elections. Third parties caused two of the three defections in this historically Democratic state.

This combination of past facts and present possibilities warrants, I believe, a deeper examination into the States' Rights movement in Kentucky. Particularly is it warranted in view of Gallup's latest figures that give President Truman 45 per cent, and Governor Thomas E. Dewey 42 per cent. Plainly, the difference between the President's tenuous lead and an overwhelming lead lies in Thurmond's 5 per cent, plus the 2 per cent favoring Henry Wallace.



A. B. Chandler

He's slow to forget

The conclusion is inescapable that A. B. Chandler, the high commissioner of baseball, is the spiritual leader of the States' Rights movement in Kentucky. Let me show you a few of the factors that bolster this conclusion:

1. Mrs. Chandler was one of 1,420 who signed the petition that got Thurmond and Wright on the ballot in Kentucky.

2. Orval W. Baylor, editor of Chandler's weekly, The Woodford Sun, is state campaign manager.

Sun 10-10-48

3. Chandler and his wife entertained Governor and Mrs. Thurmond at their home in Versailles the week-end following the States' Rights opening at Madisonville.

4. Chandler's natural leaning in politics is on the side of states' rights. While in the United States Senate, he voted to sustain Southern filibusters. He voted against Fair Employment Practices Control. His political friends are of the South.

But there is a deeper factor that cannot be summarized neatly. Chandler is marked by the twin traits of loyalty to friends and prejudice against enemies. He is long to remember and slow to forget. Specifically, he cannot forget his defeat in 1938 when, as Governor of Kentucky, he ran against Senator Alben W. Barkley for the senatorial nomination. He will never forget the swimming pool primary of 1942, when John Young Brown, Lexington, denounced him from every stump in Kentucky but carried only one county.

Remembers 1944

But the great generality he cannot forget is his loss of the vice-presidential nomination at the 1944 Chicago convention. Chandler believes he would be President today if the Kentucky delegation, under former Governor Keen Johnson and State Chairman J. Lyter Donaldson, had not refused him the vital boost of home-state indorsement.

So much for what I believe are the main factors behind Chandler's spiritual leadership. That his support of the States' Rights movement is closed to public view, I believe, is due wholly to his baseball contract that forbids political activity.

The next phase of this account is based upon an interview with Baylor in his office at The Woodford Sun. My deductions as to Chandler's support are not based on information his editor gave to me, and they fairly cannot be attributed to him in any way. Baylor talked to me only in his role as campaign manager for the States' Rights Party.

Sun 10-10-48

Baylor said his party is organized in 35 counties, with men and women chairmen openly announced and publicly functioning. He is organized under cover in 20 additional counties, Baylor added, through leaders who are unwilling to risk Democratic reprisal by open activity.

"What percentage of Republicans have you found for the movement?" I asked.

"I don't know," he replied. "I have tried to avoid working with Republicans. Most of them are for us simply because they want Dewey to carry Kentucky. I try to work with Democrats who, like myself, stand for states' rights on principle."

"On the normal turnout in Kentucky, the Gallup Poll gives you from 40,000 to 50,000 votes. But don't you know that many people, when they get inside the booth, will decide not to throw away their votes deliberately?"

"I recognize that danger," he replied, "but I think it will be offset. In the first place, we are trying to drive home the message that no vote is lost when it is cast for principle. In the second place, most of the people for us are fixed in their convictions."

"Do you think, then, that the Gallup figure is about right?"

"If anything, it is low," Baylor said. "We are gaining strength every day. That is, we are gaining strength we can see. There is no way to estimate the hidden strength that I am confident will show up at the polls. By that, I mean people who intend to vote States' Rights, but won't say anything. I have been told, and have no reason to doubt it, that in some sections of the state resentments at Truman's civil rights program is as deep as sentiment against Al Smith in 1928."

Eight Talks Planned

Baylor said Thurmond's return to Kentucky for eight speeches next week is calculated to improve the outlook still farther, especially in the four towns where Thurmond will follow President Truman's visit 10 days ago.

Thurmond's three major speeches will be delivered Tuesday night at Lexington, Wednesday night at Louisville, and Thursday night at Covington. On his way from Lexington to Louisville, he will speak Wednesday at Versailles, Frankfort and Shelbyville. From Louisville to Covington, he will speak Thursday at Bedford and Carrollton. His schedule will overlap the President's route at Louisville, Shelbyville, Frankfort and Lexington.

"What is your outlook for money?" I next asked.

"We'll have enough to get by on, though not in any way comparable to money the Democrats and Republicans will have," Baylor said. "Most of our money is coming from individual donations of from $5 to $50."

"Will you have enough to hire observers?"

"We won't need to hire any," he said. "Where the Democrats are not secretly for us, the Republicans will see to it that we get a fair count."

I asked Baylor what he sees ahead as the long-range outlook for the States' Rights Party in Kentucky. His reply was based upon the premise that the party will show enough November strength in the South to warrant permanent, full-time organization, with a staffed headquarters.

Assuming that situation after the election, Baylor drew this picture for Kentucky:

The show of Kentucky strength in November ought to attract many friendly Democrats from hiding into open alliance with the States' Rights Party. Then a state-wide unit, with headquarters, would be set up as a part of the Southern organization.

The primary motive, so far as Kentucky is concerned, then would be to join the South in forcing the Democratic Party to reorganize around the Southern bloc, in preference to any other bloc within the party. This, of course, assumes that President Truman and the men around him fall in November.

Sun 10-10-48

To Run for Assembly

The secondary aim in Kentucky would be the usual order of political activity such as:

1. Running States' Rights candidates for the 1950 Legislature where Democratic candidates are not sympathetic.

2. Running a States' Rights candidate for Governor in 1951.

So much for the interview with Baylor. Let us now look briefly to the past.

William McKinley was the first Republican to carry Kentucky in a presidential race. He won by 281 votes in 1896. The Democratic Party was split that year between a silver ticket, headed by William J. Bryan, and a gold ticket, headed by John M. Palmer.

Palmer's running mate was the distinguished Kentuckian, Simon Bolivar Buckner. Even so, the insurgent gold candidates only polled 5,019 votes. That was 1 per cent of the total cast, but still it was more than enough to turn the state to McKinley by 281 votes.

Sun 10-10-48

Coolidge and Hoover

McKinley's victory, however, was not a clean sweep. The highest Bryan elector polled more votes than the lowest McKinley elector. Thus McKinley won 12 Kentucky electors, and Bryan won one.

Calvin Coolidge was the second Republican to carry Kentucky. That was in 1924, when so many liberal Democrats were attracted to Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, nominee of the Progressive Party. La Follette's vote of 38,465 was only 4 per cent of the total cast in Kentucky, but it tipped the scales against John W. Davis, the Democratic nominee, by 24,111 votes. The 1924 vote was:

Coolidge	398,966
Davis	374,855
La Follette	38,465

Herbert Hoover was the third Republican to carry Kentucky. But no third party was an issue in 1928.

Needless to say, the only third party movement in Kentucky on the Republican side failed to upset the normal Democratic victory. In 1912, Republicans were split between William Howard Taft, the regular, and Theodore Roosevelt, the insurgent. Woodrow Wilson, however, polled 1,306 more votes than Taft and Roosevelt combined.

Dixiecrats Report Over 1000 Names

Louisiana's States' Rights faction Wednesday reportedly had more than the 1000 signatures necessary to qualify under Louisiana law for a place on the ballot.

That was announced from offices of the States' Righters in New Orleans Wednesday. A spokesman said that there are more than 800 New Orleanians' names on the petitions plus hundreds from other parishes.

New Orleans, La.

Robert G. Chandler, cochairman of the Louisiana States' rights executive committee, brought a petition to New Orleans from Caddo and Bossier parishes, and headquarters here said that it bore signatures of 387 independent voters.

The Southern anti-Truman group is making plans to place electors for South Carolina Governor J. Strom Thurmond for president, and Mississippi Governor Fielding L. Wright for vice-president on the November ballot.

STATES' RIGHTERS TO DELAY ACTION

No Rush to Remove Group Electors, Barr Says

There will be no rush on the part of states' righters to remove their electors from the Louisiana ballot, John U. Barr, leader of the local movement, said Sunday.

New Orleans, La.

Barr explained that his group did not want to be "caught short" with conditions "in the state of flux they are now."

He said he did not question the attitude of the regular Democratic electors toward the Thurmond-Wright ticket, but added, "You can never tell what the people in Washington might do."

"If the administration should manage to switch Truman's name back on the ballot the states' righters would be caught short if we took our names off the ballot now," Barr said.

President Truman's name was removed from the Louisiana ballot at a meeting of the Democratic state central committee in Baton Rouge Friday. The committee said its electors would support the Thurmond-Wright ticket and in a resolution called upon the states' righters to withdraw their electors.

Meeting to Be Called

Barr said a meeting of the states' righters here would be called in the near future.

He said he had not yet received a copy of the resolution passed by the Democratic state central committee calling upon his electors to withdraw. He said he would "study it thoroughly" before making any move to drop the states' righters electors.

A reply to a statement by William J. Primm, Jr., assistant to the Democratic national chairman, that removal of Truman was a "high-handed and arbitrary act" was issued Sunday by Merritt H. Gibson, Longview, Tex., states' rights campaign director.

Mon 9-13-48

In Jackson, Miss., Gibson said: "Mr. Primm is whistling in the graveyard. His threat of court action to place Truman and Barkley on the Louisiana ballot appears to be a desperate final gasp on behalf of Mr. Primm's repudiated candidates. However, that is a matter that will be handled by Louisiana party leaders.

"I am amazed that Mr. Primm should suggest that the voters of Louisiana had been 'fraudulently and illegally' deprived of an opportunity to vote for his candidates. It was the Democratic party's Louisiana committee that discarded Mr. Primm's candidates in favor of the states' rights nominees. It was a voluntary, unanimous action by the constituted party committee.

Cites Action in Indiana

"Mr. Primm failed to mention that his Truman Democrats joined with Wallace's Progressives in Indiana to deny our candidates a place on the Indiana ballot through a legal technicality. That was another instance of fright, fear and desperation on the part of Mr. Primm and his associates and by their action they deprived the voters of Indiana, on a legal technicality, an opportunity to voice their sentiments on local self-government and preservation of individual liberties.

"In Louisiana the Trumanites were shut out by the people acting through their Democratic central committee and not by a legal technicality.

"It is interesting to watch the frantic reactions of the Primms, the McGraths and the Trumans when the people speak. The coming weeks will see more weeping and wailing from this unholy trio as Southern state after Southern state follows the course of Louisiana."

Mon 9-13-48

The removal of President Truman from the November ballot is "a classic example of what can happen under a system where states' rights are placed above human rights," said Clarence A. Laws, chairman of the New Orleans Citizens committee for the re-election of Harry S. Truman.

"Although the action of the committee was designed to embarrass the president for his active desire to make our Democratic creed and our Democratic way of life more compatible, the Dixiecrats have certainly succeeded in insulting the intelligence of the entire Louisiana electorate," Laws said.

STATES' RIGHTERS' AIM FREE CHOICE

Objectives Explained by Louisiana Chairman

Wed 8-18-48

Aim of the states' rights Democrats of Louisiana is to make certain that voters in the November 2 presidential election will be able to make a choice between candidates of the two Democratic camps, John U. Barr, states' rights chairman, said Tuesday.

The states' righters have nominated Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for president and Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi for vice-president in opposition to Harry S. Truman and his running mate, Sen. Alben Barkley, Kentucky, the Democratic nominees.

New Orleans, La.

Noting that presidential electors selected by the state Democratic central committee, who normally would be pledged to cast their votes in the electoral college for Truman and Barkley, have been asked to express views on the Democratic party controversy, Barr said:

"The states' rights Democrats of Louisiana have no interest in the present poll of the individual views of the electors selected by the state central committee.

"We are pledged to do one job and that is to make certain that the voters of our state have a free choice between Thurmond and Wright with states' rights and home rule, or Truman and Barkley who stand for centralized government in Washington with police state control and interference in the private lives of American citizens."

Wed 8-18-48

Several of the electors named by the central committee have said they favor Thurmond and Wright, but the consensus is that the way they'll vote will be determined by the committee at a meeting on September 7 in Baton Rouge.

STATES' RIGHTERS TO BE ON BALLOT

Nominees for Electors Get Approval, Martin Says

Fri 8-27-48

The states' rights faction will be on the Louisiana ballot in the general election on November 2.

Secretary of State Wade O. Martin, Jr., said in Baton Rouge Thursday that the states' righters elector candidates would appear on the ballot.

He said: "I have received the nominating papers, the attorney general has checked and approved them for form and legality, and the names of the nominees will go on the ballot."

New Orleans, La.

Martin explained that for ballot purposes, the states' rights Democrats in Louisiana are using the name "States' Righters" as the law here prohibits use of the word "Democrat" for any nominees other than those named by the Democratic party.

Stamps Farrar, member of the Louisiana states' righters' legal committee, presented the necessary papers and petitions bearing more than 1000 names of unaffiliated voters to Martin and the attorney general to qualify his faction's nominees.

In New Orleans, John U. Barr, chairman of the organization's executive committee, predicted "a landslide" for J. Strom Thurmond, South Carolina governor who is the Dixiecrats' candidate for president, and his running-mate, Mississippi Governor Fielding L. Wright, in the Louisiana balloting.

Fri 8-27-48

He said the organization's advisory committee will set up a campaign headquarters and select a staff to carry on "a full-fledged educational campaign."

He and his cochairman, Robert G. Chandler, notified Gov. Thurmond after Martin okayed his ticket's representation.

In a statement issued later in the day, Barr said: "We are proud of the fact that the South took the leadership and presented to the people two genuine Democrats, Governor Thurmond and Governor Wright, who are the only presidential and vice-presidential candidates whose platform was not copied from the Communist party.

"It is sad to note that Truman, Dewey and Wallace are so frantic in their efforts to get elected that they were willing to appease the left-wing voters of this country, the very voters who would love to see a breakdown of law and order with widespread public hatred and unrest."

He added: "Millions of American voters will applaud what we are doing in Louisiana and the South. They were wondering how long we were going to support the political racketeers who falsely called themselves Democrats to use our loyalty and our campaign contributions to lie about us and to rouse hatred against us."

State Righters on Ballot

Louisiana State Righters completed no mean undertaking Thursday when they presented the secretary of state with a petition bearing the names of more than 1000 unaffiliated voters, and qualified their candidates for electors in the presidential election in November. Secretary of State Martin responded with an announcement that the names on the petition had been checked by the attorney general and the State Rights electors would go on the ballot.

Times Picayune

Fri 8-27-48

Qualification of the State Rights candidates means that Mr. Truman and Mr. McGrath can now strike Louisiana's electoral vote for their claims sheet. For the electorate of this state has opposed force bills with a purpose which will not be much watered down by Mr. Truman's Democratic label. Wholly apart from the so-called civil rights proposals and propaganda, the president's position in this state, as in others, has been weakened by the declining estimates of his capacity for his high office. Such slight opportunities as that offered for the Dewey candidacy in Louisiana have now been obliterated by the more pleasing alternative which the Thurmond and Wright electors offer Louisiana voters.

New Orleans, La.

The circumstance that the chances of Mr. Truman's election would be exceedingly slight, irrespective of how many parties were in the field, reacts to the advantage of Gov. Thurmond and his running mate, Gov. Wright, in their quest for the South's electoral vote. For few State Rights supporters will feel that they are doing anything to help install the Republican administration. In their estimate the Democratic administration is on its way out and the chance to register a resounding protest against the "force bills" agitation without helping the Republican organization, may never return.

Fri 8-27-48

Under the state law there can be only one Democratic party in Louisiana, and for that reason the Thurmond-Wright electors will appear on the ballot as "State Rights" candidates. That is a technicality, however, that probably will neither worry nor confuse many voters.

Mississippi Secedes From The Supreme Court

Courier Journal

IN THE somewhat noisy process of seceding from the Democratic Party, most States' Rights Democrats have stopped short of advocating counter-revolution to the point of secession from the Union.

This is not so, however, with the Chief Justice of Mississippi's Supreme Court. This gentleman hasn't quite advocated for his State the equivalent of firing upon Fort Sumter, but his proposal achieves a legalistic variant both ingenious and impudent.

Wed 9-15-48

It is quite possible, declared Justice VIRGIL A. GRIFFITH, that "dangerous political proposals" may become a part of Federal law, and be upheld by the Federal judiciary. In this case, according to the judge, it will be the duty of Mississippi's courts "to sterilize them by resort to every practical expedient within the broad reach of permissible State power." Judge GRIFFITH does not add his definition of a dangerous law, nor state to whom it must be dangerous, or who will decide upon its danger.

Louisville, Ky

The tolerance afforded by reasonable people to men beside themselves with anger has been extended in rather remarkable degree to other Dixie demagogues. When Judge GRIFFITH's fellow Mississipian and senior senator, JAMES EASTLAND, runs through the South vituperating his erstwhile fellow-Democrats as "mongrels of the East," the East, which has its own loud-mouths, can shrug him off. But when a State's Chief Justice seriously proposes that the law of the land be "sterilized" with his aid, a rebuke of some sort is surely in order, and we can hope that the legal profession, which in all things sponsors a decent respect for justice, will administer it.

Wed 9-15-48

One is constrained to wonder, meanwhile, what variety of justice is being and will be administered through Mississippi's courts. It seems unlikely that even there so extreme an interpretation of States' rights can stand the test of legal practicality. But it will be interesting, in a dismal fashion, to see just how far Justice GRIFFITH can go in his creation of a Super-Supreme Court of Mississippi before even his fellow States'-Righters uneasily rebel.

State Democratic Convention Promises Electoral Votes To Thurmond-Wright

Memphis Tenn.

By The Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 3.—The Mississippi Democratic Convention approved Tuesday the walkout of the state's delegates at the national convention, and pledged their Electoral College candidates to support the States' Rights tickets.

The action was taken as the state convention, recessed on June 22, reconvened.

Two college student visitors spoke in opposition to the States' Rights movement. They were followed by other college students supporting the movement.

Other Resolutions

In other resolutions the convention: Wed 8-4-48

1. Approved the action of Mississippi delegates in joining the States' Rights Conference in Birmingham July 17 after the National Democratic Convention walkout.

2. Nominated South Carolina Gov. J. Strom Thurmond and Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright as candidates of the Mississippi Democratic Party for President and Vice President; and pledged their Electoral College candidates to they. They were chosen at the Birmingham conference as the States' Rights standard bearers.

3. Called for a "campaign of education so as to acquaint the people in each county with all the facts pertaining to the States' Rights movement."

4. Commissioned the nine electoral candidates as delegates to a convention of the Democratic Parties of the several states to be held in Birmingham" on Oct. 1.

5. Declared that the sense of the convention is that all candidates for office on the state Democratic ticket should publicly declare their support for the Sttles' Rights plans. 8-4-48

6—Called on Mississippi's Congressional delegation and candidates for Congress to declare how they would vote if Congress should have to decide the presidential election. (The election goes to Congress if no presidential candidate gets a majority in the Electoral College).

7—Continued the convention in recess until Nov. 23, unless called into session by proper authority before then. The convention had been in recess since its first meeting on June 22. The procedure of recessing instead of adjourning prevents any other group which might claim to be the Democratic Party of Mississippi from holding an official convention. Appeal

Collegians Are Booed

The nine candidates for electors individually announced to the convention that they would vote in the Electoral College for Thurmond and Wright. 8-4-48

The opposition to the States' Rights movement, consisting of a group of 18 students in a section reserved for "visitors opposed to States' rights," sought recognition when the resolutions were presented to the convention body for discussion and approval.

George Maddox, 23, of McComb, a senior at Milsaps College, was booed, largely by the proStates' Rights college contingent, when he began speaking.

He said that only 2 per cent of the Mississippi voters attended the precinct meetings which named delegates who ultimately represented them at the state convention.

He said the resolutions of the previous convention, on June 22, had expressed opposition only to Federal expansion in civil rights.

He asked if the States' Rights movement was also opposed to Federal expansion in such fields as Federal aid in highway and hospital programs, crop insurance, education and the Tennessee Valley Authority. 8-4-48

"We are placing Mississippi in opposition to the moral trend of the Nation," he asserted.

The audience booed as he finished. Governor Wright in a brief address asked that "these young Mississippians" be given a courteous hearing because the party leaders had invited an expression of opposition views."

Vanderbilt Student Speaks

"Although I don't agree with anything the gentleman has said, I want to hear it," Governor Wright asserted. 8-4-48

Hardy Clark, 19, of Natchez, a student at Vanderbilt University, told the convention that "many Mississippians are honestly confused by the issue before them."

"We are running the risk of alienating ourselves from the benefits that come from close co-operation of the state with the National Government," he declared.

"He said the States' Rights movement was assuring the election of Republican Candidate Thomas E. Dewey.

"I have more faith in the Democratic Party as we have known it of old, than in the Republicans," he said.

Texas, Oklahoma Voters Rebuke The Dixiecrats

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. —In a significant rebuke to the states' rights crowd, voters in two southern states refused to nominate rabble-rousers in a Democratic senatorial primary and in a congressional tilt.

Texas returns last Saturday night gave House minority leader Sam Rayburn renomination over two states' righters in the fourth congressional distict.

Kerr, keynoter at the 1944 Democratic national convention, took an early lead in the Oklahoma run-off race and increased it steadily.

Smith, his opponent, an ex-leader of the state Townsend movement, campaigned primarily on the Negro issue. The rabid advocate of Negro segregation used the race question in a vain attempt to incite hatred and sweep the primary on a states' right platform.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—Voters in two Southern States, Oklahoma and Texas, recently refused to nominate two rabble-rousing States' righters in primary elections. Some observers term the rejection as stern rebuke to rebel Democrats.

In Oklahoma, former Governor Robert S. Kerr, staunch Truman supporter, defeated States' rights "white supremacy" candidate Gomer Smith for the Senatorial nomination. Tuesday's State primary showed. In Texas, House Minority Leader Sam Rayburn won renomination over two States' righters in the Fourth Congressional District.

Throw Dixiecrats Out Of Party, Says Mrs. FDR

The Constitution

Tues 11-9-48 — Atlanta Ga

NEW YORK—(AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt wants the Southern States' Righters kept out of the Democratic Party from now on.

She also told a radio audience yesterday "it would be much more logical if our political parties" were divided into liberals and conservatives.

"The Democratic Party has seemed to me to be predominantely the party of liberalism," she said, "although sometimes . . . it embraced Southerners who number among their ranks some of the most reactionary men in public life.

"Similarly, the Republican Party is traditionally the party of conservatism, although it embraces some very fine liberals," she said, adding:

The "South Can Still Stymie Truman." See Jay G. Hayden's column on the editorial page.

"Now for the first time in history, the Democrats have won an election without the solid South. Some of the more reactionary Southerners have chosen to break with the Democratic Party, and I think it would be a good idea to make the break final. Possibly the Southern conservatives would be welcomed into the Republican Party with whom they have voted so often in recent years."

Mrs. Roosevelt made her comments in the first of a series of American Broadcasting Company programs entitled "Eleanor and Anna Roosevelt." The program features Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter, Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, in a "combination of forum and commentary."

Tues 11-9-48

Mrs. Roosevelt spoke from Paris where she is attending the United Nations sessions.

Mrs. Roosevelt said leaders of the States' Righters want to get back into the Democratic Party because many would head important Congressional committees under the seniority system if they were considered Democrats.

She singled out Rep. John Rankin, of Mississippi, and Sen. Olin Johnston, of South Carolina. She termed Rankin "one of the worst reactionaries" and said Johnston "snubbed President Truman, campaigned against him and then was one of the first on the train at Washington to congratulate the victorious President after his election."

In Tupelo, Miss., Rankin said "the less the American people hear from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the better off the country will be."

Gov. Fielding L. Wright, of Mississippi, vice presidential candidate of the States' Right Democrats, said "there is no place in the Democratic Party for us if Mrs. Roosevelt is going to take over the leadership."

Tues 11-9-48

Wright added that the States' Rights group did not desert the Party but "if the Democratic Party decides to be the radical party, I'm sure the conservative Southern Democrats will not be inclined to follow that lead."

In Washington, Democratic Chairman J. Howard McGrath said the choice of congressional committee heads will be left entirely up to the Democratic members of the new Congress. Last Friday he said there would be no reprisals against the Southern Democrats.

Senator-Elect Russell Long, also in Washington on business "of interest to Louisiana," said he believes that most States' Rights Democrats "are ready to return to the regular party."

Wife Of Ex-President Singles Out John Rankin And Senator Johnston In Bitter Address

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt wants the Southern States Righters kept out of the Democratic party from now on.

But Democratic Chairman J. Howard McGrath said in Washington the choice of Congressional committee heads will be left entirely up to the Democratic members of the new Senate and House.

McGrath's comment was made to a reporter who asked about the proposal by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Without commenting directly on Mrs. Roosevelt's suggestion, the national chairman indicated that so far as he is concerned the national committee will not attempt to interfere in the choice of committee leaders in the 81st Congress. He said last Friday there would be no reprisals for Southern Democrats.

Mrs. Roosevelt told a radio audience "it would be much more logical if our political parties" were divided into liberals and conservatives.

"The Democratic party has seemed to me to be predominantly the party of liberalism," she said, "although sometimes xxxx it embraced Southerners who number among their ranks some of the most reactionary men in public life.

Slaps John Rankin

Mrs. Roosevelt proposed specifically that committee chairmanships be denied to Rep. John Rankin (D), Mississippi, whom she called "one of the worst reactionaries," and to Senator Olin Johnston (D), South Carolina, whom she accused of having "snubbed" President Truman.

Johnston was a pre-convention foe of Mr. Truman but announced before the election that he was voting for the president. He would be eligible for a Senate committee chairmanship only if Senator Chavez (D), New Mexico, were to decide not to take the chairmanship of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Chavez, who outranks Johnston in service on that committee, also is the senior Democrat on the Senate Public Works Committee and might elect to take the chairmanship instead.

Rankin is the senior Democrat on the House Veterans Affairs Committee and would be in line for its chairmanship.

The Mississippian at his home in Tupelo responded to Mrs. Roosevelt with the brief comment—"the less the American people hear from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the better off the country will be."

Johnston said only: "I did not hear the speech (by Mrs. Roosevelt), but even if I had I would have no comment."

Officials at the Democratic National Committee said that Mrs. Roosevelt must have been misinformed about Johnston's part in the campaign.

"Senator Johnston lent valuable influence and prestige to the Democratic campaign," one party official told a reporter.

Senator-elect Russell Long (D), Louisiana, said meanwhile he believes that most States' Rights Democrats "are ready to return to the regular party."

Gov. Fielding L. Wright, of Mississippi, said, however, there is "no place in the Democratic Party for us if Mrs. Roosevelt is going to take over the leadership."

Tues 11-9-48

Wright was the vice-presidential candidate of the States' Right Democrats. He asserted the States Righters did not desert the party but "if the Democratic Party decides to be the radical party, I'm sure the conservative Southern Democrats will not be inclined to follow that lead."

No Place in Party If Eleanor Rules—Wright

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 8.—Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi, keynoter of the States' Rights movement, declared today that there is "no place in the Democratic party for us," if Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is "going to take over the leadership."

His remarks were made in reply to a suggestion by Mrs. Roosevelt that the States' Righters should be "permanently ousted from the Democratic party."

Representative John Rankin, D., Miss., singled out by Mrs. Roosevelt for particular criticism, said at his home in Tupelo that "the less the American people hear from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the better off the country will be."

Governor Wright, States' Rights candidate for vice-president, said: The Southern States' Rights supporters did not desert the Democratic party. But if the Democratic party decides to be the radical party, I'm sure the conservative Southern Democrats will not be inclined to follow that lead.

"If Mrs. Roosevelt and those who think as she does are going to take over the leadership of the Democratic party and write its policies and program, then I am sure there is no place in the party for us."

Saving America

Birmingham News

To the Editor:

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt recently urged that the States' Rights Democrats be kicked out of the national Democratic Party, but the national Democratic Party leaders have, as of this date, spurned her idea. If Mrs. Roosevelt and others who think as she does have an idea they can expel Southern leaders from the Democratic Party they might reflect upon the results of Mr. F. D. R.'s celebrated purge attempt in the 1930s.

Mr. Truman will take note that the Southern voters were urged by Mrs. Roosevelt to defeat men like Sen. Walter George of Georgia because he persisted in defending the American system of government.

Mr. Truman would not have been elected without the votes of Southern states like Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia and North Carolina to make the grade in the electoral college.

Fri-11-26-48

Now let Mrs. Roosevelt's friends expel the States' Rights leaders from the Democratic Party, and the states' rights movement will have just the assistance and leadership it needs to solidify the South and make it certain that there will be more of the Southern electoral votes that the next Democratic candidate sponsoring a so-called civil rights program will not get.

The statesmen from the South have stood as a bulwark in defense of the American way of life that the radicals of the North are so determined to destroy. And even today as they celebrate their recent election victory, the Southerners are preparing to take their stand in the forthcoming Congress as the guardians of Americanism. Mrs. Roosevelt knows that, and that is why she is so eager to drive the Southern leaders from the Democratic Party.

The Democrats Need Southern Support

Courier Journal

Wed. 11-[illegible]-48

Louisville Ky

MRS. ROOSEVELT's demand that the Democratic Party purge the rebellious States' Righters has the completely non-political qualities of logic and hard justice. But these qualities have little reality in politics, the science of the possible. The Democrats still need the solid core of Democratic strength in the South, even in those four States that absconded with the party's vote, and National Chairman J. HOWARD MCGRATH has made it clear that the party does not intend to throw this strength away.

There have been and there will be reprisals, of course: the National Committee recognized new State organizations in Mississippi and South Carolina before the election. The National Committee has no call to be lenient toward the States' Rights leaders in the four States where, but for those leaders and their maneuvers with the electoral machinery, the popular vote almost certainly would have gone to the Democratic nominees.

But if the light vote in the four rebelling States showed little popular enthusiasm for the THURMOND-WRIGHT ticket (and, conversely, revealed the reluctance of hundreds of thousands of Democrats in those States to bolt the party), the record of Southern Democrats in the House and Senate is even more revealing: none of their leaders, at least, openly associated themselves with the Dixiecrats Mrs. ROOSEVELT, for example, was in total error about Senator OLIN D. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, who showed political wisdom in the very home of the Dixiecrats by supporting the re-election of Mr. TRUMAN.

There will be temptation enough for some Southern Democrats to vote with the Republicans in the 81st Congress without being punitively invited by their own party to do so. Senator MCGRATH is wise, we believe, not to extend the invitation. In the Senate alone, for example, the loss of eight votes from the four Dixiecrat States would give the Republicans a 50-to-46 majority.

No, the Demorcatic Party still needs the South. The South itself would be better, we think, to develop an honest two-party system, and let Southern conservatives find their proper place in a newly-respectable Republican Party But that day will still be long in coming, and in the meantime, as RALPH MCGILL of The Atlanta Constitution points out, it might be well for all concerned to note that Mr TRUMAN did not "win without the South." He lost four states—but he got the vote of Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina Kentucky and others, and without these votes he would have lost the election

S. Carolina Seeks Revenge On Waring For Fair Vote Rule

By VENICE SPRAGGS

WASHINGTON —In an all-out move to revenge themselves upon Federal Judge J. Waties Waring of the Eastern District of South Carolina, for his recent ruling that Negroes must vote, state Dixiecrats have launched a move to oust him from the bench.

Rep. W. J. Dorn (D., S. C.) last week introduced into the House a resolution calling for an investigation of Judge Waring's "conduct in office". Dorn charged that Judge Waring's ruling at Charleston "is a gross usurpation of the rights of a party".

34d

Judge Waring ordered the Democratic party of the state to enroll Negroes and not to hinder their full participation in primary elections or other party affairs, and warned that violations of the "letter and the spirit" of his ruling would bring stiff penalties and imprisonment.

Sat 8-7-48

In presenting his resolution. Dorn said "these orders of Judge Waring have confused the people of South Carolina. They have tended to disruption of the Democratic party as it has been constituted and as our people wish to have it constituted in the future."

Dorn insisted that "if Judge Waring is guilty as I believe he is, and as I now charge of usurping the rights of the free citizens of South Carolina in attempting to force down their throats his own ideas of governmental matters, it will be the duty of this Congress to prefer articles of impeachment."

Dorn's resolution was referred to the House Judiciary committee.

SOMERVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 16.—Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi Thursday struck the keynote for the organization of Tennessee's States' Rights Democrats in a vigorous speech insisting that the South has "everything to gain and nothing to lose" by presenting a solid front in the Nov. 2 election.

Mississippi's chief executive urged Tennessee States' Rights Democrats to vote for electors named for Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the party's presidential nominee, and for himself as the vice presidential nominee.

Memphis, Tenn.

Cheers Greet Governor

"Here is what we have to win," Governor Wright declared:

"(1) We have a good chance to elect the next president of the United States;

"(2) Failing in that, we can become the Minority Party in the Congress and reassert ourselves politically in the Nation.

"Either one is worth fighting for!"

Governor Wright said that failure of the South to stand solidly behind the Thurmond-Wright ticket means, ". . . the end of the way of life we know and love so well south of the Mason-Dixon Line."

"This is the last fight for States' Rights, for local self-government, for the way of life we love," he told the Tennesseans.

"The South can either stand solid now, or never have another opportunity to make this fight."

Governor Wright's address was received with cheers from several thousand Tennesseans, who came from all sections of the state to join in the formation of the new party.

His address was broadcast over a network of five Tennessee radio stations, including WHBQ in Memphis, and those in Dyersburg, Jackson, Clarksville and Cookeville.

Governor Wright was introduced by Charles A. Stainback, Somerville attorney, who was elected chairman of the Tennessee States' Rights group.

Freedom Not Automatic

After paying tribute to his Tennessee neighbors, "who have always fought the good fight when your freedom has been endangered," Governor Wright said:

"After 160 years of liberty under our Constitution, we Americans like to think of freedom as our perpetual birthright. But, unfortunately, if left to itself, it will not work out that way.

"Freedom is not an automatic thing. The liberties guaranteed to us by the Bill of Rights are not passed down from generation to generation as a permanent heritage."

He said there were four specific threats being made by the parties of Harry Truman, Tom Dewey and Henry Wallace "to your personal freedoms and liberties."

The four major changes which he said are incorporated in the platforms of the Democratic, Republican and Progressive Parties are:

It proposes for the Federal Government to dictate the terms and conditions between every employer and employe. No discrimination would be possible under the law because of race, color, or creed. An employer would have to employ people regardless of their ability simply to prove nondiscrimination because of race, color, or creed. Failure so to do would expose any employer to Federal prosecution, severe fines, and possible imprisonment. The same law denies the employe the right to work alongside congenial fellow employes.

Mighty Like U.S.S.R.

"This FEPC bill is literally lifted from the Constitution of Joe Stalin's Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Article 123 of the Fundamental Rights and Duties of Citizens of the U.S.S.R. not only gives Russia an FEPC, but the wording in the Russian constitution is so similar to the wording of the FEPC bills now in the Congress that one is led to believe that the author or authors of the American FEPC had the Russian constitution before them when they wrote the proposed law.

"Tom Dewey put the FEPC in New York state. His running mate, Earl Warren, tried to force FEPC on the people of California, but they overwhelmingly defeated the idea at the polls."

(2) "The so-called anti-lynching Bill. The name of this bill is just as misleading as the words "Fair Employment" in the FEPC. Every thinking Southern man and woman is violently opposed to mob violence and lynching; and the progress we have made is public knowledge.

"There was only one lynching south of the Mason-Dixon Line last year; and we all hope and pray that during this year and subsequent ones lynching will be completely done away with—But the elimination of lynching is not the real purpose of the so-called anti-lynching bill. Its true purpose is to take away from local law enforcement officers all responsibility and to substitute federal policemen who will take over the enforcement of law and the maintenance of order in every community throughout the land.

Fri 9-17-48

"Under this bill, should a crime be committed in Somerville, the Federal Government would hold all of the citizens of this community guilty and levy a fine against this municipality. Can you imagine such a thing in America? It reeks of the German gestapo, of the Russian way where the citizens of a whole community were put to death unless the person or persons guilty of some specific crimes were produced."

3. "The so-called AntiPoll Tax Bill. Many Southern states have already done away with the poll tax, but this bill does not care about that. It is aimed at the constitutional right of each state to supervise elections within that state. The AntiPoll Tax Bill provides for Federal supervision of all elections and for a Federal police force to stand guard at every precinct ballot box throughout the entire land. There are those who would deprive the people of Tennessee or of Mississippi of their right to elect officials of their own choosing.

Measures Called Vicious

"Even now there is an organized movement among a certain group to deny the people of Mississippi their right to choose a congressman to represent them. I read with alarm and disgust of this proposed plan to block the seating of a congressman from Mississippi when he arrives in Washington in January."

4."The matter of segregation of the races. All of these vicious measures, and other proposals in the making, are designed to eliminate all segregation in schools, in churches, in restaurants, hotels, club rooms, swimming pools, labor halls, and everywhere in your community. You and I know that we have no race problem in the South. You and I know of the splendid progress our two races have made down through the years. You and I know that both of our races are living and working side by side in the harmony, in the peace, and in the prosperity that can only come through segregation.

"But, if you get outside the South you will hear the cry "Jim Crow must go." It is the cry of Wallace, of Truman and of Dewey and their fellow-travelers. They propose these vicious programs that are designed to eliminate all differences, all separation, between the races. They propose to create a great melting pot—particularly in the South."

Governor Wright said Truman, Dewey and Wallace do not propose to obtain Constitutional amendments to enact the four so-called anti-South bills. He said they proposed, with the help of pressure groups, to push the bills through Congress and count on "a political Supreme Court declaring them Constitutional."

He used statistics compiled by Elmo Roper for Time Magazine as the basis of figuring the strength of the "Solid South."

The Governor related that in an article in the Sept. 13 issue of the magazine, Mr. Roper found that Dewey would receive 41 per cent of the vote in November, and Truman, 31 per cent. Mr. Roper said only a "political convulsion" could keep Dewey out of the White House.

Figures Show The Way

Governor Wright contends that a political convulsion has taken place. He said it was started by Truman when he sent his "un-American so-called Civil Rights message" to the Congress. Formation of the States' Rights Democratic party followed.

"Elmo Roper presumed to elect Dewey with 44 per cent of the vote," Governor Wright said. "He gives Truman 31 per cent—the total is 75 per cent. Where is the other 25 per cent?

"I'll tell you—that 25 per cent is the Solid South voting for States' Rights Constitutional local self-government, individual liberties, and J. Strom Thurmond on Nov. 2. It requires only simple arithmetic—there are in all 531 votes in the electoral college. It takes 266 votes for any man to be elected President of the United States.

"If Dewey should get 44 per cent it would give him only 234 electoral votes, which is not enough for his election.

Fri. 9-17-48

"Add to this the 31 per cent Roper gives Truman. . . . It will give Truman 165 electoral votes."

Governor Wright said the other 132 electoral votes, or 25 per cent, is in the States' Rights column.

"If the South stands solid on Nov. 2—and I predict that it will—and if we give J. Strom Thurmond the electoral vote of the Solid South, we will throw the election into the National House of Representatives," Governor Wright forecast.

"There, each state will have only one vote. . . . There we will stand with the lost 25 per cent, and I tell you that neither Dewey nor Truman can ever be elected unless or until this solid block of 12 Southern votes (of the total of 48) gives one way or the other.

"If and when this time comes—and every day I feel more confident that it will come—I predict those states there listed in the Democratic columns outside the South will see the handwriting on the wall; and that they will then and there desert Harry Truman and will join with the Solid South to elect a real States' Rights Democrat—J. Strom Thurmond, the next president of the United States."

Superhuman Effort Urged

Then making allowances for errors in poll of Mr. Roper, Governor Wright said the next best accomplishment that could be derived by the States' Rights party would be to become the minority party in Congress.

If this were to happen, he said, "the representatives and senators from States' Rights states will have full and complete control of all minority Congressional Committee assignments and those who did follow 'Hobbling Harry' will be out in the cold politically."

Failure of the South to stand solidly, Governor Wright said, would be an invitation of the next Congress "to immediately enact into law the FEPC, the anti-lynching, the anti-poll tax, and the anti-segregation proposals."

The Mississippi governor urged superhuman efforts on the part of Tennesseans, and other Southerners, in supporting the States' Rights ticket.

He said "our cause never looked brighter" and reminded the Tennesseans of the steps taken in South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. ". . . we will be on the ballot in every Southern state from Virginia to Texas," he declared, as well as those in Kentucky, Oklahoma, Minnesota, North Dakota, "and we hope several other states, strictly from the standpoint of testing public approval of our fight for the principles of States' Rights constitutional government."

Governor Wright took William J. Primm Jr., assistant to J. Howard McGrath, Democratic Party chairman, to task for condemning the Louisiana Democratic Party for striking Truman and Barkley as the choice of the party in that state.

He said Mr. Primm's statement, "This action cannot be tolerated," is "one of the most encouraging things we have had appear since the beginning of the campaign.

Louisiana's Act Jarred Them

"Louisiana, by its action last week, jarred them to the core," Governor Wright said. "And they know now that other Southern states will do likewise. They know now they lost the Solid South, and you will hear them cry to high heaven.

Fri 9-17-48

". . . Why didn't they think about this when they packed the convention (in Philadelphia) with hoodlums and the sweepings of the streets to jeer and insult and humiliate any voice raised from the South?

". . . Yes, my friends, Mr. Primm and Mr. McGrath, and poor old hobbling Harry would now put a lock on the door of the South after the horse is gone. And I am publicly telling them tonight in this place, that the South will never come back, that the South can never stomach or tolerate the gang of city bosses, and pinks and crackpots and unAmerican minorities that have taken over the good old Democratic Party to which you and I, and our fathers and forefathers were loyal so long."

As opposed to the force bills, Governor Wright said "Thurmond and Wright stand for:"

"(1) Local self-government as guaranteed by the Constitution and opposed by Federal Bureaucrats who are paving the way for a Socialist, Communist or Fascist form of iron-rule dictatorship.

"(2) States' Rights as reserved in the Constitution to give the states sole authority governing voting, segregation, law enforcement and private employment.

"(3) Individual liberties, which include freedom from fear and oppression, and the right to live and work as we choose.

"(4) The American way of controlling and governing ourselves at home without bureaucratic interference and Federal Gestapo tactics."

12 ELECTORS CHOSEN

Commercial Appeal

Three From Democratic State Named—Confederate, U. S. Flags Are Mingled

Special To the Commercial Appeal

SOMERVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 16.—Tennessee States' Rights Democrats, meeting in organizational convention here Thursday night, selected a full slate of 12 electors to appear on the Nov. 2 general election ballots in Tennessee.

They were chosen and instructed to vote for J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President and Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi for vice president.

Fri 9-17-48

Campaign Road Paved

Selection of the electors followed the adoption of a resolution officially creating a States' Rights Democratic Party in Tennessee, and paving the way for a vigorous campaign in the interest of the party's candidates. The action was voted at a gathering of the States' Rights supporters on the Somerville football field, which had been gaily decorated with Confederate flags interspersed with the American flag.

High school bands from Jackson, Tenn., and Bolivar, Tenn., set thec rowd to cheering with renditions of Dixie, both at the field and in a parade around the Somerville square before the convention meeting.

Memphis Press

The States' Rights Party selected three Democratic electors, Preston Parks of Somerville, Larry Morgan of Brownsville, and Malcolm C. Hill of Sparta, to serve as their electors. This trio was the focal point of a controversy that developed Wednesday in Nashville, when the Democratic State Committee voted to purge their list of electors of persons having leanings toward the States' Right group.

Electors Are Named

The electors chosen by the States' Rights Party included: Mr. Morgan and J. H. Ballew of Nashville, electors for the state-at-large; John R. King of Hamblen County, First District; Mrs. Elizabeth Taliaferro Sharp of Loudon County, Second District; Mr. Hall of White County, Third District.

Fred L. Tardy of Jackson County, Fourth District; Olney Anderson of Coffee County, Fifth District; Norman Farrell of Davidson County, Sixth District; John W. Hilldrop of Cheatham County, Seventh District; Mrs. Parks of Fayette County, Eighth District; William F. Lanier of Covington, Tipton County, Ninth District; L. C. Gaerig of Memphis, Shelby County, Tenth District.

A motion was adopted to increase the States' Rights Committee by as many men and women as it may deem fit and proper from the various sections of the state. It also empowered the committee to fill vacancies that might occur among tse electors and directed the committee to engage a campaign director and elect a treasurer as well as to procure headquarters in Nashville for waging the campaign. This action preceded the keynote speech by Governor Wright.

Alabama's Dixon Speaks

Charles A. Stainback, Somerville attorney, who has been the guiding light in the formation of the new party, was elected permanent chairman of the States' Rights Committee. Mr. Stainback, who for more than 20 years headed the Fayette County Democratic Committee, introduced Governor Wright.

Fri 9-17-48

Former Governor Frank Dixon of Alabama addressed the convention before Governor Wright spoke. Mr. Dixon declared that President Truman's proposed civil rights program means to destroy our way of life in the South, but its effects will not be limited to the South. The program, he said, means to establish a police state in America to eliminate local customs and local self-government to establish Federal control of elections and to give to the Federal Government the power to establish Federal police.

8 Negroes At State Rights Texas Confab

The Defender

Sat 8-21-48

HOUSTON, Texas—With eight Negroes present as observers, 9,000 of the expected 15,000 Dixiecrats met here last week-end to launch official the rebel drive for the presidency of the United States.

Chicago Ill

Screaming insults at President Truman for his civil rights program and his executive orders, the rebels carefully segregate the Negro newsmen and observers but gave them Dixiecrat buttons and campaign literature.

Chief Speakers at the convention were the Dixiecrat presidential nominee, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, and the vice-presidential nominee, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi.

None of the speakers made any direct attacks upon Negroes but they blasted both Republicans and Democrats as traitors to America. While Wallace followers picketed the convention, Governor Wright declared: "Dewey is not the choice of the Republican rank and file, Truman, an acknowledged loser, certainly does not represent organized democracy. Wallace represents Russia and its ideology."

Houston was chosen for the convention because every effort is being made to corral the state's important electoral votes. The most important business discussion of the convention revolved around the problem of getting rebel candidates on the ballots of the eleven southern states which the Dixiecrats hope to capture.

The new rebel party is reported to be attracting all the anti-Negro, anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish leaders of the South and will undoubtedly win complete Klan support.

JAY G. HAYDEN

Is the One-Party System Slipping Out?

The Constitution - Thur 10-21-48

HOUSTON—In Texas, "state's rights" carries a much broader meaning than anywhere else in the South. For more than a century, every Texas school child has had drummed into him the proud fact that his is the one state that came into the Union by treaty between its previously independent Republic and the Washington Government, rather than by Congressional gratuity.

Because Texas reserved to itself so many rights not allowed the existing States it was a long time before two-thirds in the Senate could be induced to vote for confirmation of the treaty of annexation and statehood.

34d

Take the now-burning issue of tidelands oil. One stipulation of the Texas treaty was that all its lands, including submerged coastal areas to a distance of three marine leagues, remain under State ownership.

Long ago all receipts by the State from sale of land or mineral deposits beneath it, including the tidelands oil, was set aside for educational purposes.

Atlanta Ga.

Therefore, Texans contend that when President Truman and former Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, aided and abetted by the Supreme Court, attempted to establish Federal ownership of tidelands oil, they were not only violating a solemn international treaty, but robbing Texas school children of their rightful patrimony.

It should be added that outsiders who talk of "oil" as a label of political opprobrium in Texas are very far from the mark. There is scarcely one among the 200-odd counties in this State that does not have oil wells already gushing or being drilled for by the hopeful. For Texans, the daily report of oil prices and sales is the index of economic well-being or depression. Three-fourths of Texas voters probably draw their living in whole or in part from oil.

Texas citizens do not get greatly excited when they hear, for example, that Roy Cullen, a rich oil magnate, is contributing to Republicans and State Righters, since Mr. Cullen previously has given $160,000,000 for improvement of education and health in Texas.

Socially, Texas is still firmly "Southern;" but economically it is rapidly taking on Western and Northern points of view. Far from being any longer dependent on outside capital, Houston and Fort Worth millionaires now are carrying their money bags, in search of investments, all the way to New York and Detroit, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Any Texan will tell you that one day his state will be as big and as dominant along the southern Gulf Coast as New York is in the East or California in the West.

It is chiefly this business-boom complex, including a great influx of new population mainly from the North and West, that is sparking the move here against the one-party political system. Big and little business in the larger cities of Texas are as Republican today as their counterparts in Michigan or Illinois. And the first argument the Texas Republican invariably advances is that his state is at a great disadvantage in the eyes of both Democratic and Republican politicians so long as its one-party allegiance is "taken for granted."

Practically, the one-party system suffered its most severe setback when a Negro named Smith won from the Supreme Court in 1944 a decision forbidding exclusion of Negroes from Texas Democratic primaries. A hundred thousand Negroes not only are voting freely in Texas elections this year, but all candidates and party factions, even including the Thurmond State Righters, are actively bidding for Negro support.

Symptomatic of dissolution of the one-party system also is the break away of Coke Stevenson, closely defeated candidate for Democratic Senatorial nomination, to support Jack Porter, Republican candidate for that office. Many Texans predict that this Stevenson-Porter coalition will mark the beginning of a powerful conservative party in Texas, whether Republican or under some other name.

Dixiecrats, Wallaceites Voting Right Favored

TALLAHASSEE, Fla — (UP) — The Florida Senate, with only one dissenting vote, yesterday gave rapid approval to a bill which would open the November General Election ballot to States' Rights Democrats and the Progressive Party.

The Senate adjourned until 10 a. m. today after adopting the measure and sending it to the House by a 33-to-1 vote with Sen. Ed Fraser of MacClenny casting the negative ballot. Wed 9-15-48

As adopted by the Senate, the measure would add the names of States' Rights Candidate Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Progrssive Party Nominee Henry Wallace to the ballot.

Thurmond And Wallace Go On Florida Ballot

Columbia Record

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Sept. 15—(UP)—The House passed with only a few minor changes today a senate-approved bill adding the names of J. Strom Thurmond and Henry A. Wallace to the November presidential election ballot in Florida.

Wed 9-15-48

The House vote was 72 to 14. The measure was passed after attempts to keep the Wallace Progressive party off the ballot failed by a vote of 24 to 56.

The Senate was scheduled to go into session immediately to concur in the House amendments. The bill then will go to Gov. Millard Caldwell for approval.

The vote followed House rejection by an overwhelming voice vote of a Dade county proposal which would have required both Thurmond's States' Rights Democrats and Wallace's Progressives to obtain petitions bearing the names of 500 registered voters before their presidential electors could be included on the ballot.

The senate yesterday approved its bill by a 33 to 1 vote.

Under the Senate-approved measure, the names of Wallace and States' Rights candidate Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina would be added to the ballot, with a separate slate of eight electors for each candidate.

Wed 9-15-48

A November joint committee drafted the bill last week, and the Senate added the proposed inclusion of Wallace's name as an amendment.

Last night the House beat down repeated attempts to kill the bill. The lower chamber struck out by a 51-36 vote an amendment which would have defined the Progressive party as a Communist-dominated group and outlawed it from the Florida ballot as subversive.

Thurmond And Wallace Get Equal Space On Florida Ballot

The Advertiser

TALLAHASSEE ,FLA. —(AP)— J. Strom Thurmond and Henry A. Wallace were given equal space on the Florida ballot Wednesday with Harry Truman and Thomas E. Dewey.

Thur 9-16-48

The state legislature, in a two-day special session for the purpose of clarifying a hopeless ballot muddle, passed a new act permitting voters to make a single-mark choice of any of the four presidential candidates.

Montgomery Adv

Efforts to keep Wallace off the ballots were defeated in the Senate, 25 to 9, and in the House, 56 to 24. Although not a single member spoke a kind word for any Wallace party, many fought to give him ballot space if Thurmond were to be recognized.

Governor Caldwell, who called the special session at the request of a majority of the legislators, declined to say whether he would sign the bill, because he hadn't seen it in final form.

However, he commented "from what I have heard it sounds as if it is a fair disposition of the problem."

Leaders of all four parties which received ballot space for their presidential candidates express satisfaction with the new act.

Under the old law, only Democrats and Republicans were recognized for ballot space—and they couldn't put the name of a presidential candidate on the ballot. Votes were cast, instead, for party presidential electors.

This year, the eight Democratic electors nominated in the primaries split 4 to 4 between support of Truman and Thurmond. That left supporters of either man with no way to cast a full vote for him.

The new ballot will have a separate square for each of the four recognized presidential tickets. Above the name of the presidential candidate will be a circle in which the voter can make a cross to vote for that candidate.

Or—if the voter wants to do it the hard way—he can vote individually for the eight electors listed under the candidate's name.

The same system will apply in counties which use voting machines.

Thur 9-16-48

The four nominated Democratic electors who are supporting Truman will be listed on the ballot under his name and designated as Democratic nominees. Four others were supplied by the legislature to fill out a list of eight.

Under Thurmond's name will be the four Democratic nominees for elector pledged to him, and four others supplied by the legislature. Under Dewey's name will be the eight Republican nominees for election. Under Wallace will be eight electors named by his party executive committee for inclusion in the law.

Stress Need Of Adult Education

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta Georgia

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—The need of adequate Adult Education programs among Negroes was stressed at the Seventh Annual Conference of Adult Education and The Negro held at South Carolina State A. and M College, April 6-8.

Discussions at the three days' conference were built around the theme "Literacy and World Understanding." Representatives from Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Louisiana participated in the discussions. Fri. 4-15-49

A testimonial honoring Miss Will Lou Gray, pioneer in Adult Education in South Carolina highlighted the activities of the sessions. Dr. J. J. Seabrook, president of Claflin University, presented the certificate of award and a silver loving cup given by South Carolina State College and flowers given by the conference.

ATLANTANS PARTICIPATE

Outstanding educational leaders who participated in the discussions during the sessions included Walter R. Chivers, Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., president of the conference who outlined the purpose and program of the conference at the opening session Wednesday night. Homer Kempfer, Washington D. C., specialist for General Adult Education and post high school Education, principal speaker Wednesday night spoke on "Needs and Opportunities for Adult Education in The United States.

On Thursday at the morning session Mrs. A. A. McPheeters, Librarian, Auburn Avenue Branch, Carnegie Library, Atlanta spoke on "Library Programs of Adult Education." In speaking of library service in the Southeastern region, Mrs. McPheeters cited the startling facts, "that there are 24,000,000 people with 8,500,000 books or one third book per person and that $4,500,000.00 was spent for books or eighteen cents per capita." Successful Adult Education Programs among Negroes" was the subject of a discussion led by Miss E. Louise Cooper, Assistant Director Adult Education, Hampton Institute.

R. O. Johnson, Morris Brown College, Atlanta, Ga., speaking Thursday evening on the subject "The Outlook for Adult Education Among Negroes" gave an analysis of present trends and concluded that the future is bright in adult education. Fri. 4-15-49

Adults Taught Child Writing To Save Money

Cleveland Guide
Cleveland Ohio

NEW YORK—March 8.—Teaching grownups to write like children is the job of a pretty girl from Georgia. Sat. 5-7-49

The purpose is to save dollars for retail stores by making sales slips so plain and clear that no mistakes can be made.

It a department store ever sent you a "skirt" instead of a "shirt," you know the value of plain writing.

The girl in her early 20's is Madeline Rose Hosmer Brenner, and she's from Atlanta. The system of writing—or rather, print-writing—was started by her mother, Madeline Flint Hosmer. She developed her system of teaching while with the Atlanta division of the university system of Georgia.

Applied to Retailing

It was applied to retailing when one of the south's largest department stores in Atlanta got Mrs. Hosmer to teach their clerks to write. They liked it. They still use it. Saves money. Sat. 5-7-49

War interrupted commercial expansion of the teaching, and after the war Mrs. Hosmer died.

The young daughter, who became Mrs. Brenner recently, took over. There was a long interval of preparation until she introduced it on a nation-wide scale at the last convention of the National Retail Dry Goods association in New York.

But a word on what it is. The Hosmer print-writing system is based simply on bold straight lines and circles with only slight variations. An "O" is a circle. A "C" is a half-circle. A "P" is a straight line with a half-circle. It's that easy for either upper or lower case.

Taught to Children

It is the way they teach little children to write at first. There's nothing fancy about it like a flowing Spencerian hand, but you can read it. Merchants whose clerks use it seldom send a "ball bat" instead of a "bath mat" to a customer.

The simplicity is what amazes most people. Mrs. Hosmer during the war taught the system to soldiers who could read, but had neglected, for one reason or another, to learn to write at all. One soldier, after learning print-writing, told Mrs. Hosmer in all seriousness: "If I'd known writin' was just like readin', I'd learned to write a long time ago."

That same simplicity amazed the daughter when she started writing a booklet on the subject at the end of the war. Although she "just grew up with mother's print-writing," it took her 11 months of writing and rewriting to perfect a straight-forward explanation of a 36-page booklet of instructions. Sat. 5-7-49

That booklet is the basic tool in the retail teaching system. Mrs. Brenner reduced to the clinic level the task of teaching thousands of employees in a single store. She selects a maximum of 60 employees for training, usually supervisors.

Adult Education Progresses Under New Program

Atlanta Daily World

By ELLA WASHINGTON GRIFFIN

(First of a Series of Articles on the Project For Adult Education of Negroes)

Atlanta Georgia

WASHINGTON— (ANP)— Over 10 percent of all the Negroes in America and almost three percent of all American citizens are illiterate. They are completely without the know-how of reading and writing. Many more do not read and write as well as an ordinary child who has finished the 4th grade of school. They have to get someone else to transact their business if it involves much reading and writing. At least 10 million Americans are dangeroulsy undereducated.

The Project for Adult Education of Negroes has been helping since 1946 to keep alive national interest in this problem. The project is sponsored by the Office of Education in the Federal Security agency and directed by Dr. Ambrose Caliver of that agency. It is financially assisted by the Carnegie corporation of New York. Related agencies concerned with adult education are also sponsoring the undertaking. Six institutions of higher learning--three public and three private--have cooperated with the Office of Education in conducting the project in three states. Thur. 5-12-49

They are: Atlanta university, Fort Valley State College, Tennessee State College, Fisk University, Hampton Institute, and Virginia State College. Their function is to organize and conduct literary classes in their areas and to offer college courses for the preparation of teachers of adults.

AIMS GIVEN.

The project aims to demonstrate effective methods of developing readers and other materials to be used in teaching illiterate adults and of training teachers and leaders of adults. It also aims to stimulate states, communities schools, and colleges to assume their responsibilities in providing opportunities for the education of adult illiterates.

cans live in the south. Because of inequalities in educational and economic opportunity in that area of the country, many of them have not yet had a chance to get the schooling they so much want. So this problem of illiteracy among Negroes is, in large part, a regional one.

But illiteracy among Negroes is also a national problem. People move around from one section of the country to the other. Better jobs are often available to Negroes in other sections of the country than in their native south. The experience of the armed services during World War II made America realize as never before that the fullest use of the nation's manpower depends on the lifting of the educational level of the total population.

The project for Adult Education of Negroes has helped to provide a solution to one aspect of this problem and has thus achieved its goals. During the 2 1-2 years of the demonstration, over 1,000 adults who could neither read nor write have been raised to a level of functional literacy through the project's demonstration classes. Three hundred teachers and leaders of adult illiterates have been trained either thru experience in teaching in the experimental classes, through college courses which were a part of the project's experiment, or through the project's summer workshops. Several state departments of education have been motivated to take a renewed interest in literacy education. Almost every state in the union has asked for information or for help in connection with adult literacy education. Twenty-five foreign countries have written or sent representatives to gain information about the use of project developed materials, and about the methods used in producing them and in teaching illiterate adults.

Resolutions endorsing the project's program have come from such groups as: The National Congress of Colored Parents and Teachers, American Teachers association, Council of Chief State School Officers, Association of College and Secondary Schools for Negroes, Conference of Presidents of Negro Land Grant Colleges, Independent Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the World.

WIDESPREAD INFLUENCE

The Project for Adult Education of Negroes has also had national and international influence. It stimulated the National Literacy Education bill, S320; it has been nominated by the Fundamental Education Panel of UNESCO as an associated project. Thur. 5-12-49

All of the project's materials are non-racial in character and can be just as effectively used by all people anywhere in America. All of the methods advocated by the project are universally sound. Its activities have proved to be a dynamic force in furthering interracial and intergroup understanding. Although the title of the project implies that it is concerned solely with Negroes, its scope has been much wider than this title would indicate. The good work of the project has completely crashed the color line.

CHAMP HAILS PAUL ROBESON IN LETTER TO NEGRO VETERANS

Joe Louis, fresh from knocking out Jersey Joe Walcott, threw blows at the Democrats and Republicans for betraying "my people." Louis' statement was a personal tribute to "my friend" Paul Robeson, and was delivered for him at Uline Arena, Washington, D.C., June 26, by Winston Edwards, national chairman of the United Negro and Allied Veterans.

The occasion was "A Tribute to Negro Veterans" jointly sponsored by UNAVA, and the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church. Paul Robeson sang, as well as the Galbraith Choir, and Miss Alam Montgomery. Louis originally had agreed to appear in person, but the postponement of the championship fight made his appearance impossible. 6-29-48

The full text of his statement follows: 34 New York, N.Y.

A few people in our country say Congress did a good job. In a way they are right. Congress did a good job all right, for a few people but not for me, and my people. Daily Worker

That's why I'm here today, to pay tribute to Paul Robeson, my friend and a great fighter for the Negro people. Because Paul Robeson fights for the things that Congress didn't do for me and my people, I want Paul to know that I stand squarely, both feet in his corner, because he is in the corner of the Negro people.

There are some people who don't like the way Paul Robeson fights for my people. Well, I say to that that Paul is fighting for what all of us want, and that's freedom to be a man. Some of us may not like the way he fights but none of us can afford to stand aside from what the fight is for and what the fight's against.

A lot of Negro GIs I served with rae lying in their graves in France, Germany, and in the Pacific. They stopped bullets and shrapnel to keep America free. A lot of other Negro GIs are dead on American soil, after the war, fighting for the same things that those GIs fought for abroad. All of them gave up their lives so that my people could live in dignity in this America of ours. All of them loved Paull Robeson and were proud of him, because they knew as I know, that he is one of us. Tues. 6-29-48

LOUIS

Paul Robeson led the fight for an anti-lynching bill, an anti-polltax bill, and an FEPC. Congress didn't pass any of these laws, and Congress didn't pass the civil rights program.

Now some people say one party is to blame, others say another party is to blame. I say both parties have forgotten the Negro GIs who gave up their lives to make America a free country for Negroes, Jews, Protestants, Catholics and all other minorities.

ROBESON

Because of what we lost, a few people got a lot of money out of it. I say that 12 states have got Congresss and the government buffaloed. Twelve states South of the Mason Dixon Line. But the other 36 states didn't seem to mind.

That's why I salute Paul Robeson, because he's fighting for Negroes, poor whites, Jews, and all the others who suffer, because we haven't got democracy in America. I'm with him and I'm with you, because I know that if we don't fight for our rights, America won't get to first base as a free country for your children and mine.

I want peace because I know you can't eat guns, I want peace because you can't build a decent home with a rifle. I want peace because you can't be a man if you are looking over your shoulder to another guy whose listening for every word you say so he can put it in a book and then have you called before some board to explain why you want to be free.

So I say again, a salute to Paul Robeson and to all you GIs. We're with you, Paul, in the fight to the end.

Both Guilty

THOUGH fishing for the Negro vote, the actions of the bi-partisans in the Democratic and Republican parties show their contempt for the Negro people. Fri.

President Truman offers a civil rights program for the Negro people—but doesn't lift a finger to get it passed and allows his cabinet members Forrestal and Royall to keep Jimcrow in the army. Daily Worker 6-18-48

Truman says this is the worst Congress since the days of Thaddeus Stevens—forgetting that Thaddeus Stevens was a great American who fought like a tiger in Congress to protect the rights of the newly-freed Negro slaves. New York, N.Y.

Now the GOP spokesman Carrol Reece tries to make hay out of Truman's mockery of this great fighter for Negro rights. Reece boasts that Stevens was a Republican like Herbert Hoover. But Reece cannot make the Negro people forget that the GOP today is up to its eyes in guilty conspiracy with the southern polltax Democrats to kill the anti-lynch bill. He also forgets that Herbert Hoover started the "lily-white" primaries in the GOP in the South. 6-18-48

The more the bi-partisans cynically make their promises to the oft-betrayed Negro people, the clearer it becomes to all that of the political parties only the new party and the Communists are fighting for Negro rights.

Two-Party Way To Freedom

The Record

CHARLESTON—The political situation in South Carolina and the South generally demonstrates that "from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." Our worst enemy could not have directed developments more discreditably for this section. Responsibility rests no more heavily on the political agents of our futility than on those who stood by and let things slide. Charleston, S.C.

It is high time to deepen our perspective. I have been reading some political forecasts for 1952, wondering if there will be any such year in history. It may not take a war, or the passions of war, to wind up the story. Irresponsible meddling can be just as effective. When we start anything these days, we might remember that there may soon be no world in which to complete it. So far as we know, for instance, the atmosphere needed to sustain life is to be found nowhere else in the universe. There isn't very much of it and we may be close to the secret of getting rid of it. Any child can take a watch to pieces.

It isn't good sense to be truculent with destiny. The General Assembly of South Carolina has its place but in a very limited jurisdiction. It can prescribe a few rules of limited adaptation, or it may add to our confusion. That is all. We usually have a good crop of Messiahs, but none of them can add a cubit to our stature or prolong our days by a single hour. This, after all, is not their world. Men who can't swim make poor life-guards. Sat. 7-24-48

There is a truth in Southern civilization—a very precious truth. Southern civilization is of course not the same as "white supremacy." When the white supremocrats learn to talk about "economic supremacy" instead of "white supremacy," the discussion will have some point. Meanwhile, the white supremocrats are making common cause with all the other self-servers, white and Negro, to destroy Southern civilization.

To review the history of this state and of the South is to understand a little about Southern greatness. It was the nature of that greatness that made it important for the industrialists of the East to destroy the South if they could. Men concerned about justice and liberty and human rights looked into the future. They were, therefore, opposed to the encroachments of government. They saw how the tariff imposed slavery without the burden of responsibility. They understood that the real foundation of the country was the character of its citizens. Unlike the political blowflies that succeeded them, they knew that lying and hypocrisy were counterfeit coins that only the untrustworthy would use. They were human and made mistakes and time has been kind to them in softening some of the blemishes. They were overcome and discredited, but at heavy cost to the victors and to the nation, because their insight was sound.

The tariff manacled the South and corrupted the country as a whole. Expediency outranked principle. Statesmen were succeeded by blunderers and spoilsmen who covered their mistakes by taxation. As the cost of living rose, the government moved more widely and deeply into power. Politicians fattened on discord and class division and planned emergency, and when they went the way of all flesh, they left the future under mortgage. Communism breeds on frustration and disillusion and the loss of faith, and Communism was late in coming to this country. Sat.

The attitude of the South during this period of decline has been understandable if not admirable. Appomattox has been accepted as decisive. The South was conquered politically, but spiritually its secession has been complete. Except for playing the role of whipping boy and with the aid of its exhibitionists, at times playing up to the role, its political status has been passive and subordinate for the last 80 years. 7-24-48

The explanation, we are told, has been the preoccupation of the South in the meanwhile with the Negro problem. The South has certainly not been paying that much attention to the Negro problem. The South was left with a poverty problem on its hands of serious proportions. It has since been economically exploited. It has been, however, a political cipher by choice. Now that there are signs that the South is tired of being kicked around, those who want to keep it in its place will not be scrupulous about methods. The Negro made a good red herring once, and he will be used again if possible. It was not the Negro, however, who put the South in a bag.

It is true that the Negro is now being urged to join the mass of political gullibles who want to keep Mr. Truman in office. Mr. Truman has become interested in the Negro for election purposes. Doubtless there are some Negroes who will overlook the fact that his interest became noticeable only after his unfitness for the job of President became painfully obvious. Heretofore, however, the Negro has kept out of politics and been quietly making his own way.

Until he was taught to lean on the phony aid of government, the progress of the Negro in the South was one of the phenomena of his tory. He produced great men, not in the Harlems of America, but in the South. One of them, George Washington Carver, who started from nothing, became one of the outstanding creative scientists of the world. Can anyone who knew him imagine that all the gold buried at Fort Knox would have induced him to help build the Atomic Bomb?

Columbia, S.C.

Every step of the way the Negro has had the cooperation of the Southern white man. Slogans that were useful for herding metropolitan votes have had no meaning here. The Negro has been better off in the South than anywhere else, and he has known it.

The situation in the South has been, of course, far from perfect. Social habits and adjustments have been too static. Static water is stagnant and stagnancy breeds corruption. Both the Negroes and most of the white people in the South have thought of politics as the private game of those who liked it.

The South is realizing that it has penalized both the nation and itself by refusing to accept political responsibility in recent years. It has a special genius for politics. It contributed the greater part of the political structure of the nation. The last great president of this country, from the standpoint of statesmanship, was Woodrow Wilson, a Southerner. The world would have been saved millions of lives and countless woes if the New England assault on his leadership had not been successful. He was defeated by the representatives of special interests because the South had been too long ignored in politics to be heard even in the immediate aftermath of war.

The policy of abnegation has now reached absurdity. The national Democratic party has become only a nexus of local political machines united by the desire to control local offices and nominally supporting a presidential candidate whose election would be a world calamity.

New Poll Reveals Little Progress Being Made By Progressive Party

Thurs. By ELMO ROPER 7-29-48

Measured by the showing of major third party efforts of the past, the Wallace movement, which met in Philadelphia last week end, is not doing very well. The new Progressive party does not show signs of increasing its support among the voters. In fact, the latest results of a survey taken in early July show that recently the popularity of Henry Wallace actually has fallen off a little.

PER CENT OF VOTERS PREFERRING WALLACE

	April 1948 %	June 1948 %	July 1948 %
Total Wallace Voters	6.1	6.3	4.0
By Age Groups
21 to 34	8.7	7.8	4.6
35 to 49	4.8	5.4	4.3
50 and over	4.5	5.4	3.1
By Geographic Area
Northeast	8.6	8.4	5.9
Midwest	4.9	5.6	2.6
South	3.2	3.4	3.8
Far West	9.5	9.2	3.7
By Size of Place
Cities over a million	14.2	13.2	9.3
100,000 to 1,000,000	7.8	6.7	2.0
2,500 to 100,000	3.4	5.0	3.8
Under 2,500 and rural	4.4	4.7	3.1
Veterans	6.9	—	6.4
Union members	12.8	—	6.2

The chief decline in Wallace support has been among those very groups which formerly had seemed to be his most ardent followers. This popularity has fallen off among young people, voters in the Northeast and Far West, voters in the large cities, and among labor union members. If converted into round figures, Wallace's current support, according to this latest survey, ranges from two million to two-and-one-half million votes, based on a total turnout of 50 to 60 million voters.

It must be pointed out, however, that the decline in strength of the Progressive party, as indicated from these results, might be only a temporary dip. The survey was taken between the Democratic and Republican conventions when public attention was focused chiefly on the newly-nominated Republican standard-bearers, Dewey and Warren.

But the fact remains that, to date, the Wallace movement has failed to attract very many more people to its crusade than were sympathetic to it when it began last January.

The latest "Fortune" survey cast some interesting light on why the third party has failed to grow. One of the major planks in the Wallace platform is that there is no substantial difference between the Republican and Democratic parties. The former vice president has stated over and over that the choice between the two old parties is nothing more than between "Tweedledum and Tweedledee."

Yet when "Fortune" asked a cross-section of the Wallace supporters whether or not they thought there would be a difference in the way the Republicans and the Democrats would handle several important issues, they did not seem to go along entirely with their leader's contention:

ISSUES ON WHICH WALLACE SUPPORTERS SEE NO DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MAJOR PARTIES
Marshall Plan
Military Policy
Policy Toward Russia
Palestine
Attitude Toward Minorities

The Record

ISSUES ON WHICH WALLACE SUPPORTERS DO SEE A DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MAJOR PARTIES
Prices and Cost of Living
Labor Legislation
Income Taxes

Columbia, S.C.

According to these results, even those who say they would like to vote for Wallace are convinced that there is a real difference between the Republicans and the Democrats on at least some major issues. And with the special session of Congress which has just convened, it appears likely that the "Tweedledum and Tweedledee" claim of Wallace will not fare any better than it has up to now.

The charge that the major parties are of the same stripe is not the only stand of the third party which has failed to meet with widespread acceptance among Henry Wallace's own followers. The table below indicates general agreement among third party adherents on some of the important issues but also shows substantial departures from the platform of the Progressive party:

SENTIMENT OF WALLACE SUPPORTERS ON SOME MAJOR ISSUES

Thurs. 7-29-48

	For %	Against %	Exp'ss No Opin. %
Universal Military Training	50.2	42.4	7.4
Selective Service	29.6	61.6	8.8
Existing Labor Laws (Taft-Hartley Act)	33.6	50.4	9.6
Price Controls	60.8	27.2	12.0
Freeze of Wages	22.4	61.6	16.0
Limitation of Profits	56.0	29.6	14.4
Palestine Partition	43.2	24.0	32.8

Wallace has based much of his attack on the Truman administration on its alleged tendency toward militarism. Yet a majority of Wallace supporters are in favor of universal military training. Another important plank in the Progressive party program is repeal of the Taft-Hartley law. Yet one-third of the backers of the third party either like the labor laws as they now are or would like to see them made more strict toward labor.

In fairness to the Wallace movement, it must be said that no party—no matter how devoted it claims to be to an ideal—can ever hope to have anywhere near unanimity among its supporters on every stand it takes. And, by and large, people who say they prefer Wallace tend to support his views on foreign and domestic policy.

But as the real differences between the Democrats and the Republicans become more evident in this special session and in the course of the campaign, it may become even more difficult for Henry Wallace to pass off the major parties as ideological twins. In domestic affairs, the Wallace followers tend to support the policies of President Truman and oppose those of the Republicans. And in foreign affairs, as the crisis abroad deepens, all signs among public opinion indicate a great sentiment in favor of strengthening the bi-partisan foreign policy.

These are the tides which the new Progressive party is attempting to buck. To date, the effort has shown less than spectacular results, according to the surveys we have conducted. Unless there is a marked rise in popularity for Henry Wallace in the months ahead, it will be difficult indeed to say that the third party bid in 1948 was a major protest movement, such as Teddy Roosevelt's in 1912 and LaFollette's in 1924.

Two-Party System

Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

Editor Constitution: As a student at Georgia Tech and a resident of Georgia, I have keenly followed the campaign of The Constitution to encourage a two-party political system for the South and particularly for the State of Georgia. Thinking that the enclosed clipping from the Washington Post, Aug. 2, 1948, may be of some use to you in preparing material to further that campaign, I am sending it to you.

Tue. 8-

The clipping describes a new election machinery for the State of Virginia in its party primaries. The conducting of both party primaries at the same time is a simplification that should result in economy in the functioning of the State's election machinery. Two features of the plan seem especially desirable to me: the fact that a single set of election commissioners will canvass the ballots in both primaries and the provision that voters will not be required to certify themselves as to party loyalty. Both these features should help to preserve the secret ballot—a fact which does not always exist in the South today—and the latter would be a protection to those Democrats who wish to assist in the development of an effective Republican Party in the South, but without the danger of being purged from the Democratic Party.

The Atlanta Journal's Poll Of Southern Editors—With Comment

Dewey And Thurmond Put Together Will Defeat Truman In South

Montgomery 10-24-48

34d

The Republican and States' Rights presidential candidates appear to have a strong chance between them of capturing a majority of the Southern states in the November 2 general election, a South-wide pre-election survey by the Atlanta Journal showed Saturday.

Leading newspapermen in key centers participated in the roundup, providing reports from Georgia, Tennessee, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia, Florida, North Carolina, Texas, Kentucky and Arkansas.

No Southern state has deserted the Democratic ranks in 20 years. In the Smith-Hoover campaign of 1928, Florida, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and irginia voted Republican.

The Journal's survey of the present campaign showed sentiment in the various states divided as follows:

TRUMAN: North Carolina, Texas, Kentucky and Arkansas.

DEWEY: Virginia and Florida.

THURMOND: Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina.

DOUBTFUL: Tennessee and Georgia. (There is a strong possibility that Tennessee will vote for Dewey.)

Following are the reports by states:

Alabama

By Grover C. Hall, Jr.

Editor, The Montgomery Advertiser

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 23.—Barring court action, there is no doubt that Alabama's 11 electoral votes will go to Gov. J. Strom Thurmond.

Since President Truman will not be on the Alabama ballot at all, prediction of the Thurmond majority is aimless.

I would say that only a minority of Alabamians actually comprehend why no Truman electors will be on the ballot and a very large element does not yet know that the ballot is minus Truman.

Trickery? No indeed! In the May and June primaries Alabama voters overwhelmingly chose 11 electors who pledged that they would withhold their vote from Mr. Truman. Whereupon the Democratic Rooster was appropriated to the Dixiecrats who said they were the Democratic Party of the state.

The Truman faithful might have subsequently qualified a slate of independent electors, the same as Wallace and the Prohibition Parties, but they didn't. After the qualifying deadline, Gov. Folsom and a few others began protesting. But it was too late. Mr. Folsom wouldn't call a special legislative session to place Mr. Truman on the ballot, but says he will call on the U. S. Supreme Court to force the Thurmond-pledged electors to default and vote for Truman.

Kentucky

By James S. Pope

Managing Editor, The Louisville Courier-Journal

LOUISVILLE, KY., Oct. 23.—Kentucky's 11 electoral votes seem almost certain to go for President Truman, but there is a chance that Gov. Strom Thurmond's Dixiecrats may swing those votes to Gov. Dewey.

Most political observers calculate Mr. Truman's potential margin over Mr. Dewey as not more than 50,000 votes.

Mr. Thurmond's strength in Kentucky seems to be increasing slightly since his visit here. He will get many votes in the cotton-growing southwestern area. If all Thurmond votes are taken from Truman's column, as is probable, then not even the power of Kentucky's Senator Barkley on the Democratic ticket will save the President from a real photo-finish with Dewey.

All candidates are on the Kentucky ballot. And voters seem in a mood to scratch as never before. Odds are still on Mr. Truman, yet Republican Senator John Sherman Cooper is favored to beat Democratic Nominee Virgil Chapman. This means scratching ballots on a scale new to Kentucky, if it works out.

Mississippi

By Hodding Carter

Editor, The Delta Democrat-Times

GREENVILLE, MISS., Oct. 23.—The States' Rights party has Mississippi in the bag. The Thurmond-Wright electors will receive a sizeable majority of the popular vote, and although Dewey will finish in third place he will receive more popular votes than any Republican since the Smith-Hoover campaign.

The electoral candidates of both regular Democrats and Dixiecrats will appear on the ballot, as will those of Gov. Dewey and, surprisingly, Henry Wallace, who has no strength whatsoever. The small Negro vote will be divided between Truman and Dewey.

Although the States' Rights campaign in Mississippi is riding an emotional groundswell, there is much outspoken support for Dewey, particularly among the business, professional and planter groups. An interesting sidelight is a poll taken recently in a junior high school class whose students largely represent the middle and upper income group. Two students voted for Mr. Truman, 11 for Mr. Thurmond and 25 for Mr. Dewey.

South Carolina

By John A. Montgomery

The Columbia State

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 23.—It is a foregone conclusion that South Carolina's eight votes in the electoral college will go to J. Strom Thurmond, governor of this state.

The States' Righters control the political machinery of what often has been termed "the most Democratic state in the Union," and the machine that controls the election is the one that gets the votes.

South Carolina Democrats, in their pre-Philadelphia convention, instructed their delegates to oppose the nomination of President Truman or any other candidate who holds similar views in favor of the so-called "civil rights" legislation.

Since the national Democratic Party as well as the Republican Party, and the Wallace Party to a greater extent, favored federal intervention in Southern traditions, the South Carolina Democratic Party gave its endorsement to Thurmond and Wright while continuing to operate under the Democratic banner in the selection of candidates for Congress and lesser offices.

A minority pro-Thurman movement developed without the support of old-line politicians. But Truman will receive only a scattering of votes outside the ballots of union labor and Negro Democrats, whose bloc votes were insufficient to nominate primary favorites.

There has been no major trend toward Republicanism and Wallace will get even fewer votes than the weak, patronage-constituted GOP organization in the state.

Florida

By Charles F. Hesser

Miami Daily News

MIAMI, FLA., Oct. 23.—For the first on whether the result of balloting in other states left Georgia legislative leaders with any bargaining power.

Georgia's laws are unusual if not unique in requiring a majority vote, rather than a mere plurality, for the choice of presidential electors. If no slate receives at least one more than half the total number of votes cast, the decision is left to members of the General Assembly.

In past years when such opposition as the Democratic ticket might face came only from Republicans, no one paid any attention to this requirement. This year, with five tickets on the ballot and three of them having appreciable state-wide strength, it seems most unlikely that any group of electors will receive a majority vote.

The most recent polls indicate a substantial lead in Georgia for the regular Democratic ticket; but many persons question the validity of these results. They wonder whether the sample contained enough representation for rural voters, who carry great weight in Georgia.

My own personal guess a month ago was that, with a wide-open ballot such as the Legislature has now provided, Thurmond would run first in Georgia, Dewey second, and Truman third. Several members of The Journal staff disagree with that guess; and conditions may have changed since it was made. Many voters who dislike Truman will go along for the sake of party regularity.

However, I still think the Dixiecrat ticket is a major factor in Georgia and stands a good chance of receiving the largest number of votes. Also the Republican vote will be surprisingly large, especially in the cities.

The order in which the three major tickets finish will make little difference, however, if none of them receives a clear majority.

★

Louisiana

By Ken Gormin

New Orleans Times-Picayune

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Oct. 23.—President Truman has been gradually gaining ground in Louisiana, but political observers here predict a plurality for Thurmond and Wright on election day.

The Dixiecratic candidates are expected to poll 39 per cent of the Bayou state's vote to win its 10 electoral votes. President Truman will come in slightly behind Gov. Dewey, observers say, with Dewey drawing 30 per cent of the vote and Truman 28.

Wallace and Taylor are given a chance to pull only about 3 per cent of Louisiana's popular vote.

Both the names of Mr. Truman and Mr. Thurmond will be on the official Louisiana ballot, but Mr. Truman will not be listed as a Democrat. The Democratic state central committee booted the President off its ticket and selected Mr. Thurmond as the official candidate of the Louisiana Democrats. However, Mr. Truman has been assigned the traditional Democratic emblem, the donkey, to be carried on the ballot above his name.

As an interesting sidelight to the controversy, three Louisiana candidates have declined to have their names removed from the Truman-Barkley column. Foremost among these is Russell Long, son of the late Huey P. Long.

Arkansas

By Harry S. Ashmore

Executive Editor, Arkansas Gazette

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Oct. 23.—Every serious candidate for president will be on the ballot in Arkansas—Harry Truman as a regular Democrat endorsed by the State Democratic Convention; Thomas E. Dewey as the candidate of the Republicans; Strom Thurmond as the candidate of the States' Rights Democratic Party; Henry Wallace as the candidate of the Progressive Party, and Norman Thomas as the candidate of the Socialist Party.

The Communist candidate, if there were one, would be barred in Arkansas under our statutes. These statutes were originally invoked by the secretary of state against Mr. Wallace, but a later decision enabled the Progressive electors to get on the ballot without prejudice.

The biggest factor in Arkansas may be the undetermined number of Democrats who will not vote at all. There is a possibility, although I regard it as very remote, that this stay-at-home vote will be large enough to prevent Harry Truman's carrying the state. The likelihood of this is increased by the fact that the local Democratic organization is making no serious campaign on Mr. Truman's behalf. The Dixiecrats, on the other hand, have organized a headquarters and have enlisted the present governor, Ben Laney, as Roosevelt Democrats. Their guess is that these anti-Roosevelt votes will go to Thurmond and the States' Right Party ticket this time and that Dewey will receive no more than 300,000 votes.

Where Republican and Democrats differ in their forecasts of votes for the Dixiecrats—the GOP predicting upwards of 200,000 for the splinter party, and Democrats seeing no more than 100,000 votes at best.

The Henry A. Wallace headed Progressive Party ticket will get no more than 25,000 votes, according to most observers. Perhaps that figure should be revised downward in many opinions.

General forecasts are that Mr. Truman will carry North Carolina by a margin of 150,000 votes, if there is a light vote, and up to 300,000 of there is a heavy vote.

President Truman's recent visit to the state was not necessary to keep the Democrats in the victory column on Nov. 2. He already was assured of that, but his visit is sure to add to his total vote.

The Two-Party System

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

This writer, then living in the North, used to say that the best possible thing that could happen in our American politics would be, sometime, for the "Solid South" to go Republican and the Solid North Democratic in the right proportions for a two-party system of government. But when the phenomena almost happened neither section played fair, both South and North going for Herbert Hoover and North and South for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Now for the first time in 83 years we face political conditions which make it possible for both sections to go two-party without loss of face on either side. Hitherto the South has justified its solidity and won its prestige by its powerful influence in national conventions through the two-thirds rule but now that this advantage is lost and insult added to injury in its rebuff on the civil rights issue at the last convention, the South must find new ways of winning the place in the sun it deserves in the great national political scene. And what better way could it choose than by a gracious return to our great American two-party system of government, which in spite of all "Solid Souths" and "Solid Norths" and no end of blocs and lobbies, has prevailed and routed all efforts to start third parties and will do it again and again?

Two great parties, one liberal-rightist and giving the nod to capitalism, the other radical and leaning toward socialism—these are the right and proper alignments for a two-party system of government. And with some reservations and qualifications, is not this just about the lineup getting into action for the 1948 presidential campaign?

Let the South once for all forget and stifle her old resentful hangovers, however justifiable they may have been, and give her big ballot-box okeh to this natural and admirable coalition and in no time at all it would make a great comeback, not in playing politics for sectional ends but in assuming its full share of responsibility and international leadership.

Homewood. Ala. DAVID WALLACE.

JESSE JONES FINDS A HOME

AUSTIN (NR correspondent)

After 40 years of masquerading as a Democrat, and 14 years of office-holding in a Democratic administration, Jesse Jones has decided to take off the false whiskers. In officially declaring his support for the Republican Party in this election, the mighty Houston financier may be pioneering a new political trail for privileged Southerners. In Texas, under Jones's leadership, the top leaders of big business are following a different course from the one their counterparts are taking in other Southern states. Elsewhere, the well-to-do conservatives are backing the Thurmond-Wright State's Rights Democrats this year, not quite daring a complete break with the traditional one-party system of their fathers. But Jesse Jones was never a timid man. And his boldness appears to be catching, even among timid politicians.

The Dixiecrat movement in Texas is a second-rate affair, basically run by small oil. At the start of this year's Southern revolt, a real big shot headed up the anti-Truman forces in Texas: Palmer Bradley of Houston, attorney for Standard Oil of New Jersey and other major corporations. But neither Bradley nor any of the other powerful big businessmen who led the 1944 revolt against Roosevelt in Texas are now publicly identified with this year's Dixiecrat campaign. Even the conservative daily press, which was the mainstay of the Texas "Regulars" in '44, has gone Republican with Jones.

Disagree On Other Points

Atlanta Daily

Nevertheless

Atlanta, Ga. 5-14-48

NEW YORK—(NNPA)—Three speakers, representing the Democratic, Republican and third parties, agreed in a radio broadcast last Sunday that colored people are tired of political promises but disagreed on nearly every other point.

Brought together by Moderator Ralph Cooper on his "Tenth of a Nation" Sunday series over Station WINS, the speakers also agreed that the colored voter can make wide political gains this year but differed as to how to obtain such gains.

Fri 5-14-48

Emory B. Smith, Washington Attorney, said colored voters should support President Truman because of his civil rights program.

Colden Brown, president of the Central, said the Republican, platform contained all the civil rights points stressed by Mr. Truman and that the Republican party was committed to a civil rights program.

George Murphy, Jr., of Baltimore, an assistant to Henry A. Wallace's campaign manager, scored both major parties and contended that the Wallace third party movement stood for the things which colored people were seeking.

Murphy challenged both Smith and Brown to declare their party's stand on the Mundt Bill which provides for a $10,000 fine, ten years of imprisonment and loss of United States citizenship for those who attempt to establish here a foreign-controlled totalitarian dictatorship.

Brown challenged Murphy for what he termed Wallace's "brush-off" of a colored delegation which went to see him while he was Vice-President concerning the Odell Waller case. He also charged that Mr. Wallace had dismissed colored employees "right and left" while he was Secretary of Agriculture and had not seen that colored farmers received their just due under the AAA program.

Murphy denied the last two charges but said representing the first that colored people could not afford to ignore their future because of one "brush-off."

After the broadcast, Brown predicted that Governor Thomas E. Dewey would be the Republican nominee and that Governor Earl Warren of California would be his running-mate. Murphy forecast an upset next November with Wallace winning.

A Variegated Convention

To the Editor of The News:

I listened to a part of the Henry Wallace convention in Philadelphia. It appeared to be a motley crowd, and in some phases took on the air of an old-time Negro camp meeting with its strains of spirituals, and with which we in the South are familiar. There was evidence, manifest and convincing, of communism in this convention.

Joseph Stalin was, no doubt, highly delighted, and his protege, Henry, really put on a show for Joseph. The convention was variegated in color and race, yet homogeneous in two objectives (a) communism and (b) the bill of civil rights.

The poor Negro has been the football of all parties and the recipient of promises from all parties. He is promised not one pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, but two pots of gold at both ends of the rainbow. The political skies clear, the elected officers assume their places and we hear no more until four years hence, when again glittering and alluring bait is thrown out. The "merry-go-round," with its music and vociferous shouts rending the air, starts all over again. This has been the outstanding quadrennial event since the adoption of the 15th amendment to the Constitution of the United States, March 30, 1870.

God created the races of men—white, yellow, red and black. Each is stamped with distinguishing features, viz.: The white, or Caucasian, with light complexion and regular profile; the yellow, or Mongolian, with almond eyes obliquely set; the red, or Indian, with straight black hair, high cheekbones and straight nose, and the black, or Ethiopian, with ebony complexion and kinky hair. So long as these races move within their own sphere, as nature intended, all is well, but when there is commingling of races and commingling of blood, disaster and degeneracy befall them. The animals of the jungles, the fowls of the air and the fishes of the seas respect the laws of nature; but man, the image of his Maker according to Holy Writ, is the derelict.

Two-Party System Our Only Hope

The Constitution

Dyed-in-the-wool Southern Democrats—those who think it heresy to vote anything but the Democrat ticket—will have a bitter pill to swallow when election-day rolls around in November. The majority of them will either have to vote for a man whom they do not favor or else stay at home in a futile gesture of protest.

We daresay many Southerners who are not so closely wedded to the Democratic Party will vote for Thomas E. Dewey rather than support Mr. Truman with their ballots.

Politically speaking, the South has been humiliated before, but never in recent history has this humiliation been as complete as it is this election year when Southern Democrats are being rewarded for their traditional loyalty to the party by being ignored at the convention and furnished with a candidate which few people in the South are disposed to support for the Presidency.

Conference To Plan Dixiecrat Campaign

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(AP)—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, presidential choice of rebellious Southern Democrats, expects the Dixiecrat campaign plans to b emapped at Atlanta, Saturday.

"Overall plans" will be drafted at a conference scheduled at the 'Henry Grady Hotel at 10 a.m., he said Thursday.

He was not certain who would attend the conference because he said Gov. Fielding L. Wright, of Mississippi, Dixiecrat vice-presidential choice, was making most of the arrangements. He assumed, however, "persons from a number of states" would be present.

Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, a former Southern anti-Truman leader, will not attend the conference, Thurmond said he was informed.

Thurmond planned to take a group of party leaders from South Carolina with him to Atlanta. State Democratic Chairman William P. Baskin is to be one of them, he said.

Dixiecrats Denied Spot On Ballot In Maryland

Baltimore, Oct. 6 (AP)—A Superior Court ruled today that the presidential and vice-presidential candidates for the States' Rights Democratic Party are ineligible for a place on the Maryland ballots.

Judge Joseph Sherbow said that under the current election laws he was obliged to deny the States' Righters' petition for a place oon the ballots.

Who Are These Dixiecrats?

Negro Digest

34

(The following statement was adopted by the Alabama State CIO Political Action Committee Oct. 17.)

The people should know!

They should know who the Dixiecrats are!

Wed 10-20-48

They should know where the Dixiecrats are taking them!

They should know how the Dixiecrats "took over" in Alabama!

Our state Democratic Party machinery is in the hands of people who travel under the guise of Democrats but whose beliefs, sympathies and actions have for the past several years paralleled the Republican Party's beliefs, sympathies and actions on labor, housing, public health and welfare, taxes and prices. These people call themselves "Dixiecrats" or States' Rights Democrats. Actually, they are back-door Republicans!

Chicago, Ill.

The Dixiecrats are running a candidate with the full and complete knowledge that he cannot win the Presidency and that their efforts, by taking votes away from the nominee of the Democratic Party, will thereby contribute to the election of the Republican Party's candidate. They have announced time and time again that they have organized to "stop Truman." That their efforts go to insure the election of Thomas E. Dewey does not seem to worry them. In fact, the charge has been made, and to us it is a valid charge, that the Dixiecrats desire the election of the Republican candidate.

At most, the Dixiecrats are expected to capture the electoral votes of only four states—all in the South—with a total of thirty-eight ballots in the electoral college. This is strength that ordinarily would go to the Democratic Party nominees. This year the Democratic Party nominee is expected to lose to the Dixiecrats, for certain, Alabama, South Carolina and Mississippi, with a total of twenty-eight electoral votes, and possibly Louisiana, with ten votes in the electoral college.

By taking these electoral votes from Truman, the Dixiecrats say they are keeping those states from going Republican. The Dixiecrats are "saving" them from Dewey but "keeping" them from Truman. It seems to us that Dewey's candidacy is strengthened just that much more in the electoral college. That is why we charge that a Dixiecrat vote is a Republican vote!

In giving birth to their "stop Truman" movement, the Dixiecrats shouted "States' Rights instead of civil rights!" But how sincere are their reasons for opposing the President in the face of the fact that the next President of the United States will be either Harry S. Truman or Thomas E. Dewey and that both major parties promise civil rights legislation?

We charge that the Dixiecrats' reasons for opposing President Truman obviously go far beyond the issue of civil rights. We believe the people of the South should know what those reasons are.

Take a look at the leaders of the Dixiecrat movement! Almost without exception, they are high up in the counsel of Big Business and powerful industrial corporations that do business in the South.

The backgrounds of the leaders of the Dixiecrat movement in Alabama are both interesting and revealing as to what some of the motives behind the Dixiecrats' opposition to President Truman might be.

The charge has been made that the big oil companies of America are backing the revolt against the Democratic Party nominee and providing the Dixiecrats with their warchest. What is the basis for this charge? It is based in the controversy over federal versus state ownership of the fabulously rich tideland oil fields that lie off the coasts of our Gulf states and California. The smell of crude oil mingles with the scent of magnolia more than the people realize in this Dixiecrat revolt!

The Republican Party platform of 1948 calls for ownership of these rich, undersea oil fields to be declared in the hands of the states. The Republicans in the last Congress passed a bill that gave ownership of them to the states.

On the other hand, President Truman killed the bill by veto. There is no plank in the Democratic Party platform that calls for state ownership of these oil fields. The Democrats think the best interests of the nation will be served if they are left under federal control.

Our states have been known to be notoriously lenient in making grants to private corporations to exploit the natural resources. Exploitation of natural resources has been easier when those resources have been under state control than when they have been under federal control. (The exception to this was the Teapot Dome oil scandal of the early Twenties, but the use of federal oil fields by private corporations at that time, it must be remembered, took place under the Republican regime of Warren G. Harding.)

Not to be forgotten, producing oil wells tapping these undersea fields under state lease will provide royalties to the states—royalties that state politicians will not have in the public treasury if federal control is maintained.

State governors, including our Southern governors, are behind the Republican-sponsored bill to give the undersea oil fields to the states.

Considering the charge that the oil interests are behind the Dixiecrat revolt—a charge that has been made by many others in the South—what do we find? We discover that the leading spokesman for the Dixiecrats in Alabama, the honorable Gessner T. McCorvey, is legal counsel for two of the country's largest oil companies — Standard Oil Company and Gulf Oil Company. He lists these among his top clients. Mr. McCorvey as chairman of the state Democratic Party Executive Committee was as much responsible as any one man for the Dixiecrat capture of Alabama.

But the oil interests, in our opinion, are not the only special interest groups that are backing the Dixiecrat revolt. We charge that side by side with the oil companies are the corporation interests in America, whose political arm is the Republican Party and whose influence and control reach into the very heart of the Southland to enfold many of the South's most prominent businessmen, lawyers and politicians—men who are supposed to be loyal adherents of the Democratic Party.

Thurmond Denies 'Bolt.'

In Columbia, S. C., Thurmond reiterated that "we are not bolters" from the National Democratic Party.

Sat. 9-4-48

"The bolters," he said, "are those who have betrayed the party's principles."

He declared that "The Democratic Party belongs to the people who go to make it up" and that "it does not belong to the temporary national leadership."

"That leadership," he continued, "has kidnaped the party. The Democrats of the South have repudiated that leadership and are fighting to return the party to its traditional principles.

"These kidnapers talk about running the Democrats of the South out of the party. This is like the tail trying to throw the dog out of the kennel, but it is gratifying to know that at last they feel the heat of our resentment and repudiation."

G.O.P. Chairman Scott's challenge of President Truman on the Communist indorsement issue came in a statement from the Republican National Committee.

He accused the President of trying to "snuff out" Congressional investigations of Communists by "impetuous cries of 'red herring.'" He said he wonders if there was a "working agreement" between Truman and the Communists in 1944. If so, he asked when it was ended.

Scott referred to a statement August 12, 1944, by Eugene Dennis, Communist Party secretary, saying the Roosevelt-Truman ticket was "representative not only of the Democratic Party, but of important and wider sections of the camp of national unity."

Wants Record Kept Straight.

Sat. 9-4-48

Dennis was further quoted as saying that Communists were not to indorse candidates "unless this is done in full agreement with the given candidate and with our collaborators." Scott added:

"If Mr. Truman did, in fact accept or approve such official indorsement of the Communists in the 1944 campaign, he owes it to the American people today to set the record straight."

The Democratic National Committee, in reply, recalled that President Roosevelt had renounced Communist support in a speech October 5, 1944. Roosevelt said then:

"I have never sought, and I do not welcome the support of any person or group committed to communism, or fascism, or any other foreign ideology, which would undermine the American system of Government or the American system of free competitive enterprise and private property."

Dewey Lauds Strike Record.

Elsewhere along the political front today:

The White House disclosed that President Truman will make a rear-platform speech from his special train at Toledo Monday night on his return from five Labor Day speeches in Michigan. The presidential train is scheduled to reach Toledo at 10:27 p.m. Monday and be there 30 minutes.

National campaign headquarters of the States' Rights Democrats claimed 35 electoral votes were "in the bag" for the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, predicted to reporters in Rochester, N. Y., that President Truman would be elected in November.

Governor Roy J. Turner said after a White House visit that Truman will speak in Oklahoma City and other Oklahoma cities late this month during a Western Speaking tour.

Governor Dewey in a Labor Day proclamation called New York State's strike record "second to none," and added: "Where we have had trouble, the sources of it may be traced to tap roots which are fed in Moscow or in Washington or in designs of selfish men ruthlessly pursuing power and health."

Dewey lated jabbed at the Communist-controlled regime in Poland. In an appeal for contributions to a Polish relief fund, he said the Polish people were being subjected to starvation, cold, and disease "under a Red regime."

The bolters of 1928 — among whom were Dixiecrats Horace Wilkinson and Judge Hugh Locke—learned then that they couldn't turn Alabama Republican by direct means. This year the strategy was more subtle. Wilkinson and McCorvey and the rest of that "small but willful group of men" took the Democratic Party emblem for the Dixiecrats, eliminating the Democratic Party nominee from running under the rooster.

Wed 10-20-48

There will be many voters on November 2 who will cast their ballots for the Democratic electors as they have always done to support the nominee of the Democratic Party, not knowing that the electors have arbitrarily pledged themselves to support the Dixiecrat candidate. Others will vote under the rooster because of the threat of retaliation if party regularity is not maintained.

This, we charge, was part of the plan of the McCorvey-Dixon-Wilkinson gang to take Alabama out of the Democratic camp.

Even after they had received assurances from 21 out of the 28 candidates for elector that they would not vote for President Truman, the Dixiecrats still had another hurdle to cross. But on April 1 that last hurdle was easily cleared when the State Supreme Court in an advisory opinion (which was as good as a regular ruling) voided a 1945 statute that held that presidential electors must vote for the nominee of the national party convention. The court unanimously held that the electors were not bound to the party nominees and that they were free agents.

In the parlance of the country's favorite sport, "there went the ball game," in earnest.

Not only were there no pro-Truman electors qualified, but the State Supreme Court, going against time-honored custom and a state law that had been on the books for three years, and even more in another form, ruled that the electors who were qualified were completely free to vote as they pleased.

Even if you had wanted to vote for pro-Truman electors on May 4, Mr. McCorvey, how could you have done it, with a set-up like that having been accomplished?

Just to be sure about it the state Democratic Executive Committee (or at least those committee members who attended the meeting in Montgomery) on April 4 voted to support the candidates for presidential elector who had made the pledge not to vote for Truman. The committee (or those who were present) endorsed by name the 21 candidates for elector who had already signed a pledge to vote against Truman.

Not wanting to trust to chance that some of the seven elector candidates who hadn't signed the pledge would be nominated (actually they were all States' Righters; they just wouldn't sign for various reasons of their own) Mr. McCorvey went to work as State Party chairman and spent state party money to publicize the names of the 21 electors who had signed the pledge.

Of the 11 Democratic electors who were elected on May 4, every one was a pledged signer. Mr. McCorvey said at the time of the "victory" that the people of Alabama had spoken. But of more than 300,000 qualified voters on the state's election rolls, no more than 129,350 voted for the electors. The highest man received that number. In other words, the great "repudiation" of President Truman that Mr. McCorvey boasts about came from less than half of the registered voters. And they cast their ballots in an election that to all intents and purposes had been rigged.

And yet through these processes have the citizens of Alabama been deprived of a free choice of the ballot. They are committed to voting for a candidate they had absolutely nothing to do with picking. This candidate was nominated at the Birmingham "convention" of the Dixiecrats. The people had nothing to do with staging this convention nor sending delegates to it. The delegates named to represent Alabama were picked by Mr. McCorvey and the State Democratic Party Executive Committee (or those members whom Mr. McCorvey could bend to his will).

Wed 10-20-48

We have reviewed here who the Dixiecrats are. We know where they are taking us—straight into the Republican camp to aid Thomas E. Dewey. We know how they captured control of our state party.

We must resolve that this shall never happen again in Alabama.

An attempt must be made to repair the damage to the Democratic Party cause that has already been accomplished. To this end we pledge our cooperation in any legal action to force the electors named in the Democratic primary election on May 4 to support the nominee of the Democratic Party, according to custom and law. We call upon the Governor of Alabama to bring this suit.

We call upon our membership to cast their votes "under the rooster" on November 2. That is the emblem of the Democratic Party in Alabama. It is not the emblem of the Dixiecrat Party. It is our hope that the plans of that small but willful group of men who have taken over our state party machinery can be averted and the state's Democratic electoral votes can go to the Democratic Party nominee, where they belong, rather than to give aid and comfort to the Republican Party candidate.

We call for legislation that will prohibit any such disgraceful perversion of the democrati processes from ever again occuring in our state.

Approved and adopted this 17th day of October, 1948, by delegates to the annual conference of the Alabama State CIO Political Action Committee.

States' Righters Say They Won't Oppose Truman-Elector Plan

The News

Tue 8-17-48

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 17—(AP)—Alabama Democrats loyal to President Truman received assurance last night from the opposing States' Rights Democrats that they would not fight a proposal to place pro-Truman electors on the November ballot.

Birmingham

Gessner T. McCorvey, an elector and state Democratic chairman, was spokesman for the States' Rights group.

McCorvey said they hoped some legal way would be found to let Alabamians vote on the Truman slate. As matters now stand there is no way to vote for President Truman in this state's general election.

State Sen. Joseph N. Langan, of Mobile, elected chairman of the pro-Truman group, has said he will go into court if necessary to get their electors on the ballot.

Tue 8-17-48

McCORVEY ANNOUNCED his group's stand in a letter to Langan. He wrote:

"I wish to assure you that none of us will throw any stumbling blocks in the way of you or anyone else seeking to have a slate of Truman electors placed on the ballot in the general election in November.

"We hope very much that you will succeed in your effort as we would like for you to realize when the votes are cast, as you evidently do not now realize, just what little standing President Truman has among Alabama Democrats."

The party chieftain said the electors pledged to the Thurmond-Wright ticket took their stand, although they feel the question was settled in the May and June Democratic primaries.

Dixiecrats Battle for Texas Electors

Free Press

AUSTIN, Tex. — (AP) — States' Rights Democrats and party members loyal to the national Democratic ticket counted delegates for a finish fight over control of Texas' 23 presidential electors.

The delegates were named in Saturday's turbulent county conventions which saw rival slates set up in Harris (Houston), Dallas (Dallas) and Tarrant (Fort Worth), three counties with heavy voting strength in the state convention. The convention will meet in Fort Worth Sept. 14.

Detroit, Mich

THEIR SUCCESS in the state convention may depend on whether their States' Rights delegations from Harris, Tarrant, Dallas and Harrison are seated by the credentials committee.

An Associated Press survey of convention results shows at least 35 counties clearly pledged to President Truman and Senator Barkley.

Mon. 8-2-48

The same count shows nine counties clearly in the Dixiecrat column, and 11 sending uninstructed delegations.

DIXIECRATS ORGANIZE AT AUGUSTA

Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta, Georgia

Electors Are Named; Major State Political Leaders Shun Meeting

Thur-10-14-48

Five parties today are assured of palces on Georgia's ballot for the November general election.

The Dixiecrats, last to qualify elector candidates for Nov. 2 vote, climaxed a one-day Stats convention yesterday in Augusta by filing a slate of electors with the Secretary of State in Atlanta at 5 p. m., just under the deadline.

Earlier, Henry Wallace was assured of a place on the ballot by the substituting of new electors to replace seven electors who were unwilling, "on principle," to sign anti-Communist affidavits.

The Georgia ballot, which measures three feet long and one and one-half feet wide, will list elector candidates of the Democratic Party, States' Rights Democrats of Georgia, the People's Progressive Party of Georgia and the Prohibition Party.

There also is a possibility that an independent party may attempt to qualify electors by mail postmarked before last night's deadline.

With only one-third of the anticipated 1,000 persons attending, the State Dixiecrat convention in Augusta joined Ed Willingham and Bill Congdon, both of the Augusta Cracker Party, in going through the formalities of placing presidential electors on the ballot.

No State-wide political figures were present. Conspicuously absent were former House Speaker Roy Harris, of Augusta, State Democratic Party leader whose firendship is claimed by the Dixiecrats, and former Rep. Bill Morris, who claimed the State Democratic Party Chairmanship under Acting Gov. Thompson and whose Augusta Chromicle is supporting the Dixiecrats.

Charles Bloch, of Macon, was the only leader in the State Democratic Executive Committee to openly come into the Dixiecratic Party. He accepted a post as elector. He was absent from the convention because of a religious observance.

Rep. Herschel Lovett, who was defeated for State Senate in the Democratic Primary in Laurens County, and Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, of Athens, cousin of Democratic Gov.-Nominate Herman Talmadge, were appointed by Willingham as National Committeeman and National Committeewoman to the States' Rights National Political Party.

Atlanta Ga

In addition to Bloch, Dixiecrat electors named were: Mrs. Talmadge; J. J. Brown, of McDuffie County; Charles Crisp, of Americus, son of the late Speaker of the National House of Representatives; E. B. Register, of Reidsville; J. E. Brooks, of Camilla; M. C. Roop, Chairman of Carroll County Commissioners; Durwood Pye, of Atlanta; Roy Dunn, of Macon; Isaac C. Adams, of Dalton; Ivy L. Echols, of Patterson, and George McFarlin, of Cumming.

The Progressive Party withdrew the following names: Robert E. Hawkes, Phillip J. Lorenz, Jr., Don West, Mrs. Lillie Akin, James Edwards, John W. Summerford, Jr., Archer Torrey and H. C. Anthony.

Its new electors are V. G. Fulmore, Mrs. James L. Barfoot, Mrs. Anita B. Rich, David H. Smith, Annie L. Griswold, Samuel W. Williams and Minnie Pratt.

Electors whose names were not withdrawn are Margaret Marshall, Herman Rich, C. T. Pratt, Edward Krick and Mrs. Maynard Jackson.

Co-Chairmen of the People's Progressive Party of Georgia, Larkin Marshall and C. T. Pratt, issued a statement regarding the new law requiring electors to sign anti-Communist affidavits.

It said that several of the original electors believed signing such an affidavit might be construed as disbelief in the right of labor to organize, social security benefits, the TVA project, farm support and rural electrification.

Meanwhile, Acting Gov. Thompson lashed out at Democratic Party Vice Chairman Charles Bloch who offered his name as a Dixiecrat elector, calling Bloch "turncoat Charlie."

Thompson's blast was in answer to the question: Can a man be a Democrat and Dixiecrat at the same time? Thompson reiterated a campaign statement in which he referred to Bloch as a "turn-coat."

"That name applies more than ever now," Thompson added.

The Acting Governor also singled out Democratic Elliott, of Co-Committeeman Bob Elliott, of Columbus, and Committeewoman Iris Blitch, of Homerville, saying, "They are supposed to be the spokesmen of the Democratic Party in Georgia. Their silence so far is making a noise loud enough so that it echoes will be heard down through the years."

In contrast, Talmadge said he had no comment on the Dixiecrats' meeting. He also had no comment on Bloch's apparent duality of membership.

Jim Peters, of Manchester, said he had been giving the matter considerable thought but had no statement to make at this time.

Contacted at Columbus, Elliott said he had no comment at this time on Thompson's remarks or on membership in the Democrat and the Dixiecrat Parties at the same time. Mrs. Blitch could not be reached at her home yesterday.

The Collaborating Opposition

The Lighthouse & Informer

Columbia, S.C.

Republicans and Dixiecrats ought to get together, (maybe they have) as they take the field to lambast President Truman and the Democratic party. They are making conflicting statements already, as to wit:

The Dixiecratic Charleston News and Courier, Monday, Sept. 20, says: "The Negroes have come into control of the Democratic party. Our authority for that statement is James F. Byrnes."

Sun 9-26-48

Friday, Sept. 17, Mrs. Robert L. Vann, president-treasurer of The Pittsburgh Courier, announcing that her paper was supporting Governor Dewey and the Republicans, made this illuminating and counter statement. "Negroes cannot hope to have their civil rights protected and their interests advanced through the Democratic Party so long as the South is in control of that party." (Her "South", of course, refers to southern whites.)

One of the two is lying, or perhaps more accurately, both.

Students Trained In Violence Tactics

Former Red Testifies Of Planned Sabotage

Journal - Sat 9-11-48

Norfolk - Va.

By NNPA News Service

NEW YORK—William O'Dell Nowell, a colored graduate of Moscow's Lenin School, testified at the closing session of a federal deportation hearing for Alexander Stevens, alias J V. Peters, described by witnesses as the boss of Russian secret police in the United States, that Peters was in charge of 35 American students at that institution for advanced revolutionary training in 1932.

Decision in the case was reserved. Peters is at liberty on $10,000 bail. It will take Ralph Barb, presiding inspector of the immigration naturalization service, about 10 days, to write his opinion.

COMMUNIST RECORD

Nowell, a member of the Communist Party from 1929 to 1936, said students at the Lenin School not only were taught theoretical Marxism-Leninism but were given practical instruction in the care and use of weapons, methods of sabotaging industry, transportation and communications, and the use of barricades for street fighting.

They were taught that international communism's only reason for being was to overthrow the capitalistic system by violent revolution and that the destruction of American capitalism was the No. 1 goal, Nowell testified.

Sat 9-11-48

The witness, who joined the party in Detroit and became secretary of its commission in charge of agitation and propaganda among colored people, pointed at Stevens and said he knew him as "J. V. Peters but not as Alexander Stevens or any of the other names used here."

MOSCOW MEETINGS

Nowell said he saw Peters at the party's national headquarters in New York City before going to the Lenin School in 1931 but did not meet him until Peters took charge of the American students there in 1932. In Moscow he saw Peters at least twice a week for about six weeks, Nowell testified.

Although he refused to take the stand and testify, after the hearing Peters issued a statement admitting that he was a Communist for many years but not saying whether he still is a member of the party.

Deportation proceedings were instituted against him on the ground that he is a subversive alien.

Will the Storm Gather Force?

Atlanta, Ga.

PHILADELPHIA—(This is a dispatch that might be dropped overboard in a bottle to wash up on some of our Southern or Northern shores any time in the weeks or months hence and it may look just like one in any other bottles that might have been fished out of the sea in the last hundred years.)

It is written in a storm, not a storm at sea, but a storm on a convention floor. Angry men and women are shouting, almost snarling, at each other over an issue that still isn't settled and bobs up every so often first to plague, then to break up for a time, one of our great political parties.

It is the great issue of human rights which rises eternally in one form or another.

State placards are bobbing angrily, too, like life preservers clutched frantically by men and women tossed into a raging sea from a sinking ship, and the simile seems apt, for there is something reminiscent of a sinking ship in this episode here.

By the time this dispatch gets to its destination, even by our fast modern communication system, the storm now raging before the eyes of this reporter will have long since passed. The Democratic Party will have adopted its platform, the civil rights plank of which is the cause of this storm. It will have its candidates for President and Vice President in Harry S. Truman and Sen. Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky. Southerners will have hurled their last defiant rebel yell and a corps of workmen who live by their muscles honestly and not by their wits precariously like politicians will have cleaned away the debris, the posters, the campaign buttons, to make the hall ready for another convention which will nominate two more men for President and Vice President in a third party—to reveal again the turmoil and uncertainty of the times in which we live.

This great hall here has seen some history in the last few weeks as perspiring men and women have sat here in the heat under the lights. For the first time, because of television, they have done their work, made their speeches and listened to speeches, boiled up in enthusiasm and anger, lke actors on a Hollywood set—in public view. And that, of itself, is a piece of history.

The Republicans were here first before the Democrats and the Henry Wallace third party comes next. The first and the last of these are not disturbed by the issue that is the cause of this storm here among the Democrats. Republicans settled it for themselves when Abraham Lincoln issued his emancipation proclamation on Jan. 1, 1863, midway of the War Between the States, and therefore they can give it lip service constantly, year after year, without objection. It is accepted, too, by the Henry Wallace party.

But Democrats are still tortured with it because of their Southern wing, even though, as a number of speakers here have pointed out, their party has accomplished much in the last 16 years to break down racial and religious discriminations through the influence of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

But Harry S. Truman went the more politic

Franklin D. Roosevelt one better. He spelled it all out in very specific terms and asked Congress, bluntly, to make it the law of the land. So he raised up for himself the storm that rages about him here.

As we watch, the storm rises and then abates, and all in so short a time.

But the spectacle here is timeless, as timeless as the great fight for human rights. The scene is like something out of a history book, with only the costumes different. It might have been a convention in that troubled decade before the War Between the States when earnest men searched anxiously for compromise on an issue that won't be compromised. The same bitter words were said.

The Whig Party tried to compromise it, and withered away in the process. A new party was born and became strong because it would not compromise it, and that party since has ruled periodically for long stretches and seems now on the verge of returning to power again, though not, of course, only because of that issue.

The Democratic Party finally splintered off into three national conventions in 1860 and was not able to pull itself together for a long time afterward, for this is an issue that tears men apart so they cannot work together in peace.

Again the Southerners talk of another convention of their own—of going down to Birmingham.

Fri 7-16-48

Why don't they go to Montgomery where the Confederate States of America was created? The cycle would be complete.

Terrified Senator Bolts Back To Democrats

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Truman Thursday received a public promise of at least voting support from one of the Southern rebels, Senator A. Willis Robertson (D), Virginia.

"I have been a Democrat all my life and intend to vote the Democratic ticket this Fall" the junior Virginia senator announced in a statement through his office here.

At the same time Robertson made it plain that he "thoroughly disagrees" with Mr. Truman on the issue of civil and states' rights and also opposes the 1948 Democratic platform pledge to repeal the Taft-Hartley Labor Act.

A Negro Boy Turns Left

N.Y. Herald T

Youthbuilders' Director Gives Case History of Walter Wallace, Victim of Communist Exploitation

N.Y. N.Y.

Sun. 9-5-48

To the New York Herald Tribune:

I was much interested in Dorothy Brandon's article in the Herald Tribune on Friday, Aug. 27, 1948, commenting on the activities of a Columbia University student, Walter Wallace, in connection with the meeting of the National Students Association at the University of Wisconsin.

Miss Brandon's article makes it apparent to a discerning reader that young Wallace is a victim of the Communist exploitation which seeks to prey upon those who, like this boy, or like Thomas Patrick O'Dea, who was a primary organizer of the old Young Communist League in Boston, have suffered from imperfections such as racial or religious discrimination, which we Americans have not yet succeeded in eliminating from our way of life.

I can speak with some familiarity of Walter Wallace's case, because as a boy in the public schools of New York he was for a time a member of a Youthbuilder unit. I believe it may be important to list some of the factors which have contributed to his present inability to distinguish between democracy and dictatorship. Perhaps his case may serve as one example of how we are failing both our youth and our country in this critical period of our history by omitting from our educational processes training which will permit young people first, to recognize the face of the enemy, and secondly, to combat it through the use of democratic methods.

Walter LaRay Wallace was the fifth of a family of seven, living in the usual crowded quarters allotted to Negroes. He was descended from Toussaint L'Ouverture and Alexandre Dumas, and his father, who had wanted to become a doctor, was, when well, a mimeograph operator. Walter, who had an I. Q. of somewhere around 160, attended the Speyer School for Gifted Children, which was an experimental project run by the New York City Board of Education in co-operation with Teachers' College of Columbia University. He also attended the High School of Music and Art, which, again, is run for children of high mental endowment and special creative talents.

These facts would indicate that intellect alone and the most superior academic training alone are insufficient to insulate young people from the blandishments of those who lightly promise easy pie in the sky—abolition of the draft, peace and racial equality—tomorrow.

When Walter Wallace asked Youthbuilders in 1946 if we would be willing to finance his trip to the Prague student convention, we agreed, in the hope that seeing some of the rest of the world, not in a geography book but with his own eyes, would broaden his thinking. However, one of the discoveries he made on the trip was that the only places in Europe he was not welcome were places where Americans were in charge. Sun 9-5-48

Moreover, his Youthbuilder training while in high school was abruptly interrupted when the education authorities discontinued the activity in his school at a point where Negro and white students who had been discussing discrimination in relation to the United States Constitution became interested in trying to correct student-imposed patterns of segregation of Negroes in their own school cafeteria.

These are two environmental experiences, which, to any sensitive youngster, would appear to contradict, in practice, the concept of concern for human dignity which civics and American history teach, in theory, as the basis for our form of government.

Like Walter Wallace, too few young Americans have had any chance to learn that such contradictions can be best resolved through a more vigorous use of the democratic process by all of us—that democracy is a discipline which works for us when we work for it.

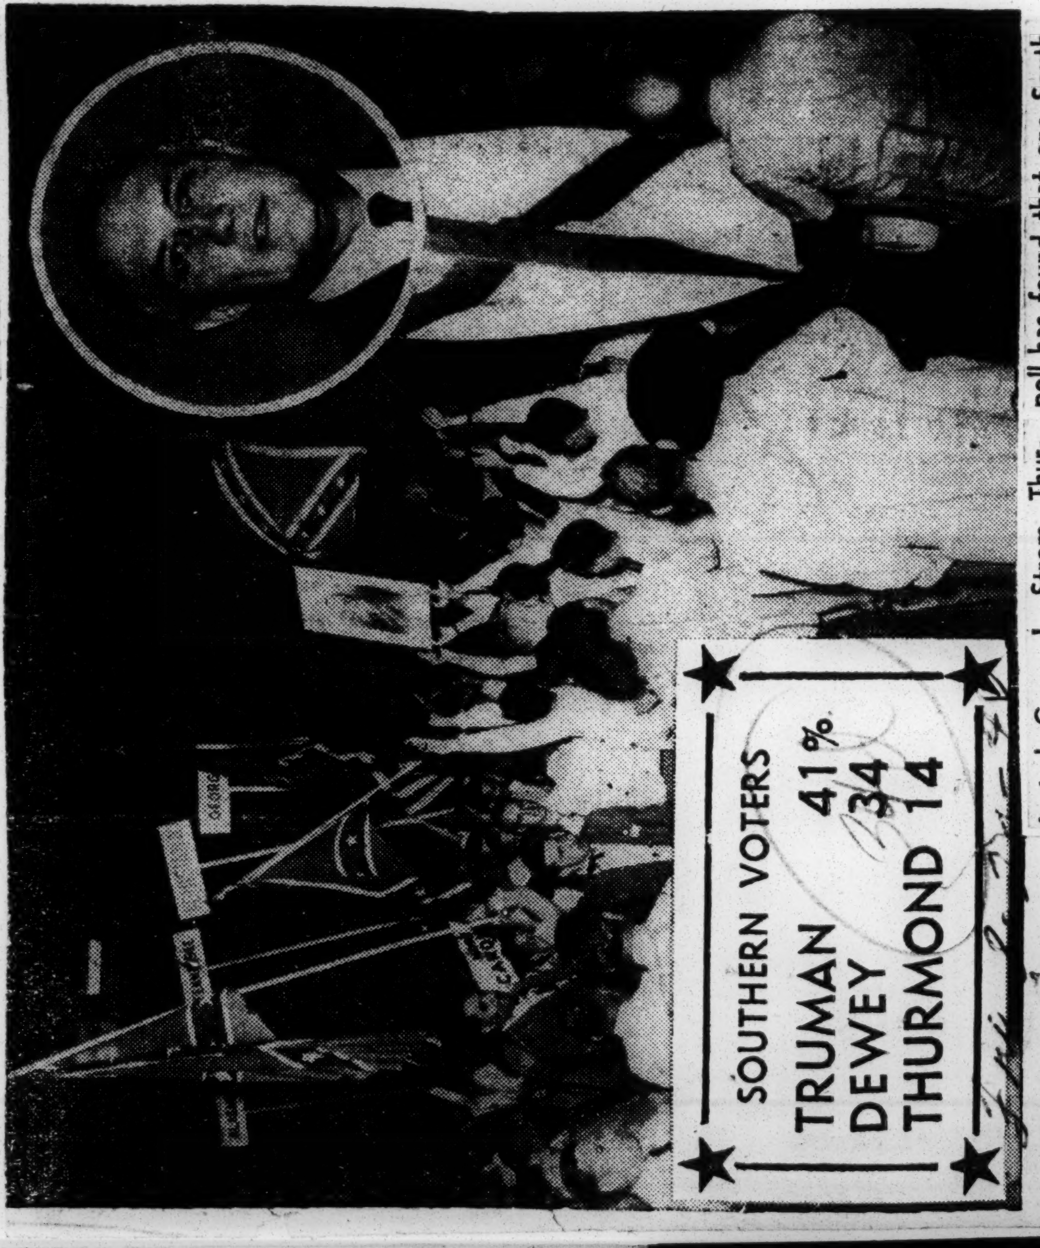
Unlike training in the skills of grammar and arithmetic, training in the skills of democratic action is not considered a fundamental part of the learning process, but is too often relegated to extra-curricular periods and looked upon as a kind of game in which students become "Governor for the day" or organize a "Mock City Council."

It is not, however, fair to place on educators full responsibility for inadequacy in training for positive, active Americanism. The American community, by and large, has not permitted public education to become an experimental field. When former United States Commissioner of Education John Studebaker attempted to prepare material which would give children a more practical understanding of the insidiousness of communism as contrasted with the values of democracy, his effort was halted in mid-air by the characteristic American objection that the issue of communism should be left to the F. B. I. and the State Department!

This—at a time when the growth of such organizations as American Youth for Democracy and the Young Progressives for Wallace underscore the urgent need for devising more realistic methods of teaching American youth to recognize totalitarianism, under whatever mask.

We of Youthbuilders are trying to help children who are obvious prey for Communist propaganda, because of resentment against such injustices as being barred from carrying the American flag in a school assembly because of the color of their skin. We are trying to help some children who have already been victimized by such organizations as American Youth for Democracy. In some cases we have succeeded in providing the democratic balance. One alumnus of Youthbuilder training has taken the lead in fighting communism on the campus of Brooklyn College. Others are in radio work and are turning out programs for church groups dealing with the need for wider application to contemporary life of religious and democratic ethics. Sun 9-5-48

We agree with the statement of Representative F. Edward Hebert, member of the House Un-American Activities Committee from Louisiana, who, after hearing Miss Elizabeth Bentley testify that she was never taught Americanism in school, stated, "We don't devote enough attention to the education of our children. We assume a child knows what Americanism and democracy are, but we never explain what living in a democracy means."



DIXIECRATS' STRENGTH—Enthusiastic convention of States' Rights Democrats nominated Gov. J. Strom Thurmond for President at Birmingham in July. A special Gallup poll has found that one Southern voter in seven favors Thurmond at this time.

WALLACE ATTACKED BY NEGRO LEADER

Times

Accused of 'Muddling' Political Waters by Walter White Before NAACP Meeting

New York N.Y.

By GEORGE STREATOR

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

KANSAS CITY, June 22—Walter F. White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, chided Henry A. Wallace and his supporters today for starting a third party. Addressing the annual meeting of the association, Mr. White said that the Wallace movement would lead to the return of "a more conservative" Congress than the one just ended.

He was aware, he said, of a lot of "beautiful pledges" made by the Republicans in 1944, and called them a yardstick for measuring political parties and candidates. Except for a handful of Negro political leaders "seeking handouts," he said that the time had passed when any party could capture the Negro vote on the basis of its quadrennial platform.

He regretted that the "Wallace crowd" had "muddled" the political waters of the Negro organizations instead of working to reward the good and defeat the bad "friends of the Negro."

Mr. White accused northern Republicans of combining with southern Democrats to defeat legislation for a permanent Federal Employment Practice Committee, and measures to end lynching and the poll tax. He said that Negroes generally would look askance at any platform that the Republicans might now endorse.

He said that the association would "study as never before" the records of each member of the Congress, with an eye on the voting record, especially on housing and the measures advocated to end race segregation in the armed forces.

NYT 6-23-48

The place of the Wallace people in the convention was described as "strong, but not antagonistic," by John Hammond Jr., of New York City, who is a member of the State Political Action Committee. He expressed doubt that there would be "a wholehearted endorsement of President Truman by the association."

Mr. White read a letter from President Truman which said, in part: "This country and its people have one great goal in the conduct of our national affairs: the development of a moral order based on freedom and equality.

"That is the only way in which lasting peace can be brought to the world. That is the only way to fulfill our hopes for a more perfect democracy in our own country.

"Freedom and equality are not easily won. We have much work to do here at home as well as over seas, but the people as a whole are determined to win them. We will never cease trying to win the M and I for will for one will never lose confidence that we can win them."

6-23-48

Roy Wilkins, assistant secretary, told the night session that the association was flatly opposed to racial segregation in all its forms.

He said that many Negroes and Southern whites have been pulling together on large public issues, pointing out that Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, and Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., Democratic leader from Harlem, "both supported the public housing measures."

Association records revealed a membership of about 580,000. Because of "a financial crisis," the asmsociation moved to wipe out $1 memebrships, the source of most of the organization finances. A resolution to place membership at a $2 minimum was proposed by the executive secretary, who said that "for too many years the Negro has paid for what he wanted and begged for what he needs."

NAACP Lashes GOP on Equality

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 23 (UP)—Negroes were urged to continue fighting for equal rights by political means at national levels.

Roy Wilkins, assistant secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, attacked bitterly the Republicans, "some Decocrats," and Jim Crowism in his keynote address at the NAACP's 39th annual conference.

Wilkins said he could not talk with restraint on segregation. But, he added, "you know the story: discrimination, cruelty, gross unfairness, humiliation, beatings, shootings, slander and plain murder."

He praised President Truman for his "courage" in handling the civil rights report, but lashed Republicans for their failure, despite two years of control of Congress to pass "an anti-lynching bill, an anti-poll tax bill, or a fair employment practice bill"—all pledged in the GOP 1944 platform.

Understanding the Negro Question

By Eugene Gordon

THE Draft Resolution by the National Committee for the National Convention says: "The intensified attacks upon the Negro people demonstrate clearly the growth of imperialist reaction and national oppression in the United States. The Negro people are experiencing the most extreme, the most brutal, manifestation of the growing fascist danger, especially in the South. The cynical demagogy of Truman's Rights Committee Report and the GOP's election promises stand exposed by the refusal of the Truman administration and the Republican-controlled Congress to fight for anti-polltax, anti-lynching and FEPC legislation, as well as by the callous refusal of the President, as Commander-in-Chief, to abolish Jimcrow in the armed forces. Hence the crucial and decisive importance of the national liberation struggles of the Negro people for the American people as a whole and for the democratic forces everywhere."

Daily Worker

New York

7-28-48

The sickening stench of racist propaganda, engendering mistrust, suspicion, hatred and action against Negroes throughout the United States, has its inspirational origin in the miasmic swamps of exploitation and oppression in the Black Belt South. The source of infection will remain until the swamps have been drained and cleared and the Black Belt reclaimed for the people who call it their home.

We sometimes mistakenly presume that our membership on the whole understands the Communist Party program of struggle for Negro rights. We all should know that program, as outlined in the resolution "On the Question of Negro Rights and Self-Determination" (December, 1946); but our central task with reference to that question remains to show our membership that the Negro people in the Black Belt are a nation according to scientific, Marxist definition.

Daily Worker

New York

OUR EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT has the responsibility, in brief, of showing our membership: (1) by what processes the Negroes of the Black Belt are developing full nationhood; (2) how they themselves have already expressed, in various ways (and are continuing to express), their desire to be a people; (3) how the slogan of the right of self-determination should be raised; (4) why the concept of a Black Belt nation and the Negroes' fight for full economic, political and social rights as citizens of the United States are NOT contradictory.

Wed 7-28-4

Our educational department, I feel sure, will see the need of clarifying these (and other) issues among our membership and will immediately begin doing so.

We Communists consider the struggle for Negro rights an essential part of the struggle for peace as against war, and for democracy as against fascism, for the following practical reasons. The Communist Party's guiding principle on the national question must be to draw together the proletarians, as well as the semi-proletarians, of the various nationalities for the purpose of waging a joint struggle to defeat the landlords and the bourgeoisie. The Negro people, owing to their economic, social and political position as a doubly exploited and doubly oppressed people, and, because they are a struggling mass of approximately 10 percent of the population, are one of the most potent factors in the general struggle for a lasting peace through a people's democracy toward socialism.

Daily Worker

As the "Resolution on the Question of Negro Rights and Self-Determination" declares: "In recognizing the struggle for equal rights in the South as a movement toward nationhood, the Communist Party supplies new power to the Negro liberation movement and also advances the perspective of full freedom for the Negro people." That resolution adds: "This understanding, growing out of a constant fight for Negro rights, strengthens white and Negro solidarity, based firmly on working class unity, and provides the program of permanent alliance between the Negro and the white masses."

New York N.Y.

Wed 7-28-48

We Communists consider the struggle for Negro rights essential, finally, because "Labor in the white skin can never be free so long as labor in the black skin is branded."

OUR STRUGGLE for the democratic rights of the Negro people, inside and outside the Black Belt, helps the Black Belt realize the fact of its nationhood. That is important, because it stimulates the desire of the majority there to fight for its right to govern itself.

Anti-people, and especially anti-Negro, reaction, cannot be defeated as a whole, nor can the "backward and diseased conditions of the South" be cured and the struggle for Negro rights be won, unless we carry on at the same time a fight for basic land reforms in the Deep South. If we show the people of the Black Belt that their right to vote and to hold office goes hand in hand with their right to own the land they have lived on for 300 years, we shall bring black and white sharecroppers and farmhands, as well as Black Belt urban workers, into that broad labor-progressive coalition we need to destroy fascism.

It seems to me that linking together our efforts to build a Third Party movement and our struggle for Negro rights will set us on the highway toward a widely-embracing people's coalition and a popular front government. Election of a Third Party candidate this year would thrust us into headlong contact with war-breeding monopolies. Four Third-Party years of bitter struggle against these enemies would convince most of the people of the United States that return to the jackass and elephant era was unthinkable. They would have nowhere to go thereafter but forward, and forward would be toward a people's front government and the highroad to socialism.

Daily Worker

New York, N.Y.

The masses of white and of black workers and poor farmers and farmhands in the South would enthusiastically support the Third Party movement if they saw that it was a movement leading toward land for the land-hungry. The brutally repressive and exploitative conditions imposed by United States imperialism on the people if the Black Belt place the Negro majority and the white minority there in a position, objectively, strikingly similar to that of the Jewish majority and the Arab minority in Palestine before the partition. This similarity is not lost upon these people, and they can be shown how to draw the right conclusions.

WE MUST OURSELVES, however, master the Marxist theory of struggle on behalf of oppressed nations and national minorities. We shall master this theory, of course, in struggle—that is, in practice—itself. We shall lead the Negro outside the Black Belt in all the fights in which he engages as a national minority and as a worker. We shall lead in smashing the fascist myth of the right of white supremacy; and we shall make this phase of our struggle easier both by improving the contents of Party literature (including that excellent pamphlet Theory and Practice of the Communist Party) already written on the Negro question and by writing additional literature.

Wed 7-28-48

If we Communists do these things we shall inevitably destroy all traces of the white-superiority myth in our ranks; we shall prevent the Negro falling under the influence of Negro "leaders" of reaction; and we shall reclaim the Black Belt for the people who love it as their homeland.

DOTHAN PAPER PAPER 'INFURIATED'

THE Dothan, Alabama, Eagle, indignant at the civil rights plank in the Democratic platform and infuriated by rejection of a states rights plank, has announced its support of Dewey and Warren.

Whatever its motives, the Eagle is unwittingly doing a great service to the Southern Negro. A real two party system in the South will magnify many times the political power of the Southern Negro, and, by splitting the white vote, give the Negro vote the potential balance of power in many state and local elections.

This is probably the last thing on earth that newspapers like the Eagle desire. But if they are successful in their crusade, they will materially help the South to get rid of its cheap demagogues and thereby help to make the South a decent place and a much more intelligent region.

'THE EAGLE'S OPINION'

The Eagle in an editorial announcing its new political stand winds up in this bombastic and inaccurate fashion:

"And though Democratic office-holders of Alabama will in the coming general election strive mightily to herd voters back into the Democratic party with lusty rebel yells and mighty waving of the bloody shirt, this newspaper will not again be pilloried by Democrats of the stripe of Walter White and Harry Truman. This time, come hell or high water, we're supporting the Republicans—Governor Dewey and Warren."

For the record this commentator wants to inform the editor of the Dothan Eagle that he is neither a Democrat or a Republican. He abandoned party labels as being insignificant many years ago, just as have most other Negroes. On the issue of definitive action against lynching, disfranchisement, segregation, job and educational inequality, he is delighted to be bracketed with President Truman.

MAY BE 2-PARTY SECTION

But this commentator is pleased, entirely from racial reasons which would increase the independence and power of the Southern Negro vote, that the South may become a two party section even though its motives may be as unworthy as are those of the editor of the Dothan Eagle. When the times comes that two reasonably well matched political parties vie for public support in the South, then the ranting demagogues who have made the South and America ridiculous will tend to disappear. That will make life better for all concerned.

Election Unit Can Rule, N. C. Attorney Contends

Columbia Record

Fri 8-20-48

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 20.—(AP)—Attorney General Harry McMullan argued today that the state board of elections has legal authority to make "reasonable" rules in carrying out its duty of enforcing the election laws.

The argument was made to Judge W. C. Harris in Wake Superior Court as the States Rights Democrats sought to have the court order the state board of elections place its candidates on the general election ballot.

Raymond Maxwell, election board secretary, was called to testify that he had received petitions bearing names of 12,514 persons certified as registered voters since the States Righters' petitions were returned to be checked by county elections boards. Petitions bearing more than 18,000 names were presented the board originally put the petition was turned down because they had not been checked.

McMullan argued that under the law, it is the duty of the elections board to make regulations for the formation of new parties applicable to all groups alike.

He also argued, in upholding the elections board rule that the petion signers must not have voted in primaries this year, that the law does not intend voters to have the right to participate in the nomination of two sets of candidates for the same election.

The States Rights Democrats are trying to get places on the ballot for its candidates—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for president and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi for vice president.

The elections board on Aug. 3 denied the party recognition after ruling that it had failed to comply with requirements of law and rules and regulations of the board.

State law requires that to obtain recognition, a new party must present petitions signed by 10,000 qualified voters at least 90 days before the general election. Regulations adopted by the board last March 20 require that the signers be registered voters who did not vote in this year's primaries and that the petitions be checked by county elections boards before presentation so that the eligibility of petitioners can be certified.

The States' Righters had presented petitions bearing more than 18,000 names. They had not been checked.

The party's action contends that its petitions met requirements of the law and that the board is not empowered to adopt the regulations under which recognition was withheld.

The state will answer, according to Attorney General Harry McMullan, that the board's rules and regulations are "reasonable and necessary" and that it does have legal authority to adopt them.

Strange Epistle

Atlanta, Ga.

Mon. 6-28-48

Editor Constitution: Just received a letter of six closely writen pages sent out by one signing his name B. E. Christian, with nothing to show any definite address.

It begins with a tirade against Russia and Communism which may be true. I don't know about that, but he comes on down and says that New York has been in the hands of "Communists" for 15 years and Georgia for five years. How he rants about Gene giving his life fighting for white supremacy. I wonder if there is a person in the world that has got little enough sense to think that "white supremacy" has ever been in the least danger?

This guy even misquotes Scripture to carry on his arguments by claiming the word "chaff" means Negro. (Such silly, crazy, ridiculous stuff.)

The way he links up Henry Wallace, Ellis Arnall, M. E. Thompson, E. D. Rivers and drags them up and down the rough road he has filled up with boulders is one more terrible sight to behold.

I don't think that any one with sense enough to know how to read will be fool enough to fall for such stuff, surely.

MIAMI, Fla.—Mrs. Merritt W. Wallace of Augusta, Ga., formerly of Chicago, thrilled the hearts of Floridians last week, in the magic city of Miami, where she spoke on several occasions for the Republican party.

Mrs. Wallace and her husband Merritt W. Wallace, prominent business and fraternal leader of Augusta, and also the Rev. and Mrs. G. L. Gaines of Augusta, attended the conference of the National Progressive Voters League at the Mt. Zion Baptist church, Feb. 15 to 18.

There were delegates and representatives from at least eleven of the southern states. Mrs. Wallace is to be remembered as Beatrice Tartt, who worked for three and half years as am employee of the department of public welfare as an appointee of Gov. Dwight H. Green.

She is well known among leaders of the Republican party and has established herself among voters of both Illinois and Missouri.

Mrs. Wallace has worked in many of the counties of Georgia, encouraging Negroes to register and vote. She hopes to help elect a Republican president this year.

While in Miami, she spoke on the same platform with the Elks' Grand Exalted Ruler, J. Finley Wilson, and also the National Republican Committeeman from the State of Florida.

Voice Of The People

A Man Without A Party

To the Editor of The News:

I am 78 years of age, born and reared in North Alabama, a life-long national Jeffersonian Democrat. I have voted in every national election since I was 21 years old. But the demagogues of Alabama have deprived me of the privilege of voting for the leader of the true Democratic Party in November. I am a man without a party in Alabama.

I was in the Birmingham Auditorium the day the Dixiecrats were born. It was jammed full of people. All looked as if they were cultured and well informed on the political issues. The speakers were educated and seemed to be qualified to lead the audience on to a high level of political decency, but all of them made misleading statements and it was obvious that their motive was to get the audience confused and to arouse race hatred.

Ex-Gov. Dixon seemed to have had most of the audience believing that if Truman was elected he would put Negro teachers in all white schools in proportion to population. They did not seem to realize that we have a House and Senate, and that it is a move to split the South and let the Republicans in. If they get control, there will be some laws passed that will be detrimental to the South.

But, why so many parties and agitators? For centuries Europe, Asia and Africa have had and still have many political parties. All had leaders, all claimed to represent the best interest of all the people. They have kept the people so confused and demoralized that it always ends—for a short time—in bloody war, and renewed in the next generation. It seems that we are traveling the same road at a rapid gait. The present conditions in France, Italy, Colombia and Guatemala gives us a picture of what our own country may be in the next generation if we continue to be led by those who are seeking to undermine our confidence as to what democracy and Christianity really means.

We have too many parties. We need two strong parties nearly equally divided in each of the 48 states, especially in seven Southern states. A one-party system in a state or nation becomes corrupt, tyrannical, and has the scent of atheism and communism. All Democrats should be true to the party, especially in states were they can vote for the party. In Alabamayou are denied that privilege. I for one and for the first time in life will vote a Republican ticket, and so will many Southern Democrats. J. RICE HORTON.

With only brown October to go, the stream of the 1948 campaign is steadily uncoiling in a manner which, all who have only as much as a stepladder to look down from may, behold and appreciate. The true division of our political thinking resolves out of the confusion of party names. We are approaching a discernible left and right in the United States, and this is in the direction of simple honesty.

It is plain how that on the left lie the Democratic Party, the Progressives and the Socialitists; on the right the Republican Party and the Dixiecrats. The demarcation is sharpest, of course, on the line of purely domestic concerns. The foreign policy overlap of the major parties smudges the picture at the top, leaving only the Progressives in distinct opposition. What is new and perhaps most significant in the 1948 scene is the emergence of the Democratic Party, with its fringes shorn away, as the largest homogeneous political organization in the land. The Republican Party, on the other hand, has become the catch-all party, with a temporary gain in numbers inevitably ~~temporary~~ offset, for the long pull, by the necessity of compromise--and of outright hypocrisy--that the coalition role imposes.

GOOD OLD TIDELANDS OIL

There no longer is any room for the make believe that the GOP and the Dixiecrats are not one sentimental family, that the Dixiecrats are merely Democrats who happen this year to be fellow-travelling with the Republican Party because of a shared dislike for Harry Truman personally. Most of the Dixiecrats voted Republican in '36, '40 and '44. Their newspaper support in the South comes from that part of the press which never could hide its resentment of the New Deal. Their financial support comes from the same industrial interests whose home offices in the East invest heavily--and regularly--in the Republican campaigns.

It is confessional and revelatory that in badgering Mr. Truman to debate his civil rights program the Dixiecrat presidential candidate J. Strom Thurmond never forgets to include an invitation to the President to discuss his veto of the Tidelands Oil Bill which, though its connection with white supremacy is not immediately visible, seeks to open the nation's offshore natural resources to the exploitation of the great oil companies.

REECE VYING WITH DIXIECRATS

It is an equally compelling evidence of the close political collaboration of the Republicans and the Southern Tories when on the other side of the street we find the former Republican National Chairman B. Carroll Reece, until just the other day the party's voluble spokesman and now Republican nominee for the U.S. Senate in Tennessee eagerly vying with Dixiecrat orators in extolling "states rights" and in denouncing FEPC, anti-lynch and poll tax reforms--all pledged nevertheless in the platform of his party and championed, at least for the record, no less by Mr. Dewey than by Mr. Truman.

The Republicans are aware, even if some prejudice-blinded Southerners are not, that a Dixiecrat vote is a Republican vote. Later on they will discover that their two-faced play on prejudice is bringing into their ranks a far more indigestible minority than the Democratic Party had in the elements that have broken off after Henry Wallace. For, though even the Progressives note that the Democratic platform blankets their own, with the exception of foreigh- relations, and there really is no irremediable incompatibility between their group and the Democratic fold, the Republicans hardly can hope to get along far with their Southern fellow travellers whose racial feelings are being coddled for the sake of the oil companies and the power trusts.

SENSIBLE DIVISION

The pilots of our new airliners at 20,000 feet probably can see the political separation in progress better than the earthbound. But among the rest of us those, from whom the movement of events is not entirely hidden by the parade of party names must espy--with gratification--the growing realignment of the electorate according to philosophical, instead of party, loyalties. For such a division makes sense, and gives added leverage to the popular choice.

CLAIMS PDP SPLIT

Going further, the newspaper said: "The Wallace third party movement threatens to split the South Carolina Progressive Democratic Party, currently trying to gain legal status in the white Democratic Party".

Atlanta Daily World

The newspaper then quoted Chairman McCray as saying that Wallace supporters would press for alliance between his group and PDP at the next executive meeting, adding that some South Carolina Negroes have been impressed by campaign literature sent them by the third party group.

STATES' RIGHTERS TO CARRY FIGHT ALL OVER SOUTH

Southern Press Critical of Revold, Laney Goes Home, Other~~s~~ Leaders Are Wary

The Herald Tribune

by David McConnell

Mon 7-19-48

New York City

Birmingham, Ala., July 18__Anti-Truman Democrats planned today to march their "white supremacy" banner through every state of the South to rally traditionally Democratic party voters behind their "states' rights" candidates for President and Vice-President.

With a cushion of twenty Mississippi and Alabama Presidential electoral votes assured, Governor J. Strom Thurman of South Carolina, states' rights Presidential aspirant, said he will launch a speaking campaign through the South to win support fro the revolt against President Truman's nomination by the Democrats.

From the convention yesterday which nominated Governor Thurmond, with Governor Fielding Wright of Mississippi as the Vice-Presidential candidate, the states' righters said their campaign will go into the back yard of President Truman in Missouri and the home territory of the Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate, Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky.

Mon 7-19-48

Bitterness against the President and his strong civil rights program smoldered under a hot Southern sun today as some cracks appeared in what the states' rights group hope can be made a solid-South revolt against the party they have backed since Civil War days.

Governor Ben Laney of Arkansas, one of the organizers of the anti-Truman revolt, took a second look at the rebel bolters and returned to Little Rock after announcing that whatever is done must be done through and by the official Democratic organization in each state. Governor Laney announced and then withdrew his candidacy for the Democratic Presidential nomination at the national convention in Philadelphia last week.

The Herald Tribune

540

In a prepared statement yesterday he warned the South against "hasty action" and asserted that the South's immediate concern should be to defeat the President's proposed civil rights legislation. The Governor remained at the Tutwiler Hotel here yesterday rather than appear at the convention held in the municipal auditorium.

Mon 7-19-48

With Governor Laney, reportedly casting an eye on the 1950 Senatorial race in his state, going back to the "party regulars," the states' righters also were receiving little editorial support in Southern newspapers today.

"The Birmingham Age-Herald" said that it agrees with many Southern leaders that they "must exemplify their conception of the demands of reasonable party loyalty" by sticking to the Truman banner.

From Tennessee, "The Memphis Commercial Appeal" said the revolt must be "regarded with far more interest and respect than if it had jumped up over night in the heat of sudden anger." But the paper held out little hope for a first-rate Southern revolt.

Refers to "Irony of Split"

In a discussion of the Democratic National Convention, "The Atlanta Journal" thought it "pitiful irony" that the party should be split "by an issue (civil rights) which would easily have been adjusted."

Mon 7-19-48

The Thurmond-Wright ticket got another jolt when Southern leaders such as Edward H. Crump, of Memphis, and the Virginia organization of Senator Harry F. Byrd showed no interest in the revolt. Mayor James Pleasants of Memphis, the Crump emissary at a states' rights meeting May 10 in Jackson, Miss., did not show up for the session yesterday.

Undaunted, the states' righters contend that their job between now and Oct. 1, when a ratifying convention is scheduled to be held in Birmingham, will be to fight for grass-roots support behind Governor Thurmond and Governor Wright. Should the movement falter, it is understood the two Governors may use the October meeting to lead their faction back into the party fold.

Gerald L. K. Smith, national director of the Christian National Crusade, announced today he had atetnded the convention as a delegate from Oklahoma. He promised to urge his organization of "three million" to support the "states' rights principle in every state."

"Our followers believe that the Negro and Jew are exerting too much control in American politics," Mr. Smith asserted. He promised to enlist the support of Governor Earl Long of Louisiana for Governors Thurmond and Wright. He said the "New York Jews are the ones who are manipulating Truman and Dewey in an effort to exploit in their favor the Negro vote."

Mon 7-19-48

Made up principally of Southern Democrats who opposed the late President Roosevelt's New Deal, the states'-righters also have many a defeated office holder within their ranks. Among them are Alfalfa Bill Murray, former Governor of Oklahoma, and Sam Houston Jones, defeated in the recent Louisiana gubernatorial race by Governor Long.

A state-by-state check shows that Governors Thurmond and Wright start their campaign with the solid backing of Mississippi's nine Presidential electors and Alabama's eleven. Democrats in both states elected members of the Electorial College pledged against President Truman.

Louisiana's ten votes are uncommitted but will follow the dictates of Governor Long, while the states'-rights ticket may pick up four of Florida's eight votes, perhaps all. Four are pledged to oppose the President while the others are reported on the fence.

Arkansas Seen for Truman

With Governor Laney's action it is expected the nine Arkansas votes will stick with President Truman, as wil lthe twelve votes of Tennessee despite Mr. Crump's announced dislike of the Administration. Both factions in Georgia Democratic circles, Governor M. E. Thompson and Herman Talmadge oppose a bolt.

Mon 7-19-48

Governor Thurmond expects to get South Carolina's eight electoral ballots despite an outbreak of the traditional fight between upland and lowland Democrats in the state.

The new ticket admits it will have tough sledding in North Carolina, with fourteen votes; Virginia, eleven; Oklahoma, ten; Kentucky, fifteen, and Missouri, eleven.

A second look at yesterday's convention and a check of registrations showed only Alabama and Mississippi attended with substantial delegations and office holders. With some exceptions, other states were represented by out-of-town visitors, the curious and scores of college students who injected most of the tumult into the meeting.

Florida had three electors present and Louisiana one. Texas sent several of the delegates who attended the Democratic National Convention, but with Senator Tom Connally and Representative Sam Rayburn, minority leader of the House of Representatives, opposing a bolt, the state was reported standing firm behind the President.

Arkansas and Tennessee had one delegate each from the national convention present, but the Tennessee representative is reported to have refused to sit in his state's section.

"NEGRO VICE-PRESIDENT BY 1960"—McWILLIAMS

340

CHICAGO.—"A Negro will be vice president of the United States in the next twelve years," predicts sociologist and best-selling author Carey McWilliams in April Negro Digest and adds that "other Negroes will be in the cabinet and on the supreme court bench."

Weekly Review

Sat 3-6-48

"Since Negroes have the balance of political power in a close election," the Negro Digest article declares, "it is not far-fetched to assert that a Negro with important labor connections will be occupying the office of vice-president in 1960."

Chicago Ill

Virgin Islands Governor William Hastie, Charles Houston and Loren Miller are the lawyers named by McWilliams as definite supreme court prospects. He rules out the possibility of a Negro holding the cabinet post of Army, Navy Commerce, Interior or State at first, but sees appointment soon in either Labor or as Postmaster General, or some new cabinet post.

"There will, of course, be quite a number of Negroes in Congress," McWilliams continues. "And at the state and local levels, there will be numerous Negro legislators, mayors judges, sheriffs, constables, and so forth.

"In short," he concludes, "I am very optimistic about the future political prospects for the Negro.

States Righters Set Off Racial Merry-Go-Round

Columbia Record

Thur 8-5-48

The States Rights Democratic ticket of Thurmond and Wright continues to gather steam—in the South.

The Alabama Democratic party has pledged its 11 electoral votes to the States Rights candidates and Alabama Democrats when they cast their ballots will be voting for Thurmond and Wright whether they know it or not.

Mississippi's Democratic party added nine more electoral votes Tuesday when its reconvened convention made Thurmond and Wright the party's nominees for the presidency and vice presidency. Mississippi's Democrats when they support the party ticket will be voting States Rights also.

And one of Florida's Democratic electors has announced his support of the Thurmond-Wright ticket. Three others are against Truman. Florida, of course, may vote Republican instead.

South Carolina's Democratic electors will also probably be pledged to the States Righters. Either the convention can be reconvened to pledge the party to the Thurmond-Wright ticket or the state executive committe, empowered to name the electors, may instruct them to vote for the States Rights candidates.

In North Carolina the States Rights Democrats have been denied a place on the state ballot. They did not have time to have their petition checked by the county election boards. So they are planning an appeal to the North Carolina courts. Already there are three parties in North Carolina—the Democratic party, the Republican party and the Progressive party, which spent $3,000 to get the names on its petition checked as the board of elections required. And if the States Righters also get on the ticket there will be four parties—the Republicans and three others splitting the normal Democratic vote. In this case the Republicans might win in North Carolina.

The States Rights party may get on the ballot in Louisiana, although it will not have the support of the regular Democratic in that state. It may get on the ballot in Texas where it has the support of a minority of the regular Democratic organization. What the result will be in Georgia will probably depend upon the outcome of the Georgia gubernatorial race. Georgia's party leaders have been very cagey about making commitments in advance of the primary.

But even so the State Righters will not affect the result of the election. They cannot unless they could hope to divert support from Dewey as well as Truman. And all they are doing is getting Southern—i. e. normally Democratic—votes. And they are egging the Democratic organization on to further efforts to offset these losses by new endeavors to capture the Northern Negro vote. It was announced Wednesday that the Democratic party was abolishing racial segregation in its headquarters staff and appointing a Negro assistant to the party chairman. There will be no racial discrimination in hiring stenographers and other employes. It is the party's only and forlorn hope of capturing some of the so-called "crucial" states.

The Republicans, who do not need to go to such lengths to seek the Negro vote, a fair portion of which will come to them any how—the Negroes also know that this is a Republican year—are still maintaining a separate Negro division.

The States Rights Democrats and the Negroes are really helping each other. Every time the Dixiecrats get another Southern electoral vote the Negroes get a new concession from the national Democratic party or the President. And every new concession granted the Negroes pumps more life into the States Rights party. It is a merry-go-round.

To New Power

The Columbia Record

"O Liberty, how many crimes are committed in thy name!"

Thur 8-5-48

Columbia, S.C.

Crimes done in liberty's name are equalled, surely, by one in the name of historical analogy. Because the Thirteen Colonies were able to make themselves into one nation, we are told, history proves the nations of the world can make themselves into one world. It doesn't follow, of course. The colonies could become a nation because there was a menace from other nations. There would be no other nations in a world organization. There are many additional decisive differences. The current favorite historical analogy is to say that because the split in the Democratic party in 1860 prevented a moderate like Stephen A. Douglas from winning the presidency and was followed by the War Between the States, we have argument against the split in this wholly different day and circumstance.

Truman is no Stephen A. Douglas. And the South's failure to support him is not what is going to defeat him, even if he were. Tom Dewey is no Abe Lincoln. Two political parties, Republican and Democratic, are playing politics with Southern misery on the race question. They will continue to do so, in more and more radical degree, with more and more suffering for the South, unless these states stand apart from each now and declare themselves as worth cajollery and concession as any other minority in America, including the Negro one. The Southern break this time is leading not to session and a Lost Cause but to a new place and power for this part of the country. It is no "Irrepressible Conflict." It is a Rose Bowl South out to win national honors, and able to do so if its team will be a team, not a lot of mutually low-rating trifle-snappers.

If historical analogy must be found, it is not in the Democratic split of 1860 but in the call of Calhoun in 1849 for a conference of Southern Senators and Congressmen. He begged Southern leaders to hold the Southern situation above party allegiance, predicted a tragic era for the South if the North was permitted to have its majority way. His fellow Southerners were not convinced. And were fearful for their party regularity. Only a minority would sign the manifesto Calhoun drew up. A political stand which might have saved the subsequent stand at arms was denied.

Thur 8-5-48

Isn't that very much the situation today, even though no resort to arms, let us hope, pray and believe, is in prospect? The South is being called to take a stand against the Northern majority, Democratic and Republican. If we do so now, and make our power felt, intolerable things proposed against us may be withheld. If we do not do so, if our politicians, concerned for their political hides now as in 1849, hold back, the intolerable things are going to be attempted, imposed or with results none of us can contemplate with less than a sense of tragedy for the South and the country.

Publisher Hudson, of The Montgomery Advertiser, may need to clarify his announcement of support for the Alabama Democratic nominees. He means he will support Thurmond and Wright, the announced choices of the regularly nominated Democratic electors in Alabama. But Editor Marion Gaines, in The Pensacola Journal, misunderstanding, hails the announcement as an item in a trend back to the Truman-Barkley ticket in the South.

Thur 8-5-48

Elements of the national Negro press are being fairer to the Southern view represented in the Thurmond-Wright move than some of the South's home periodicals are. The Negro Digest, widely distributed and well financed publication in Chicago, solicits and periodically prints articles by this writer, with never the least editing or objection. I write exactly what I write in this daily column. Editor Johnson doesn't pretent to agree with a single word I write, but he believes the Southern white view should be made known fairly to his people.

Dixie Democrats Threaten Purge

[illegible]

(The Associated Press)

Washington, Aug. 1.—Southern Democrats are considering a little reorganization of their own in the House when the new Congress convenes next January.

Thur 8-5-48

The victims of the projected party "purge" may be Democrats from north of the Mason and Dixon line—the so-called Truman and New Deal wing of the party.

Up in arms over the Truman Democrats' advocacy of civil rights legislation which led some Southerners to bolt the Democratic national convention, the Dixiecrats believe next January will afford an excellent opportunity to reorganize for party control.

They are confident they will be in the majority among House Democrats at that time. Regardless of what happens in the national elections, Southern Democrats figure they are certain to be re-elected in November.

It could be a different story for Northern Democrats when the votes are counted.

"There will be some changes made in January," a leading Southerner told a reporter. "It's certain that there will be more Southern than Northern Democrats in the House. Then is when we will move in and take over the party, for if the Democrats lose the White House, party control will be lodged in Congress, and that means in the Dixiecrats."

Some Southerners are urging that in such a case, Northern Democrats who have been clamoring for civil rights legislation should be deprived of choice committee assignments.

"It would only be fair," one of them said. "There was some talk around here not too long ago that the Northern Democrats would punish us Southerners next year. The shoe is on the other foot now and we will be on top to do any punishing that is in order."

Christian Party Chairman Asks Vote Law Death

The Constitution

Frank Lowson, State Chairman of the Constitutional Christian Party of Georgia, yesterday called on Acting Gov. Thompson and Gov.-Nominate Herman Talmadge to repeal in its entirety the law requiring independent candidates to get signatures of five percent of the registered voters before they are eligible to run in the general election.

Wed 7-29-48

"Anything short of complete repeal should be most unmercifully condemned by the whole people who want fair play for all," Lowson said in a letter to both Thompson and Talmadge.

He pointed out that in many Georgia counties thousands of voters are registered but only a few hundred actually vote, making it necessary for an independent candidate to get more names on his qualifying petition than are necessary to assure his election.

Atlanta Ga.

Lowson said he made his appeal "on behalf of all Independents and of the Prohibition and Republican Parties as well as the Constitutional Christian Party."

Grange Supports State's Rights

The early draft of resolutions demanded strong local control particularly on problems relating to farming, education, health programs, waterway development, flood control and soil saving. Fears were expressed that a "strong central government would destroy democracy.

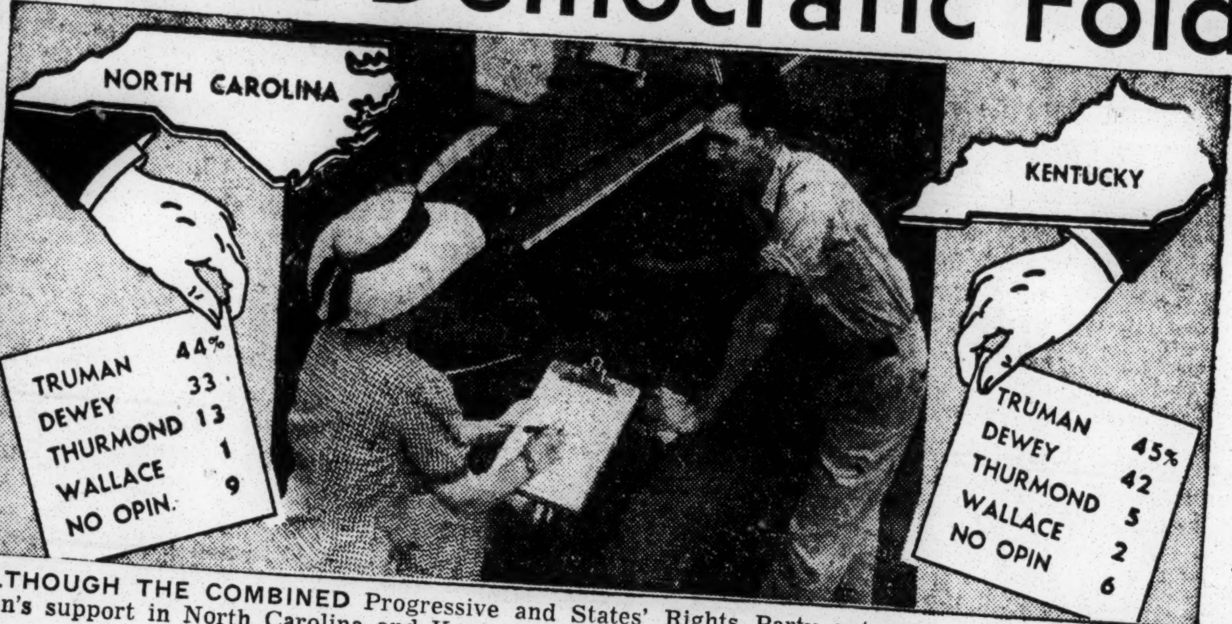
North Carolina, Kentucky Are In Democratic Fold



ALTHOUGH THE COMBINED Progressive and States' Rights Party votes cut into President Truman's support in North Carolina and Kentucky, a Gallup Poll shows him leading in both states today.

Truman Weathers Thurmond Strength

Inroads of the insurgent Dixiecrats on the regular Democratic vote in North Carolina and Kentucky are today not large enough to take those states out of the Truman-Barkley column.

In contrast to South Carolina, where the States' Rights Party holds a substantial lead, only 5 per cent of Kentucky voters and 13 per cent of North Carolina voters today say they will vote for J. Strom Thurmond, South Carolina governor and States' Rights Party nominee for president.

While Kentucky today gives a popular vote advantage to the Democratic ticket, the lead over Dewey is slim compared to 1944. The poll reported today was taken before last week's visit by President Truman to Kentucky, home state of his running mate, Sen. Alben W. Barkley.

* * *

THE ELECTION in Kentucky holds more than ordinary interest for political observers because of the importance of the senatorial race there to the Republican control of the Senate. Today's survey would indicate that the Republican candidate, Sen. John S. Cooper, is not going to be helped substantially by the fact that Dewey heads the national GOP slate.

President Truman's lead in North Carolina also is materially below that customarily given a Democratic candidate, primarily because of Gov. Thurmond's following. As of the moment Gov. Dewey is supported by about one out of every three North Carolina voters, which is roughly the strength he showed there four years ago against Roosevelt.

INTERVIEWERS IN both states asked a representative cross-section of voters this question:

"If the presidential election were held TODAY for whom would you vote—for Dewey, for Truman, for Wallace or for Thurmond?"

Truman	45%
Dewey	42
Thurmond	5
Wallace	2

NORTH CAROLINA

WHILE NEITHER of these states, politically speaking, is considered part of the "Deep South," they have seldom wandered out of the Democratic column. Both went Republican when Alfred E. Smith was the Democratic candidate in 1928 and Kentucky also went Republican in 1924.

The News

In each of Roosevelt's four elections Kentucky gave him better than 54 per cent of its major party vote. However, Republican candidates for Congress in 1946 were successful in getting 53 per cent of the major party votes cast that year. North Carolina's vote for Roosevelt never fell below 67 per cent.

Previous polls showing presidential standings in Southern states have revealed Gov. Thurmond leading in South Carolina, and President Truman far ahead in Texas.

Farm Vs. Big-City

ANALYSIS OF THE latest polls on presidential preferences reveal that the large difference between the political sentiment expressed by farm and the big-city vote has been greatly reduced.

During the Roosevelt term of office a wide variation developed. Farmers shifted sharply away from the Democrats between 1940 and 1944, while voters in large urban centers continued to vote overwhelmingly Democratic.

Today, political forces are working in the opposite direction. Now it is the metropolitan areas, as a whole, that reveal a strong defection from the Democratic Party, while rural areas remain more or less stable. Thus the gap between the two is closing.

But in the nation's largest cities the Democrats would today probably still hold an advantage over the Dewey-Warren ticket if it were not for the strength of Henry Wallace in those centers.

10-3-48

Dewey Holds Lead

THESE TRENDS COME to light upon studying the Institute's latest national figures which showed Gov. Dewey in the lead with 46½ per cent of the popular vote; Truman, 39 per cent; Wallace, 3½ per cent; Thurmond, 2 per cent, and with 9 per cent of voters still undecided.

When the national vote with "no opinion" eliminated is broken down by city size, this is the resulting picture:

Roosevelt's Power

Birmingham Ala

A COMPELLING demonstration of the drawing power which Franklin D. Roosevelt held over big city voters can be seen in the voting record of the 91 cities that in 1940 had a population of more than 100,000 people.

Sun

In none of his four elections did Roosevelt receive less than 60 per cent of the votes cast in these 91 cities with a total population of 37,000,000. In 1936 the Democratic percentage of the major party vote in these cities reached 69.5 per cent.

In the last election 83 of these cities went Democratic and eight went Republican. Largest of the Republican cities was Cincinnati and the only one on the Eastern Seaboard captured by the GOP was Yonkers, N. Y.

New York Turnout

TOTAL FIGURES on voter registration in New York City, which closed Saturday, will provide an excellent indication of what the turnout of voters will be in November throughout the whole country. Since 1932 the national turnout in November has always been between 12 and 17 times greater than the New York City registration in October.

A "normal" turnout in November would be approximately 58,000,000. But if the New York registration falls off, as it did during the first few days, as compared to 1944, or if it finishes up with a less than normal gain, the 58,000,000 figure for the nation would be too high an estimate. A full analysis of the New York registration and a new estimate of national turnout will be issued by the American Institute of Public Opinion as soon as the registration totals are known.

A-Wearying Of Horace C. Wilkinson

EDITOR, THE ADVERTISER—Decent self-respecting and intelligent people of Alabama are growing weary of the shocking and abusive language chosen by Horace C. Wilkinson in his personal attacks upon the President of the United States and those who exercise their constitutional right to disagree with his distorted opinions.

Established custom and decorum, not alarming stage. His apparent bitterness over the failure of his Dixiecrat coup has tended to increase, rather than diminish since the election is more than three weeks past.

In spite of the fact that this is not the first time that he has bolted the party which has befriended him in the past, Wilkinson lashes out with the venom of a serpent against those who seek to unify the party in Alabama. It is obvious that he wants to further his plan to completely destroy the party which has received the plaudits of the vast majority of the American people.

The Presidential Choice

The News

Sun 10-17-48

B'ham, Ala.

34

The News-Age-Herald wishes it could achieve high expectations from this presidential campaign. It would like to be able to present its views and hopes with deep assurance and enthusiasm. It cannot do these things. It has some strong convictions in this connection and it has reached some conclusions, as citizens must do. But they do not make for an enthusiastic choice, without reservations or misgivings. In these circumstances, we conceive it as our duty to present a frank discussion of the situation as we see it.

* * *

Generally, these newspapers have held—and still hold—that the Democratic Party has been closer to the people, more aware of their interests and of the country's problems, more enlightened and resolute in its attack on those problems, than the Republican Party. Its domestic aims and efforts for the most part have been more progressive, however unrealistic and ill-conceived some of its undertakings. It has given much more assurance of an effective, creative national policy in world affairs. Many grave matters confront the nation. They cannot be successfully dealt with in a complacent, turn-backward spirit. They call for positive, forward-looking action. The Democratic Party, broadly speaking, tends to be more responsive to the country's needs.

It is, however, a seriously divided party. Its conflicting elements sharply curtail its capacity for good government. Its leadership is diverse and, in certain aspects, far from reassuring. President Truman has decided weaknesses. He lacks magnetic appeal. He has made more important mistakes than are consistent with high confidence in him. He seriously lacks consistency and capacity to get things done. His civil rights proposals, of especial concern to the South, are unwise and dangerous. His attacks on his opposition have been too indiscriminate to be as impressive as they would be if expressed in more moderate, reasonable terms. But he does have some excellent qualities—particularly courage and devotion to fulfilling his responsibilities and serving the country according to his best lights.

This inevitably makes for a mixed appraisal of him. But it is not only his personal capacities that are at issue. Deeper than that phase of the contest is the question of the general philosophy and spirit and effectiveness of government which is to prevail in the next four years. The shortcomings in the total Democratic case are, of course, to be weighed against the also mixed prospects that would be presented by any other choice.

Moreover, the maintenance of a strong national Democratic Party is extremely important, for all the weaknesses in the party as it now stands. Ours is basically a two-party system. That system has functioned much better than the multi-party systems of many European countries. It should be preserved. It is in danger of deterioration. A permanent splintering of the national Democratic Party could make for critical peril to that whole system. A Southern regional Democratic Party offers no promise of achieving national leadership and strength. A reunited Democratic Party, renewed in vision and high purpose, is still needed in the service of the progressive convictions and aspirations of our people. For that reason fidelity to the party still seems a sound, hopeful course.

* * *

These papers recognize the benefits that can come from changes in national party control at intervals. The Democrats have been in power for 16 years. That is a long time. Their record in many respects is highly admirable. But they are also vulnerable in not a few particulars. Favored by the natural desire that eventually comes for change, the Republicans are obviously in a very strong position for victory. It would seem that, taking advantage of that desire, profiting from lessons of the past, from the mistakes of the Democrats, from the development of new leadership, the Republicans might offer a strongly appealing leadership and program to the country—even a high hope.

The News

We would be glad to react that way, particularly in view of the current Democratic confusion and weakness and the virtual certainty of a Republican victory. But we cannot. Mr. Dewey also fails to inspire high hope. He has many good qualities. But we doubt that he offers an alternative sufficiently promising to justify this paper in changing its allegiance to the Democratic Party. We doubt that he would have the qualities needed for strong, inspiring leadership when he encounters the great complexities facing the nation and the world and the conflicting elements within his own party.

We see little evidence of a clear, unified, creative Republican program of domestic action. We have misgivings as to whether a Republican administration would assure a consistent policy of international cooperation for peace and progress. These papers therefore are not now drawn away from their usual position of greater hope in the Democratic Party as a whole than in the Republican Party as a whole.

We would not seek to belittle Mr. Dewey, nor to minimize his good qualities. His administration, in some respects, probably would be unusually efficient. But we have doubts that it would be equal to the vision, the demand for decisive, broad-scale and lofty action, which the coming years will require. We see little to indicate a strong revival of insight and popular sympathy in the Republican Party as now constituted and led.

* * *

Of course Henry Wallace is a confused, deluded, and in some ways dangerous man, despite whatever good impulses he and some of his followers may have. His movement is being used by Communist forces. Fortunately, the great majority of our people recognize this party for what it is and it will be overwhelmingly rejected. It is therefore no immediate threat, though vigilance and resolution may be needed in years to come to offset its influence and neutralize its activities.

* * *

Now, then, we come to the "States' Rights" Democratic movement. It is not going anywhere. Even if the election should be so close as to be thrown into the House of Representatives, it is inconceivable that the result would be the choice of Mr. Thurmond for president.

This movement grows out of no truly representative process, though it does express certain sentiments widely held in some Southern states, including Alabama. It offers no positive program to the nation. We see no prospect of it achieving national leadership. In so far as its championship of states' rights—which are held dear by Americans generally—clearly suggests anything definite, it seems to involve an overemphasis on these rights and an underemphasis on the necessity for national unity and action.

Its attitude on the racial problem, well taken in respect to opposition to the president's civil rights proposals, is nevertheless largely negative, giving no promise of the kind of initiative, spirit and progress urgently needed to assure constructive action for greater justice and opportunity here in the South.

Some of the emphases and arguments advanced in its name increase racial tension and danger and retard continued advance in these human relations.

Many sincere, intelligent and well-meaning people will support the candidates of this group. But their votes will not produce anything concrete and helpful. Some of the leaders of the movement are narrow, self-seeking and backward in their major motivations. No such merely regional and negative movement, in our opinion, can rise to power in national affairs.

* * *

So, this paper finds itself still looking with its major, long-run hope toward a reinvigorated, reinspired and reunited Democratic Party. Such renewal will not be made manifest in this election. But the result could make for that end, provided the party does not fall into actual disintegration. We consequently believe a real contribution to the nation can be made by continued support of the party.

If Alabamians had a chance to express that conviction, we believe they would be well justified in doing so, even though the Democratic Party's chances this year are slight. But a deeply regrettable situation will prevent any such voting. In our predicament, it will not be possible to cast an effective vote for Mr. Truman, the president of the United States and the nominee of one of our two major parties. That is very bad.

While in the Democratic primaries a strong showing of sentiment was registered against Mr. Truman's nomination and election, there was no clear-cut expression favoring elimination of the right of voters to support the candidate of the national Democratic Party. We believe the great majority of Alabamians, including many in the States' Rights group, now deplore that development. Responsibility for it is mixed. But it will lie heavily for years against whoever contributed decisively to the making of such a state of things. Alabama apparently will be the only state in which voters will face such an indefensible limitation on their choice.

* * *

In this deplorable situation, these papers do not feel disposed to urge any particular course upon Alabama voters. Our preference, all things considered, for support of the national Democratic Party, cannot be given effect in this state. The problem confronts the consciences of individual citizens.

We cannot conceal our lack of satisfaction in the choice before the nation, our profound regret over the Alabama mix-up and our concern for the future. Nevertheless, we have a sturdy continuing faith in our country, its government and, above all, its people.

We believe that in a reviving perspective, a resurgence of fundamental unity, the nation can surmount whatever problems and stresses it faces. However the election results, the government will stand, the people will find their way. They have far more to unite than to divide them—and the opportunity for progress and, above all, peace and cooperation among ourselves and throughout the world, will remain—and continue the highest challenge to us all.

One-Party Systen

Atlanta Ga

WASHINGTON—The current breakaway marks the beginning of the end of the one-par cally since War Between the States Reconstruc United States Senator from the far South: "Th under the one-party structure when it compel Mr. Truman's civil rights faux pas set the wh

The motive of the one-party system was "white supremacy" and from that standpoint its effectiveness certainly is on the wane. In varying degree, Negroes now are voting in all Southern States, and in half of them—Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Texas and Arkansas—there is very little obstacle to Negro voting that does not apply equally to white citizens. Georgia and Florida are approaching that status and in South Carolina, until recently the most restrictive State of all, the system for exclusion of Negroes politically appears to have cracked wide open—35,000 of them voted for the first time in a Democratic primary last August.

The three States in which Negroes still are mostly disfranchised are Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana, but even in those the last-ditch white supremacy advocates are woefully lamenting that the "good old days" are almost gone.

The most prophetic manifestation in the South right now may be the fact that the recently enfranchised Negroes almost all are for President Truman. On that account there is a clearly discernible tendency of whites not only to turn to either Dewey or Thurmond this year but to consider the possible necessity of banding together to offset concentrations of Negro voting in future.

Wed 10-27-48

But this change in status of the Negro is by no means the only factor working toward dissolution of the one-party system. Beginning before World War I there has occurred a great shift in Southern population. Large numbers of Negroes moved North to take industrial jobs that previously had gone to immigrants. And latterly there has been a great influx—of white population coming into Southern States—notably, Texas, Florida and North Carolina—from the North.

Reduction in number of Negroes, proportionate to whites, has lessened fear of Negro domination. And the Northerners coming into the South are accustomed to the two-party system and many of them are Republicans.

Most important of all, perhaps, economic conditions in the South have greatly improved. In place of an excess of Negro labor, there is a pressing demand for workers, Negro or white. Negroes have gravitated from farm to city, with a consequent greatly increased wage scale. By radio, moving pictures and other means, Southern people are being knit much more closely with other sections of the country.

Talking to editors of a score of leading newspapers of the South, I did not find one who was not disgusted with the working of the one-party system and doing his level best to get rid of it.

This desire to smash the one-party system is one of the main reasons why a majority of big-city newspapers in the South are supporting Gov. Dewey.

Wed 10-27-48

In common with most other Southern elements, these newspapermen are bitterly resentful of President Truman's proposal to exert Federal compulsion to end racial segregation and other discriminations against Negroes, as practiced in the South.

But Southern editors also dislike the Dixiecrat movement, which The Atlanta Constitution characterizes as "a dead-end street . . . as harmful to the American two-party system as the Wallace third party."

The Dixiecrats, says The Constitution, should "adjourn as a fourth party of vanity and ambition and say: 'We want to defeat Harry Truman. Therefore we will support Thomas E. Dewey.' . . . Let us protect ourselves and the nation with the two-party system. Don't throw away our vote. Make it count."

The one-party system may not die easily. It probably will be shaken off in some States before others, but its end is on the way.

Dixiecrat Party's Defeat Predicted; Future Uncertain

OXFORD, Miss.—Tacitly admitting that he and other Mississippi Congressmen who lined up with the Dixiecrats have cut off the nose to spite the face, Rep. Jamie L. Whitten told the Oxford Rotary Club that he and several other Mississippi Congressmen are now concerned as to their status in the next Congress.

Predicting a GOP victory because of the split the Dixiecrats have caused in Democratic ranks, he said the South could expect further crippling attacks by a Republican administration upon TVA, REA and cotton support programs which have enabled Mississippi and other Dixie States to get on their feet.

Whitten, who represents Mississippi's Second Congressional District, added: "Those same Northern Democrats with whom we have fallen out over the civil rights program are those who have helped us pass farm legislation and other bills beneficial to the South."

JOINED WALKOUTS

Sat. 9-25-48

As a delegate to the Democratic national convention, Whitten was one of the walk-out crowd when the body approved the strong civil rights plank. In his address Tuesday he mildly criticised the Dixiecrats on one hand and to relieve his dilemma, praised them on the other.

He asserted that while he had disagreed from the start with the approach made by Dixiecrat leaders, believing that independent electors would have been a better method, he said he thought the publicity and discussion about the South's revolt in opposition to the civil rights program has been beneficial and won the section new friends.

Sat. 9-25-48

DIXIECRATS CAN'T WIN

The Mississippi Congressman said, in his opinion, there is no chance of the Presidential election being thrown into the House of Representatives with the possibility of electing a Southerner President, which is the claimed principal objective of the Dixiecrat crowd.

He said that the Democratic candidate (President Truman) and the Dixiecrat candidate both will get too few electoral votes for that.

Whitten said the split in the Democratic party, with the revolt of the Dixiecrat element which he chose to follow, will lead to the election of a Republican President and Congress.

The State Committee has named electors for the Democratic ticket. They are persons who will cast the electoral votes for Harry S. Truman if he carries Georgia.

No fair-minded person can do other than applaud this action as honorable and proper. If the people of Georgia vote the Democratic ticket, then the nominee should get the votes. We had never believed that the committee would do otherwise. It is against Truman, but it is a committee of good citizens who have said from the beginning the people were the ones to decide—not a committee.

Georgia emerges from the controversy with an enhanced reputation. We call to the attention of the State and the Nation it was a Talmadge committee which acted with this political integrity. In Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina, where the local politicians jump up and sit down and open their mouths after the fashion of Mr. Bergen's famous dummies, McCarthy and Snerd, when certain influences in Texas and the East pull the strings, the fascist technique of a committee of men deciding what the people could and could not do with their ballots, was followed.

Georgia's political leaders are not owned by absentee landlords and absentee interests. Despite their hard fight against Harry S. Truman and their continuing fight against his program, they are, in the best American tradition, leaving it up to the people.

Georgia needs a two-party system.

A breakdown of that system will bring ruin to our institutions. The party of Dixiecrats, which has bolted the party and which will run its candidates as a fourth party, will be on the ballot as "State's Rights Party." Be not fooled by that.

Tues 10-5-48

The Wallaceites will be on the ballot as the "Progressive Party." Be not deceived by that.

If the people of Georgia want to defeat Truman let them vote Republican.

Let us not go off into the blind alley of splinter parties, third or fourth.

GOP And Demo Croakers Hurling Slurs; More Talk Of Party Revolt In Dixie Heard

Republican bushwhackers, aided and abetted by Democratic bitter-enders, are steadily stepping up their propaganda campaign against President Truman.

One of this column's operatives, who has just fled Southward from the bitter cold, tells me of the latest jibe at Truman going the rounds of money-changing temples in the austere East.

DIFFERENCE—You are asked if you know in what way George Washington, Roosevelt and President Truman differed. Thur 2-5-48

"Washington could not tell a lie."

"Roosevelt could not tell the truth." And—

"President Truman can't tell the difference!"

WASH OUT YOUR MOUTH—Bascom Timmons, Washington's adopted Texan and cat fancier extraordinary, passes along this yarn about Democrats and Republicans:

Charlie Brewton, secretary to Sen. Lister Hill and one of the best-liked aids on Capitol Hill among both Democrats and Republicans, has a 3-year-old daughter who listens in on a lot of political discussions. Thur 2-5-48

Recently a friend—secretary to a Republican senator—visited the Brewton home. During the conversation he mentioned Republican activities in his office.

"Uh, uh," piped up the Brewton prodigy, "you said 'Republican'! You're going to have your mouth washed out with soap."

THE GOPer was flabbergasted. "Is that what you teach kids down South?" The News

BOILING MAD—Democrats in Alabama and the rest of the South are hot under the collar about President Truman's civil rights program. Birmingham, Ala

This program, aimed at getting the heavy Negro vote in such key population centers as Chicago, New York, Pittsburgh and Detroit, calls for an end to segregation in transportation. Thur 2-5-48

Southerners are boiling mad over this as well as the proposals to outlaw state poll tax, enact a federal anti-lynching law and establish a permanent fair employment practice setup.

NEGRO BALANCE OF POWER — Southern governors, who huddle at Tallahassee Friday, have been urged to force a party showdown on the racial issue. The News 2-5-48

Southern Democrats have been threatening to secede from the party since Roosevelt started churning this issue in his successful bids for the important Negro vote in key states. Southern Democrats squirmed and howled. But the president and other party chieftains chuckled to themselves. They knew the Southern Democrats would fall docilely in line, which they did. Birmingham, Ala

Repors from Washington indicated President Truman and his advisers are likewise amused at the loud squawks coming from below the Mason and Dixon line. They reason the Southern Democrats have no other place to go, since they are certain not to go to the Republicans or to Henry Wallace.

It would be a wholesome, heartening thing for Southern Democrats to break away from their blind "Me, too," following of the party and assert their political independence. The News

As has been pointed out so many times, this would put Southern Democrats in the catbird seat and stop their being pushed around as party stepchildren.

Both major parties then would start bidding frantically for their support. They would become the balance of power, instead of the forgotten voters in presidential elections. Thur. 2-5-48

Southern states also would begin getting their proportionate share of gravy that so long has gone to evenly divided states.

Instead, the Negro, about whom there is so much shouting and squawking, virtually holds the balance of power in both parties. Negroes have brought this about by migrating in great droves to Detroit, Chicago, New York, Pittsburgh and other population centers, where they vote in droves. Birmingham, Ala.

Both Democrats and Republicans court this heavy minority vote with great political ardor.

Political Parties And The U. S.

When thoughtful students of the current world crisis say that its only solution lies in the establishment of a measure of world law and government, they mean, of course, that a certain unity of purpose and action are imperative to a stable civilization.

34d

It is a broad measure of unity that provides the foundation for the stable government of the United States and other countries. Birmingham, Ala.

Any integrated and cohesive society must rest on a foundation of fundamental agreement in principle and program. Otherwise disputes and conflicts would become unmanageable. It is a very substantial unity of principle that obviously accounts for the fact that a two-party system prevails in this country. It also accounts for the fact that in many matters there is little difference between the parties. Mon 3-1-48

A considerable degree of unity, then, may be seen as necessary to stable, effective government.

The political instability that has so often prevailed in France affords an example of the difficulties and hazards of insufficient unity, as evidenced in numerous parties and extreme differences.

* * *

But, of course, too much unity can also be disastrous. It can mean sluggishness, apathy, one-sided domination—a lack of that healthful competition in ideas that is so essential to political vitality and progress. The problem, of course, is to achieve a balance between unity and ferment.

When Americans complain, as they so often do, that there is "little or no difference" between the Democrats and Republicans, they are influenced primarily by what they consider a lack of healthy differences of viewpoint and proposal. Such observers, however, often fail to realize that a broad base of unity between the major parties is conducive to effective free government.

If Americans were not sincerely devoted in great majority to certain basic principles and ideas, our form of government would be impossible.

But still, of course, important differences of viewpoint and method are possible without destroying our fundamental unity. There is too little sharp, vigorous, forthright discussion and alignment growing out of such differences. We do not, for example, have conservative people in one party, progressives in another—but plenty of each in both major parties. It all seems, many say, very illogical and inconsistent. The News

And so it is at times—and in some respects. Too often divisions in Congress and in public opinion have crossed party lines—and yet without much effect on party alignments. Birmingham, Ala

* * *

How long is that sort of thing going on?

Are such strange "inconsistencies" really consistent with our political structure?

Will conservative Republicans and conservative Democrats continue indefinitely to work together? Will the liberals of the two major parties continue often to do likewise?

Will the two major parties rock along in pretty much the same way for years to come?

The times are too disturbed and unsettled for positive, affirmative answers to such questions. Mon 3-1-48

Henry Wallace is talking about his third party becoming a first party. That seems merely a Wallace hope now, but it is to be remembered that this country has experienced many important party realignments. It may do so again. There might be great economic or international emergencies that would drastically change our political life. Let us not apathetically assume that such a development is impossible.

Another major depression might produce a strong upsurge of sentiment for greater government control of our economy. Out of such a trend a new and strong party might emerge.

The widespread and intense opposition in the South to the civil rights proposals of President Truman even now is producing much talk of a revolt from the Democratic Party. It will be remembered that the Republicans did make heavy inroads in the South in 1928, when religious and liquor issues were of major concern. Feelings on racial matters and state's rights might be strong enough to produce another sizable break from the party.

That is by no means impossible, even though it still seems unlikely. The national Democratic platform may not go so far as did Mr. Truman in his proposals. When the showdown comes, traditional Democracy still may dominate the "Solid South."

* * *

But is the South indefinitely to remain a one-party region, with only occasional rebellions? The News

Some Southern Democrats, and at least one important Southern newspaper—The Savannah Morning News—are openly advocating support of the Republican Party by Southerners this year. Birmingham, Ala.

The argument is that there is no choice between the parties on the civil rights issue and that swinging over to the Republicans will do much to make this doubtful territory, with the consequence that both parties will have more regard for the South. But is there really no choice btween Republicans and Democrats on the civil rights issue? Moreover, are there no other important issues on which there are differences? Mon 3-1-48

There should be two competing parties in the South. As to that, there long has been widespread agreement. But it is going to take a deep and intense issue—and probably an issue long persisting—to establish a two-party system. Southerners are not likely to go and stay Republican on the basis of "no choice" between the parties.

Perhaps the uncertainties that have been introduced into the current political situation by the Southern protest on civil rights and by Henry Wallace's break from the party may tend to sharpen issues as to method and aim between the two major parties.

But a good measure of fundamental unity and even a considerable degree of traditional party loyalty will continue to be essential to free and progressive government in this country, even as also essential will be a free and active competition in ideas and contions respecting problems, old and new.

Dec. 16 it recognized the pressure by revoking the license issued by the building inspector. Thus the commission acted, though a recent decision by the Federal Court declared the racial zoning ordinance unconstitutional. The decision of Judge Mullins on Tuesday last has opened the way now for the remodeling of the building along the lines for which a permit was once granted.

The city has the right to appeal the decision to the Circuit Court of Appeals, but members of the City Commission and of the city's legal department have not announced what, if any, further action is to be taken. The News Birmingham Ala

Citizens of Birmingham, both white and colored, have long been aware of the need of greater recreational facilities for Negroes. The present motion picture houses catering to Negro patrons only are insufficient to handle the crowds which wish to attend. Incidentally, all are controlled by white capital, some of which is supplied by the corporation which controls several of Birmingham's better theaters for white persons only. Negro business, social and amusement enterprises line 18th Street, one block nearer the center of the city than the district now in question. Many of the business firms now in the neighborhood of the Birmingham Theater depend to a considerable extent on Negroes for their patronage. The argument over whether or not property values in the neighborhood would be adversely affected by another Negro theater cannot be solved without trial. Republicans Elect Delegates for Taft, Stassen or Dewey in Ohio and Florida Tomorrow

Mon. 5-3-48

VOTE IN SOUTH ON TRUMAN

Democrats Will Provide in Alabama and Florida the First Sign of Revolt's Extent

By JAMES A. HAGERTY

Important primary elections in the race for Presidential nominations will be held tomorrow in Ohio, Florida and Alabama.

Contests for delegates to the Republican National Convention will be between Senator Robert A. Taft and Harold E. Stassen in Ohio and between Senator Taft, Mr. Stassen and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in Florida.

The Democratic primaries in Florida and Alabama will furnish the first test of the strength of the Southern revolt against President Truman.

Public interest centers in the Ohio contest. Mr. Stassen, whose candidacy received a lift by his victories in Wistonsin and Nebraska, is seeking to elect twenty-three of Ohio's fifty-three convention delegates in Senator Taft's home state.

The former Minnesota Governor has predicted that he will win twelve delegates and his supporters claim fifteen. Senator Taft has asserted that he expects to win all the contests with the possible exception of the one Stassen candidate for delegate-at-large, but his supporters have indicated that they will be satisfied if they hold the number of Stassen delegates elected to six. 5-3-48

Mr. Stassen, who conferred here yesterday with friends after campaigning in New Jersey and Rhode Island, departed at midnight for Cleveland, where he is scheduled to speak tonight. He was accompanied by Mrs. Stassen, his aide, Edward Larsen, and several newspaper reporters. Senator Taft will continue his speaking campaign in Ohio today.

In Florida four candidates for delegates favorable to the nomination of Governor Dewey are unopposed. The contested places on the delegation are expected to be divided, with Mr. Stassen having what is believed to be rising support.

Division Over Southern Bolt

The Times

Although Alabama has only twenty-six votes in the Democratic National Convention, there are eighty-four candidates for delegates and they are split on a proposal to bolt the convention if the Truman civil rights program goes into the party platform.

Twenty-nine have said that they would walk out of the convention n the civil rights plank were adopted and twenty-five that they oppose the plank but would remain in the party. The others have taken no public position. None of the candidates has publicly favored the nomination of President Truman. New York, N.Y.

Senator John J. Sparkman, seeking renomination, has five opponents, among them Phillip J. Hamm, who has the backing of Governor James E. Folsom. Eight of the State's nine Representatives have opposition. The delegates to the Republican National Convention will be named at a state convention on May 20. Mon.

Opposition to the nomination of President Truman also is a factor in the Florida Democratic primary, with 112 candidates for the twenty-eight delegates who will cast twenty votes in the convention.

Eighty candidates are running unpledged. Gov. Millard F. Caldwell heads a middle-of-the-road group which is opposed to the Truman civil rights policy but probably would not bolt. Of the others, twenty-eight are pledged to Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi and are definitely opposed to President Truman. Twelve favor the nomination of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. 5-3-48

The Southern defection from the President will be more than balanced by election of delegates favorable to his nomination in North-states. The Missouri State Convention, which will complete a thirty-four-vote delegation today, is expected to endorse Mr. Truman. The Ohio delegation, with fifty votes, to be elected tomorrow, will be pledged to W. A. Julian, treasurer of the United States, who will hold them for the President.

Maryland will have a primary election today and Indiana will have one tomorrow to elect delegates to State conventions to name national convention delegates, with the probability that the Republican delegation from each States will be divided.

In Georgia, a Republican group will elect sixteen Taft delegates today at a State convention. On May 18 another Republican group, headed by Wilson Williams, National Committeeman, will elect a delegation favorable to Governor Dewey, insuring a contest at the National Convention. Nevada Republicans will elect nine national convention delegates on Saturday.

With 701 delegates out of 1,094 to the the Republican National Convention already elected, Governor Dewey, with the support of New York's ninety-seven delegates, still leads all other aspirants for the Presidential nomination with about 230 votes. His chance for the nomination may depend on the result of the Oregon preference primary on May 21, in which he is opposed by Mr. Stassen.

The nominee of the convention, however, will be determined by the group of states which will present "favorite son" candidates. Among these are Pennsylvania with seventy-three delegates, Illinois with fifty-six, California with fifty-three and Massachusetts and New Jersey with thirty-five each. Mon.

The prospect of the emergency of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, who so far is assured of only the forty-one votes of his home state, Michigan, continues likely. 5-3-48

During the past week a definite movement has been started to get first and second choice votes for Speaker Joseph W. Martin Jr. for the Presidential nomination, although Massachusetts is expected to cast a first-ballot vote for Senator Leverett Saltonstall.

Mr. Stassen gained slightly as the result of delegates elected during the past week. He probably will have the support of two and Governor Dewey of four of the eight delegates from Rhode Island.

Standing in Other States

The Times

According to a despatch to THE TIMES from Denver, Mr. Stassen appears to have the support of a bare majority of Colorado's fifteen delegates, although the delegation may cast a first-ballot vote for Senator Eugene D. Milliken, who is for Senator Taft. Supporters of Governor Dewey claimed five delegates. The delegation is unpledged.

An Albuquerque despatch reported that four and possibly five of the New Mexico delegates favored the nomination of Mr. Stassen with supporters of Governor Dewey disputing this claim and claiming four or five. The delegation will go uninstructed with no unit rule. At least one is believed to favor Senator Taft. N.Y.

Delaware's nine delegates will go to the convention uninstructed and present plans call for a first-ballot vote for former Senator John G. Townsend, Jr. An informal poll conducted by The Wilmington Morning News showed four preferences for Senator Taft, one each for Senator Vandenberg, Mr. Stassen and Speaker Martin and two undecided. The delegation, however, will vote as a unit.

The Dewey forces apparently suffered a defeat at the Missouri State Convention when Barak T. Mattingly, retiring National Committeeman, failed to bring about the election of the man he favored for his successor and Howard V. Stephens of St. Louis was elected by acclamation. The result was attributed a demand for new blood and new faces in the party organization following the Stassen victories in Wisconsin and Nebraska.

A despatch to The Times from St. Louis said that this did not mean that Mr. Stassen "had the edge" among the delegates elected but did show that the trend in other states had reached into Missouri. Although Stassen supporters have claimed a majority of the thirty-three Missouri delegates, supporters of Governor Dewey continued to claim support of as many as twenty-five delegates.

Republicans May 'Adopt' Rebellious Southerners

The Courier Journal Louisville, Ky.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND By Drew Pearson

Sun. 5-30-48

WASHINGTON, May 29—Although still in the whispering stages, a move to adopt the rebellious Southern Democrats into the Republican Party is being talked on Capitol Hill. The plan is to offer the G.O.P. vice-presidential nomination to a Southerner, possibly Virginia's Senator Harry Byrd.

The idea already has picked up some support among Southern Democrats and has been given a strong push by Western Republicans. The Republicans are eager to carve up the "Solid South" while the time is ripe.

One Westerner who has been spurring the idea in the cloakrooms is Utah's Congressman William Dawson. He proposes a Vandenberg-Byrd ticket, pointing out that the big Michigan Republican already has a reputation for bipartisan co-operation while the conservative Byrd usually votes Republican anyhow.

This ticket has the private indorsement of an overwhelming number of Southern Democrats who have asked that their names be kept secret until the merger plan gets off thin ice. Congressmen from Florida and North Carolina predict that Vandenberg and Byrd together could sweep their states three-to-one. Another influential Western Republican on the bandwagon is South Dakota's Congressman Carl Mundt. Sun. 5-30-48

Biggest Southern fear is that the Republicans would shunt them aside after elections, just as happened after they helped elect Herbert Hoover in the row over Al Smith. The mechanics of shifting from the Democratic to the Republican Party also offer an obstacle in the way of Southern congressmen. Dawson has suggested that the Republican Party could indorse certain candidates in the South this year; and that a system of cross-filing, as used in California, might be worked out in the future.

Florida's Congressman Dwight Rogers, one of the most active Southerners behind the plan, acknowledged the difficulties, but warned: "If we don't get together on our own initiative, we are going to be pushed into it."

Dawson also is harping on the theme of a Southern-Western alliance. The Courier Journal

"The South and the West think

Senator Vandenberg

alike on most issues," he told a group of Southerners. "There is no reason why we should be divided up the way we are."

TRUMAN WASN'T KIDDING!

By LEM GRAVES, Jr.

[illegible] Correspondent)

Pittsburgh Courier

WASHINGTON — Segregation and jim crow have been completely eliminated from plans for official social activities in connection with the inauguration of President Harry S. Truman next month.

With all aspects of the inaugural program planned on a completely non-segregated basis, this becomes the first time in the history of U. S. Presidential inaugurations when social activities will be arranged without benefit of racial discrimination.

The inaugural ball, to be attended by the President and Mrs. Truman and by Vice President Barkley, and scheduled for the night of the inauguration, Jan. 20, at the National Guard Armory here, is being planned by a committee which includes eight colored Washington citizens. Committee members have announced that hundreds of colored citizens will be invited to attend the ball without segregation or discrimination.

Sat-12-18-48

The inaugural committee, headed by Melvin Hildreth, has gone even further in insuring the non-segregated nature of official Truman inaugural activities. An inaugural concert, planned originally for the DAR's Constitution Hall here on Jan. 19, was changed from Constitution Hall to the National Armory, it was revealed by Atty. William L. Houston, who is vice chairman of the over-all inaugural committee. This change was made because of the restrictions on Negro attendance and participation in Constitution Hall activities.

Sat-12-18-48

Other Negro members of the official inaugural ball committee are Mrs. Mary Bethune, NCNW president; Col. Campbell C. Johnson of the Selective Service office, Judge James A. Cobb, Judge Armond W. Scott, Mrs. Christine Ray Davis, secretary to Congressman William L. Dawson; Mrs. William S. Nelson of Howard University and Mrs. Olivet D. Brown. Dr. Mordecai Johnson, Howard president, and Gen. B. O. Davis Sr. were invited to serve but declined.

Sat-12-18-48

Other inaugural plans call for complete integration in official ceremonies. Negro leaders, said Mr. Houston, will be invited to sit in the stands facing the Capitol steps during the inauguration and will participate in the parade and luncheon schedule, without segregation. Committees planning the inauguration are integrated under the direction of Mr. Hildreth and Mr. Houston.

Washington leaders, who are hailing this new formula of integration in social and other activities in connection with President Truman's inaugural, are somewhat disturbed by persistent reports that an all-colored, segregated "inaugural ball" is scheduled for the Lincoln Colonnade in the Negro business section of Washington on the night of Jan. 20.

It was learned that this "inaugural ball" is being sponsored by the recreation department of an organization of colored workers in the Navy Department here. When contacted, Miss Dewitt Plummer, recreation supervisor of this department, explained that a private pay dance was being sponsored on that night for a smaller group. She said she hoped Negroes who were not invited or who could not afford the price of the Armory inaugural ball tickets would come to their dance.

However, when informed that there was some resentment over the proposed sponsorship of what was considered by some as a "jim crow" inaugural ball, Miss Plummer told The Courier that her committee would reconsider the decision to name this dance an "inaugural ball."

Sat-12-18-48

In the meantime, members of the official inaugural committee emphatically disclaimed any official endorsement, approval, or sponsorship of this "separate" inaugural ball. Mr. Houston made it clear that the Colonnade dance was in no way under the auspices of his committee.

NEW YORK — The entire Tammany Hall delegation has turned down its invitations to President Truman's inaugural because Washington hotels will not permit Harlem Tammany leaders to occupy the same hotel facilities as white Tammany leaders, authoritative sources disclosed here Saturday.

Sat-12-25-48

These sources said the Chicago delegation has met the same problem and that Congressman William L. Dawson and the Illinois delegation will live on the train in the Union Station to avoid segregation during the inauguration. The move for Tammany Hall to turn down its invitations is said to have been led by Hugo Rogers, president of the Borough of Manhattan. Rogers and Harlem leaders have not commented.

Planks in the Major Party Platforms Compared

New York Times

PHILADELPHIA, July 14 (AP)—Comparisons between the majo planks of the 1948 Democrati and Republican platforms follow

FOREIGN POLICY

DEMOCRATIC — Pledges full support of the United Nations, continued leadership toward curtailing the veto power and establishment of an international armed force to back up U. N. authority.

Promises necessary funds and a "sound, humanitarian" administration of the Marshall Plan for European recovery.

Advocates an "adequate" armed force to protect the nation's "vital interests" and to assure the country's security against aggression.

Pledges restoration of the reciprocal trade agreements program drafted in 1934 by the Roosevelt Administration, but "crippled" by the last Republican-controlled Congress.

REPUBLICAN — Promises financial aid, within "prudent limits" of this country's own economic welfare, to help other peace-loving nations restore their economic independence and human rights and fundamental freedoms. This aid to be on a basis of self-help and mutual aid.

Insists on "businesslike and efficient" administration of foreign aid.

Pledges support of the United Nations; favors freeing the U. N. of any veto in the peaceful settlement of international disputes. Holds that the U. N. should be provided with an armed force.

Promises support of the "system of reciprocal trade" and encouragement of world commerce.

Times 7-15-48

PALESTINE

DEMOCRATIC — Pledges full recognition of the State of Israel and approves its boundary claims as set forth in a United Nations resolution of last Nov. 29. Promises financial aid to Israel for developing its economy.

Favors a revision of this country's arms embargo to give Israel "the right of self-defense." Pledges support, within U. N. framework, of the internationalization of Jerusalem.

REPUBLICAN—Subject to "letter and spirit" of U. N. Charter, pledges Israel full recognition, with its boundaries as sanctioned by the U. N., and aid in developing its economy.

Charges Truman Administration undermined U. N. prestige by its "vacillation" on the question of a free and independent Jewish commonwealth.

CIVIL RIGHTS

DEMOCRATIC — Claims credit for recent civil rights gains. Pledges the party to continuing efforts to eradicate all racial, religious and economic discrimination. States a belief that minorities must have the right to work, live, vote, and get legal protection on a basis of equality with all citizens as guaranteed by the Constitution. Commends President Truman for his stand on the civil rights issue and calls on Congress to support him in guaranteeing the right to full and equal political participation, to equal opportunity of employment, to security of person and to equal treatment in the service and defense of the country.

REPUBLICAN—Says lynchings or other mob violence is a disgrace and favors prompt enactment of legislation to end it. Says equality of all individuals in their right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness is the cornerstone of this Republic. Says the right of equal opportunity to work and advance in life should never be limited because of race, religion, color, or country of origin. Favors enactment and just enforcement of such Federal legislation as may be necessary to maintain this right in every part of the country, favors abolition of poll taxes as a requisite to voting. Opposes racial segregation in the armed services.

COMMUNISM

DEMOCRATIC—Condemns communism and other forms of totalitarianism and "their destructive activity" overseas and at home. Pledges the party to expose and prosecute treasonable activities. Says the party will continue to enforce vigorously the laws against subversive activities, observing always the constitutional guarantees of free speech and press and honest political activity. Says the party will strengthen the laws against subversion to the full extent necessary, protecting at all times traditional individual freedoms.

REPUBLICAN—Pledges a vigorous enforcement of existing laws against Communists and enactment of such new legislation as may be necessary to expose the treasonable activities of Communists and defeat their objective of establishing here a Godless dictatorship controlled from abroad.

INFLATION

DEMOCRATIC—Blames Republican-controlled Congress for present high cost of living, because of its rejection of President Truman's "comprehensive" program to control prices. Promises to "put a halt" to price rises.

REPUBLICAN — Asserts Truman Administration has deliberately encouraged higher prices. Pledges an attack on "basic causes" of inflation by cutting Government spending, stimulating production, reducing the public debt, and establishing fiscal policies to provide incentives for production.

HOUSING

DEMOCRATIC—Pledges "comprehensive" housing legislation, including slum clearance and low-rent housing projects initiated by local agencies. Says the nation is "shamed" by the failure of the Republican Congress to pass such legislation. Holds that adequate housing will end need for rent control.

REPUBLICAN — Recommends Federal aid to states for slum clearance and low-rental housing only where there is need that cannot be supplied by private enterprise or by the states and localities.

7-15-48

TAXATION

DEMOCRATIC—Favors reduction of taxes whenever it is possible to do so without "unbalancing" the nation's economy. Advocates that any reductions give "full measure" of relief to low-income families. Charges Republican tax law ignored those who needed reductions most. Opposes a general Federal sales tax.

REPUBLICAN — Declares Federal Government should, "as soon as practicable," withdraw or reduce those taxes which can be best administered by local governments, with particular consideration of excise and inheritance taxes.

LABOR

DEMOCRATIC — Advocates repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act because it has "failed" to bring industrial peace. Advocates legislation to establish rules for collective bargaining, determine the rights of employes and employers and enable labor unions to keep their membership free from communistic influences. Favors increasing the minimum wage rate from 40 cents an hour to 75 cents. Urges a rebuilt and strengthened Department of Labor.

REPUBLICAN—Pledges continuing study to improve labor-management relationships in the light of experience and changing conditions. Declares collective bargaining is an obligation, as well as a right, applying equally to workers and employers. Says the "fundamental" right to strike is subordinate only to "paramount" considerations of public health and safety.

SOCIAL SECURITY

DEMOCRATIC—Favors increases in old-age and survivors' insurance benefits by at least 50 per cent and reduction of eligibility age for women from 65 to 60. Also would extend these aid programs to all workers not now covered. Favors national health program for expanded medical research, medical education and hospitals and clinics.

REPUBLICAN — Urges extending Federal old-age and survivors' insurance program and increasing benefits to "a more realistic level." Urges strengthening of Federal-state programs to provide more adequate hospital facilities.

EDUCATION

DEMOCRATIC—Advocates Federal aid for education administered by the states. Supports Federal appropriation of $300,000,000 to start such a program. Charges Republican Congress "shockingly" ignored educational needs.

REPUBLICAN—Favors equality of educational opportunity for all and the promotion of education and educational facilities.

VETERANS

DEMOCRATIC — Pledges improvement of Federal benefit program for veterans and their families. Says level of benefits must be constantly re-examined in light of the decline in the dollar's buying power. Pledges a program of housing for veterans at prices they can afford to pay.

REPUBLICAN — Proposes a "realistic and adequate" adjustment of veterans' benefits on a cost-of-living basis. Demands "good-faith" compliance with veterans' preference in Federal service and efficient and businesslike management of the Veterans Administration.

AGRICULTURE

DEMOCRATIC—Pledges efforts to maintain continued farm prosperity, improvement of rural living standards and preservation of the family-size farm. Specific Federal aids include a permanent system of flexible price supports to maintain farm income on a parity with farm operating costs, an intensified soil conservation program, improvement in methods of distributing farm products, adequate financing of the school lunch program, development and maintenance of stable export markets, use of farm surpluses to improve diets of the needy and continued expansion of the rural electrification program. Favors repeal of taxes on oleomargarine, and promises encouragement of farm cooperatives.

REPUBLICAN—Declares the nation must have a long-term program in the interest of agriculture and the consumer. Says such program should have an accelerated program of "sounder" soil conservation; effective protection of "reasonable" market prices through flexible price supports, commodity loans and marketing agreements, together with such other means as may be necessary; development of sound farm credit; encouragement of family-size farms; support of the principle of bona fide farmer-owned and farmer-operated cooperatives, and "sound" rural electrification.

NATURAL RESOURCES

DEMOCRATIC — Pledges full and unified regional development of water, mineral and other natural resources. Favors stepping up the Federal reclamation program and promises to continue to improve navigable waterways and harbors. Pledges adequate appropriations for flood control. Promises to stockpile strategic minerals and to encourage a sound mining industry.

REPUBLICAN — Favors "progressive" development of water resources for navigation, flood control and power, with immediate action in critical areas, and a comprehensive reclamation program with full protection of rights and interests of the States. Also favors stockpiling of strategic and critical raw materials and adequate representation of the West in the National Administration.

BUSINESS

DEMOCRATIC — Pledges intensive enforcement of anti-trust laws, with adequate appropriations. Advocates strengthening of such laws and pledges a "positive" program to promote competitive business. Supports the right of free enterprise.

REPUBLICAN—Declares small business must be encouraged through aggressive anti-monopoly action, elimination of unnecessary controls, protection against discrimination, correction of tax abuses and limitation of competition by governmental organizations.

7-15-48

EQUAL RIGHTS

BOTH—Recommend submitting a Constitutional Amendment on equal rights for women.

ATOMIC ENERGY

DEMOCRATIC—Pledges adherence to the principle of nonpartisan civilian administration of atomic energy.

REPUBLICAN—No plank.

The Voters Can Decide In Maryland

Columbia Record

Wed 3-17-48

3-17-48

Governor William Preston Lane of Maryland, chairman of the Southern governors conference, has made it clear that he is not going along with the anti-Truman resolution adopted by the conference at Washington. "There will be no cleavage in Maryland Democratic ranks," he said.

34

Maryland, of course, has the two-party system and any Maryland Democrat who doesn't like Harry Truman can vote Republican. If enough of them switch from the Democratic party to the Republican party the electoral votes of Maryland will go to the Republican nominee.

Wed 3-17-48

Columbia, S.C.

Maryland voters, therefore, do not need any governor to lead them. They can do their own deciding. It is what ought to be possible in South Carolina and in all the other Southern states.

His Father-in-Law Saw It Otherwise

The Advertiser

EDITOR, THE ADVERTISER: In connection with the recent fulminations of Bill Primm, of the National Democratic Committee with reference to the states rights movement in the South, it is of interest to note what his distinguished father-in-law, the late Senator Josiah Bailey, of North Carolina, had to say on this subject. On Dec. 7, 1943, Senator Bailey prophetically addressed the United States Senate as follows:

"I think the Senate will bear witness that I do not often talk in the Senate in terms of politics. God knows that during this war I do not intend ever to have a political thought. And here on this anniversary of Pearl Harbor I would not raise any party issue. But when a man's honor is attacked, whether it be on the holiest of days, and whatever his contempt may be for him who touches it, he must answer, and the junior senator from Virginia this morning answered.

Thur 9-9-48

"What's wrong with being a 'Southern' senator or a 'Southern Democrat?' I would remind these gentlemen who speak of us as Southern Democrats, these Democrats, these high lights of the party, these beneficiaries of our victories during the last 10 years — I would remind them that Southern Democrats maintained the Democratic Party and kept it alive in all the long years of its exile, when it had no place in the house which our fathers had built, when it was not permitted to serve around the altars which our forefathers had made holy."

Senator Bailey pointed out that the Southern States had cast their electoral votes for the Democratic candidate for president, election after election, often when they stood absolutely alone and when there was nobody else in the electoral college to vote for him.

"But, he warned," there can be an end of that sort of thing!

"There can be an end of insults," he said, "there can be an end of toleration, there can be an end of patience. We can form a Southern Democratic Party and vote as we please in the electoral college, and we will hold the balance of power in this country. We can throw the election into the House of Representatives and cast the votes of 16 states.

Montgomery Ala.

"We have been patient. We were tried. I am not going back into that. I do not think any of us should. There is a reason why the South has voted democratic. I will not go into that either. But, by the eternal gods, there are men in the South, and women, too, who will not permit men in control of our party to betray or to insult us in the house of our fathers. We will assert ourselves—and we are capable of asserting ourselves—and we will vindicate ourselves, and if we cannot have a party in which we are respected, if we must be in a party in which we are scorned as Southern Democrats, we will find a party which honors us, not because we are Southerners, and not because of politics, but because we love our country and believe in the constitution from which it draws its life day by day, as you, sir, draw your breath from the atmosphere round about you."

It is not very difficult for us to determine how Senator Bailey, that distinguished Democratic senator, would have felt about the position his son-in-law is now taking. Be that as it may, I am sure that the people of the South will be far more impressed with the views held by Senator Bailey than with the apostate views of Mr. Primm.

BAILEY AND PRIMM

The Advertiser

It will be seen in the letters column today that an alert and thoughtful reader has exhumed an utterance by the late Senator Josiah Bailey, of North Carolina, wherein that worthy, as of 1943, seemingly wearing the robes of a prophet, threatened the national Democratic Party with the fourth party rebellion that has come to pass. The exhumer uses the letter with which to chide the senator's son-in-law, Bill Primm, for supporting Truman to the exclusion of the fourth party's Thurmond.

Thur 9-9-48

It is entirely appropriate to cite the opposing view of the late senator and his son-in-law, but it is not fair to employ the device to discipline Primm. It is always grossly unfair to employ the words of a man posthumously and on a basis of sentiment to embarrass an extant relative or associate.

In the first place, it is not given to any man of any degree of prescience whatsoever to divine what a dead man would do in present circumstances. We do not wish to be snagged by the same snare, but it might be noted that if Senator Bailey were alive and serving the Thurmond-Wright cause, he would be in a highly conspicuous minority of Southern senators.

Montgomery Ala.

But that is straying from the observation that Primm, however wrong he may or may not be in the instant circumstance, has no conceivable constraint to abide by the supposed persuasions of his late fellow tribesman. Primm is his own free agent, no more bound by Bailey's convictions than Bailey by his.

The name of Bailey, as so often is the case, is invoked because it is the superior name. Pitting it against Primm's name is to put Primm's viewpoints at an obvious disadvantage. What is indicated is not a contrast of a famous and an obscure name, but an answer to what Primm argues.

None of which, we trust, will be taken as defense or espousal of Primm's impatience with the Dixiecrat phenomenon. In sticking to the national party, it's as if Primm has punched a tar baby; and his allegiance to it is but a shrewd and opportunistic gamble by a largely insignificant political manipulator. Nor is that to question that Primm's gross opposite numbers aren't to be found in Alabama in the Dixiecrat fold: It is quite evident that some are running Thurmond against Hill in the 1950 Senate race.

Thur 9-9-48

The Bailey-Primm contrast simply serves as a peg for remarking the unfairness and inconclusiveness of using the mort-main against the living. Actually, it is a rather unsportsmanly resort.

Alabama Member Called 'Dixiecrat' Manager

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

WASHINGTON— (AP) —A Democratic national committee official suggested Friday, that "any and all" committee members who are supporting the States' Rights presidential ticket should resign from the committee.

William J. Primm, Jr., assistant to National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, made the proposal. He said such Democrats have "left the Democratic party."

Primm's statement came in the midst of a controversy between Republicans and Democrats over Communist party endorsement of the Roosevelt-Truman ticket in 1944.

Sat 9-4-48

GOP National Chairman Hugh D. Scott, Jr., demanded that President Truman say whether he accepted endorsement as Mr. Roosevelt's running mate. The Democratic national committee replied that President Roosevelt renounced such support before his fourth term election.

Primm's resignation proposal referred specifically to Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, South Carolina, States' Right presidential candidate, and Col. Marion Rushton, Alabama, who represents their states on the national committee.

"Campaign Manager"

He described Rushton as the "campaign manager for the Dixiecrats" in Alabama.

Primm said Thurmond informed McGrath in July he had resigned as national committeeman in a letter to W. P. Baskin, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee. A copy of the letter to Baskin went to McGrath, who expressed "regret" in reply.

But since then the state committee has refused to accept the resignation unless Thurmond insists on it.

Primm said the understood through press reports that Rushton also had resigned, but so far national headquarters has received no such notice. If he has resigned he should be commended, Primm stated.

Primm reaffirmed the national committee's promise of recognition to any pro-Truman group which officially organizes in opposition to the State's Rights ticket.

Advertiser

"If these people," he said referring to the States' Righters, "think they can fight the national party ticket and then come in and ask that they be seated or recognized by the national committee they are certainly mistaken."

Denies McGrath Rumor

Primm denied that McGrath had said in an interview that Southern senators and representatives supporting Thurmond's candidacy would lose their party status. He said the national committee had no authority to read out of the party duly elected legislators.

Montgomery Ala

He said he was authorized to say that McGrath "did not take nor has he any intention of taking action against the duly elected members of the House and Senate as has been implied." Sat.

"McGrath's interview with a reporter," Primm added, "was in every way intended to make it clear that the Democratic national committee would not allow certain party people who are now holding office in the party, such as national committeemen and committeewomen, to continue to occupy their positions in that party and at the same time fight the nominees of the national Democratic party through a fourth party movement such as the Dixiecrats." 9-4-48

On the basis of the McGrath interview, Thurmond had commented in Columbia, S. C., that Southern congressmen "will not be dictated to by a New Englander who has himself bolted the Democratic party by violating its

Rushton Can't Resign 'On My Own Motion'

Col. Marion Rushton said here Friday that he cannot resign from the national committee "on my own motion." He said he had suggested to the State Democratic Executive Committee that it would no longer desire representation on the National Committee and had offered to resign. No action has been taken by the state committee.

He said he wrote McGrath that he could not offer the national party any "aid or comfort" and advised the national chairman of his offer to resign.

He said he was not Alabama's campaign manager for the Dixiecrats—"Mr. Primm was misinformed."

basic principles of States' Rights."

Pro-Truman Democrats in South Carolina will meet next Tuesday, to name electors pledged to the Truman-Barkley ticket. Another group has named pro-Thurmond electors. The national committee has promised recognition to the former.

GOP Chairman Scott's challenge of President Truman on the Communist endorsement issue came in a statement from the Republican national committee.

He accused the president of trying to "snuff out" congressional investigations of Communists by "impetuous cries of 'red herring'." He said he wonders if there was a "working agreement" between Mr. Truman and the Communists in 1944. If so, he aseked when it was ended.

Scott referred to a statement Aug. 12, 1944, by Eugene Dennis. Communist party secretary, saying the Roosevelt-Truman ticket was "representative not only of the Democratic party but of important and wider sections of the camp of national unity."

Dennis was further quoted as saying that Communists were trying not to endorse candidates "unless this is done in full agreement with the given candidate and with our collaborators." Scott added:

"If Mr. Truman did, in fact, accept or approve such official endorsement of the Communists in the 1944 campaign, he owes it to the American people today to set the record straight."

Schism In The South

The Wash. Post

Sun 9-5-48

Wash. D. C.

It is amusing to note the claims of the South Carolina bolters—now that the Democratic National Committee has finally turned its back upon them—that they are still members of the Democratic Party. Their cry raises a serious question as to who is a Democrat. For the purpose of the coming electoral contest, however, the rule laid down by the national committee must be regarded as controlling. A Democrat, it says in effect, is one who is supporting the Truman-Barkley ticket. That excludes the Dixiecrats as clearly as it excludes the Wallaceites. And if it leaves the President a narrower party base on which to stand, that base is at least less shaky than before.

Of course, the Democratic National Committee has given the only reasonable answer there is to the supporters of Governors Thurmond and Wright. Since those leaders of the old Democratic Party in the South have split off from the national organization on the issue of States' rights, that organization must build new units of the Democratic Party in the South. This it is proceeding to do by recognizing elements within the party that are eager to support Messrs. Truman and Barkley and by asking the bolters to resign from their Democratic Party posts. It is precisely such a development that we envisaged when we hailed the decision of the Dixiecrats to go their own way. Here we have the possible beginnings of two-party government in the South, which, in our opinion must be regarded as an important step forward.

Some of the old line political leaders in the South believe that their only hope of making their influence felt is to develop a separate party strong enough to compel the national Republican and Democratic Parties to bid for its support. Ordinarily we should deplore this sort of splintering as a peril to our two-party system. But in the South there has been only a one-party system. For the sake of reviving political opposition in that area, the development and recognition of another party is wholly salutary. Let the bolters bolt and frankly recognize the consequences of their action—the splitting up of the obsolete Democratic Party of the South which has heretofore covered hostile factions with nothing in common but a name and a tradition.

Sun 9-5-48

It is probably true that a permanent schism is the last thing that some of the Dixiecrats wants. Nevertheless, it would be a healthy thing for the South and the Nation and probably in the long run for the Democratic Party. In any event, the issue now has to be faced, and Chairman McGrath and his colleagues are to be congratulated for grasping the nettle firmly in their recognition of "loyal" Democratic groups that can build new party organizations.

Party Committee Assails Bolters, Offers Recognition To Loyal Group

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Democratic National Committee yesterday denounced leaders of the Dixiecrat revole as "bolters" and in effect read them out of the Democratic Party.

It completed its break with the separate States rights movement in a telegram offering recognition to "loyal" South Carolina Democrats, who organize for support of the Truman-Barkley ticket.

The national committee move which one official said mean't "war to the finish" with Dixiecrat groups in all of the Southern States, followed designation of eight presidential electors, pledged to the States rights ticket of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, by the South Carolina State Democratic Executive committee.

'Loyal' Group Boycotts Vote

A group of "loyal" South Carolina Democrats refused to participate in the vote, contending it deprived the people of the State of the right to vote for the candidate of their choice.

The "loyal" group asked the Democratic National Committee what its stand would be if they formed a "regular" Democratic organization in their State to replace the one backing the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

William J. Primm, jr., executive assistant to Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, in a statement cleared by the chairman, promptly promised such a movement official party recognition.

Primm's Telegram

Primm's telegram, in effect launching the long-awaited purge of party bolters, read:

"The Democratic National Committee appreciates the action of loyal Democrats of South Carolina in standing by the regular Democratic Party and its nominees headed by President Truman and Senator Barkley.

Fri 9-3-48

"The Democratic National Committee approves of the program you have started to asure the regular Democrats of South Carolina have an opportunity to vote for the regular Party nominee.

"When you have officially organized the regular Democrats of South Carolina through proper proceedings there can be no course for the Democratic National Committee to take but to recognize the group as the official Democratic Party of South Carolina.

"The group now organized under the name of States Rights Party, or Dixiecrats, has bolted the Democratic Party. Neither they nor their leaders can be recognized as Democrats any more than Henry A. Wallace and his Progressive Party can be considered Democrats. Both the Dixiecrats and the Wallaceites have one thing in common—the aid and comfort they are giving to the Republican Party. The Dixiecrats are a fourth party movement, deliberately designed by their leaders to aid the Republican Party.

"I am confident the action you are taking in South Carolina is the beginning of a repudiation by the people all over the South of the bolters who rule the Dixiecrats."

Fri 9-3-48

Primm, himself an Alabaman opposed to the civil rights program, but committed to party regularity and the Truman-Barkley ticket, reputedly acted with carte blanche authority from Chairman McGrath.

Talked to Dixie Leaders

He himself had just returned from talks with Southern leaders in South Carolina, Mississiippii, Alabama and other disaffected States. He reported to McGrath that a large and possibily controlling majority of voters in most of the Southern States wanted to vote "regular" for the Truman-Barkley ticket, but would have no opportunity to do so under Dixiecrat machine control.

The decision was to wait for a petition from the "loyal" Democats themselves. The awaited split came at Wednesday's meeting of the Dixiecrat-controlled South Carolina State Executive Committee in Columbia. The loyal group's inquiry on recognition was the opening gun.

In an authorized interview before he left Washington for his home in Rhode Island, McGrath said the party itself is not "writing off" or "throwing out" supporters of the Dixiecrat slate. He said they themselves will be "automatically" leaving the party if they support anyone other than President Truman.

Rule for Party Regularity

"If they are going to support the Thurmond-Wright ticket, they are leaving the Democratic Party," McGrath said. "Only those who support Mr. Truman for President and Senator Barkley for Vice president can consider themselves Democrats."

He said the national committee is in communication with "substantial groups of good, loyal Democrats in these (Southern) States trying to work out—under the laws of each State—means by which Democrats can vote for the regular Democratic nominees."

At Wednesday's meeting of the South Carolina State executive committee, State Chairman William P. Baskin contended the South Carolina party remains in the Democratic Party even though its electors were pledged to the States' Rights ticket, the Associated Press reported from Columbia.

But Primm's wire yesterday definitely banished that illusion.

The wire may set off Dixiecrat repercussions throughout the South, with the States Righters maintaining they are not leaving the Democratic Party, that the party has left them.

W. Austin Seay, director of the Washington office of the States Rights Democratic Party, said the national committee action was expected and predicted it would "consolidate" the Dixiecrats.

"The States Rights Party is ready to meet the challenge as to which are the real Democrats," Seay said.

Democratic National Committee officials said a showdown was inevitable and it might as well come now. Some observers believe the move, if followed through, might eventually lead to refunctioning of the two-party system in the South.

Republican and Democratic Platform Planks Compared

New Orleans, La.

Positions of Parties on Major Issues

Thurs. 7-15-48

(The Associated Press)

Philadelphia, July 14. — Comparisons between major planks of the 1948 Democratic and Republican platforms.

Foreign Policy

Democratic — Pledges full support of the United Nations, continued leadership toward curtailing the veto power and establishment of an international armed force to back up UN authority.

Promises necessary funds and a "sound, humanitarian" administration of the Marshall plan for European recovery.

Advocates an "adequate" armed force to protect the nation's "vital interests" and to assure the country's security against aggression.

Pledges restoration of the reciprocal trade agreements program drafted in 1934 by the Roosevelt administration, but "crippled" by the last Republican - controlled Congress.

Republican—Promises financial aid, within "prudent limits" of this country's own economic welfare, to help other peace-loving nations restore their economic independence and human rights and fundamental freedoms. This aid to be on a basis of self-help and mutual aid.

Insists on "businesslike and efficient" administration of foreign aid.

Thurs. 7-15-48

Pledges support of the United Nations; favors freeing the UN of any veto in the peaceful settlement of international disputes. Holds that the UN should be provided with an armed force.

Promises support of the "system of reciprocal trade" and encouragement of world commerce.

Palestine

Democratic—Pledges full recognition of the state of Israel and approves its boundary claims as set forth in a United Nations resolution of last November 29. Promises financial aid to Israel for developing its economy.

Favors a revision of this country's arms embargo to give Israel "the right of self-defense." Pledges support, within UN framework, of the internationalization of Jerusalem.

Republican—Subject to "letter and spirit" of UN charter, pledges Israel full recognition, with its boundaries as sanctioned by the UN, and aid in developing its economy.

Charges Truman administration undermined UN prestige by its "vacillation" on the question of a free and independent Jewish commonwealth.

Civil Rights

Democratic — Commend President Truman for his civil rights program. Call on Congress to back him up in guaranteeing racial and religious minorities these rights: 1. Full and equal political participation. 2. Equal opportunity of employment. 3. Security of person, and 4. Equal treatment in the service and defense of the nation. Convention refused to insert a "states' rights" plank.

Republican—Says lynchings or other mob violence is a disgrace, and favors prompt enactment of legislation to end it. Says equality of all individuals in their right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness is the cornerstone of this republic. Says the right of equal opportunity to work and advance in life should never be limited because of race, religion, color, or country of origin. Favors enactment and just enforcement of such federal legislation as may be necessary to maintain this right in every part of the country. Favors abolition of poll taxes as a requisite to voting. Opposes racial segregation in the armed services.

The Times Picayune

Communism

Democratic — Condemns Communism and other forms of totalitarianism and "their destructive activity" overseas and at home. Pledges the party to expose and prosecute treasonable activities. Says the party will continue to enforce vigorously the laws against subversive activities, observing always the constitutional guarantees of free speech and press and honest political activity. Says the party will strengthen the laws against subversion to the full extent necessary, protecting at all times traditional individual freedoms.

New Orleans, La.

Republican—Pledges a vigorous enforcement of existing laws against Communists and enactment of such new legislation as may be necessary to expose the treasonable activities of Communists and defeat their objective of establishing here a godless dictatorship controlled from abroad.

Thurs. 7-15-48

Inflation

Democratic—Blames Republican-controlled Congress for present high cost of living, because of its rejection of President Truman's "comprehensive" program to control prices. Promises to "put a halt" to price rises.

Republican — Asserts Truman administration has deliberately encouraged higher prices. Pledges an attack on "basic causes" of inflation by cutting government spending, stimulating production, reducing the public debt, and establishing fiscal policies to provide incentives for production

Housing

Democratic — Pledges "comprehensive" housing legislation, including slum clearance and low-rent housing projects initiated by local agencies. Says the nation is "shamed" by failure of Republican Congress to pass such legislation. Holds that adequate housing will end need for rent.

Republican — Recommends federal aid to states for slum clearance and low-rental housing only where there is need that cannot be supplied by private enterprise or by the states and localities.

Taxation

Democratic — Favors reduction of taxes whenever it is possible to do so without "unbalancing" the nation's economy. Advocates that any reductions give "full measure" of relief to low-income families. Charges Republican tax law ignored those who needed reductions most. Opposes a general federal sales tax.

Republican — Declares federal government should, as soon as practicable," withdraw or reduce those taxes which can be best administered by local governments, with particular consideration of excise and inheritance taxes.

The Times-Picayune

Labor

Democratic — Advocates repeal of the Taft-Hartley act because it has "failed" to bring industrial peace. Advocates legislation to establish rules for collective bargaining, determine the rights of employes and employers, and enable labor unions to keep their membership free from Communistic influences. Favors increasing the minimum wage rate from 40 cents an hour to 75 cents. Urges a rebuilt and strengthened department of labor.

Republican—Pledges continuing study to improve labor-management relationships in the light of experience and changing conditions. Declares collective bargaining is an obligation as well as a right, applying equally to workers and employers. Says the "fundamental" right to strike is subordinate only to "paramount" considerations of public health and safety.

New Orleans, La.

Social Security

Democratic — Favors increases in old-age and survivors' insurance benefits by at least 50 per cent, and reduction of eligibility age for women from 65 to 60. Also would extend these aid programs to all workers not now covered. Favors national health program for expanded medical research, medical education, and hospitals and clinics.

Republican — Urges extending federal old age and survivors' insurance program and increasing benefits to "a more realistic level." Urges strengthening of federal-state programs to provide more adequate hospital facilities.

Education

Democratic—Advocates federal aid for education administered by the states. Supports federal appropriation of $300,000,000 to start such a program. Charges Republican Congress "shockingly" ignored educational needs.

Republican—Favors equality of educational opportunity for all and the promotion of education and educational facilities.

The Times Picayune

Veterans

Democratic — Pledges improvement of federal benefit program for veterans and their families. Says level of benefits must be constantly re-examined in light of the decline in the dollar's buying power. Pledges a program of housing for veterans at prices they can afford to pay.

Republican—Proposes a "realistic and adequate" adjustment of veterans' benefits on a cost-of-living basis. Demands "good-faith" compliance with veterans' preference in federal service and efficient and business-like management of the veterans' administration.

New Orleans, La.

Agriculture

Democratic—Pledges efforts to maintain continued farm prosperity, improvement of rural living standards, and preservation of the family-size farm. Specific federal aids included: Permanent system of flexible price supports to maintain farm income on a parity with farm operating costs; an intensified soil conservation program; improvement in methods of distributing farm products; adequate financing of the school lunch program; development and maintenance of stable export markets; use of farm surpluses to improve diets of the needy; and continued expansion of the rural electrification program. Favors repeal of taxes on oleomargarine, and promises encouragement of farm co-operatives.

Thurs.

Republican — Declares nation must have long-term program in the interest of agriculture and the consumer. Says such program should have: Accelerated program of "sounder" soil conservation; effective protection of "reasonable" market prices through flexible price supports, commodity loans, and marketing agreements, together with such other means as may be necessary; development of sound farm credit; encouragement of family-size farms; support of the principle of bona fide farmer-owned and farmer-operated co-operatives; and "sound" rural electrification.

7-15-48

Natural Resources

Democratic—Pledges full and unified regional development of water, mineral and other natural resources. Favors stepping up the federal reclamation program, and promises to continue to improve navigable waterways and harbors. Pledges adequate appropriations for flood control. Promises to stockpile strategic minerals and to encourage a sound mining industry.

Republican — Favors "progressive" development of water resources for navigation, flood control and power, with immediate action in critical areas, and a comprehensive reclamation program with full protection of rights and interests of the states. Also favors stockpiling of strategic and critical raw materials, and adequate representation of the West in the national administration.

The Times Picayune

Business

Democratic — Pledges intensive enforcement of anti-trust laws, with adequate appropriations. Advocates strengthening of such laws, and pledges a "positive" program to promote competitive business. Supports the right of free enterprise.

Republican — Declares small business must be encouraged through aggressive anti-monopoly action, elimination of unneccesary controls; protection against discrimination, correction of tax abuses, and limitation of competition by governmental organizations.

New Orleans, La.

Equal Rights

Both—Recommends submitting a constitutional amendment on equal rights for women.

7-15-48

Thurs.

Atomic Energy

Democratic—Pledges adherence to the principle of non-partisan civilian administration of atomic energy.

The Text of the Communist Party's Platform

Following is the text of the Communist platform for the 1948 elections as adopted by the Communist convention yesterday:

Times

In this crucial 1948 election the American people have a fateful decision to make: Shall America follow the path of peace or war, democracy or fascism?

Platform

Our boys returned from World War II with the hope that their wartime sacrifices had not been in vain.

New York, N.Y.

Remember the promises: Fascism would be wiped out; the great-power unity that brought war victory would bring enduring peace: an economic bill of rights would provide every American with security.

34d

These promises have been broken.

Sat. 8-7-48

Instead of peace, there is war —in Greece, in China, in Israel.

Instead of peace, we witness feverish preparations for war.

Instead of peace, American boys are once again being regimented in the first peacetime draft in our nation's history.

Instead of security and abundance, we have sky-rocketing prices, lowered living standards and the shadow of an impending economic crash with mass unemployment. Farmers fear the inevitable collapse of farm prices. After three years our veterans are still denied housing. Our youth face a future of insecurity and new wars.

Platform

Instead of greater democracy, we witness lynch law, mounting Jim-Crowism and anti-Semitism, and a conspiracy to undermine our sacred democratic heritage. Anti-Communist witch-hunts, phony spy scares, the arrest and conviction of anti-fascist leaders, the hounding of government employes and former Roosevelt associates, the persecution of foreign-born workers, the adoption of anti-labor legislation—these are the methods by which the American people are step by step being driven down the road to a police state and fascism.

These are the chief issues of the 1948 elections.

America is a great and beautiful land, endowed with immense natural resources and a people skilled in producing abundance. Why then the fear of insecurity?

We are today threatened by no outside force. No nation on earth can attack us. Why then the war hysteria?

8-7-48

The answer lies in this simple fact—250 giant corporations, operating through eight banks, control the economic life of America. These in turn are largely owned by a few plutocratic families—Morgan, Rockefeller, Mellon, du Pont and Ford.

The nation's industries are operated not for the public welfare, but for the private gain and power of the multi-millionaire ruling class. Prices continue to rise because of vast military expenditures and because the monopolies, through price-fixing agreements and other devious devices, extract exorbitant profits.

They also make huge profits from war and from armaments. They extract super-profits abroad by forcing other nations into economic dependence upon Wall Street. This drive for foreign markets, for Wall Street domination of the world, is at the bottom of the war hysteria and war preparations. Big business, fearful of the growth and advance of democracy and socialism, hopes to crush the democratic and socialist movements of the world, in order to protect and swell its profits.

Big business seeks to re-establish the old Nazi cartels and use Germany as a military base for new aggression, but the failure of the bi-partisan foreign policy to achieve its main aim of world conquest has increased the frenzy with which Wall Street seeks to plunge the nation into fascism and World War III.

War and Peace

Responsibility for the sharpening tension in world relations rests neither on the American people nor on the Soviet Union. The responsibility rests squarely on Wall Street and the bi-partisan Truman-Vandenberg-Dulles atomic diplomacy. The Soviet Union, which has no I. G. Farben or du Pont cartels, but has instead a Socialist economy, is the strongest bulwark for peace. Only the trusts and war profiteers want war.

Sat. 8-7-48

The Communist party calls for enforcement of the agreements arrived at by Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Soviet Union, based on a policy of collaboration with our great wartime Soviet ally.

End the "cold war," the draft and the huge military budget!

Offer American-Soviet friendship, the key to making the United Nations an instrument for world peace!

Conclude a peace settlement for a united democratic Germany and Japan based on the Yalta and Potsdam Agreements. Guarantee the complete democratization and demilitarization of these countries.

Withdraw American troops from China, Korea and Greece.

Break diplomatic and economic ties with Franco Spain.

Scrap the Marshall Plan and the Truman Doctrine. Furnish large-scale economic assistance to the war-ravaged victims of Fascist attack. Give this aid to the United Nations without political strings.

Lift the embargo on and extend full recognition to Israel.

Immediate unconditional independence for Puerto Rico.

Aid the economic development of the colonial and semi-colonial countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America without infringement of their national independence. Abandon economic, political and military pressures on the countries of Latin America.

The Attack on Labor and Our Living Standards

The trusts have inflated prices and battered down the real wages of American workers to 16 per cent below 1944.

Huge war expenditures amount to 15 billion dollars this year—one-third of the entire national budget. The American people are already paying dearly for this "cold war economy," through a heavy tax burden, speed-up and reduction in real wages. We will pay still more heavily as the inflationary boom speeds the day of the oncoming economic bust.

Big Business has decreed that labor's hands be tied and its rights destroyed. The Taft-Hartley Law and strike-breaking injunctions are weapons against the people's resistance to the monopoly drive towards war and fascism.

Sat. 8-7-48

Defend the labor movement and unite the ranks of the workers and all progressives against this attack which threatens labor's very existence.

Repeal the Taft-Hartley Law and end strike-breaking injunctions.

Adopt a code of Federal labor legislation, including the best features of Wagner Act and the Norris-La Guardia anti-injunction laws.

Restore price control and roll back prices.

We join with all labor and progressive forces in the common demand for an adequate program for Federally financed low-rent housing, minimum wages, old-age pensions, adequate health insurance, and increased aid to education.

We call for increased security for the working farmers through up-to-date parity price and income guarantees, based on unlimited farm production. Such income guarantees require farm subsidies, effective crop insurance and sharp curbs on the giant food trusts and their marketing agencies. We further demand extension of Federal minimum wage and social security laws to agricultural workers, including seasonal and migratory labor.

We call for heavier taxation on high incomes and excess profits, with increased exemption for the low brackets. We demand a capital levy on big fortunes and corporations to finance essential social legislation.

We support all steps to curb the power of the trusts, the fountainhead of reaction, fascism and war. The American people can make gains, even under capitalism, by mass resistance to the monopolies. We support measures to nationalize basic industries, banks and insurance companies, but point out that these can only be useful as part of the fight for a people's democratic government in the United States. Democratic nationalization of trustified industries requires guarantees of democratic controls, the right of labor to organize, bargain collectively and strike. This can only be accomplished by a people's government dedicated to curbing the power of the trusts.

We point out that capitalism cannot become "progressive" even by curbing the excesses of the monopolies. The basic causes of unemployment, economic crisis, fascism and war can only be removed by the establishment of socialism through the democratic will of a majority of the American people.

Civil Rights

The destruction of the rights of the Communists is the classical first step down the road to fascism. The tragedy of Germany and Italy prove this. Therefore, it is incumbent upon all Americans who hate fascism to defend the rights of the Communists, and to help explode the myth that Communists are foreign agents or advocate force and violence.

We are no more foreign agents than was Jefferson who was also accused of being a foreign agent by the Tories of his day. We follow in the best tradition of the spokesmen of labor, science and culture whose contributions to human progress knew no national boundaries. We follow in the tradition of Abraham Lincoln, who said: "The strongest bond of human sympathy, outside of the family relation, should be one uniting all working people of all nations and tongues and kindred."

It is not the Communists who advocate or practice force and violence, but the monopolists, the KKK, the lynch mobs and the fascist hoodlum gangs. Reaction has historically resorted to force and violence to thwart the democratic aspirations of the peoples. In 1776, force and violence were the weapons of King George against the American colonists seeking national independence. In 1861, force and violence were used by the Southern slave owners in an attempt to overthrow the democratic republic headed by Lincoln.

We are Marxist, not adventurers nor conspirators. We condemn and reject the policy and practice of terror and assassination and repudiate the advocates of force and violence. We Communists seek only the opportunity to compete fairly in the marketplace of ideas, asking only that our program and proposals be considered on their merit.

End the witch hunts, loyalty orders and phony spy scares.

Abolish the un-American committee. Withdraw the indictments against the twelve Communist leaders and the contempt citations against the anti-fascist victims of Congressional inquisitions.

End persecution and deportation of the foreign born and lift the undemocratic bars to citizenship.

Sat. 8-7-48

Outlaw all forms of anti-Semitism, anti-Catholicism and every other expression of racial and religious bigotry.

End all discrimination against the Mexican-American people in the Southwest.

The Communist party calls for an end to any and all political, social and economic inequalities practiced against women and demands the maintenance and extension of existing protective legislation.

Extend the suffrage! Remove the bars directed against minority parties! Lower the voting age to 18 years in every state.

Negro Rights

The hypocrisy of the democratic pretensions of Wall Street and the Administration are shattered on the reality of the Jim Crow system in America. The most shameful aspect of American life is the Jim Crowism, the terror and violence imposed upon the Negro people, especially in the South. Discrimination in employment, only slightly relaxed during the war, is once again widespread.

The Communist party, which has pioneered in fighting for full political, economic and social equality for the Negro people, calls for an end to the policies of the Federal and state Governments which give official sanction to the Jim Crow system in the United States.

We call upon all progressives, especially white progressives, to carry on an unceasing day-to-day struggle to outlaw the poll tax, lynchings, segregation, job discrimination and all other forms of Jim-Crowism, official and unofficial.

We demand a national FEPC law, to be vigorously and fully enforced.

We demand that the Ingram family be freed and adequately compensated for the ordeals to which they have been subjected.

[The above platform plank refers to a killing in Ellaville, Ga., in November, 1947, of a white farmer for which Rosa Lee Ingram, 45 years old, and her two teen-age sons are serving life sentences. Their defense was that the farmer in an altercation had threatened to shoot them unless they removed hogs and a mule from his property. They took the shotgun from him and beat him to death with it. They pleaded self-defense.]

8-7-48

We demand that the Ku Klux Klan be outlawed.

We condemn President Truman's cynical evasion of the issue of segregation in the armed forces. We demand that he immediately issue an executive order ending every form of such segregation and discrimination.

We defend the right of the Negro people to full representation in government, and demand Federal enforcement of the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments, so that the Negro people can participate freely and fully in the 1948 elections, North and South.

We call for an agricultural program which will give land and other forms of assistance to millions of Negro and white tenants and sharecroppers in the South.

Such reforms will help provide the material basis for the Negro people's advance towards full liberation from their national oppression, toward their full political, economic and social equality.

The Two-Party System

Millions of American working people have come to realize the futility of any further support for the bankrupt two-party system of big business. Both major parties are committed to the bipartisan war program, reflected in both the Truman Doctrine and its New Look version, the Marshall Plan. Both major parties are united in this program of fattening the billionaires and bleeding the taxpayers.

Both major parties are responsible for runaway inflation. Both the Democratic President and the Republican Congress have done nothing to curb the powers of the trusts to hoard food, rig markets, boost prices and gouge consumers.

Both major parties are responsible for the atrocities committed against the Bill of Rights. Both helped pass the Taft-Hartley Law. Both the Democratic Congressional leaders and the cynical Dewey-Warren-Taft Republican leadership are responsible for the failure to enact civil rights legislation. Neither the Democratic platform nor President Truman's demagogy will fool any enlightened American. The President's deeds belie his words. He has refused to end segregation in the armed forces and the Government and fire from his Cabinet those who maintain it.

Both major parties are responsible for the Hitler-like hysteria expressed in spy scares, loyalty probes, Government witch hunts and the arrest and indictment of Americans whose "crime" it is to oppose the Wall Street war plans. Both the Democratic-controlled Department of Justice and the Republican-controlled un-American Committee have equally been guilty of subverting the Bill of Rights.

Chief allies of the twin parties of big business in the ranks of labor and the progressive organizations of the people are those who pretend to criticize the corruption and decay of the two old parties while, in fact, keeping the people tied hand and foot to the two-party system. These include the top officialdom of the AFL, CIO and R. R. Brotherhoods and groups like the Americans for Democratic Action and the Social Democrats, such as Norman Thomas and David Dubinsky.

The New Party

Millions of Americans, disillusioned with the two-party system, have given birth to a new people's party.

The new Progressive party is an inescapable historic necessity for millions who want a real choice between peace and war, democracy or fascism, security or poverty.

The Communists, who support every popular progressive movement, naturally welcome this new people's party. We supported the progressive features of Roosevelt's New Deal. We helped organize the CIO in the 1930's, we have supported every democratic movement since the Communists of Lincoln's generation fought in the Union cause during the Civil War.

On most immediate questions before the people of the country the Progressive party has offered detailed platform planks around which all forward-looking people can unite. Our support of the Progressive policies and campaign does not alter the fact that we have fundamental as well as some tactical differences with Henry Wallace and related third party forces.

8-7-48

The Communist party is not nominating a Presidential ticket in the 1948 elections. In 1944 we Communists supported Roosevelt to help win the anti-Axis war. Similarly, in 1948 we Communists join with millions of other Americans to support the Progressive ticket to help win the peace. The Communist party will enter its own candidates only in those districts where the people are offered no progressive alternatives to the twin parties of Wall Street.

Illinois Progressives Elect Eight To Board

The Defender

Sat 3-6-48

Chicago Ill

The Illinois Progressive Citizens of America elected eight Negroes to its board of directors and mapped strategy for stronger civil rights legislation during its state convention here last week at the Maryland hotel. Negroes elected to the board were: Dr. T. K. Lawless; Atty. Nelson Willis, president of the Cook County Bar association; A. J. Martin, of Peoria, president of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers; Sidney A. Jones; Taylor Thomas, Champaign civic leader; Atty. Earl B. Dickerson, Frank Marshall Davis and Dr. Metz T. P. Lochard.

What Negroes Are Doing

The News

BY MA[illegible]

The Progressive Democratic Council of Jefferson County, headed by Arthur D. Shores, has called a statewide meeting of Negro Democrats to convene in Birmingham, Sept. 19.

Purpose of the meeting is to make plans for the most effective method of casting their votes in the November election.

News 9-12-48

In preparation for the state meeting the local council has designated Sunday, Sept. 12, as Civil Rights Day. Pastors throughout the county have been asked to permit representatives of the council to make an appeal for financial assistance in the campaign.

B'ham, Ala

Convention highlights will include an address by T. Renfro Eaton at a mass meeting at 3 p.m., Sept. 19, at the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church.

James M. Hinton, of Columbia, S. C., will deliver the principal address at the mass meeting. Mr. Hinton is president of the South Carolina Conference of N. A. A. C. P. branches and is one of the founders of the Progressive Democratic Party of South Carolina. Atlanta (Ga.) Daily World, and president of the Atlanta Citizens Democratic Association.

Announced objectives of the convention are to put into operation a statewide campaign for funds to be used for the reelection of President Truman.

Mrs. Lucille Douglass, chairman of the Ensley Unit of the Progressive Democratic Council, is chairman of the finance committee.

Atlanta, Ga.

Negro members of the South Carolina Progressive Democratic Party irked at the dilatory methods of South Carolina Democrats in integrating them into party affairs promised a court test of the Party's exclusiveness regarding Negroes.

The action came on the heels of the refusal of the Dillon County Democratic Convention to seat eight Negro delegates. The organization is one of the 46 holding reorganization meetings over the state.

Chairman John H. McCray, of the South Carolina Progressive Democratic Party, and Publisher of the Lighthouse and Informer newspaper, promised "some legal action will be brought" to have the eight recognized.

Gov. Strom Thurmond, one of President Harry S. Truman, most critical foes in wake of the controversial civil rights legislation, was indorsed as a candidate for U. S. Vice President at the Democratic National Convention, which meets in Philadelphia.

All the county meetings elected delegates to the May 10 State Convention, where action has been promised in opposition to the civil rights program and in shaping party policies dealing with the right of Negroes to vote in compliance with a recent decision by the United States Supreme Court.

President Truman and his civil rights proposals were criticized in resolutions and speeches at several of the meetings.

Negro Group Pledges Support To Truman; Dixiecrats Scorned

BIRMINGHAM —(P)— A Negro political group, the Progressive Democratic Association of Alabama, pledged its support Sunday to President Truman.

More than 100 Negro delegates from seven of nine congressional districts in Alabama attended.

Montgomery, Ala

The group adopted the following three-point program of assistance to Mr. Truman.

"(1) Cast dollars before Nov. 2 for Harry S. Truman since you cannot vote for him.

"(2) Non-voting on Nov. 2.

"(3) Non-voting on Nov. 2 for any Dixiecrat elector, nor any other Dixiecrat candidate."

No Truman-pledged electors are on the ballot in Alabama.

The following officers were elected: A. D. Shores, Birmingham, chairman; C. G. Gomillion, Tuskegee, co-chairman; Mrs. L. E. Macon, Birmingham, secretary; A. P. Boynton, Selma, assistant secretary, and Mrs. L. H. Douglass, Birmingham, treasurer.

Mon 9-20-48

In a meeting here last week the Progressive Democratic Association of Alabama, headed by Atty. A. D. Shores, outlined a four-point program, including a series of Roosevelt dinners.

The group mapped a state-wide program which calls for sponsoring forums, conducting a 'poll-tax paying campaign' and encouraging voter registration.

Robeson's Visit Draws Criticism Of Legion Leaders

Commercial Appeal

A sharp criticism of local sponsors who arranged for the visit here of Paul Robeson, negro supporter of the Progressive Party was made last night by Commander Rodney Baber and the Executive Committee of Memphis Post No. 1 of the American Legion.

Robeson and Clark Foreman, treasurer of the party, spoke last night at Mason's Temple in behalf of the candidacies of Henry Wallace and Glen Taylor.

Memphis Tenn.

"The American Legion regrets that certain misguided residents of this community have seen fit to infringe upon decent proprieties and the good temper of our city by having a negro Communist sympathizer come here to further his nefarious purposes by addressing certain of our citizens," said the Legion spokesmen in a prepared statement.

"We are confident that most of those who attended were motivated either by an unfortunate curiorsity to see such a person or they were expecting to witness a resentful outbreak of outraged citizens. Certainly, we hope, few if any attended out of sympathy with him or his viscious idealogies.

"He is the same negro who has time and time again been branded as a Communist sympathizer in the public press. He is the same negro who took his son to Russia to be educated for the reason he was reputed to have said that 'the Russian atmosphere is the only one in which his son could have been reared in freedom.'

Sat 10-2-48

"The visit of this type of negro has done no good to this community, nor has it been of benefit in furthering racial relations. It has certainly reflected no credit on the people who sponsored it.

"We are sure that the good people of Memphis will agree with the Legion that a negro of this type and his sponsors would be better off in the Soviet Union they love so well. Certainly this community would be better off without them."

Refuses Request For Ticket Booth, Sound Truck

PARTY TO CALL MEETING

Memphis Tenn.

"We don't want Robeson here," City Commissioner Boyle said yesterday in disclosing he had turned down a request of the Progressive Party that they be allowed to establish a Main Street ticket booth and use a sound truck in connection with Paul Robeson's appearance here Oct. 1.

The negro singer is scheduled to appear here at Mason Temple, 958 South Fifth. He will sing and talk in behalf of the candidacies of Henry Wallace and Glen Taylor. Robeson is being brought here by the local Progressive Party.

By No Means the End

Refusal of the party's request by no means marks the end of the affair, Mrs. Lee Richardson, chairman of the Shelby County Progressive Party, said. She said the group will call a special meeting to discuss the matter.

Sun 9-26-48

Commissioner Boyle said:

"We probably made a mistake by permitting Wallace to speak in the park here, but he disclaims he is a Communist. Paul Robeson admits he is a Communist.

"We Don't Want Him"

"Understand his son lives in Moscow now. Further understand that he has made many derogatory statements about the South. We don't want Robeson here. We don't need that type of man. We don't need a Communist. There has been too much easing off on the question already.

"Many who are giving aid and comfort should be frowned upon. We suggest they do not bring him here."

Fraud, Threats Charged To Wallace Group Here

Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta Georgia

A former People's Progressive Party member charges that the Wallace group here obtained ballot petition signatures by fraud, sought members for the Communist Party and threatened to have Communists kill him if he exposed them.

Wed. 10-6-48

"Most of the persons whose names are on the petition (to put Wallace's State candidates on the Georgia ballot) do not know it," Clarence A. Ward, of Plainfield, N. J., wrote The Constitution.

Ward reported that Miss Branson Price, Director of the Party here, ordered workers to solicit people on the streets; get their names and addresses "under any pretext necessary." These names then were transferred to the petition, Ward charged.

Attaches in the Secretary of State's office said yesterday they found page after page of supposed signatures that were written in the same handwriting. Many pages were printed in long-hand by the same solicitor, they said.

Sec. of State Ben Fortson last Saturday refused to list Larkin Marshall, Macon Negro, as a Senatorial candidate; James Barfoot as a gubernatorial candidate, and Floyd Hunter as a candidate for Congress in the Fifth District, when the Wallaceites failed to sign an affidavit that the names on their 5 percent petition were names of qualified voters. The Legislature's repeal of the 5 percent law for Presidential candidates opens the ballot to Wallace, himself, however, if his electors sign an anti-Communist pledge.

Ward said his singing group was hired to come her to sing in Negro churches while the Wallace group solicited signatures for a petition to get on the Georgia ballot. When he saw the speakers seeking new members for the Communist Party, however, Ward said he withdrew. This caused him to reecive no pay for his trip, he said. Ward quoted Miss Price as stating that any Negro would be amply rewarded for such work by having the privilege of sitting at dinner with her, Barfoot and other white people.

He charged that Miss Price and Palmer Weber, another Party leader, warned that Communists would throw him overboard next time he ships out with the Merchant Marines, if he exposed their methods in Georgia.

Party Spokesmen Still Have Hopes In General Vote

Daily Worker

Tues 10-26-48

Georga's refusal to place Progressive party candidates on the November 2 ballot for state offices was upheld Monday by a ruling of the U. S. Court of Appeals.

Atlanta Ga

The Progressives in receiving an unfavorable ruling at the hands of the court will be denied representation for state offices but will have an opportunity of voting for their presidential and vice-presidential candidates since the five percent law applies only to state elections.

The Progressives had sought a temporary injunction to prevent Georgia's Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson Jr., from certifying "any candidate until the issues raised have been adjudicated by this court."

Despite the ruling, the Wallace supporters have the right to write in the name of their choice.

Judge Samuel H. Sibley, who wrote the decision, held:

Tues 10-26-48

"The coontroversy is between citizens of the same state but the contention is that the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment applies, and also the due process clause in that voters and candidates of this new party of the old party who participated in the last general election and are deprived by the recent amendment of a vested right."

Calling attention to the write-in possibility, the Progressives said they will suffer no serious inconvenience.

Magistrate Brands Hoodlums 'Cowards'

Baltimore Md

PHILADELPHIA

While police stood idly by, Magistrate Joseph H. Rainey and other Progressive Party speakers were pelted with eggs, Saturday night, during a street corner rally at 22nd St. and Indiana Ave.

Magistrate Rainey, who continued to speak after being stuck in the face by one of the eggs, told the crowd of 300 gathered for the meeting:

"Only cowards with Fascist ideas in their little minds would throw eggs from the dark at anyone."

Undaunted by Prior Display

Police in red cars had been dispatched to the meeting, prior to Rainey's arrival, when two other speakers had been hit by eggs.

The second egg-barrage was fired as Rainey, Congressional candidate from the 4th District, stepped back from the microphone after his speech.

The magistrate immediately seized the microphone again and defied the hoodlums.

Police Refuse to Act

Asked why no effort was made to stop the egg-throwers or arrest them, one police officer replied with a smirk, "What eggs?"

In his speech, Rainey lashed out at both the Republicans and Democrats for creating what he termed a "coalition" government "which served only the money interests, while the masseses of people are ignored and being led toward a third world war."

Defied Ala. Mob, Local Thugs

Rainey, who was forced to flee for his life in Birmingham recently when he insisted on speaking to a mixed audience concerning civil rights, was arrested and manhandled by Philadelphia police several weeks ago in a station house.

He was also threathened with impeachment by Laurence Eldrede, special deputy Attorney General, if he did not quit the Congressional race or resign as a magistrate.

Sat 10-16-48

Rainey refused to do either.

Political Prosecution Hinted

More recently, Eldredge, who heads a State investigation of Philadelphia magistrates, demanded the records of Rainey and five other members of the minor judiciary.

Rainey refused to release the books, but invited Eldredge's agents to inspect them in his office. This is being done.

GOP Magistrate By Passed

Meanwhile, Edredge, special deputy Attorney General, emphatically denied, this week, reports that he had requested the books of Magistrate Hobson Reynolds.

The investigation head said he had issued no such instructions and had no reason to do so. Reynolds is a Republican candidate for State Senate from the 7th District.

Wallace Urges 'Marshall Plan' for South

Favors Spending $4,000,000,000 In Four Years

The Courier-Journal
8-30-48
Louisville Ky

From Wire Dispatches.

Durham, N. C., Aug. 29.—Henry Wallace today proposed a "Marshall plan for the South" under which the Government would give the South $1,000,000,000 a year for four years to aid its industry and agriculture.

The Progressive Party presidential candidate, speaking at a state convention of his party here, said his "Southern plan" could be financed by taxing corporations that profit from Southern farms, labor, and factories.

Mon 8-30-48

"I am confident that the people of the South will get more benefit from a billion dollars advanced in this manner than the people of Europe are getting from $10,000,000,000 of political handouts under the wasteful foreign programs of the bipartisans," Wallace declared.

Gatherings Called 'Private.'

Mon. 8-30-48

Tonight's speech before the North Carolina Progressive Party was the fourth in Wallace's whirlwind tour of 20 cities in seven Southern states. He left New York by plane this morning, spoke in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Richmond, Va., and flew here for a reception and the convention.

On his seven-day tour Wallace will not speak at any meeting where whites and Negroes are segregated. Laws in some Southern states prohibit nonsegregated public meetings. But officials in some places were side-stepping the issue by agreeing to call Wallace's audiences "private" gatherings. Under this interpretation, segregation laws were not applicable.

'It Is No Handout.'

Wallace proposed his Marshall plan for the South be split evenly between industry and agriculture and be in addition to federal aid for schools, hospitals, homes, health, and Social Security.

"It is no handout I propose," he said. "There is a simple method to finance it and the returns in increased production, in health, and happiness will repay the investment over a few years."

Wallace proposed that the half billion for Southern industry be used to build factories planned, owned, and controlled in the South and paying high wages, and to help build homes and machines. The half billion for agriculture, he said, should be used to help the "honest and industrious Southern farmer establish a sound and solvent agriculture."

Nominate Accused 'Red.'

The North Carolina Progressives nominated Mary Price, party organizer recently accused of Communist connections, as their candidate for Governor.

Miss Price, 39, was called a Communist agent before a Congressional investigating committee by Elizabeth T. Bentley.

Miss Price has declined to say whether she ever had any Communist connections and to the Bentley testimony she answered: "Smear."

Berates Dixiecrats.

At Richmond, Wallace said the "Dixiecrats are an invention to make the Trumancrats looks liberal."

"The Dixiecrats are an invention to divert the people of the South from real problems to false ones, from high prices to hot words, and from the great issue of war and peace to the rantings of demagogues," he told the Virginia convention of the Progressive Party.

The convention nominated a Progressive candidate for the U. S. Senate. It selected by acclamation Mrs. Virginia Foster Durr, Arlington, wife of Clifford Durr, who recently resigned as a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

Progressives Claim to Aid 'Truly Liberal' Democrats

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—The Progressive Party claimed today it has helped, rather than hurt, the election chances of liberal Democratic Party candidates.

The claim was made by Henry Wallace's campaign manager, C. B. Baldwin.

He took issue with a recent charge by C.I.O. President Philip Murray that the Progressive Party offers "defeat . . . to American progressives" by sponsoring its own candidates in various races to oppose "liberal officeholders and candidates."

Baldwin said "If the C.I.O. looks at the facts, it will find that the Progressive Party has worked for the greatest degree of unity behind truly liberal candidates, no matter what their party label."

Of the 56 congressmen whom The C.I.O. News rates as 80 per cent liberal, Baldwin said, "there will be few whom we will oppose."

The Republicans Organize in Georgia

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

Georgia welcomes today Hugh Scott, National Chairman of the Republican Committee. He will speak in Atlanta tonight, kicking off, so to speak, the new—and we do mean new—Republican State organization under the direction of State Campaign Chairman Robert Snodgrass.

The South is a one-party region largely because the Republican Party has been content to leave it so, being unwilling to tackle the admittedly difficult and tedious task of organizing a second party. Southerners too often think that a second party can be created merely by voting the Republican ticket. The fact is, a second party can be brought into being only by organizing it on a local level, precinct and county. Under the new leadership in Georgia, which includes all that was best of the old, a hopeful sign in itself, county organizations are being formed.

The Atlanta Constitution, a pioneer in the fight to bring the two-party system to Georgia and the South, believes the two-party system necessary to our form of political government. That is why we take a dim view of splinter parties and regard the Dixiecrats just as much of a political dead-end street as the Wallace-ites and, basically, as harmful to the two-party system. Fri 10-8-48

We want Mr. Scott to know he is welcome and that thousands of Georgians and Southerners will welcome a chance to become members of his party if given the chance and given the genuine support of the National Committee—now and in the years ahead. Georgia gave Thomas Dewey 18 percent of its total vote in 1944, a surprising fact many persons have forgot. Fri 10-8-48

The appearance of the Republican National Committeeman poses a question for the Democratic National Committeeman and Committee in Georgia. It is the Democratic party for our State. It is wholly against President Truman's policies in the domestic field. Yet, in the recent primary Marvin Griffin, who was nominated as Lieutenant Governor, said from the stump that he was violently opposed to President Truman, but would support the party ticket. To date the National Committeeman and State Committee have not commented. They will, it may be assumed, vote for the ticket. But they must decide whether to publicly state so, as did Griffin, or remain silent and leave the work to others who see the issue not in terms of Truman, but in terms of years. Someone in the Democratic Party must conduct a campaign for the party.

Meanwhile, we again repeat our welcome of Chairman Scott and urge again that Georgians do all they can to create two healthy and competitive parties. We are and have our form of government through the two-party system. Failure to maintain it produces results such as France now faces.

Plan Last-Minute 'Token Effort' on Eve of Convention

(Courier Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON—The Republican party, which has avoided civil rights issues like the plague since the opening of the Eightieth Congress, is still uncertain what, if anything, it will do about civil rights legislation.

Senator Robert Taft, chairman of the Senate GOP policy committee, announced last week that the policy committee may bring up the House-passed anti-poll tax bill instead of the anti-lynch bill it had previously given top priority. Senator Taft reached this decision after the Senate Judiciary Committee failed to agree on reporting the anti-lynch bill.

TOKEN EFFORT

While the Senate Republicans debated about which bill to try to pass as a token effort to live up to its platform commitments just before election time, the House GOP leadership, for which Speaker Joe Martin is the spokesman, made it plain that it had already passed the poll tax measure and that it will pass the anti-lynch bill "within forty minutes" after the Senate passes it.

Speaker Martin declared that the House would not bother with the anti-lynch bill until the Senate took action but promised immediate passage as soon as the Senate acted. Speaker Martin has unquestioned control of the House and there is every reason to believe that he can deliver on this pledge.

BIG LOG-JAM

Meanwhile, most radio and news commentators in Washington are freely predicting that no civil rights legislation will come out of the Eightieth Congress. With less than twenty working days left before the scheduled adjournment on the eve of the Republican National Convention, June 19, Congress is faced with a tremendous log-jam of necessary legislation.

While most of the civil rights legislation has been before Congress since the early days of the first session, in 1947, it has been consistently by-passed by the GOP-dominated Congress. The status of this legislation has not changed appreciably since the end of the first session at which time the GOP box score was very low

PRESENT STATUS

The present status is as follows:

1. Anti-poll tax—Passed by the House last June, favorable committee report in Senate recently; not scheduled on Senate calendar but now being considered for test against Southern filibuster in final days of second session.

2. Anti-lynch—Still in committee in Senate; first given priority in Senate but may now be sacrificed in favor of poll tax bill; House promises immediate passage. Sat. 5-29-48

3. FEPC—Favorably reported by Senate committee, no hearings held by House committee; no chance to reach calendar this session.

4. Segregation in interstate commerce—No committee hearings in either house of Congress; no chance for action.

5. Civil rights in District of Columbia—Hearings in House, scheduled for last week, postponed; no bill in Senate; no action expected.

6. Army jim crow—Anti-discrimination section included in draft act now before Congress; however, segregation not mentioned; same section as used in 1940 draft act which was ineffective in prohibiting either discrimination or segregation; no action expected on separate bill.

URGENT BILLS

Meanwhile, Congress faces urgent appropriation bills, selective service and UMT legislation, fights on housing, education, displaced persons, anti-Communist, loyalty document and possibly labor union legislation. In addition, there will be some deficiency appropriations bills and extensive work on Federal pay raises, plus minor bills important for the operation of the Government during the election recess.

It is the consensus of local observers that the Republicans will offer just one civil rights bill, in order to attract Negro voters, allow that bill to be killed off by a Southern filibuster, and then withdraw it on the claim that these other urgent bills cannot be delayed. Then the strategy calls for the GOP to blame the Democrats, although it could have passed the bills if it had tried earlier.

Hobson Reynolds Issues Stern Challenge to GOP

The Courier

Sat 7-3-48

PHILADELPHIA—"We believe in the economic and humanitarian policies of the Republican party," said Magistrate Hobson R. Reynolds of this city, addressing the Republican National Convention here last week, as he issued a stirring challenge for unity and harmony within the party's ranks.

Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois, mporary convention chairman, troduced Magistrate Reynolds, o was accorded a rousing ova- n when he completed his ad- ss. It was pointed out that the ladelphia GOP figure has been orsed for State Senator in nsylvania.

OFFERED CONVENTION SLOGAN

Mr. Reynolds urged the GOP to adopt as a convention theme the slogan: "Let us work together," pointing out that "in many parts of the world and in many instances here in our own country the notion prevails that we cannot work together.

"Our entire country, yes, the whole world is looking forward to this convention for leadership," he declared, "We must not fail them." Magistrate Reynolds charged that the Democrats "have proved beyond any doubt they are incapable of sponsoring any program whereby they can cause democracy to work at home or abroad."

ASKS RACE INTEGRATION

His challenge to harmony and accord between the Republicans and Negroes was couched in a fervent plea. "America is made up of many minorities. These minorities can work together and they should," he said. "I speak today for a minority, for by blood and tradition I am securely bound to the Negro race. It is important to the success of our country that this group be allowed to work together with all other groups and under the same conditions and circumstances for we are interested in all questions that concern America."

Sat 7-3-48

Magistrate Reynolds declared, "We have faith in the leaders of the Republican party," and expressed the desire that Negroes would be permitted to share, unequivocally, "each and every privi lege of citizenship guaranteed us by the Constitution of our country," and urged the Republicans to protect those rights for the Negro race.

"We ask no more. We will not be satisfied with anything less," he thundered.

MUST BANISH INJUSTICES

He charged the Republican party with the responsibility of doing away with the effects of race prejudice. "Our Government can and should see to it that all Americans have equal economic opportunity and should insist that colored citizens should share responsibility with all other citizens for the welfare of the Nation."

Magistrate Reynolds bitterly lashed prejudice and racial injustices, declaring: "Injustices that follow from ignorance and in-born racial prejudices have most largely contributed to the present-day lack of a more cordial relationship between the races, and that cooperative spirit of unity which should exist, and which must finally exist, if we are to achieve that peace and economic prosperity which underlies all permanent progress."

HOBSON R. REYNOLDS

Republican Ticket Our Best Bet

The Constitution
Atlanta Ga
[illegible]

Editor Constitution: Whether President Truman's attempted blow at the South is a calamity or a blessing depends on nothing but the future action of the Southern people themselves—on how a majority of us vote in all Southern States in the next few national elections.

The calamity, if it comes, will be to the nation as well as to the South.

Most of us will vote this year with three objectives: (1) the South's best interests, (2) the nation's best interests (which is substantially the same thing, and (3) to resent (in the way that will be most effective) Harry Truman's attempt to force non-segregation upon the South, against the will of both races in the South.

On these objectives, a majority of us agree; but on means of attaining them, we differ greatly. Two courses are open to us, one based on hot-headed emotion, the other on long-headed sense. Here they are:

We may, as was done in 1860, reduce the South to the status of a political nonentity by throwing our strength to the Dixiecrats, or some other splinter party, where it will soon be gone with the wind.

That course would exactly suit the Communists—Russia's Fifth Column in our midst, for war or peace. Confusion and chaos is what they want everywhere outside the iron curtain. The Communists hope to see this nation changed from a two-party nation, which has made America great, to a multi-party nation, which would reduce the United States to the political impotency of France, where for three years nothing but a tottering coalition government has been possible. About 14 of them have already fallen; the fifteenth is now starting.

Few Southerners will ever knowingly so vote as to lend aid or comfort to the Communists. The danger is that many may do so unwittingly, not realizing the full effect of wasting their ballots on a splinter party.

GOP Bid On the other hand, the South may remain as solid as ever, but become solidly independent—nationally—and thereby keep the United States a great two-party nation, also become the dominant part of it, by always voting with whichever of the two major parties, in any national election year, seems to be preferable—the lesser of two evils when neither is satisfactory.

Nothing can hit Harry Truman harder this year than for the Solid South to support the Dewey-Warren ticket. Unless we do that, the labor and Negro vote in doubtful States may elect him. It was Truman's courtship of the labor and Negro vote in doubtful States that caused him to aim his dastardly blow at the South. He thought we were too narrow-minded, too hidebound, ever to vote in a new and independent way.

Nothing can serve better to kill the big hope of the Communists—the Russophiles—and keep the United States a great two-party nation, than for the South to become and permanently remain solidly independent, supporting one or the other of the two major parties, for all foreseeable national elections.

Another result: The Solid South, always so voting, would generally be the balance of power, as between Northern Democrats and Northern Republicans. Neither of these groups could in that case reasonably hope ever to win a Presidential election, by a majority vote, without the support of the Southern Independents. Both or them would then be found courting the Solid South (in the halls of Congress and in their national conventions) as no woman can get courted without having two eligible men madly in love with her at the same time.

1860 The present situation is analogous to that of 1860, when other hot-headed Dixiecrats held a similar rump convention, in Alabama, over-ruled the cool-headed Alexander H. Stephens, got control of the South, and held that control until they had ruined the South for a whole generation.

The hot-headed Dixiecrats of 1860 were certainly as brilliant as those of 1948. Among them were Georgia's Bob Toombs, Alabama's Bill Yancey, Mississippi's Jeff Davis, South Carolina's Preston Brooks, Louisiana's Judah P. Benjamin, and many other great orators. But when the results were all in a few years later, both they and the whole world knew their tragic error.

Why repeat that error now? Wise men make mistakes. But only fools and hot-heads repeat them.

As one great statesman of that time said: "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise with the occasion. As our case is new, so must we think anew and act anew."

How, then, should Southerners vote next November? If we vote the Dewey-Warren ticket, we will be voting, not as Republicans, but as Southern Independents, also in the most effective way possible against Harry Truman, against the Communists, for the South's best interest, and for the stability of this nation.

McCorvey And The Republicans

The News
[illegible]
Birmingham Ala

To the Editor of The News:

I am glad you gave Mr. McCorvey all the space he needed to defend himself against what he considers misleading reports about his hypothetical deals with Truman and Dewey on civil rights legislation. We can all appreciate Chairman McCorvey's grave dilemma as an influential and responsible Democratic Party official and also give him credit for the ingenious political strategy of the Dixiecrat protest whatever we may think of its wisdom or justification.

If it was possible to divorce the movement from its present hotly controversial and sectional complexes and promote it as a protest against the increasing centralization in Washington with its continued alphabetical monstrosities, pyramiding bureaucracies and alarming encroachments on states' rights, it would attract powerful support in the North, especially among the liberal right wing Republicans.

But why should Mr. McCorvey proceed to spoil the good impression by such a gratuitous and bad-mannered confession as this: "I was brought up to believe that voting a Republican ticket was just something that was not done by Southern white men and I am still chock-full of feeling against the Republican Party?" And especially at a time when we have a powerful and ruthless enemy who, if he had it, would drop an atomic bomb on Washington tomorrow morning?

This is not loyal political partisanship; it is bigotry and intolerance of the meanest kind.

Fortunately for me as an American citizen, I arrived quite a while after the War Between the States and have no inherited bias or animus either way and I can testify from long residence among them that the average Northern Republican has a much better understanding of the racial problem and a much kindlier feeling for his Southern fellow-American than Mr. McCorvey knows about. And it is no snap prophecy that if the Dixiecrat splinter should bite in deep enough to take a big slice out of the party trunk, the new political alignment would find the right-wing liberals North and South lining up against the left-wing radicals South and North.

Just why should these old musty and sinister hangovers of almost 90 years be allowed to check and smother the generous fellow feeling and honest cooperative spirit which ought to flourish between North and South and East and West of our great common and beloved country?

Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans of today are absolutely innocent of responsibility for the War Between the States and the tragic post bellum misunderstandings, outrages and blunders that followed. Let us be Democrats or Republicans, Dixiecrats or Wallaceites as we please but let us be first of all loyal and generous-hearted Americans, not blind and bigoted political partisans. Let us respect ourselves and respect our fellow citizens and earnestly consecrate ourselves to the common and supreme task of making our 48 United States a great, free and united American democracy!

Randolph Calls GOP's 'Dixie-crats'

Baltimore Md

PHILADELPHIA (NNPA)—The civil rights plank in the 1948 Republican platform is a warning to colored people that the Republican party is courting Southern States and does not give a "picayune" for colored voters, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, declared here last Tuesday.

Holding in his hands a copy of the platform, which had just been adopted by the convention, Mr. Randolph said, "This is lousy."

"It is not sufficiently strong to convey the perfect futility of the civil rights plank. It would be a joke, were it not such a tragic taversty upon decency and an insult to the common sense and pride of the colored citizens of America.

Calls Party "Dixie-crat"

"The Republican party has desended to its lowest depths of opportunism and has become more 'Dixie-crat' than Mississippi and South Carolina.

"It is a signal for the colored people to become more militant and aggressive in their fight to abolish jim crow in the Army, transportation, education and every other area of life in America by all of the forces they can mobilize, including the method of civil disobedience."

Republicans Nominate Dewey

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga
(243)
Sun 6-27-48

The Republicans have exercised rare good sense in laying aside selfish personal interests of contending candidates and lining up solidly behind New York's Governor Thomas E. Dewey for the Presidency with California's popular Governor Earl Warren, as his running mate. By any standards of measurements, these two men, one taken from the powerful East, the other from the equally powerful West, are the best and most popular pair in the whole Republican machine. There can be no doubt that the two men will make a strong bid for the support of American voters next November.

In thus choosing Mr. Dewey and Mr. Warren, the Republicans have chosen to capitalize upon their personal magnetism and popularity and thus compensate for the manifest failures of the Party to live up to its obligations and opportunities in passing legislation which would improve the lot of the common man. In Congress, where the American people get their impression on whether the party is or is not worthy of their vote and confidence, the Republicans have a shameful record of do-nothing. They refused to pass an anti-lynching bill, which President Truman sought as a measure of protection to the Negro and other minorities. They refused to pass an anti-poll tax law. They refused to lift their hands against the steadily mounting prices. They have taken away every safeguard against high rents. They have given the green light to big business and profit makers. Slum clearance and low rent housing was knifed and killed by the Republican Congress. They have silently, but craftily maneuvered all arguments and efforts away from the passage of Truman's Civil Rights program. In short the Republicans want civil rights as a great campaign issue to lure the Negro votes of the Nation, but they do not desire them as a program for action. For even at the Convention last Tuesday, the platform makers promptly rebuffed and refused to permit a Negro group to meet and discuss with them the kind of platform which would be acceptable to Negroes.

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga. 6-27-48

That is why we think Mr. Dewey himself will have to either repudiate the Republican record in Congress as well as the platform it adopted at Philadelphia if he is to have a claim upon the voters loyalty next November. Either Mr. Dewey must repudiate the Republicans and their platform or else the stigma of Robert A. Taft, who today, is the most important spokesman in the Congress, will send him to defeat in November. Taft, Taber, Allen, Halleck and Martin, these names will remain the top names in the Republican Party for many years to come. And American Negroes will think hard and long before they will consent to cast their lot with a Party whose shameful record in the recent Congress, has won for it the scorn and rebuke of all Americans.

CHICAGO (ANP) — Lassitude of the Republican party in the matter of emphatic committments on the question of civil rights to the Negro was highlighted this week by an outstanding Republican, Dr. J. B. Martin, trustee of the Sanitary district of Chicago and one of the nation's top Negro elected Republican officials.

Fed up on what he described as the "tripe handed out to Negroes for years," Martin decided to do something about it. He sent telegrams to all sitting Republican senators requesting them to establish themselves on the important subject of civil rights.

The message sent to the national leaders of the party from Maine to San Diego, is as follows: 7-9-48

Show Lack of nterest

"On issues affecting the American Negro's fight for his full rights under the constitution, during the past half-century the Republican party has shown a complete lack of interest, a large amount of downright evasion and a sense of ruthless insincerity and uncalled for fence straddling.

St. Louis Mo
The Argus

"The time is at hand for the responsible heads of Republicanism to recognize that the Negro voter of 1948 will not fall for the four "old reliable" Republican props--the Flag, the Bible, the Constitution and Mr. Lincoln.

"These props and bromides will not stand up in 1948 against such strong gales of justices as the civil rights bill, fair employment practices act, anti-poll tax and anti-lynching legislation. 7-9-48

"It must be apparent to the Republican party that in an election year the time when the Negro voter is usually cultivated, and political corn is knee-deep that such props as a story on Mr. Lincoln and a review of what Republican party did for the Negro 85 years ago are too frail to lean on now.

St. Louis, Mo.

Empty Political Speeches

"The Negro voter has learned, through bitter experience, that any analysis of the campaign speeches made to Negro audiences by most candidates on both the Republican and Democratic tickets will disclose the fact that beyond giving the Bible their cordial and complete approval, taking their stand firmly on the Constitution and the bill of rights and violently waving the American flag, there is never anything in their speeches pledging them to sponsor or give emphatic support to laws which would give the American Negro the full enjoyment of his constiutional rights. On the contrary, they give the Negro voter an overflowing dose of 80-year-old history which they have seasoned with platitudes or leavened with just plain bunk. Fri. 7-9-48

"So, I say to the Republican party, my party and the party of my father, the Negro voters of 1948 want to know how you stand on the civil rights bill, the anti-poll tax, and anti-lynching and fair employment practices legislation? They want action now!"

18th Ward GOP Battleground; Organization Fails To Endorse Candidates In Committee Races

(248)

St. Louis Argus

By Mamie Smith

Fri. 7-16-48

The 18th Ward, which has developed the third most powerful Republican Organization in the State, under the leadrship of Attorney John A. Davis, has become a political battleground this year for the office of committeeman and committeewoman. Such intense feeling exists that the organization has endorsed only one candidate, Henri Chouteau, Ward candidate for State Senator, Third Senatorial District.

The bitter feud that was waged last spring between the Stephens and Hobbs factions continues with unabated fury in the 18th Ward. That fight was won by Howard Stephens, local shoe manufacturer. In a majority of the city wards, candidates representing both factions, are squaring off to do battle primary day August 3, 1948.

It is charged that Mayor Kaufmann and Dick Gruner, collector of the City of St. Louis, are backing the candidacy of S. E. Garner local attorney once defeated by Dr. G. J. Dixon for Magistrate in 1946 and once by Atty. S. R. Redmond, for Alderman in 1947. The object of this group is to eliminate Atty. John A. Davis, long a race leader, from politics. Davis, although confined to the hospital last spring because of illness, supported the successful Stephens group and was rewarded for his efforts by being elected a delegate to the recent Republican National Convention. It is charged that Dick Gruner, long a power in local politics, is greatly embittered over the outcome of last spring's battle and is determined to oust Davis as Committeeman of the 18th Ward by throwing his support to Garner. Davis has four precinct chairmen working in Gruner's office, whom it is charged, have been instructed by Gruner to work for the election of Garner and Mrs. Penrose to the Committee.

St. Louis Arg

It is also charged that another downtown politician has put a third candidate in the race to beat Davis, because Davis is too independent.

Davis has long been a favorite with the Negroes of St. Louis. He introduced the first Civil Rights Bill in Missouri, while serving as a member of the Missouri Legislature in 1927, and had to leave Jefferson City for two weeks because of threats against his life. In that session he also advocated that Lincoln University be abolished and the Negroes of the State attend the University of Missouri to insure equal educational opportunities to the youth of the State regardless of race; he also pushed this idea as a tax savings measure. Davis, as president of the Mound City Bar Association in 1930, threatened to challenge the jury panels of the Circuit Court, charging that Negroes were being discriminated against in Jury service. As a result of Davis' action, backed by the Post-Dispatch, the Circuit Judges speedily enforced the law and Negroes have been doing Jury service ever since. Davis further distinguished himself in 1932 in the drive to force merchants, doing business in Negro neighborhoods, to hire Negro clerks. This was a long and bitter fight and was eventually crowned with success.

Old residents recall that in 1929, a group of lawyers including Davis, filed suit to break an order of the Park Commissioner limiting Negro golf players on the public links at Forest Park from

ATTY. JOHN A. DAVIS

6:00 a. m. to 12:00 on Monday mornings. Judge Moses Hartman, now deceased, before whom the case was tried, ruled that the order was not an abuse of discretion by the Park Commissioner or a violation of the Civil Rights of St. Louis Negroes. The Negroes of St. Louis were enraged by this decision and made an attempt to defeat Hartman when he came up for re-election in 1924. Negroes became further enraged when Garner wrote a long letter supporting Hartman, in the face of his hostility and prejudice towards Negroes. Subsequently the Park Commissioner revoked this ruling.

Mrs. Ione Penrose, present Committeewoman, had Davis' backing in 1944, in her successful race to beat Mrs. Naomi Oldham, then incumbent. This year the two are rivals again and the issue is in doubt. Mrs. Penrose, it is charged, has the backing of the Mayor and Dick Gruner, and is being forced to team up with Garner against Davis. This action has thrown the organization into an uproar. Employees, who ve their appointment to both Davis and Mrs. Penrose, are on the spot; this condition of affairs has been further muddled by the announcement of Mrs. Vivian Franklin, in these columns last week, that she is a candidate for Committeewoman and that she is backing Atty. John A. Davis. Present conditions point to a bitter fight in which Mrs. Naomi Oldham, an old and shrewd politician, may easily emerged the winner.

Efforts of leading ward Republicans to get some of the opposition to withdraw, in the interests of party harmony, have hit a stone wall. It is feared that a bitter primary campaign will last thru the November election and severely impair Republican chances of carrying the ward. Those ward residents, backing Mrs. Margaret Bush Wilson, Wallacite Candidate for Congress, Eleventh District, are hoping that the dissension in the 18th Ward Republican Organization deepens. This condition favors Mrs. Wilson's candidacy for Congress and threatens to kill off Bakewell, incumbent, who has made an excellent record. Mrs. Franklin, a former secretary in Garner's office, openly charges that Garner and Mrs. Penrose agreed last November to team up against Davis and that she will not withdraw from the race unless Garner withdraws. Atty. Henry D. Espy has already signified his willingness to withdraw in the interests of party harmony. No significance is attached to the candidacy of Marion Howard, long one of Davis' lieutenants. It is thought that he is merely in the race because of Davis' severe illness last spring and the attempt of a downtown politician to control the 18th Ward.

In this writer's opinion Davis, the only veteran in the race, will be an easy winner on his record. The Mayor, who is very unpopular with Negroes because of his evasive action with the group on the slum clearance project and Alderman S. R. Redmond's Civil Rights legislation, is not expected to do Davis any harm by his opposition. On the contrary, it is expected to give the fighting committeeman a larger vote of confidence. The fight for committeewoman will be a dog fight.

Senators Eastland And Fulbright Are Responsible For Poll Tax, Rather Than Lynching, Being Made The Issue In Battle

34

By WILLIAM D. SISSON Sun. 7-1-48

WASHINGTON, July 31.—It was a major reversal of policy when the Republicans decided to make their civil rights fight in the Senate on the AntiPoll Tax Bill rather than the AntiLynching Bill.

For months the Republican leaders in the Senate made no secret of the fact that they wanted to pass an antilynching bill. The main reason was for its emotional appeal to the Northern minority groups, especially the negroes. The Republicans desperately want back this Fall those negro votes they got as a matter of routine for many years but haven't gotten since 1932.

Mr. Sisson

Although lynching has all but disappeared, the Republicans apparently figured they could make a stronger appeal for the negro vote with a bill banning such acts than with any of the other so-called civil rights bills. They don't want to be forced to have to touch the antisegregation proposal. They don't live in negro sections themselves, but in white residential areas. Memphis Tenn

The principal credit for forcing the Republicans to settle on the AntiPoll Tax Bill for the civil rights test rather than the AntiLynching Bill goes to Senator Eastland, (D., Miss.) who led the successful fight in the Senate Judiciary Committee that resulted in the complete emasculation of the bitter Ferguson AntiLynching Bill. Senator Eastland had able and untiring help from Senator Fulbright, (D., Ark.), also a member of the Judiciary Committee.

And now it can be told that a few of the Republican members of the committee gave Senators Eastland and Fulbright backhanded or undercover aid in their fight to strip the bill by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), of its teeth.

The fight in the Judiciary Committee dragged for months. First there were long hearings. Then a subcommittee composed of Senators Ferguson, Revercomb (R., W. Va.), and Eastland spent weeks wrangling over the draft of a bill they could send to the full committee. The Commercial

Then the full committee consumed more weeks fighting over a bill to send to the floor. Appeal

When the bill finally emerged from the committee it was meaningless. It had been written by Senator Eastland and it contained nothing that wasn't already a part of the law of the land. Appeal

The leaders of the minority groups who had been yelling so loudly for an anti-lynching bill were quick to denounce the committee measure and call for its shelving. Memphis Tenn came to Washington for the opening of the special session, but stopped hardly long enough to shave before turning around and heading back to Tennessee to rejoin the fight in behalf of the candidacy of Gordon Browning for governor. Sun. 7-1-48

Mr. Gore originally said he planned to take no part in the contest, other than to introduce former Governor Browning when the latter spoke at Mr. Gore's home town of Carthage. But as the heat grew more intense Mr. Gore just couldn't stand it. He got into the fight with both feet and has been stumping the state for the man who appointed him State Labor Commissioner in 1937.

GOP Vote Offer Hit by Dawson

WASHINGTON

"The cynical disregard which Republicans have for protecting the civil rights of minorities is shown in the recent proposal by a Republican Congressman that the Republican Party would junk its civil rights program if Southern Democrats would vote for a Republican," Congressman William L. Dawson (Dem., Ill.) said in a statement this week.

Dawson said:

"This brazen proposal to abandon the civil rights program to which the Republican Party has long pledged its support shows clearly that the Republican Party seeks not to help colored persons and other minority groups but seeks only votes, theirs or any others it can get.

Says Promises Not Reliable

"If they can get the votes of minority groups by promises, they make the promises. If they believe they can get votes by going back on their promises to minority groups, they are willing to go back on their old promises and to make new ones.

Baltimore Md.

"Colored persons and other members of minority groups are shown clearly by this statement that they can expect no performance, only promises, from the Republican Party."

Southern Democrats, GOPs Agree On Basic Concepts of Liberty---Taft

The Constitution Tues 10-12-48
Atlanta Ga.

NASHVILLE—(AP)—Sen. Robert A. Taft, Republican, Ohio, opened a Southern campaign tour last night with an appeal to Tennessee Democrats to join in support of Republican nominees for President and Senator.

In an address prepared for delivery before a rally here and over a nation-wide radio hookup Taft sharply criticized President Truman for the conduct of America's foreign policy.

"He has just weakened our case against Russia," he said, by proposing to send Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow, just after we had submitted the dispute to the United Nations, thereby discrediting both Secretary Marshall and the United Nations itself."

On the other hand, he said, Republican Candidate Dewey "has stated clearly his views on foreign policy. He has the support of the Republican Party in those views. He is an able administrator, with the ability to select able assistants.

Tues 10-12-48

Taft described the "basic difference" between what he called the "Truman Party" and the Republican Party in these words:

"Do we wish to progress under American principles of liberty and justice and equality, or do we wish to adopt the totalitarian ideas imported from Europe and so prevalent throughout the world today, which turn over all our rights to the tender mercies of a bureaucratic government?

Tues 10-12-48

"On that issue most of the old line Democrats in the North are already supporting the Republican candidates. On that issue there is a basic agreement between the Southern Democrats and the Republican Party. It makes no sense for them to fail to support the Republican candidates this year."

IT is not an exaggeration to say that the record of Governor Thomas E. Dewey, on matters pertaining to Negroes, is better than any man who has sought the Presidency of the United States since the administration of Abraham Lincoln.

His record is infinitely better than any Governor of New York, including such liberal and distinguished predecessors as Al Smith, later Democratic candidate for President; the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Herbert Lehman.

Governor Dewey has had placed on the statutes of New York, in the five brief years of his administration, more laws against racial discrimination than had ever been enacted by any other State Government since the founding of the Republic.

Sat 10-23-48

Laws dealing with almost every phase of racial discrimination were passed in an effort to force this hideous plague out of New York communities. In-so-far as they can be achieved by laws he has sought to protect the interests and welfare of Negroes in all of their contacts with other races.

Favorable racial legislation is stressed because it is mainly through laws that Negroes have advanced to their present status. The willingness to seriously fight for the enactment of laws which particularly benefit Negroes is the acid test of friendship, for no legislation is so unpopular with white citizens and so difficult to enact, as it always attracts maniacal opposition and attacks from racial bigots. This is why there has not been one piece of racial legislation enacted by the Congress in eighty years.

* * *

One of the most important laws ever enacted for the protection of the fundamental interests of Negroes is the Fair Employment Practice Commission, designed to wipe out racial discrimination in employment. The right to work is as fundamental as the right to live, and most of the ills which Negroes suffer come from poverty, forced on them by discrimination in employment. New York State, under Governor Dewey, was the first to create a Fair Employment Practice Commission and it has served as a model for the only three States which have had sufficient fairness and courage to follow its example.

The State Government of New York has set an example for private industry in the employment of Negroes as there are more Negroes holding white collar Government positions in New York than any State in the Union. Negroes are thoroughly integrated on the basis of merit and thirty-one Negro State employes draw salaries ranging from $5,500 to $17,500. No other State can boast of as many as five Negro State employes receiving as much as $5,500 a year.

Colored women, who are the orphans of politics in every other State, are given fair and impartial treatment in New York. In nearly every State the most difficult persons to place in Government positions are Negro women. But in New York hundreds of women are employed by the State in various capacities. A number of them are supervisors, and Mrs. Bertha Diggs is the head of a bureau at a salary of $7,700 a year.

Negro women are also indebted to Governor Dewey for a law forcing employers to pay equal pay to women doing the same work as men. New York is one of the few States giving women this protection.

* * *

Governor Dewey's administration passed a law wiping out the iniquitous quota system and other forms of racial discrimination practiced by institutions of learning. New York is the only State in the Union where an applicant for admission to a college or university cannot be turned down because of his race or color.

The far-reaching damage suffered by Negroes through discrimination by colleges and universities is best illustrated by what has happened in the field of medicine. The health of Negroes suffer from the lack of medical care, partly due to the inadequate number of Negro physicians. There are only 3,500 Negro physicians in the United States as compared to 167,000 white physicians and the small number of Negro doctors is mainly due to discrimination by white medical schools. There are only two Negro medical schools.

Negroes are better housed in New York State than any State in the union, largely due to the State's man-like housing legislation enacted through Governor Dewey. New York approved legislation permitting insurance companies to build homes at a reasonable rental for middle-class citizens. It gave tax exemptions to these developments in order to keep down rents. It also advances money to cities of the State for slum clearance projects. The privilege of living in decent homes is one of the most important needs of Negroes everywhere.

* * *

Most of the white insurance companies charge Negroes a higher rate than they do whites. This fraud prevails almost everywhere in the Nation except New York. Governor Dewey wiped out this dastardly practice in New York State with the passage of Article 9A of the Consolidated Laws, which makes it an offense for insurance companies to discriminate, in any form, because of race or color.

New York has had for some years laws against racial discrimination in public places. But these laws have been greatly strengthened under Governor Dewey. Anti-discrimination laws have also been enacted to include labor unions, public schools, veteran housing, public utilities, public works and a number of other activities.

In addition to this racial legislation, Governor Dewey's administration has enacted more than a score of labor laws which protect and advance the interest of the working people. These laws regulate working conditions, pay, hours, safety devices and other phases of labor which are of great importance to Negroes, as 98 per cent of the Negro people do manual labor. Due to these labor laws Negroes of New York are the highest paid in the Nation, with the best working conditions and fewer working hours.

* * *

Governor Dewey made it possible for Harlem to have a Negro Congressman by redistricting this section so as to give Negroes a majority in that Congressional district. This is what his distinguished predecessors refused to do.

Governor Dewey also placed more than forty Negroes in the class of big business. When he was made governor of New York less than ten Negroes owned package liquor stores. The licenses to operate such businesses were largely confined to whites, even for stores located in Negro districts. Governor Dewey made it a policy to give licenses for liquor stores in colored districts only to Negroes. Now Negroes own and operate fifty liquor stores in New York. The average net profit of each of these stores is estimated to be more than $20,000 a year.

This is but a scanty outline of a superb record of unprejudiced public service which has never been equaled in our times. It is a record of a man whose vision and impartiality the world needs in dealing with complications, due to differences of race and nationality. He is the kind of man Negroes must have in the White House if they are to achieve the equality guaranteed them by the Constitution. Let us put him there.

Gov. Warren Woos the South

Tues 10-12-48
Atlanta Ga

Wooing of the Southern vote by handsome, gallant, Romeo Republicans continues. On last Friday evening Georgia had a personal touch of it from the Chairman of the National GOP Committee, a Virginian who strummed the lute of Confederate ancestry under Marse Robert.

"Local Authority" and "Co-operation With the States in Solving Problems" are the two tunes played in this wooing.

"Rights"

Gov. Warren appeared in Madison, Wis., last Friday night. Again the beef and muscles in his speech were "States' rights." Said the New York Times report of that speech:

"Mr. Warren devoted the larger part of his speech to the discussion of the relationship between State and national governments. He said that 'State government alone will never be able to come to grips with all the intricate, far-reaching problems we face today.'

"However, Mr. Warren insisted that the Federal Government must 'deal co-operatively with the States.' He emphasized this by saying that 'every problem that can possibly be solved locally should be solved on the local level.'

"Mr. Warren charged that 'people of America unfortunately have been propagandized to the effect that every program designed to improve their lot must be administered from Washington under the jealous, watchful eye of a paternal Federal Government.'

"'Those who hold this philosophy of government completely overlook the fact that, if State and local government is to be by-passed in every case, these governmental limbs of our American system will wither from disuse,' Mr. Warren asserted. He said that it was necessary to preserve and strengthen State government, adding it was 'about time that we revive the interest of the nation in State government.' He stated that this should be 'national policy.'"

Gov. Warren is doing a real job which, from the South's viewpoint, is obstructed and smeared by the Dixiecrats' States' rights group. Nevertheless, he patently is speaking largely to the South.

Issue There is a very real issue before the people of this country in determining how far Federal control of local government can, or should, go. Gov. Warren carefully explains that some problems require national attention, and action, but that the error lies in believing that Washington can provide an easy, nicely packaged formula, thus increasingly by-passing local government.

Tula 10-12-48

The tragedy of it is that Gov. Warren's statesmanship is obscured and dirtied up by the States' rights Dixiecrats who, for all their protesting, cannot escape the fact that they have been joined by the Ku Klux element; the "damn the Negro" crowd, and by all the elements of hate and violence which have so long obscured all that is good in the South. Nor have the Dixiecrat States' righters sought to cut them away. Not since Strom Thurmond's original statement on the day following his "nomination" at Birmingham has there been any word against the elements of violence and Ku Kluxism. The reason—that is about 98 percent of the States' rights Dixiecrats' total strength.

Hurt So, what happens? The important issue of States' rights is advertised to the nation as Ku Kluxism—when in reality it is an important issue for the whole nation. The South somehow manages to put its worst foot, worst voice forward in national issues. And, when the final decision is in, the South will be the worst hurt.

There certainly is no kinship between the "kept" States' rights Dixiecrats and Gov. Earl Warren. They are not talking about the same thing. The Dixiecrats seek to retain States' wrongs; Gov. Warren is talking about States' rights and is saying that our National Government in the past has been made up of men who were graduates of the tough schools of local government.

The GOP high command is troubled by the Senate races in which members of the unpopular Eightieth Congress are having difficult races in States where Dewey is sure to win. This has led them to send Dewey in to save, if possible, the hides of the Republican reactionaries who are facing defeat. Because of this Dewey's scheduled speech in North Carolina is in jeopardy and Warren's proposed appearance in Georgia is in the balance. Georgia would prefer Warren to Dewey, and no offense intended. If the GOP strategy board will send Gov. Warren in to make one of his States' rights speeches they will be surprised—and gratified—on the morning of Nov. 3. A lot of Southerners are hearing Warren—from Massachusetts and Wisconsin—where he made his two strongest States' rights speeches.

THE GOP'S BROKEN PROMISES

Afro-American

Although the Republican-controlled Senate last week defeated all civil rights amendments to the draft bill save one, Senator William (Bill) Langer (R., N.D.) who sponsored them, emerged a hero as far as we are concerned.

Senator Langer, whose seven amendments sought to end segregation in the armed forces of the U.S., was finally able, by a 37-35 roll-call vote, to get through his anti-poll tax amendment by which members of the armed services will be exempted from paying this tax in order to vote.

Passage of this amendment and defeat of the vicious Russell amendment which would give Congressional sanction to a jim-crow Army by permitting volunteers to say that they would serve only in units composed of members of their own race were highlights of a hectic week of debate.

Senator Langer's greatest service, as we see it, was in laying bare, for all to see, the hypocrisy of the Republican Party's 1944 platform which called for specific civil rights legislation. Not one of these plans calling for a national FEPC, anti-poll tax law, antilynching law, etc., has been enacted into law. Baltimore, Md. 6-19-48

Exposure of this duplicity on the part of the GOP serves as a vivid reminder that party platforms, as far as minority groups are concerned, are mere scraps of paper to be forgotten completely after the election.

Campaign promises and post-election performance, we have found, are entirely different things and we'll hold our tongue in cheek when the "I Promise" boys begin making their pre-election rounds. 6-19-48

By defeating the six Langer amendments, the Republican-controlled Senate thumbed its nose at the party platform. By its action it demonstrated, beyond a doubt, its intention to maintain the status quo in our military establishment.

Those Republicans and Democrats, too, who voted against these amendments should be long remembered. Bill Langer has driven all of them out into the open where they may be viewed in their true colors.

'Tis said, a politician never changes his spots.

'Men With Little Black Mustaches'

34d Repub

The Constitution

This weary Democrat said:

"I don't trust none of those fellows with little black mustaches. Not airy one of 'em."

I thought I detected an honest tear in his eye as he thought of the convention.

Atlanta, Ga.

He doesn't like Truman, either. But, at least, Harry Truman doesn't have one of those little black mustaches.

That comforted him. But only a very little. Fri.

The Dewey ticket did two things. It hit the Southern revolt a body blow. Dewey is strong for the civil liberties to an extent which makes Harry Truman's seem a bit pale. He has already established an FEPC in New York State--minus the police force feature for enforcement. He is sure to push through antilynch and antipoll tax legislation as soon as the next Congress convenes. 7-2-48

There are some who hopefully anticipate he may drive through this civil liberties legislation, but then will say he believes that any FEPC is a State matter—especially so since the employment offices, once under Federal control, have been turned back to the States.

But this is discussed in wistful words and it is obvious much of it is wishful thinking and hoping. The man with the little black mustache is very disquieting in the anti-Truman circles.

Warren Selection of Earl Warren has comforted some. But Dewey is the boss. It is interesting to note that between them they have indorsed a strong public health bill and medical insurance; public housing, public development of rivers, and all the Roosevelt New Deal measures already established in law. Fri 7-2-48

Warren's father was an immigrant from Scandinavia. He was fired from his job for going on strike and was blacklisted. He had to leave the region to get another job. The family lost all it had, including the home. All that is in Warren's background. He will never think with the reactionaries. But he is second man.

It is Warren who makes the ticket so strong that Democratic defeat is, at this writing, inevitable.

Division If it were not for the race question, the Democratic Party could find plenty of points on which to unite and give the GOP a real race.

But the Party is divided.

There will be little national interest in many of the States, the emphasis being on congressional and other State-level races.

There is lots of wishful thinking, but the facts are that it is with Harry Truman the Party will have to ride out the November election. He is the only one around to take it. There will be delegations, and delegates, which will keep calling the name of Dwight Eisenhower. But he cannot want it. 7-2-48

The Democratic Party faces a long, slow process of rebuilding. It is going to be pushed back, nationally, to the low ebb of the '20s. The gloom is thick and the Philadelphia convention is likely to be a horror.

Dewey If the Dewey organization remains intact, he may well become the Mark Hanna of the twentieth century . . . a possibility of nightmare-like qualities. Fri. 7-2-48

It is anticipated that the ticket of Dewey and Warren will crack the solid South. The GOP intends to campaign in the border States and Warren likely will come into the Deep South for a speech.

Texas is in doubt, but believed safe for the Democrats. Florida, Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia are the States where the real fight will be made to pry at least one or two traditionally Democratic States out of the Truman column. Atlanta, Ga.

Some will do like Georgia—fight him in the convention as long as a fight can be made—and then accept the decision of the convention. Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Louisiana, Arkansas, Alabama, Tennessee, Texas, North Carolina are almost sure to go Democratic—as of this writing. But some of their electors may go off the reservation when the time comes for them to act. Their part of the process of electing a President comes after the November balloting. The Constitution

Two developments would be of enormous assistance to the Democrats. One could be for some leader to arise who could convince the Southern Democrats that a national party cannot exist for the chief purpose of maintaining the South's idea of white supremacy. The second would be for the Northern Democrats and liberals to quit pushing the South and to evidence faith in the sincerity of Southern determination to proceed, as before, along the way of better treatment and citizenship for the Negro. As matters stand the Democratic Party is to be a minority party for at least four years.

Dr. Martin Asks Action Of All Republican Solons

7-4-48 Daily World Sun.

Atlanta, Ga.

CHICAGO— (ANP)— Lassitude of the Republican party in the matter of emphatic committments on the question of civil rights to the Negro was highlighted this week by an outstanding Republican, Dr. J. B. Martin, trustee of the Sanitary district of Chicago and one of the nation's top Negro elected Republican officials.

Fed up on what he described as the "tripe handed out to Negroes for years," Martin decided to do something about it. He sent telegrams to all sitting Republican senators requesting them to establish themselves on the important subject of civil rights.

The message sent to the national leaders of the party from Maine to San Diego, is as follows:

"On issues affecting the American Negro's fight for his full rights under the constitution, during the past half-century, the Republican party has shown a complete lack of interest, a large amount of downright evasion, and a sense of ruthless insincerity and uncalled for fence straddling.

Daily World

"The time is at hand for the responsible heads of Republicanism to recognize that the Negro voter of 1948 will not fall for the four 'old reliable' Republican political props-the Flags, the Bible, the Constitution and Mr. Lincoln.

"These props and bromides will not stand up in 1948 against such strong gales of justice as the civil rights bill, fair employment practices act, anti-poll tax and anti-lynching legislation. Atlanta, Ga.

"It must be apparent to the Republican party that an election year the time when the Negro voter is usually cultivated and political corn is knee-deep that such props as a story on Mr. Lincoln and a review of what Republican party did for the Negro 85 years ago too frail to lean on now.

EMPTY SPEECHES Sun.

"The Negro voter has learned, through bitter experience, that any analysis of the campaign speeches made to Negro audiences by most candidates on both the Republicans and Democratic tickets will disclose the fact that beyond giving the Bible their cordial and complete approval, taking their stand firmly on the Constitution and the bill of rights and violently waving the American flag, there is never anything in their speeches pledging them to sponsor or give emphatic support to laws which would give the American Negro the full enjoyment of his constitutional rights. On the contrary, they give the Negro voter an overflowing dose of 80-year-old history which they have seasoned with platitudes or leavened with just plain bunk. 7-4-48

"So. I say to the Republican party, my party and the party of my father, the Negro voters of 1948 wan to know how you stand on the civil rights bill, the anti-poll tax, anti-lynching and fair employment practices legislation? They want action now!"

GOP Platform Shuns Isolationism, Calls for Civil Rights Program

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Tues.

6-22-48

PHILADELPHIA, June 22—(Tuesday)—(AP)—A pledge to continue America's international cooperation was approved early today by the Republican Resolutions Committee in a platform shunning isolationism.

The platform, which is to be presented to the Republican National Convention, also promises to battle for world peace through the United Nations.

In a slam-bang GOP family battle, the platform writers beat down repeated attempts to amend the foreign policy plank.

The plank said the United Nations should be freed of the use of any veto in the peaceful settlement of international disputes. This language did not mention Russia directly.

At home, the platform said if the Party is given full power of government it will press strong measures to combat Communism. It calls for a far-reaching Civil Rights program, including enactment of fair employment, anti-lynch, and anti-poll tax legislation.

It opposes racial segregation in the Armed Forces. Tues.

The platform pledged the Party to a battle against high living costs and inflation. 6-22-48

Although the meeting was held behind closed doors, Chairman Henry Cabot Lodge reported to newsmen later there were vigorous battles on the foreign policy plank and domestic policy as well.

Sen. Brooks, Republican, Illinois, was reported unofficially to have led in efforts to spike some sections of the foreign policy plank. And Charles S. Reed, of Omaha, Neb., took a leading role in preventing severe revision of the platform's original text, prepared by a Resolutions Sub-Committee.

On domestic policy, the resolutions group fell into the severest battle over housing, finally writing in a plank calling for a broad program of Government-constructed, low-rent housing. Legislation for such housing was killed in the last hours of the GOP-dominated Eightieth Congress.

The text of the platform was not given out immediately.

The document probably will be presented to the Republican Convention on Wednesday. The Convention could change it, but is not likely to.

Lodge disclosed among its planks are: The Constitution

A pledge to support the States' claims to control over tidelands, rather than Federal control.

A strong plank greeting Israel and calling for full recognition of the new country with integrity of boundaries.

A plank on education. Lodge said reporters would have to draw their own conclusions—after they see the language—as to whether it constitutes "Federal aid to education." Atlanta, Ga.

A plank supporting self-Government for the District of Columbia, but not representation in Congress.

Lodge said the anti-Communist plank does not indorse the Mundt-Nixon Bill. Tues. 6-22-48

Lodge said that some revisions were made in the foreign plank but that they did not weaken it.

Lodge disclosed officially that the foreign affairs plank calls for elimination of the veto in United Nations questions involving peaceful settlement of disputes. He said it also urges the setting up of an international peace-keeping force.

The Resolutions Committee adopted a labor plank without a fight. The plank read like this as the meeting began: 6-22-48

Brand Of Rump Session Put On Special Call; Mississippians Confer

Wed: 7-21-48

WASHINGTON—(AP) — Thomas E. Dewey's campaign manager said Tuesday the country cannot expect the 1948 Republican platform to be voted into law at a "rump" session of Congress.

Herbert E. Brownell, managing Dewey's drive for the presidency, told a news conference that Republican congressional leaders will determine next week a party program in the special session called by President Truman.

Brownell said:

'You will find the Republican Party again will place the best interests of the country over and above partisanship."

Dewey's manager said he is confident the Republicans will adopt a "constructive" attitude. He said that if 'Congress and the President fail to cooperate in the special session "it again will be President Truman's fault."

Brownell said, however, that the Congress session can not be expected to take up the Republican platform adopted at Philadelphia last month and enact it into law. He added:

"The Republican platform calls for the enactment of a program by a Republican Congress under the leadership of a Republican president. Wed: 7-21-48

"Obviously, this cannot be done at a rump session called at a political convention for political purposes in the heat of a political campaign."

Brownell declined to elaborate on his labeling of the special meeting of lawmakers as a "rump session."

GALLUP POLL

The Constitution

Little Difference in Parties Seen

Atlanta, Ga. Wed.

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J.—American voters today place almost equal confidence in the ability of the two major parties to solve the nation's most important problem. This is in contrast to the attitude of voters prior to the 1944 election when a substantial majority had greater faith in the Democratic Party to handle both domestic and foreign affairs. 7-14-48

When representative voters throughout the Nation were asked by the Institute to name the country's most serious problem they named foreign policy first, followed by the high cost of living, strikes and labor problems, and housing.

The same voters were then asked which party they felt could best handle that particular problem. Eliminating all votes except those which named one of the two major parties, the voting goes this way:

Democratic Party	52%
Republican Party	48

Elections are usually decided on the basis of two considerations; first, voter appraisal of the merits of the candidate; and, second, voters' convictions on which party can do the best job of handling major problems of the day.

Wed

On the last point, it is enlightening to compare today's figures with results of a survey prior to the 1944 presidential election and a similar poll for the 1946 congressional election.

7-14-48

When the identical question was put to the people in 1944, those voters naming either the Democratic Party or the Republican Party voted this way:

1944

Democratic Party	55%
Republican Party	45

The same question was repeated just before the off-year elections 1946. By that time voter sentiment had changed as shown in the following table:

1946

Democratic Party	40%
Republican Party	60

The Constitution

In the 1946 election the Republicans captured control of both the Senate and the House.

Voters give the nod to the Democrats when it comes to keeping reins on the high cost of living, but believe the Republicans can do a better job handling our relations with foreign countries. This is shown in the following table:

Warren Called People's Choice

Columbia Record

Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note—As the Republican convention opens in Philadelphia, Drew Pearson concludes his series on G.O.P. Republican candidates by focusing the spotlight today on dark-horse Gov. Earl Warren of California.)

Columbia S. C.

PHILADELPHIA—If Republican leaders want to be sure of winning next November, if they want to carry a sizable portion of the Democratic, pro-labor vote, the man this convention will finally pick will be Gov. Earl Warren of California.

Of course, when G.O.P. leaders sit down in the smoke-filled rooms, they are notorious for picking the man they want rather than the man the people want. So the modest Mr. Warren, who has done nothing about corralling delegates, may not win their favo. 6-21-48

But history has proved that there is a large bloc of independent voters in this country which swtiches from one party to the other according to the candidate. Roosevelt was always able to swing this bloc to the Democrats. Warren, on the other hand, is the one Republican who can be sure of swinging them back to the G.O.P.

He has proved this in California. 'Asked how he was able to carry every one of California's 58 counties for governor in 1942, Warren replied: "I did it with Democrats." In 1946 he was so popular with both parties, that the Democrats as well as the Republicans renominated him. And in the recent California primary, Warren got about the same number of votes as Truman, despite the fact that there are 1,000,000 more registered Democrats than Republicans.

Unquestionably, Warren is the one 100 per cent sure-fire G.O.P. candidate guaranteed to beat any Democrat, probably including Eisenhower.

Mon. 6-21-48

Warren Vs. Dewey

There is one great difference between Warren and Dewey. Both have given their states extremely efficient administrations. Both are highly competent executives. Both have spent almost all their lives in the complicated science of government.

But Warren has deep-rooted sympathy for human beings. Dewey has stood up for minorities, but his position seems to come from a sense of fairness and political expedience, not from sympathy.

An off-the-record conversation occurring at the Governors' conference in Portsmouth, N. H., last week, illustrates the difference between the two men.

At a governors' breakfast, Dewey started lambasting the teachers' lobby, said it had flooded the country with falsehoods, urged that the governors start a counter-offensive.

Gov. Jim Duff of Pennsylvania suggested that Dewey bring this up at the round-table scheduled for later in the morning.

"Oh, no," replied the New York governor, "not with the press present. That would ruin everything."

When other governors asked Dewey what he proposed, he suggested: "We'll call an executive session and exclude the press." Teachers' propaganda, he added, "is the biggest lie since Adolf Hitler."

So an executive session was called at which the press was barred, and at which Dewey proposed that Frank Bane, secretary of the Governors' conference, hire a couple of publicity experts at $50,000 a year and start a campaign with full-page advertisements combatting the teachers' propaganda

Teachers' Friends

Governor Warren and Governor Tom Mabry of New Mexico, a Democrat, didn't think much of this.

"In New Mexico," Mabry remarked, "we are short 600 teachers. We think teachers should be paid more than domestic servants, who get $50 a week—if you can find them. Common labor gets a dollar an hour. I don't see why you should single out the teachers' lobby. What about the utilities lobby, the oil lobby, the potash lobby, the liquor lobby and a lot of others? I can't see any reason why the teachers, who have always been underpaid, should be singled out."

Dewey maintained, however, that he had had no trouble with other lobbies. 6-21-48

"I don't know how it is in your state, Tom," argued Governor Warren, "and maybe as you say there is no teacher shortage in New York. But there certainly is in California, and many of the teachers are being paid less than the janitors. I certainly see no reason why the governors should take any action against the teachers such as you propose." 6-21-48

Dewey, however, still wanted the governors' conference to undertake a publicity campaign against the teachers. "I'm going to fight that lobby with everything I've got," he said. "If the governors' conference will stage a counter-campaign, I'll double my state's contribution to the conference."

The other governors, however, would not go along on the anti-teacher publicity campaign, decided only to study the question of teachers' pay scales.

However, Dewey persisted. And another closed meeting was called at night, the press excluded, which lasted two hours. In the end, the other governors still refused to go along with Dewey.

Warren's Father Murdered

Earl Warren's broad sympathy for people comes from the struggling days of his boyhood. He began life as a call-boy in a roundhouse in Bakersfield, Calif., where his job was to pedal to the homes of freight-train crews and notify them when their train was to be made up. His father, a master carbuilder, got fired during a railroad strike, lost his home, had to move and look for work elsewhere. Later, his father was killed by an intruder who broke into their house and bludgeoned the elder Warren to death. The murderer was never apprehended. 6-21-48

Warren understands and likes human beings. And they like him. He has been a great cleaner-up of California, has purged racketeers, the Ku Klux Klan, the big gamblers. He has served in state and county jobs for 30 years, knows the intricate job of running a government. He is an excellent speaker, but shuns the delicate job of trading delegates, pulling backstage wires so necessary to get a presidential nomination.

But if the Republican party wants to be 100 per cent sure of victory, Earl Warren is their best and ablest bet.

G. O. P. Prospects Looking Up In Dixie

The Advertiser

The Richmond Times-Dispatch

THE Gallup Poll hasn't announced a sampling on the relative strengths of President Truman and Senator Vandenberg in the South, but the Michigan Senator has a remarkable following in this region. Casual conversation and straw votes here and there indicate that it is even larger than Harold Stassen's and the Gallup Poll has just indicated that Stassen has as many backers in the South for the presidency as Truman.

This is a truly extraordinary phenomenon. It seems to mean that two Republicans who are in topfilght competition for the presidential nomination are in a position at this time to give the Democratic incumbent a close run in the "Solid South." The Gallup Poll gave Stassen 42 per cent of the Southern vote, Truman 41 per cent, with 4 per cent for Wallace, and 13 per cent with no opinion. Mon.

Montgomery, Ala

NOTHING like this has happened in Dixie in a long time. If the Gallup Poll is accurate, it means that many thousands of Southerners are in a mood to break away from their Democratic moorings. This is a highly encouraging development for the South needs greater independence on the part of its citizens. 5-17-48

It should be noted, however, that if they vote for either Stassen or Vandenberg next November, in preference to President Truman, they will hardly do so with any firm belief that either of these Republicans is appreciably less committed to a civil rights program than is Mr. Truman. If anything, the GOP is more militant in its desire for such enactments than the Democrats. Mon.

While Mr. Stassen has been making an active campaign for the presidential nomination, Mr. Vandenberg has been disclaiming any desire for it. Without questioning the latter's sincerity, it can be said that his attitude seems more likely to get him the nomination than Mr. Stassen's. The Minnesotan has bitterly antagonized both Governor Dewey and Senator Taft, who are reputedly determined to prevent his nomination. In the event of a likely deadlock between them, or a deadlock involving Stassen and themselves, they are now regarded as sure to throw the prize to somebody else, if that is at all possible. Most forecasters think the beneficiary will be Senator Vandenberg. 5-17-48

THE sentiment for Vandenberg is wide and deep among various elements of the population. He appeals strongly to all who believe that America should play an active and responsible role in world affairs. He appeals to those who wish the country to be firm toward Russia. He does not cater to labor, yet he is not considered by labor leaders to be so antilabor as Senator Taft (coauthor of the Taft-Hartley Act). He is no New Dealer, but he is less rabid his opposition to the Roosevelt policies in many Republicans. He is regarded by any as a "statesman" rather than a "poli-ian" because of his aloofness from the current struggle to get the nomination.

Senator Vandenberg seems to have strength with business elements, and also with young men and women of collegiate age. At the recent convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce he won an informal poll of the delegates conducted by Business Week. Vandenberg got 270 votes, to 213 for Stassen, 1[illegible] for Taft, 126 for Dewey, and 57 for Truman.

Washington and Lee students nominated Vandenberg in their mock Republican convention, and Oberlin College students followed suit.

All this gives one the definite impression that Arthur H. Vandenberg is likely to be the next Republican nominee for the presidency. His running mate may well be Harold E. Stassen. It would be a vote-getting ticket and one which would make an appeal to many Southerners of both major parties. Montgomery, Ala

White Is Wary Of GOP Plank

Negro Says His Race Will Be 'Skeptical' Of 'Rights' Stand

KANSAS CITY—(AP)—A Negro leader, Walter White, warned the Republican Party Tuesday that voters of his race would view "with skepticism" civil right planks of its national platform.

White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the "skepticism" was the result of the Republicans' failure to keep their 1944 election promises. Wed. 6-23-48

Here for the opening of the association's thirty-ninth annual conference, White in an interview said the Republican Party in 1944 adopted a strong civil rights platform.

"They came into power in 1946 with majorities in both Houses of Congress," he added. "And they did absolutely nothing to fulfill their pledges.

"We have told the platform committee that if they are planning to repeat their performance it will result in increased opposition of Negroes against the Republican Party.

"The Wallace crowd has hopes for the Negro vote but Negroes are not going to bolt lock, stock and barrel to a third party because they know a third party in the race simply results in an even more conservative group being elected than that now in power." 6-23-48

White came here from Philadelphia where he talked to the Republican convention platform committee. He explained he urged not only the adoption but the fulfillment of a civil rights program, including anti-lynching legislation, the institution of a fair employment practice committee, abolition of segregation in the armed forces and elimination of the poll tax.

"In 17 states, with a total of 295 electoral votes, the Negro holds the balance of power," White said. "The Negro vote today, is by force of circumstances, the most independent vote in America."

White added that his group also would confer with members of the Democratic platform committee. He added the N. A. A. C. P. neither would endorse nor oppose any party, nor would it attempt to officially set a course for Negroes in individual political contests. 6/23/48

Cause And Effect

The Republican push for enactment of the so-called civil rights bills may be blamed upon the Southern Democratic protests against them and the threat of a Southern bolt of the Democratic party. Never before have the Republicans had any compelling reason to actually secure their enactment. Their endeavor heretofore has simply been to make a show of trying to enact them in order to preserve them until the next election year when the show could be repeated for vote getting purposes. Columbia, S.C.

And in the same manner the revival of the imitation Ku Klux Klan in the South may be blamed on President Truman for his advocacy of the civil rights program. He probably didn't intend it, but he was playing into the hands of the kluxers when he injected the issue into the campaign and supplying them with ammunition to attract gullible Southerners to their night shirts and hoods. Columbia Record

The Southern reaction is sillier than the other. No problem is ever solved by cowardice and illegal methods any more than those problems can be solved in the opposite direction by the use of law and force.

McGrath Scores Martin's Address

Montgomery Advertiser

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Senator J. Howard McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said Wednesday he thinks the Republican Party still is committed to isolationism.

Commenting on a speech made Tuesday night by House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., at the Republican National Convention, McGrath said in a statement:

"Speaker Martin, who helped engineer the cutting of the reciprocal Trade Act, and who aided and abetted the abortive effort of isolationists in the House of Representatives to destroy the European recovery program by slashing its appropriations, cannot pose as a strong defender of a broad international policy." Thurs. 6-24-48

"Once more," he said, "The Republican Party stands committed to isolationism.".

Of Martin's statement that the Republican-controlled 80th Congress was a "product of forethought and vision," McGrath retorted:

"It is evident from this confession that the Republican leadership never planned to legislate in the important fields of housing, education, social security, civil rights, national health, or an increase in the minimum wage. 6-24-48

"They 'planned' to ignore the needs of the nation."

Foreign Policy Fight Predicted By Delegates; Battle Against It Set

Tues. 6-22-48

PHILADELPHIA— (AP) —After what Chairman Henry Cabot Lodge called "terrific fights" on domestic policy, the GOP platform committee overruled a subcommittee, Monday night, and wrote a plank calling for a government-built, low-rent housing program.

As the committee adjourned its tumultuous session for dinner, however, it had not reached a showdown on the foreign plank on which a slam-bang battle is promised. Lodge has described this preliminary plank as the "most international" ever presented to the Republican party.

Lodge said he does not know what the foreign plank language will be when the full 104-member platform committee finishes with it. 6-22-48

He told reporters the committee approved a public housing plank "roughly similar" to the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill which failed to get through Congress.

The committee met four hours and Lodge said they had some "big arguments over civil rights, housing, and quite a good deal of arguing over agriculture."

Simultaneously, a drive developed to make the preliminary platform draft call for new and severe legislation to control Communism— along the lines of the Mundt-Nixon bill.

The proposed platform was submitted Monday to the full resolutions committee, which has the authority to change it.

An unofficial text as drafted by a subcommittee and published late Monday in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, says in part:

"America is deeply interested in the stability, security and liberty of other independent peoples. Tues. 6-22-48

Do You Want To Help Elect Dewey?

Fri. 8-6-48

Do you want to help elect a Republican to the presidency?

Many thoughtful South Carolinians are asking that and other questions since the rump convention produced the Dixiecrats—a splinter party that is ganging up on the Democratic Administration along with Henry Wallace's Progressives.

Both groups are lending aid and comfort to the Republicans.

"Bubblehead" Wallace is leading the Progressives.

24

"Stand-on-head" Thurmond is carrying the ball for the Dixiecrats, but obviously the only yardage he has gained has been toward the cameras and headlines.

It is an odd combination—some patriotic South Carolinians, under Thurmond, working as stalwarts by the side of Wallace and the Communists, to defeat the Democratic Administration and elect Republican Tom Dewey.

And John L. Lewis and a horde of Roosevelt-haters throwing up their hats in the cheering section!

What are some of the questions South Carolinians are asking these days?

"What was the price of cotton when the last Republican Administration was in power?"

About five cents a pound.

"What were wages in the textile and other major industries, as they limped along on part-time basis during the Hoover depression?"

Seven to 14 dollars a week.

"What was the condition of the banks and credit generally?"

Banks were popping like firecrackers on the Fourth of July and credit was practically extinct. Some of our wealthiest citizens of today were then unable to borrow enough money with which to pay their city and county taxes.

"Did the last Republican Administration do anything for the farmers?"

Certainly not.

Fri. 8-6-48

"Was unemployment rampant in the nation, and starvation and breadlines evidence on all sides?"

Yes.

"What administration pulled this nation out of the depression, restored confidence and prosperity, stabilized farm prizes, gave the laboring man a new deal, brought rural electrification to the farmers, conserved natural resources, including our soil and forests; brought the bankers out of hiding through depositors' insurance, developed our water power and in general restored the Government to the people instead of the special interests of Wall Street?"

The Democratic Administration, of course.

"Is the record of the Administration perfect?"

Indeed, it is not.

"Are we in accord with the civil rights program advocated by both Roosevelt and Truman as vote-bait in doubtful States?"

Emphatically, no!

"Speaking of civil rights. Did President Roosevelt or President Truman appoint Negroes to high Federal offices in Southern States?"

No.

"Would Republican Dewey be a better friend to the South than the Democratic Administration?"

The Constitution

Don't be ridiculous! Dewey has brought the FEPC to New York; he indorsed, sponsored and had put into the laws of New York a nonsegregation act with teeth in it. Negroes eat in restaurants with the whites, go to the same schools, sleep in the same hotels, enjoy full and complete equal rights.

"Would Dewey likely appoint Negroes to high Federal offices in the South?"

Yes. We would likely have a Negro postmaster here at Anderson, and in other towns of the State. District Attorney Oscar Doyle would probably be replaced by one, and our Federal taxes may be collected by a Negro instead of Internal Revenue Collector Bill Bowers, in Columbia. By no stretch of the imagination is Dewey a friend of the South, or its customs and traditions. He will move in and do something about Jim Crowism. He loves to prosecute.

"Who are some of the strangest backers of the revolt against the Democratic Administration?"

Atlanta, Ga.

Many sincere men and women are in it. But there are thousands of persons who opposed the liberal policies of the New Deal who have seized the so-called banner of white supremacy and are using it as an excuse to fight the present administration. With their lips they jeer at Truman's civil rights (which is genuinely opposed by all of us), but in their hearts and secret souls they are resentful of the gains the vast majority of our people have made since the last Republican Administration.

Fri.

"And do South Carolinians love white supremacy less than the people of Georgia and North Carolina?"

8-6-48

Certainly not. But both Georgia and South Carolina—like Virginia, Texas and others—realize that we can accomplish more by fighting within the party than can possibly be achieved by "bolting." The bolters will help elect Republican Dewey.

The Independent will not bolt. We disapprove of many things that are contained in the platform adopted at the Philadelphia Convention, but shall support the nominees of the Party.

Anything less would help elect a Republican.

And we are not in sympathy with Dewey's candidacy.

The Republicans Choose

(34D)

We are now coming into the presidential preference primary season.

The first of the presidential preference primaries—there are only 14 states in which they are held—will come this month in New Hampshire on March 9. In April there are five, in May four and in June three.

3-6-48

The New Hampshire primary next Tuesday will not result in a direct presidential preference. No presidential candidate's name appears on the ballot. The election is simply to select delegates to the convention. But both Dewey and Stassen have been campaigning in New Hampshire and the choice of delegates may give some indication of the national trend.

Columbia, S.C.

On April 13 Nebraska will vote and in Nebraska a direct presidential preference may be indicated, although the delegates elected are unpledged and not bound to vote as the voters vote. Practically the full array of Republican hopefuls will appear on the Nebraska lists—Dewey, Taft, Stassen, Martin, MacArthur, Saltonstall, Warren and Vandenberg.

Columbia Record

Between the New Hampshire and the Nebraska elections there will be two other primaries—one in New York and the other in Wisconsin, both on April 6. The New York election allows for no expression of presidential preference and the delegates are unpledged. But in Wisconsin the voters do name their choice and may bind the delegates to it. Illinois holds its primary on April 13, the date of the Nebraska vote, and there also is a presidential preference vote.

Sat. 3-6-48

It may not be long now before the Republican race will be beginning to take shape and both the Republican and the Democratic leaders can begin to guess, with some likelihood of guessing right, who the candidate will be. Fourteen states can not control the choice, but they may indicate what that choice will be.

WHITE DOUBTS SINCERITY OF GOP RIGHTS PLANKS

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(ANP)—The Republicans will have to do much about civil rights than they did during the past four years, Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, said here last week.

He warned Republican leaders that Negroes would view "with skepticism" the civil rights planks of the party platform. He noted that the 1944 party platform contained many of the same provisions that are on this one. The 80th congress, with a Republican majority in each house, passed no civil rights legislation, he said.

STAY, AT LEAST FOR PRESENT

EDITOR, The Advertiser: It may be true that "no one can figure Democratic success without the South." But one can figure Republican success without the South. The Republican party has elected many presidents in the 90 years of its existence without a single electoral vote from any Southern state. A solid South candidate nominated by a solid South party would insure the election of Taft, Dewey or some other Republican, and force him to take extreme anti-Southern views. The rest of the country would resent the idea of a sectional president. The Republicans would elect a majority of the electoral votes. The House of Representatives would not be called upon to elect a president. If the South should bolt the national party, the Democrats in other sections would be disorganized and discouraged. The independent voters would have no incentive to vote Democratic. The Republicans would win, without the South. 34d Sat. 2-7-48

We will never tolerate free and unlimited social intermingling of the races. Any attempt to force it on us will result in violence and bloodshed and be harmful to both races. But intemperate talk and ill-advised decisions will not help us.

Somehow false leaders of the Thad Stevens brand have made themselves heard and felt. True friends of the colored race like Abraham Lincoln, Booker Washington, John T. Morgan and Henry W. Grady are in the discard. In his speech at Charleston, Ill., Sept. 18, 1858, Mr. Lincoln said:

"I will say that I am not, and never have been, in favor of bringing about in any way the social and political equality of the white and black races—that I am not, nor ever have been, in favor of making voters or jurors of Negroes, nor of qualifying them to hold office, nor to intermarry with white people, and I will say, in addition to this, that there is a physical difference between the white and black races which I believe will forever forbid the two races living together on terms of social and political equality, and inasmuch as they cannot so live, while they remain together there must be the position of superior and inferior and I as much as any other man am in favor of having the superior position assigned to the white race." The Advertiser

In one of Booker Washington's speeches he said in social relations the two races could remain as distinct as the fingers of the hand, and at the same time, in their economic well being they could be as co-operative as the two hands of the same body. Montgomery, Ala.

The States have never granted to the federal government the power to enforce some of Mr. Truman's anti-Southern program. I doubt if the Supreme Court, even as at present constituted, will so hold.

A bad situation confronts us. But it is my opinion we had better stay in the natural Democratic organization—at least for the present. Sat. 2-7-48

President Is Challenged To Urge Southerners To Avoid Filibusters

Mon. 2-16-48

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15. — (AP)—Chairman Reece of the Republican National Committee Sunday urged a two-party system in the South as one way of preventing what he called "infringements upon civil liberties."

He also challenged President Truman to urge Democratic senators from the South not to filibuster against anti-lynching, anti-poll tax, and other administration-recommended "civil rights" proposals when they come up for action. Mon. 2-16-48

Southern governors and legislators have denounced the President's 10-point civil rights program. It also calls for no segregation in transportation and Federal guarantees against discrimination in employment because of race.

They are talking of withholding Dixie's electoral votes from the President as one means of retaliation.

The Advertiser

Reece, in a letter to 20,000 Republican officials and party workers, credited the Republican party with originating most measures in the nation's history for promoting civil liberties. Mon. 2-16-48

He added that Democratic filibusters in recent years had blocked all Republican efforts to put through anti-lynch, anti-poll tax, and fair employment practice measures. Montgomery, Ala.

The Republican Party began its speech in the 1860's and has not paused for station identification since. Its last utterance before the next one was the G.O.P. presidential platform on which Gov. Dewey ran in 1944.

This platform read:

"Racial and Religious Intolerance: . . . We pledge the establishment by Federal legislation of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission.

"Anti-Poll Tax: The payment of any poll tax should not be a condition of voting in Federal elections, and we favor immediate submission of a constitutional amendment for its abolition. The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Thurs 2-5-48

Democrats who are disgusted with Truman's civil rights pronouncement will find going over to the Republicans like jumping out of the frying pan into the fire. Confirmation is eloquently provided in a letter just received from Chairman Carroll Reece of the Republican National Committee.

Reece incessantly sends out a letter to his Republican cohorts, exhorting them to gird for the battle and lambasting the Democrats. The latest blast is devoted to glorifying Republican efforts to enact legislation distasteful to the South.

Says Chairman Reece: 12-17-48 34d

"Its (the Republican Party's) members in Congress have given almost unanimous support to anti-poll tax and anti-lynching bills, and to proposals for the establishment of a Fair Employment Practices Commission. Though they have been prevented from enacting such laws nationally—because of Democrat opposition—Republicans have given concrete evidence of their sincerity by definite action in the field of state legislation." Dec. 12-17-48

He then boasts that of four states now having F. E. P. C. laws, they were put into force under Republican state administration in three—New Jersey, New York and Connecticut. The fourth, Massachusetts, adopted its F. E. P. C. law under a Democratic governor, but it was a Republican legislature that passed the measure.

In another paragraph, Reece lumps southern Democrats with Nazis and Reds, though he concedes there may be a degree of difference:

"It might be appropriate at this point to remark that infringements upon civil liberties are nearly always to be found where a one-party system prevails. Though there may be differences in degree, that principle would apply regardless of whether the party bears the Communist name, as in Russia, the Nazi label in Germany, the Fascist label in Italy or the Democrat label in Mississippi."

We take it that Mr. Reece does not believe the G. O. P. has much chance in the South.

Election Maneuvers of the Republicans in Washington

The Worker

By Benjamin J. Davis
New York, N.Y.
Member, New York City Council

ELECTION DAY is rolling around and naturally the Republican Senators have announced that the anti-lynch bill will be the first of three civil rights measures to be brought up in that body for action. GOP leader Senator Taft, said on April 8: "If you've got a filibuster to fight, the Republicans thought that this was the easiest bill to get through." Tues. 4-18-48

The very first thing to do is to discount Taft's ready assurance that this measure will be brought up at all, unless the people fight for it. Anything Taft says on the Negro and civil rights questions, has to be judged in the light of his attempt to bag the presidential nomination of his party.

As far as fighting a filibuster is concerned, Taft, who has been in the Senate since Hector was a pup, has had a hundred chances to smash filibuster by invoking cloture. He has never done so.

•

THE Negro people are not only interested in passage of the anti-lynch bill, but also in the anti-poll tax and the FEPC bills, weak though the latter is. They are interested farther in ending the terror in the deep South, in abolishing Jimcrow in the army—and above all, in stopping the imperialist war that Taft and his Democratic colleagues, at the bidding of Wall Street, are trying to provoke.

The GOP high command is trying to put itself in a grandiose position of bagaining with the Negro people, offering demagogic gestures on the anti-lynching bill in return for Negro and other minority votes. In the extremely limited time for Congress to remain in session, the GOP counts upon a sham fight upon the anti-lynch bill serving as a substitute for the actual passage of this and the other two bills. Having waited so late in the session to bring up the anti-lynch bill—that is, if mass pressure compels them to bring it up—the GOP will then argue that they have no time to take up the other two bills. The Worker

With respect to the 1948 elections, the anti-poll tax bill is decisive. But Taft and the Republicans were careful not to place that first on the calendar, even though it has already passed the House. It is this measure which will enable the third party and the candidacy of Henry Wallace to break through electorally in the seven poll tax states, against both the corrupt North Republicans and the polltax Southern Democrats. New York, N.Y.

Fishing in the troubled waters of the Democratic Party, the GOP is making a solid bid to swing some of the polltax states into their column in November. They intend to do this, not by breaking up the rotten poll tax system, but by by winning it over. An extra large vote in the South, by Negroes and whites now disfranchised, means a powerful vote for Wallace. The Republicans no more than the Democrats want to open the flood-gates to Wallace in the South, and consequently they have no intentions whatsoever of outlawing the poll tax, the same poll tax which prevents Negroes and thousands of whites from voting some of the lynch officials out of office.

Tues. 4-18-48

THERE can be only one answer to the cunning strategy which the Republicans are following in the Senate and that is to demand that there be no adjournment of Congress until all three of these bills are passed—the anti-lynch, anti-polltax and FEPC bills. Absolutely no unprincipled bargains will be accepted, and no soap on permitting one bill to be played against another! The Worker

The Republicans and the Truman Democrats are also far wrong if they think the Negro people are interested in combatting Jimcrow only in a narrow sense. They are only insulting the political maturity and intelligence of the Negro if they think he is not interested in Taft-Hartley slavery, in Palestine, Greece and China, in American imperialism's warmongering campaign against the Soviet Union, the European democracies and colonial independence. These issues, foreign and domestic, are being increasingly recognized by the Negro people as decisive in their fight against Jimcrow at home. These issues will be even more recognized as they are brought into the Negro communities and into the shops and fields. Tues.

Perhaps the major party bosses are deceived into thinking that the Negro people go along with A. Philip Randolph's acceptance of Wall Street's program of war, Soviet-baiting and red-baiting although Randolph cleverly disguised his surrender to the warmongers behind his defeatist "civil disobedience" proposal. 4-18-48

Negroes are opposed not only to a Jimcrow army, but they are opposed to permitting their bodies to be used as cannon-fodder in a war by Wall Street to impose Mississippi lynch law on the rest of the world. No section of the population is more interested in the over-all question of war or peace than 15 million Negro citizens.

But just so Wall Street's two party lackeys will have no misunderstanding on these questions, a national mass delegation of the Negro people, their labor and progressive allies, is more than ever necessary to visit Washington before Congress adjourns. The purpose: No Jimcrow, and no war! Pass the anti-poll tax, anti-lynch and FEPC bills! Are you ready?

Republicans Face A Dilemma On Civil Rights

The Record

The Senate judiciary committee, by a vote of 10 to 3, approved the anti-lynching bill Monday.

The three Senators who voted against it were: Moore, of Oklahoma, Republican, and Eastland of Mississippi and Fulbright of Arkansas, both Democrats.

Senator Eastland threatened a filibuster should the Republican leadership call the bill up in the Senate before adjournment Saturday. Columbia, S.C.

"The statement is made that what is in the bill is already in the law," Eastland declared. "If that is true, it (the bill) is an attempt to humiliate the South and I'm going to fight it until hell freezes over." Wed.

The Republicans, however, face a dilemma on the two pending civil rights bills — the anti-poll tax bill and the anti-lynching bill.

On the one hand they hope to profit from the Southern revolt against President Truman's civil rights program. Senator Taft, in a speech in North Carolina on June 5, advised the South to maintain its tradition of "individual liberties free from outside interference." And Senator Taft is the Republican leader on domestic affairs. 6-16-48

On the other hand the Republicans, as usual, are out to capture as many Negro votes in the crucial states as possible and the anti-lynching and anti-poll tax bills have been their accustomed bait for this purpose-introduced and debated, but never passed.

The 1944 G. O. P. platform pledged the Republicans to: a permanent F. E. P. C., anti-lynching legislation and an anti-poll tax constitutional amendment. If no serious attempt is made to redeem at least one of these pledges, Negro voters may well ask themselves in November why they should trust pledges made in the Republican platform to be adopted in Philadelphia this year.

And there is no chance, if the adjournment deadline is to be met, that any of these measures can be passed save the anti-poll tax bill, which doesn't conform to the Republican platform since it attempts to do unconstitutionally what the Republicans pledged themselves to do by constitutional amendment. This measure passed the House July 21, 1947, and if now passed by the Senate could be made law. The Record

None of the other so-called civil rights bills have passed either house. Wed.

The attempt to bring up any one of these measures would provoke a Southern filibuster which could be broken only by cloture. And there are many Senators of both parties who are opposed to cloture for reasons of principle. In 1946 an anti-poll tax bill came up in the Senate in the last days of the session and Senator Barkley filed a cloture petition as soon as the bill was made unfinished business. It failed of the necessary two-thirds majority. There hadn't been time for the debate to degenerate into a filibuster. In February 1946 a cloture petition came up after 23 days of debate on the F. E. P. C. bill. Eight Republicans voted against it and it failed of imposition by exactly eight votes.

To have this happen this year would offset the Republican effort to bring up the bill and supply the Democrats with the argument that the Republicans were actually responsible for the measure's defeat. 6-16-48

But even with cloture applied a Senator can still talk for an hour on any bill and the Republicans do not have 25 hours to spend on the debate of the anti-poll tax or anti-lynching bill if they are to get away Saturday. Columbia, S.C.

Negro Leaders Flay GOP on Civil Rights

The Republican Platform Committee in Philadelphia last week was told by spokesmen of 21 Negro business, church, professional, labor, and civil rights, of the disappointment of Negro voters at the record of the 80th Congress. The delegation demanded civil rights action from the GOP. Mon.

The organizations, with a total membership of 6,084,000, told the GOP their members were "deeply disappointed by the complete failure of the Republican-controlled 80th Congress to enact any of the civil rights legislation pledged in the 1944 platform." 6-21-48

While individual GOP and Democratic Congressmen have sponsored such legislation the group declared, "A combination of conservative Republican and Democratic members of Congress have used every possible legislative device to avoid enactment of this promised and sore needed legislation."

Members of the organizations continuations committee which drew up the statement were:

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Social Action Committee of the CME Church; George L. P. Weaver, CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination; B. F. McLaurin, AFL Brotherhood of Sleepingcar Porters; E. Whites Charge Discrimination

Detroit Mich.

PHILADELPHIA (U.P.) — A Mississippi delegation to the Republican National Convention charged "discrimination against Whites" in a United States District Court appeal to have its members seated. Sun. 6-20-48

Howard's Mississippi Delegation Wins Test in Committee

Tues. 6-22-48

PHILADELPHIA, June 21 (AP)—The Republican National Convention Credentials Committee voted unanimously today to recognize the Mississippi delegation headed by Perry W. Howard, national committeeman. 6-22-48

The vote came after a hearing in which the Negro political leader pleaded that his faction be recognized. Opposing him were two white attorneys representing the so-called "independent" Republican delegation of Mississippi.

The Credentials Committee ignored the contention of the "independent" faction that if it was not seated Mississippi would be entitled to only four delegates. The Howard group is made up of eight delegates.

Meanwhile, Federal Judge J. Cullen Ganey deferred until tomorrow his decision on a dispute between the factions. George L. Sheldon, leader of the "independent" Republicans, seeks a preliminary restraining order to prevent the seating of the "regular" delegation led by Howard.

The suit was filed after the Republican National Committee voted last Friday to seat the Howard delegation.

There were these fast Republican Platform developments:

1. Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, hailed the foreign plank as "magnificent." Wed.

2. Senator Brooks, Republican, Illinois, who battled in the Platform Committee last night to change some of the strong internationalist language of the foreign plank, told reporters tonight there will be no convention fight by him or other critics of the platform proposals. Atlanta, Ga.

3. GOP National Chairman Carroll Reece predicted "harmonious action" on the platform at the convention tomorrow. 6-23-48

The platform writers struck out preliminary draft language calling for United Nations' control of atomic energy. Brooks, a Resolutions Committee member, led the fight. "I did not succeed in having all my views accepted," he said, "but I accept it (the platform) as the best I could get."

But while harmony descended again upon the GOP policy-makers, the Party's labor stand was assailed by several union leaders as feeble and unconvincing. Wed.

The internationalist plank adopted by the Platform Committee after a stormy half-the-night session calls for bulwarking the United Nations by curbing the big power veto and setting up a world police force under the UN charter.

Rumblings of protest developed quickly on the GOP labor plank—which may sway many thousands of votes one way or another in November. 6-23-48

American Federation of Labor officials in Washington declared: "The labor plank is totally unsatisfactory. It fails to deal with advance in life," regardless of race and color.

The rights plank did not say specifically that it stands for a Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC). Language in the preliminary platform draft directly favoring FEPC was stricken out

The 2,400-word platform — believed to be the shortest in the Party's history—was approved by the 104-member Resolutions Committee after an uproarous session on the foreign plank and domestic policy as well. It goes to the full convention tomorrow for ratification. Wed. 6-23-48

Hobson Reynolds Warns GOP Must Correct Race Ills Now

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga. Tues.

By JIM FLEMING

PHILADELPHIA—(ANP)— "We Republicans) must move swiftly and at once, for the problems which face our democratic way of life cannot be put off," Magistrate Hobson R. Reynolds of Philadelphia thunderingly warned the Republican National convention.

Delivering the only major convention address by a Negro, the magistrate who will soon become Pennsylvania's first state senator called upon his party to allow all Americans to work together, regardless of race, creed and color Then he turned specifically to the plight of the Negro. 6-27-48

"We want to be comfortable as members of our party," he continued. "We want to share, without equivocations, each and every privilege of citizenship guaranteed us by the constitution of our country and we want and ask, that the party of our choice protect us in privileges assured every other segment of our American population. We ask no more. We will not be satisfied with anything less. True democracy and equality of opportunity must come now."

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

ANSWER QUERY

What is the duty and responsibility of the Republican party? Reynolds asked this question and then he answered it: 6-27-48

"Our party should not fail to do away with the effects of race prejudice. Our government can and should insist that colored citizens share responsibility with other citizens for the welfare of the nation. Democratic government must keep apace of science and realize that there is no basis beyond prejudice for the belief that one race is intrinsically superior to another."

Reynolds, who is also national director of the Elks Civil Liberties commission, charged a conspiracy against the Negro, despite the fact that "our men have fought for the defense and America in every war . . . down to World War II." He continued: Daily World

"During all the years that have followed the adoption by a Republican congress of the Civil War amendments to the constitution, conferring freedom and citizenship upon the Negro people, they have been the victims of an organized conspiracy to deny them that human freedom to which as citizens they are entitled.

PREJUDICE BLASTED

"Injustices that follow from ignorance and in-born, racial prejudices have most largely contributed to the present-day lack of a more cordial relationship between the races, and that cooperative spirit of unity which should exist, and which finally must exist, if we are to achieve that peace and economic prosperity which underlies all permanent progress."

Magistrate Reynolds reminded the some 20,000 listeners that of the significance of America's handling of its Negro citizens to America's destiny of world leadership; he repeated his plea for full citizenship. Atlanta, Ga.

"I do not believe that the Republican party will longer permit conditions as they now exist under the Democratic party to continue," he declared challengingly. "These loyal Negro Americans will never supinely and complacently accept a second class citizenship. They cannot be bribed or blackmailed into renouncing their just and equal status as citizens of this country. Sun. 6-27-48

Civil Rights Group Pickets GOP

75 NEGROES, WHITES DEMAND ACTION ON ANTI-BIAS LAWS

New York

By Walter Lowenfels

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—Republican delegates had to pass through a civil rights picket line of Negro and white citizens at Convention Hall today. More than 75 pickets circled in front of the main entrance this morning, and again this evening carrying signs that read: "Stop Talking, Start Acting. Pass Anti-Lynch, Anti-Poll Tax, FEPC Laws." The picket line was under the auspices of the Non-Partisan Committee for Civil Rights, the same committee that helped organize the historic civil rights demonstration of 10,000 in Washington earlier in the month.

The committee attempted to see Sen. Lodge of the GOP Resolutions Committee, and get a commitment from the GOP about the legislation the 80th Congress refused to pass. Magistrate Hobson Reynolds, Negro Republican and Elks leader, a delegate to the convention, finally did get National Republican Chairman Carol Reece to meet with a group of delegates who wanted to appear before the Resolutions Committee before it okayed its final draft on civil rights. Daily Worker

This correspondent heard Reece tell Reynolds that the time for appearances before the committee had passed last week. Reynolds' pleas that the GOP Negro delegates had only just arrived made no dent. Reynolds told reporters that the Negroes had been given the run around again. 6-22-48 New York N.Y.

The civil rights picket line made a sharp impact on the convention.

Several Negro Republican delegates joined the picket line themselves,

Strikers Picket GOP Convention

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—A CIO communications picket line brought the fight against strikebreaking to Convention Hall today. The ACA has been on strike since May 1 against the local Inquirer radio and television station, WFIL. Picket signs and sound trucks told the GOP delegates: Tues.

"The Republican convention is helping WFIL to break our strike." 6-22-48

including John A. Davis of St. Louis.

This reporter interviewed several dozen Negro and white delegates from states ranging from Florida to Minnesota. "What they're doing won't hurt," that's just what we need," were typical responses from Negro Republicans, while some white Republicans gave a favorable response, most of them kept iron faces, and one Southern white Republican said "down our way, we burn 'em."

Republican Party Platform Lousy

Says A. Philip Randolph

Tulsa Oklahoma

PHILADELPHIA.—"The civil rights plank in the 1948 Republican platform is a warning to colored people that the Republican party is courting southern states and does not give a "picayune' for colored voters,'. A' Philip Randolhp, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, declared here last Tuesday.

Holding in his hands a copy of the platform, which has just been adopted by the convention, Mr. Randolph said, "This is Lousy."

"It is not sufficiently strong to convey the perfect futility of the civil rights plank. It would be a joke were it not such a tragic traversy upon decency and an insult to the common sense and pride of the Negro citizens of America.

The Republican party has descended to its lowest depths of opportunism and has become more 'Dixie-crat' than Mississippi and South Carolina. It is sufficient warning to Negroes that now the Republicans are courting southern states and that they no longer give a 'picayune' for the Negro vote.

It is a signal for the Negroes to become more militnat and aggressive in their fight to abolish Jim Crow in the army, transportation, education, and every other area of life in America by all of the forces they can mobilize, including the method of civil disobedience."

Opposes Armed Force Segregation

In New York, on June 26th Randolph announced formation of a league to campaign for non-compliance with the draft unless President Truman issues an executive order against segregation.

The program would be waged on a nationwide basis. It will call for a program of non-violent civil disobedience.

"I believe the peace-time draft law—the enactment of this peacetim edraft with no provisions for the limination of 'Jim Crow' in it —will set back the cause of civil rights in 100 years."

Willing To Make Sacrifice

The union leader said that even though "it may cost me my liberty" he would urge members fo his race nad others subject to the draft registration after Aug. 16th to refuse to register or be drafted.

GOP Group Is Reported Behind Civil Rights Plank

Montgomery Advertiser

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—A subcommittee of Republican platform writers was reported Friday night to have voted in favor of a strong civil rights plank for the party's 1948 platform. 34

The group was the civil rights subcommittee of the GOP resolutions committee. Members said privately, after the meeting, that they voted for a Republican Party pledge to support laws or constitutional amendments against these things: Montgomery, ALA.

1—Poll taxes.

2—Lynchings.

3—Racial segregation in the armed services.

4—Unfair employment practices. Sat-6-19-48

A similar plank appeared in the 1944 platform. Before the declaration becomes official it must be adopted by the full resolutions committee and then the Republican Convention which starts Monday.

Meanwhile, members of the resolutions committee predicted the platform probably will be the "most international" in the party's history. Sat.

Harold E. Stassen, the only candidate to appear before the platform writers, asked that the party commit itself to future European aid "if the nations aided help themselves and move toward freedom." Stassen spoke up, too, for a stronger United Nations, with the charter rewritten and the veto power erased.

All in all, the campaign document to be given the Republican National Convention for approval next week seemed almost sure to contain strong foreign policy and civil rights planks.

The "most international" prediction came from U. S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the resolutions committee, as the nine subcommittees ended their hearings and huddled separately to confer on planks. 6-19-48

He told reporters "times have changed since 1920. All of our leading candidates are on record as favoring aid to Europe and participation in international affairs. We could hardly do other-

The Negro leaders testified before the civil rights subcommittee wise than to offer a platform suitable to these men."

It was in 1920 that Lodge's grandfather, Henry Cabot Lodge, helped keep the United States out of the League of Nations. of the resolutions group.

Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, said that since the Republicans won control of Congress in 1946 they have "miserably evaded" their 1944 platform promises on civil rights.

He said the Negro vote holds the potential balance of power in 17 states. He said this vote has become "increasingly an independent vote," and one of the chief reasons has been the "cavalier treatment" which most Republican leaders have accorded Negroes' claims to opportunity and justice. 6-19-48

Pledge Opposes Jim Crow In Armed Forces

The Lighthouse
Columbia, S.C.

PHILADELPHIA—(SNS)—The Republican Resolutions Committee early Tuesday approved a platform opposing racial segregation in the Armed Forces.

The platform also called for a far-reaching Civil Rights program, including enactment of fair employment, anti-lynch and anti-poll tax legislation.

34D

The platform is to be presented to the entire convention.

In addition the platform shunned isolationism, pledging to continue America's international cooperation. said the United Nations should be freed of the use of any veto in the peaceful settlement of international disputes; gives full power of the government to combat Communism; pledges the Republican party to a battle against high living costs and inflation.

HOUSING PLEDGES

On the housing issue, the resolutions committee wrote an a plank calling for a broad program of government-constructed, low-rent housing. Such legislation for housing was killed in the last hours of the Republican-dominated congress.

Jun. 6-27-48

Other pledges include:

A plank to support the States' claims to control over tide lands, rather than Federal control.

A strong pledge greeting Israel and calling for full recognition of the new country with integrity of boundaries

6-27-48

A plank supporting self-Government for the District of Columbia but not representation in Congress

A strong labor plank, stating that collective bargaining is an obligation as well as a right, applying to workers and employers, and the fundamental right to strike is supordinate only to paramount considerations of public health and safety.

Republican Convention Hears Spokesmen For 6 Million Negroes

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

PHILADELPHIA — (S N S) — Spokesmen for twenty-one national Negro business, church, professional, labor and civil rights organizations with a total membership of 6,084,00 appeared before the Republican Platform Committee on June 18 to voice the disappointment of Negro voters at the record of the 80th Congress and to demand action by the Republican Party on civil rights legislation.

Fri. 6-22-48

The statement prepared by the continuations committee of the Negro organizations declared: "We would be less than honest with you and ourselves if we did not say frankly that the members or our organizations have been deeply dis appointed by the complete failure of the Republican-controlled 80th Congress to enact any of the civil rights legislation pledged in the 1944 platform .... Individual Republican and Democratic senators and congressmen have sought in vain to secure action upon the fair employment practice committee, the anti-lynching and the anti-poll tax bills. But a combination of conservative Republican and Democratic members of Congress have used every possible legislative device to avoid enactment of this promised and sorely needed legislation."

BALANCE OF POWER 6-22-48

Calling the attention of the Republican Party to the fact that the Negro vote, which holds the potential balance of power in reasonably close elections in 17 states with 295 electoral votes, has become increasingly an independent vote during the past 30 years, the Negro Spokesmen demanded to know whether or not the Republican platform for 1948 is to be meaningful. They urged the convention to take an unequivocal position on each of the issues outlined in the Declaration of Negro Voters, which was drafted on March 27 by representatives of the 21 organizations This declaration was presented to the Republican Platform Committee.

Civil Rights Planks Made Without Negroes

Intermountain

Voice

Ogden, Utah

By Mark Hyman

PHILADELPHIA (ANP)— The Republican party worked out a civil rights plank without the aid of a single Negro on the platform committee. In the nomination of president, one Negro spoke for Dewey, and none spoke for Warren.

34d

Bishop A. Preston Shaw of the Methodist Episcopal church led the convention in prayer. From among 39 Negro delegates and 35 alternates only two participated in the nomination of the candidates.

Fri. 7-9-48

Speaking for Gov. Dewey was the Rev. Arthur J. Payne of Baltimore. As the fourth man to second his nomination, he said that Dewey was a liberal who sought equality for all people in his state. He compared Dewey's actions against the promises of other leaders.

Roy Gordon and Jose Schaubah, representing the Virgin Islands, carried banners in the wild Dewey demonstration. Although admitted to the convention, the islanders had no vote.

Roscoe Conkling Simmons, silver tongued orator from the midwest, seconded the nomination of Senator Robert A. Taft. Telling the American story of freedom from 1776 through the Civil War, Simmons was greeted with mixed cheers and jeers.

A big howl went up when he said in regard to the Civil War, "Your fathers' blood wrote the freedom of my people of which I am a living example."

No Negroes came to the front for Gov. Warren, Gen. McArthur, Raymond Baldwin of Connecticut, Sen. Arthur Vandenburg or Harold Stassen.

The Republican party platform for 1948 is the usual ambiguous document that pops up every four years. When the text of this platform was finally released, the indifferent attitude of most observers was quite apparent.

With the disgraceful record of the 80th congress fresh in the minds of most persons, nobody became too excited over the civil rights planks in the platform.

A typical remark concerning the plank came from a man in the lobby of the Bellvue-Stratford hotel.

"This is just about the same thing they said in '44. I guess we can only hope that if they are elected they will do something about these things this time."

Intermountain

This seems to be the hopeful attitude of all loyal Republicans and the disgusted attitudes of their opponents.

Voice

This year's platforms includes a lot of rights, but it was made without the help of any Negroes on the committee. It condemns lynching, the poll tax and the idea of segregation in the armed forces. It calls for legislation against lynching and legislation to promote the "right of equal opportunity to work and advance in life.

Ogden, Utah

A sideline to the convention was the 50 man A. Philip Randolph picket line around convention headquarters. They were demanding a real civil rights program which would include some action against segregation in travel, a positive statement on FEPC, federal aid to education, a franchise to the restriction of membership in congress in states point out Dewey's support of an FEPC law in New York and his support of the anti-bias education bill as examples of his attitude toward the race. They also commend him for the appointments of Negroes in state offices.

Fri. 7-9-48

Opponents of Dewey speak of him as the man who let the bill that would provide an integrated national guard for his state die. They seem to feel that he promotes civil rights action only when he is able to do so.

The support for Warren is questionable. No FEPC laws have been passed in his state, California. His stand on civil rights seems to be an unknown quantity.

Intermountain

Bishop Shaw's prayer included the reading of the "Negro National Anthem," "Lift Every Voice and Sing," by James Weldon Johnson. He prayed:

Voice

"O God, our help in ages past, our hope for years to come, our shelter from the stormy blast, and our eternal home;

"We come to Thee conscious for the fact that faith in Thee not see Thee with our eyes and touch Thee with our hands, still Thou art nearer to us than hands or feet.

Ogden, Utah

"Verily we live in Thee and have our being. We thank Thee fo rthe fact that faith in Thee and willingness to be led by Thee have been in the past the history of our nation such a significant factor in its founding, growth, success, and progress, and exaltation to a place of world leadership and service.

Fri.

Gov. Dewey has had to face problems and situations in regard to Negroes and other minority groups, and he has had some "friend" who told him to "go easy" on the backing wider opportunities and rights for Negroes, if he desired to "go places" politically. The record shows that he has, nevertheless, backed and signed legislation for fair employment and outlawing discrimination in educational institutions based on race, creed or color. Indeed, he supported the first state FEPC bill and the first state fair education bill.

Judging by his past record, Negroes should get a "lift" knowing that, if the Republicans win the presidency, the race will still have a friend in the White House, after January 1949.

But, the presidency is more remote than the governorship, and Negro leadership will have to see that Gov. Dewey does not forget Negroes as he becomes involved in the maize of world problems. Most important, Negroes must do whatever they can to insure that the men who will be advising him and who will run the government, are not cast in the molds too different from Dewey so far as the rights of Negroes are concerned.

For instance, Pennsylvania Negroes sighed with alarm when they recognized the favorable spot into which Sen. Edward Martin had maneuvered himself when he released the delegates pledged to him as a "favorite son," to Dewey, 48 hours before the balloting for the candidate.

Pennsylvanians are afraid that Sen. Martin may be rewarded with the secretary of defense or the secretaryship of the army, since he has been a military man all his life. Both as state adjutant and governor of Pennsylvania, Sen. Martin refused to admit Negroes into the Pennsylvania National guard. He passed the buck, he blamed the federal government, he ignored pleas and petitions from veterans and Legionnaires. He remained adamant in keeping the Pennsylvania National guard lily-white.

7-9-48

Pennsylvanians are very much afraid that if Martin becomes important in federal defense, the Negro will meet new obstacles in his attempt to abolish jim-crow in the armed forces.

Negroes have not overlooked Dewey's progress as an administrator and of his success in "running the largest state."

Generals without Troops

Those of our eminent leaders who have the time and money which enable them to go on lobbying junkets to our political conventions ought to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. They ought not to pretend to be the spokesmen of millions of persons belonging to our various organizations when as a matter of fact they have never been elected, nor even nominated, as spokesmen, for these millions.

Nashville and Indeper

Take the case of a committee led by Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. They told the Republican platform committee a whopper last week. Said they represented an organized army of six million colored voters and came to express the wishes of these voters on platform planks.

Walter White, as a matter of fact can't even speak for the 600,000 members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He has no mandate from them to say what the members want from the political parties. And in the several organizations, religious and fraternal that Mr. White and Co. claimed to represent there are so many duplications that it would be difficult to tell what the total voting strength of the combination of organizations is.

Fri. 7-2-48

Perry W. Howard, a member of the Republican National Committee, could say with just as much validity as Walter White that he is a spokesman for all of the colored voters of the fraternal orders the church and social clubs of which he is a member. But Mr. Howard does not engage in publicity stunts like Walter White and Co.

At best, Walter White can say he is able to express the political views of a considerable number of those who followed the New Deal off into the wilderness. But even this faction is split in twain and Henry A. Wallace exerts more influence with these colored brethren and sisters than does Mr. Walter White. Wallace is promising them more than Mr. White.

7-2-48

Walter White ought to have learned by now that the one group of Americans you have less chance of fooling about your voting power and influence among voters are our practical politicians. And those were smart, practical Republican politicians who were listening with amusement as Walter White nd his associates were pointing with pride to having six million colored votes in their vest pockets.

Our Feminine Bilbo

the Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Rep. Claire Boothe Luce, addressing the Republican Convention at its opening session, referred to the Southern Democrats as a "Jim Crow wing led by lynch-loving Bourbons, white-shirted race-supremists of the Bilbo ilk at its worst, anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic and, in short, antedeluvian." Gosh! This was not in quite as bad taste as her notorious "GI Jim" speech of 1944—but almost.

Upon reading it, a burst of light straight from heaven thrust itself down and broke the seals on the Book of Knowledge and revealed to us what we long had been seeking, a proper phrase to describe the glamorous and charming lady from Connecticut.

Rep. Luce is indeed, to employ one of the late Theodore Bilbo's favorite words, a "Limocoline Lady Bird"; Bilbo himself reincarnated as a female demagogue and rabble-rouser. Neither the late Bilbo nor the late Huey Long were as abusive in indicting whole people as their feminine counterpart. Mrs. Luce, who denounced Bilbo for indicting Italians and Jews, sees no paradox in indicting Southerners.

Wed. 6-23-48

Bilbo, whose small store of learning caused him to seek out little-used words for exhibitionist purposes was, as we have said, fond of the word "Limocoline." It is from two Greek words and means "mud-dwelling." But, never before has the word been so apt as now. We think of the glamorous Clare as a sleek white crane, beautiful of line, daintily moving with feet in the mud and beak muddy with pecking?

The Constitution

We trust we shall hear more from our feminine Bilbo.

Luce Talk

To the Editor of The News:

I am sure a great many Southern people were amused as well as moved by the irresponsible mouthings of the darling of the GOP Convention, Clare Boothe Luce in her own one-ring circus. It was politically indiscreet for B. Carrol Reece, chairman of the National Republican Committee, to have permitted her to have wrought such injury to the Southern constituency, since Mr. Reece is a native Tennesseean.

Mrs. Luce proceeded to divide the Democratic party into three wings, namely, the "Jim Crow Wing" of the South; the "Moscow wing" of the East, and the "Pendergast wing" of the West. Mrs. Luce should be reminded that on every national issue that came before Congress her "Jim Crow Democrats" voted with the Republicans.

7-8-48

There has been much talk here lately that some of the Republican leaders were planning to win the Solid South over to the Republicans but I am afraid they will not have much success unless they can silence Mrs. Luce's loose talk.

Many Negro Delegates At GOP Meeting

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

PHILADELPHIA — (ANP)—The largest number of Negro delegates and alternates to any Republican National convention — or to any political convention—are helping to name the man who will carry the G. O. P. banner in the 1948 national election. By the same signs, they are having a hand in, perhaps, selecting the next President of the United States.

Wed.

The latest and best count showed 34 delegates from 14 states and the District of Columbia, and 31 alternates from the same 14 states, although not all from the same states as the delegates.

6-23-48

Last minute contests, however, may make a difference as to whether all delegats will actually vote.

Two contests have already been decided. The Mississippi delegation led by Perry W. Howard was seated over its lily-white contestants, while the pro-Dewey delegation from Georgia, with J. W. Dobbs, noted Mason, as one of the leaders, was given a seat over its pro-Taft opponents.

Virgin Isles Recognized By Republicans

Atlanta Daily World
Thu. 6-24-48

PHILADELPHIA—(ANP) — For the first time, the Virgin islands of the United States were recognized by a Republican National convention, it became known as two Virgin Islanders were given seats here.

Since 1920, the little Caribbean territory has sought recognition from the GOP—the same kind of recognition which the Democratic party had granted—but it always failed, although Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines, were full-fledged convention participants.

Those seated were Roy P. Gordon, of St. Thomas, chairman of tre legislative council of the Virgin islands, and Jose Shaubah, businessman from St. Croix.

IN POSITION

6-24-48

Officially, the Virgin Islanders were not voting delegates this year, but the approval they won from the rules committee, of which Buddington Kelland was chairman, means that the first steps were taken to insure full participation by 1952. In the meantime, the islands, of which William H. Hastie is governor, will be in position to elect two members to the National Republican committee.

Gordon, who lived in the United States for 15 years before returning to the Virgin Islands in 1936, visited delegation after delegation, "making friends and influencing people," in order to have the islands recognized. He found many ears which agreed with him that the islands should not be forced to have a one-party existence, but should be able to participate both in Democratic and Republican circles.

IN BOTH PARTIES

"This means," Gordon said, "that we can have friends in both parties and the Virgin islands need such friends. We are directly under congress in a way that a state is not; we must therefore have opportunity for representation, regardless of the major party which happens to be in power."

Gordon gave a great deal of credit to Perry W. Howard, national committeeman from Mississippi, for assistance which facilitated the seating of the Virgin islands representatives.

Bishop A. Preston Shaw of the Methodist Episcopal Church led the convention in prayer, June 24. From among 39 Negro delegates and 35 alternates only two participated in the nomination of the candidates.

Indifferent Attitude Greets GOP Platform

THE REPUBLICANS:

Platform and Candidates

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WHEN WE state that political platforms are designed to be all things to all people, we eschew any vagrant impulse to cynicism. The platform is a formalized instrument or device, sanctioned in American political practice, to be used as a measure of a party's intentions. As time has gone on, platforms have grown in scope or coverage and planks have been added at the behest of many different groups, geographical, political, social, racial and others. Platforms have come to represent the party's effort to attract and retain the support of these varying groups rather than a genuine, honest pledge to do the things promised.

(34d) Sat.

By any standards, the Republican platform this year is a carefuly and skillfully drawn-up document. It is addressed to the major problems of domestic and foreign policy. It seeks to give the people assurance by placing the party behind a program to correct complained-of evils, to improve the Federal services where they must deal with the people, to reduce where possible the amount of Government in the affairs of the people, and to encourage the people to do for themselves many of the things which the people have come to expect the Government to do for them.

The above we gather from reference in the platform to "the vital opportunity for youth and for all enterprising citizens which our competitive system furnishes," to Government as "the servant of such a system," to the "economical and effective administration of Government," and to the proposal for "a well-paid and efficient Federal career service."

7-3-48

It is clear from the platform that the dominant element in the party intends to continue our so-called internationalist foreign policy, recognizing "America's self-interest in the liberty of other peoples" and the necessity for strengthening the United Nations. The platform is buoyant when it speaks of a foreign policy "dedicated to preserving a free America in a free world of free men." With due regard for safeguarding domestic industry and agriculture, the platform inspiringly pledges the party to support "the system of reciprocal trade and encourage international commerce."

Scarcely any American could hope for more than to see the foregoing promises translated into action.

This newspaper is compelled to agree with the following pronouncement on labor:

"The rights and obligations of workers are commensurate with the rights and obligations of employers and they are interdependent; these rights should be protected against coercion and exploitation from whatever quarter and with one regard for the general welfare of all."

To combat inflation, the platform pledges:

"Progressive reduction of the cost of Government through elimination of waste; stimulation of production as the surest way to lower prices; fiscal policies to provide increased incentives for production and thrift; a sound currency; reduction of the public debt," and a few other measures, all of which read good if the pledge is kept.

Small business will be pleased to learn that the party regards it as "the bulwark of American enterprise," and that "it must be encouraged through aggressive anti-monopoly action, elimination of unnecessary controls, protection against discrimination, correction of tax abuses, and limitation of competition by Governmental organizations.

To the farmer, the platform pledge of a long-term program of interest includes: "an accelerated program of sounder soil conservation; effective protection of reasonable market prices through flexible support prices, commodity loans, marketing agreements," and other means such as may be necessary to increase the number of family-size farms, the development of new crops and of new uses for existing crops.

The West is promised all it wants in reclamation and the States the power to lay claim to the wealth of the tidelands.

The future is painted brightly for the veterans.

The Courier

Housing is to be turned over to free enterprisers, but Government is to encourage "the building of better homes at less cost" and Federal aid is to be given to the States "for local slum clearance and low-rental housing programs only where there is a need that cannot be met either by private enterprise or by the States and localities."

Pittsburgh, Pa.

There are significant planks covering social security, health and education.

It is when the so-called racial planks are considered that the Negro citizen must be critical. The pledges in the 1944 platform were much more specific and direct than those in the 1948 platform and they were not carried out. What hope can Negroes have in the present planks unless their hope is based in the character and records of the candidates? The platform reads:

Sat.

"Lynching or any other form of mob violence anywhere is a disgrace to any civilized State, and we favor the prompt enactment of legislation to end this infamy.

7-3-48

"One of the basic principles of this Republic is the equality of all individuals in their right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. This principle is enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and embodied in the Constitution of the United States; it was vindicated on the field of battle and became the cornerstone of this Republic. This right of equal opportunity, to work and to advance in life should never be limited on any individual because of race, religion, color, or country of origin. We favor the enactment and just enforcement of such Federal legislation as may be necessary to maintain this right at all times in every part of this Republic.

"We favor the abolition of the poll tax as a requisite to voting.

"We are opposed to the idea of racial segregation in the armed services of the United States.

"We favor equality of educational opportunity for all and the promotion of education and educational facilities."

For comparison, the 1944 plaform pledged:

". . . an immediate Congressional inquiry to ascertain the extent to which mistreatment, segregation and discrimination against Negroes in our armed forces are impairing morale and efficiency and the adoption of corrective legislation.

The Courier

". . . the establishment by Federal legislation of a Permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission.

"The payment of any poll tax should not be a condition of voting in Federal elections and we favor immediate submission of a constitutional amendment for its abolishment.

"We favor legislation against lynching and pledge our sincere efforts in behalf of its early enactment."

Any comparison of the above planks from the two platforms is bound to lead to the conclusion that platforms by themselves count for very little. The leadership of the party and the position of dominance it may enjoy in the Government count for much.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

In 1944, the Republicans failed to win the White House or the Congress. They cannot be blamed too much for failing to live up to their promises in the two years that followed. But in 1946, the Republicans won both branches of the Congress. President Truman, on several occasions, gave leadership for a progressive legislative program in racial matters. The Republicans refused to follow this leadership or to rally behind leadership of their own. They were apparently content that their promises of 1944 should remain unkept.

One is compelled to ask, therefore, what chances there are that the Republicans will do better in the Eighty-first than they have in the Eightieth Congress?

The only possible clue is in the candidates they have chosen to lead the ticket—if these candidates should win and if the Republican party retains control of the Congress.

Sat.

At this time, The Courier reserves an expression of its position in the 1948 campaign.

7-3-48

But it is compelled to admit that the Republicans could scarcely have done better at Philadelphia. To say so is not to cast aspersion on any of the other candidates. It is a simple admission of the fact that both Governors Dewey and Warren have been excellent administrators in their own States. They are men who have hewn the way for themselves. They are men of intelligence, initiative and enterprise. They are at least the equal of any two men the party could have nominated.

Already there is talk of the South rallying behind President Truman, not because they love him more but because they fear him less than Dewey. In New York, Governor Dewey has put himself behind some of the measures placed in the Republican platform. His leadership and determination might spell the difference between Republican treatment of the 1944 platform and Republican action on the more nebulous planks in the 1948 platform.

The platform is good, but to the victorious candidates belongs fulfillment.

Committee Votes 48-44 To Give Representation

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.— (SNS) —The most decisive skirmish in the battle for recognition as official Georgia delegation apparently was won Friday by the Tucker-Williams 44 to seat their forces.

The decision came after a spirited and impassioned plea by John Wesley Dobbs of Atlanta, Ga., who was spokesman for the group in presenting the case of the delegation led by National Committeeman Wilson Williams of Columbus, Ga.

The report by the national committee was interpreted as reversing and rebuffing the decision of Secretary of State Ben F. Fortson, of Georgia, who earlier had ruled in favor of the Roy Fostor faction which had been criticised as lily-white.

The victory for the Dobbs-Tucker-Williams faction came after a bitter struggle between the two faction both in Georgia and before the committee here in Philadelphia. The winning group is led by Harry Sommers and is reported to favor the nomination of Gov. Thomas Dewey. The Roy Foster faction was believed to have been supporting Senator Robert Taft of Ohio.

Despite the fact that the decision of the committee usually sticks, Roy Foster promptly announced that his slate of 16 delegates would appeal the decision of the national committee on the floor before the credentials committee.

Both sides contended during the hearing that the other was a "romp group" which had bolted the party after an Atlanta convention back in 1944.

Despite the fact that Talmadge was not an issue in the contest his name repeatedly ever berated before the committee.

Monty Appel, a Washington attorney, was principal spokesman for the Foster Republicans. He urged that Secretaries of State John Wilson and Ben Fortson had duly certified Foster and his slate as required by Georgia law. He denied a tie with Talmadge with the assertion that half of the 32 nominees are Negroes.

Several Negroes are on the winning slate namely Wesley Dobbs delegate-at-large; W. J. Shaw, Joseph Crawford, and Dr. T. H. Brewer, alternates. Other Negro district delegates include L. B. Toomer, Savanah; A. C. Touchstone, Griffin; T. C. Williams, Brunswick; and alternates B. F. Cofer, A. T. Atwater, Rev. B. F. Mann, and G. S. Wigfall.

Roscoe Pickett Jr., of Jasper, pro-Foster delegate denied the link with Talmadge by pointing out that Ellis Gibbs Arnall was governor 1944 when the group won. He added that Secretary of State Ben Fortson, who ruled in favor of Fostor last May was an Arnold appointee.

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia, June 23—The 1948 Republican platform, which its chief creator, Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts described as "broad enough" to hold any one of the leading candadates, was adopted unanimously today by the full Convention. Thurs

It was pretty much of an apathetic crowd that listened to its reading by Sen. Lodge and it was not until the last half of it had been reached that applause greeted some of the declarations.

The first plank to win any response from the delegates was the anti-lynching declaration and the second was the anti-Communist stand. 6-24-48

In fact all indications now are that the coming campaign will be based on a GOP versus Communism slogan even stronger than that of 1946.

The plank promising full recognition and economic aid the new state of Israel, greatly strengthened from the original much weaker one, was greeted with probably the loudest round of applause.

Court To Hear Howard-Miss. GOP "Lilly-White" Appeal Case

(34d)

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

PHILADELPHIA (ANP)—The issue of whether Perry W. Howard, Republican committeeman from Mississippi and the regularly elected delegate to the last GOP convention in Philadelphia or "lily white" factions of the state were the lawful delegates to the convention is to be decided in the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit at its regular September sessions, it was disclosed here last week by Atty. Raymond Pace Alexander. Thurs

Atty. Alexander, who is representing the National Republican committee in this case, at the specific request of Mr. Howard, received notice at his office that the "lily white" faction would appeal the decision handed down by . Cullen Ganey of the U. S. District court during the convention, dismissing a bill in equity and petition for injunction against Mr. Howard and his colleagues. 7-22-48

FACTIONAL CLAIMS

The opposing faction, led by George L. Sheldon, Nelson E. Taylor and others, claimed they were the duly elected delgates on an all-white ticket and represented the Mississippi "lily whites" to the GOP meeting. They attempted to hold up the proceedings of the convention by bringing a bill in equity in the local federal district court. The bill held up proceedings for two hours and then Carroll Reese, GOP National committee chairman, turned the bills in equity and injunction petition over to Atty. Alexander.

After three days of hearing testimony, Judge Ganey dismissed the injunction petition as well as the bill in equity, and held that Perry Howard and his group were the duly elected delegates to the Republican convention and that their party was the recognized faction of the state of Mississippi. Consideration testimony had been given which revealed that the "lily white" factions refused to permit a Negro to qualify or to become a qualified elector and voter in the Republican primaries of Missippi by systematically denying him the ballot through fraud, coercion, chicanery, misrepresentation and threats. 7-22-48

All-Out Plank for Civil Rights Approved

The Times-Picayune
New Orleans, La.

BY EDGAR POE
(The Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, July 14.—In the face of stern warnings from Southern speakers that it would wreck the Democratic party in Dixie, the Democratic national convention today adopted an all-out "explosive" plank. Thurs.

By a vote of 651½ to 582½, the civil rights plank was amended to "highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on the issue."

The 4500-word platform was finally adopted after more than two hours of speech-making and roll calls, and left many Southern delegates fuming. Thurs.

President Truman in February touched off the revolt in Dixie with a 10-point "civil rights" message to Congress. By today's action, a majority of the delegates with the big block of votes from Eastern and Mid-Western states along with California backed up Mr. Truman.

Amended Plank

Thus, the amended civil rights plank, which has placed the Democratic party in disunity follows: 7-15-48

The Democratic party is responsible for the great civil rights gains made in recent years in eliminating unfair and illegal discrimination based on race, creed or color.

The Democratic party commits itself to continuing its effor to eradicate all racial, religious and economic discrimination.

We again state our belief that racial and religious minorities must have the right to live, the right to work, the right to vote, the full and equal protection of the laws. On a basis of equality with all citizens as guaranteed by the constitution.

We highly commend President Harry Truman for his courageous stand on the issue of civil rights.

We call upon the Congress to support our president in guaranteeing these basic and fundamental American principles—the right to full and equal political participation; the right to equal opportunity of employment; the right of security of person, and the right of equal treatment in the service and defense of our nation.

Ready to March

At least 13 of the 26 Alabama delegates were ready to march out of the sweltering Convention Hall and tried unsuccessfully to gain recognition from Convention Chairman Sam Rayburn of Texas when he gaveled the convention to a recess.

The Democratic party machinery in control of the nomination of President Truman had reportedly tried to avoid an all-out platform recommendation of the president's now famous civil rights message. The amendment that was adopted commending the nation's chief executive was sponsored by Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis, a member of the platform committee from Minnesota. Times-Picayune

Humphrey earlier in the afternoon had made a two-fisted, rip-roaring speech in behalf of the amendment. It touched off a noisy demonstration of several minutes among delegates from all sectors of the nation except the South. Thurs.

Before the convention voted to amend the platform committee draft of the civil rights plank, a group of Southerners offered an amendment designed to place a "states' rights" plank in the platform in substitute of the "civil rights" plank but it was voted down by voice vote. 7-15-48

Speak for Amendment

Speaking for the amendment were former Governors Chauncy Sparks of Alabama and Dan Moody of Texas, House Speakers Walter Sillers of Mississippi and Cecil Simms of Tennessee.

The proposal by Simms and Mrs. Albert E. Hill, delegates from Tennessee, submitted a proposal calling on the Democratic party to reaffairm "its fundamental principles of states' rights as reserved in the federal consitution, and pledges that it will oppose any attempt, by legislation or otherwise, to invade the exclusive jurisdiction of the states in their domestic affairs."

GOP Recognizes Virgin Islands

PHILADELPHIA — The seating of two Virgin Islanders at the Republican National Convention marked the first time that the Virgin Islands have been recognized at a GOP convention. Those seated were Roy P. Gordon of St. Thomas, chairman of the legislative council of the Virgin Islands and Jose Shaubah, St. Croix businessman. Officially, the Virgin Islanders were not voting delegates this year, although it is expected that they will be granted full participation by 1952.

Republicans Benefit From State Rights Fight

[illegible]

Lite 8-24-48

Columbia, S.C.

There are those among the States Rights Democratic leaders who complain that the States Rights movement is getting a lukewarm reception in certain of the Southern states. Governor Jester of Texas refuses to go along with the splinter party idea; he is still a Democrat. Governor Cherry of North Carolina has also adopted a hands-off policy; he too calls himself a Democrat. And there are others.

And everywhere throughout the South they are being denounced as betraying the Southern cause and aiding and abetting Harry Truman.

But this charge isn't necessarily so. The Republicans stand to benefit in most of the Southern states if the States Rights party doesn't get on the ticket, rather than the Democrats. Southern opponents of the President's civil rights program in these states will vote Republican and some of these states will as a result go Republican.

There is Texas, which voted Republican in 1928. If the States Rights party cannot capture the second Texas Democratic convention and enters a third-party ticket in the general election the state is almost certain to go to Truman and Barkley. But if the States Righters stay out of Texas, should they fail to capture the September convention, the Republicans have a better than even chance to win by attracting enough anti-Truman votes, which would be split by the entry of the Thurmond-Wright ticket, to win.

Only in North Carolina where already the Progressives have qualified will the entry now of the States Rights Democrats as a fourth party contribute to a Republican victory. Divide the normal Democratic vote into three fractions—Democrats, States Rights Democrats and Progressives—and the unsplintered Republicans may win. All that it takes is a plurality of the vote.

In Florida the result may be a split electoral vote, if not an outright Republican victory. The States Righters claim four of the Democratic candidates for electors. They will therefore vote for only four Democratic electors. The Republicans are inviting them to cast their other four votes for four of the Republican electors. "Anybody but Truman" is their slogan. As a result the eight electoral votes of Florida could be split, four for Thurmond and Wright, four for Dewey and Warren or if the Republicans are as strong in Florida as they claim to be the entire eight electoral votes may go to Dewey. Florida also voted Republican in 1928.

Lite 8-31-48

The Republicans will, of course, be the beneficiary of the States Rights movement even in those states, such as South Carolina in which the States Righters have absorbed the regular Democratic party organization. The regular Democratic votes will simply go to the States Rights candidates and Truman electors cannot get on the ticket except as bolters from the state organization. The magnitude of the certain Republican victory is simply increased.

Many Negro Delegates At GOP Meeting

The Lighthouse

Columbia, S.C.

PHILADELPHIA — (ANP)—The largest number of Negro delegates and alternates to any Republican National convention — or to any political convention—are helping to name the man who will carry the G. O. P. banner in the 1948 national election. By the same signs, they are having a hand in, perhaps, selecting the next President of the United States.

348

The latest and best count showed 34 delegates from 14 states and the District of Columbia, and 31 alternates from the same 14 states, although not all from the same states as the delegates.

Last minute contests, however, may make a difference as to whether all delegats will actually vote. Two contests have already been decided. The Mississippi delegation led by Perry W. Howard was seated over its lily-white contestants, while the pro-Dewey delegation from Georgia, with J. W. Dobbs, noted Mason, as one of the leaders, was given a seat over its pro-Taft opponents.

Subcommittee Snubs Petition Of Negroes For Civil Rights

By LOUIS LAUTIER

PHILADELPHIA—(S N S)—The credentials committee last Monday afternoon affirmed the action of the Republican National Committee in seating the Tucker faction delegates of the Republican Paarty in Georgia.

The vote came on the motion of Ed Schorr of Ohio to substitute the delegates and alternates of the foster faction for those of the Tucker faction. The motion was rejected by a vote of 26 to 24.

The action of the credential committee placed sixteen votes in the Dewey column. The Foster delegation is supporting Senator Robert A. Taft for the Republican Presidential nomination and the Taft forces, in an effort to win the sixteen votes of Georgia Republicans had former Senator George Wharton Pepper, a noted Philadelphia lawyer to argue the case for them.

The votes of two colored members of the Credential Committee, John T. Risher of Mississippi and Valores Washington of Illinois, gave the victory to the Dewey forces.

6-27-48

NEGROES REBUFFED

A committee representing colored delegates and alternates this afternoon was denied the privilege of presenting to the full resolutions committee resolutions embodying the colored delegates' views as to what the Civil Rights planks in the Republican platform should contain.

Prominent members of the resolutions committee were buttonholed as they made their way into the committee meeting by Edgar G. Brown and other members of the committee representing colored delegates. None would promsie to offer the resolutions of the colored delegates as a substitute for the report of the Civil Rights Subcommittee of the Resolutions Committee.

6-27-48

One of those stopped was Carrol Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee. GOP Platform Shuns Isolationism, Calls for Civil Rights Program

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Tues. 6-22-48

PHILADELPHIA, June 22—(Tuesday)—(AP)—A pledge to continue America's international co-operation was approved early today by the Republican Resolutions Committee in a platform shunning isolationism.

The platform, which is to be presented to the Republican National Convention, also promises to battle for world peace through the United Nations.

In a slam-bang GOP family battle, the platform writers beat down repeated attempts to amend the foreign policy plank.

The plank said the United Nations should be freed of the use of any veto in the peaceful settlement of international disputes. This language did not mention Russia directly.

At home, the platform said 'if the Party is given full power of government it will press strong measures to combat Communism. It calls for a far-reaching Civil Rights program, including enactment of fair employment, anti-lynch, and anti-poll tax legislation.

It opposes racial segregation in the Armed Forces.

The platform pledged the Party to a battle against high living costs and inflation. 6-22-48

Although the meeting was held behind closed doors, Chairman Henry Cabot Lodge reported to newsmen later there were vigorous battles on the foreign policy plank and domestic policy as well.

Sen. Brooks, Republican, Illinois, was reported unofficially to have led in efforts to spike some sections of the foreign policy plank. And Charles S. Reed, of Omaha, Neb., took a leading role in preventing severe revision of the platform's original text, prepared by a Resolutions Sub-Committee.

On domestic policy, the resolutions group fell into the severest battle over housing, finally writing in a plank calling for a broad program of Government-constructed, low-rent housing. Legislation for such housing was killed in the last hours of the GOP-dominated Eightieth Congress.

The text of the platform was not given out immediately.

The document probably will be presented to the Republican Convention on Wednesday. The Convention could change it, but is not likely to.

Lodge disclosed among its planks are: The Constitution

A pledge to support the States' claims to control over tidelands, rather than Federal control.

A strong plank greeting Israel and calling for full recognition of the new country with integrity of boundaries. Atlanta, Ga.

A plank on education. Lodge said reporters would have to draw their own conclusions—after they see the language—as to whether it constitutes "Federal aid to education." Tues.

A plank supporting self-Government for the District of Columbia, but not representation in Congress.

Lodge said the anti-Communist plank does not indorse the Mundt-Nixon Bill. 6-22-48

Lodge said that some revisions were made in the foreign plank but that they did not weaken it.

Lodge disclosed officially that the foreign affairs plank calls for elimination of the veto in United Nations questions involving peaceful settlement of disputes. He said it also urges the setting up of an international peace-keeping force.

The Resolutions Committee adopted a labor plank without a fight. The plank read like this as the meeting began: 6-22-48

"Collective bargaining is an obligation as well as a right, applying to workers and employers, and the fundamental right to strike is subordinate only to paramount considerations of public health and safety. Government's chief function in this field is to promote good will, encourage co-operation, and where resort is had to intervention, to be impartial, preventing violence and requiring obedience to all law by all parties involved. We pledge continuing study to improve labor-management legislation in the light of experience and changing conditions."

Simultaneously, a drive developed to make the preliminary platform draft call for new and severe legislation to control Communism—along the lines of the Mundt-Nixon Bill.

Trouble also threatened over the farm plank. Platform drafters were ready to praise a new farm program pressed through Congress in its closing hours, when Albert S. Goss, Master of the National Grange, rushed here from Washington to protest that it contains "too much regimentation." The Constitution

Reps. Mundt, Republican, South Dakota, and Nixon, Republican, California, personally presented the anti-Communism plank proposal. Mundt said it proposes to "regulate, expose and identify Communism."

The general harmony of platform framing was interrupted as members of Congress, held in Washington for the late adjournment, took looks at the preliminary draft of planks prepared by members of the Resolutions (Platform) Committee in pre-convention sessions.

Some hinted there might be wrangles over housing and Federal aid to education.

But by and large, the proposed platform is reported to accept the challenge of President Truman and base its policy declarations on the record of the GOP controlled 80th Congress—with some elaborations. The Constitution

The Civil Rights issue flared up anew as the Resolutions committee went into a crucial closed session to act on a draft of the platform. Atlanta, Ga.

A group of Negro leaders, including a number of late-arriving delegates, halted National Chairman Carroll Reece at the door of the resolutions meeting and demanded a reopening of hearings on Civil Rights. Tues.

One of their spokesmen told Reece some of the delegates wanted the platform to contain a pledge that Congress would refuse to seat any person who had helped "disfranchise Negroes. 6-22-48

He said they want the platform to mention specifically the name of Rep. John E. Rankin, Mississippi Democrat.

Reece replied that under its rules the Platform Committee closed hearings last Saturday. He said, however, he would see if anything could be done.

The proposed farm plank was quoted by the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin as favoring:

Once Again the G.O.P. Is Hot for Liberties

The Courier-Journal

Louisville, Ky. Sun. 6-20-48

IT IS noted that Republicans already gathered in Philadelphia are for a strong civil-rights plank in their platform. They are hot for abolishing poll taxes, passing an anti-lynching bill, ending segregation in the armed forces and discrimination in jobs.

One may not doubt that the ears of some of them burned a bit when they were reminded of their official declarations four years ago which "unequivocally" pledged the same things. A pertinent question was asked of the platform committee by WALTER WHITE of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People and Dr. CHANNING TOBIAS, of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church. What does it take, they asked in effect, to make good on a pledge? A proper political climate, with a party's own man in the White House to make sure of complete credit for a good deed? A concern for political advantage or concern for the deed itself?

Nothing is more certain than that in the two years the Republicans have controlled Congress, every item of their previous stout pledges could have been made into law. The opposition would have been isolated into a regional minority. The President, himself committed to the same ends, would have signed the bills without delay. The Courier-Journal

But now, it seems, we have come to another year, a fresh necessity for catching votes. It is to be guessed that the civil-rights planks will be written once more, and that they will be firmer to stand on and more eloquent to expound than before. At that, they will have to be firm and eloquent beyond what any convention has written before. They will have to compete with the eloquence and democratic philosophy in the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights which was dropped into the lap of a Republican Congress last October, an invitation and a challenge. It was also an opportunity, which so far has been ignored. Louisville, Ky.

Republican Challenge

READING the Republican platform, it is difficult to reconcile some of its high-sounding principles with the actions of the Republican members of Congress in the final days of the 80th session.

Only through the hardest kind of fight was the Marshall Plan, or Economic Co-operation Administration, established, although the party pledges: "Our foreign policy is dedicated to preserving a free America in a free world of free men. This calls for strengthening the United Nations and primarily recognition of America's self-interest in the liberty of other peoples. Prudently conserving our own resources, we shall co-operate on a self-help basis with other peace-loving nations."

The people of this Nation will be looking for a forthright program for implementation of this declaration. The grudging extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act for one year does not look adequate ranged alongside the platform promise: "With necessary regard for domestic needs, we favor reciprocal trade agreements and the encouragement of international commerce."

The Commercial Appeal

WE WANT to be more than reassured, in light of the hamstringing of TVA on its New Johnsonville steam plant project, that the G. O. P. is sincere when it states: "We favor progressive development with adequate appropriations of the Nation's water power resources for navigation, flood control and power, with immediate action in critical areas."

The misnamed civil rights plank differs only slightly from the 1944 declaration. The Republicans still insist on legislation to penalize law enforcement officials in areas where lynching occurs, and they would have Federal legislation abolishing poll taxes. The final draft did eliminate the demand for the FEPC. That could be interpreted as a bid for the disaffected voters of the South to whom an FEPC is anathema (as President TRUMAN has learned), or it could mean that the leaders realize the unfairness and impracticality of such a force measure. Memphis, Tenn

The Congress left housing out in the cold, but the platform now asserts: "Housing can be best supplied and financed by private enterprise, but Government can build and should encourage the building of better and less costly homes. We recommend Federal aid to the states for local slum clearance and low-rental housing programs, wherever there is a need that cannot be met either by private enterprise or by the states and localities." Fri. 6-25-48

THE farm plank reads very well. If the Republicans are successful at the polls in November, agriculture would have little fault to find with a program that embraced this intention: "There must be long-term legislation in the interest of agriculture and the consumer which should include: An accelerated program of sounder soil conservation; effective protection of reasonable market prices; encouragement of family-size farms; intensified research to discover new crops, new uses for existing crops, and control of animal diseases and crop pests; support of bona fide farmer-owned and farmer-operated co-operatives, and sound rural electrification."

Understandably, in view of the attack on the Taft-Hartley Law by union officers, there is only a declaration of broad policies on labor affairs: "Collective bargaining is an obligation as well as a right, applying equally to workers and employers; and the fundamental right to strike is subordinate only

WE FAIL to find any evidence of an intention to give Federal assistance to education, a subject we predict will give the candidates anxiety unless handled promptly.

There will be many other issues, national and local, that will demand their attention, for that matter, and as always, it will be the candidate and not the platform who will persuade the voters in the showdown. We do not go along with those who dismiss the party platforms with cynical disregard. Only when me and women demand adherence will we begin to be an intelligent electorate, voting with our minds instead of our emotions. The Commercial Appeal

The Republican platform has many weaknesses, but on the whole it is a challenge to the Democratic Party which, in turn, meets in Philadelphia July 12 to begin its campaign. The spectre of WALLACE and his third party will be hovering in the Left Wing and the gliberals will employ it to the utmost in an effort to stampede the Democratic leaders into impractical declarations. Memphis, Tenn

Perhaps the strongest plank in the G. O. P. platform is its avowed attitude on international affairs. Coming from a party long identified as isolationist, it is a refreshing development. We sincerely hope that the Democratic Party will not be stampeded into anything less forceful or reassuring through the fear of WALLACE defections. Here, indeed, is a challenge to be met. 6-23-48

1944 Plank Evaded, Party Told

34d

Philadelphia, June 18 (AP)—National Negro leaders severely criticized the Republican party today and demanded that the 1948 platform contain a strong civil rights plank.

The Republicans, hard at work on a platform to be presented to the national convention next week, appeared to be moving toward what the Negroes were asking for—pledges of support for anti-lynching, anti-poll tax and fair employment laws.

Slaps At Congressmen

Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the civil rights subcommittee of the G.O.P. resolutions committee that the Republicans dominating congress had "miserably evaded" similar platform pledges made in 1944.

Dr. Channing B. Tobias, Negro religious leader from New York, told the subcommittee: "The Negroes of this country, mark my word, are a solid line such as just speaking thru my hat."

A committee member, Mrs. Vites Gates of Kentucky, demanded, "Is that a considered statement or a threat?"

Tobias said it was very considered. He said that "never before in the history of this country has there been such unity and determination on the part of the colored people to make American citizenship, in all that the word connotes, apply to them as well as other people."

Democrats Blamed

W. C. Meekins of North Carolina, another committee member, asked Tobias to remember that the acts against Negroes of which he complained have largely taken place in states controled by Democrats.

White retorted that the Negro leaders will testify concerning the Democratic platform later.

Chief Justice George W. Maxey of the Pennsylvania Supreme court, chairman of the subcommittee, wondered how a fair employment law would be enforced—he compared it with prohibition—but he hastily told Tobias and White: Daily Tribune

"Don't think we're antagonistic. Nobody in the world could be any more in favor of equal rights than I am. When a colored man is lynched, the whole United States army ought to protect that man."

White and Tobias said they spoke for 21 national Negro organizations with 6,094,000 members. Chicago Ill

Stassen Backs ERP

Meanwhile, Harold E. Stassen, appearing at his own request, urged another group of platform drafters to pledge the Republican party to a continuing European recovery program on what he called "a businesslike basis."

Stassen told a news conference, shortly before, that the Republicans should lead the way toward international co-operation. Sat

He said, however, that the party should "reject the proposition that we shall expend American moneys to further socialization of foreign countries." 6-19-48

Sen. Lodge of Massachusetts, chairman of the resolutions committee, told newsmen the platform will contain the Republican party's "most international program" in history. The resolutions committee will write the platform to be presented to the convention next week.

"Times have changed since 1920," said Lodge. "Today we have a different set of conditions. We've got to adjust ourselves to those conditions."

Lodge also urged adoption of a proportional system of selecting Presidents in the electoral college.

Green Asks $1 Minimum

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, write into the platform a raise in minimum wages to $1 an hour.

The union leader called the present 40 cents-an-hour minimum wage "completely unrealistic" and "without relation to present day standards." Daily Tribune

In addition to the hourly wage boost, Green called for: (1) elimination of the Taft-Hartley law; (2) curbs on inflation; (3) active efforts for world peace; (4) federal aid to education, and (5) improved social security coverage.

Suffrage Plank Takes Place for First Time In Republican Program

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Pa., June 23.—District home rule today was anchored firmly in the Republican Party's national program.

The call for self-government for residents of the Nation's Capital rode with the GOP campaign platform recommended by the committee headed by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.), to unopposed approval by the Republican Convention Approval came on a voice vote in this morning's session.

Wording of Plank

It was the first time a District suffrage plank had taken its place in the official platform of the Republican Party.

The District plank puts the GOP on record this way:

"We favor self-government for the residents of the Nation's Capital." The Post

Leaders of this year's House drive for passage of the bill for District reorganization and home rule promptly hailed the self-government plank as a big boost for their legislation.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), chairman of this year's House District Committee and leader of the House fight for passage of the home-rule bill, said he was greatly pleased with the platform declaration.

Washington, D.C.

Dirksen said he was glad to see that it emphasized the word "residents." This referred to the recommendation in the home-rule bill that would have made one-year residence in the District a basic qualification for voting for the school board for the District. 6-24

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), head of the House subcommittee that developed and sponsored the home-rule bill, said the self-government plank in the platform had strengthened chances for favorable home-rule action by Congress next year. Thurs.

"I'm very pleased," said Auchincloss. "The plank has given those of us who are interested in home rule much encouragement to renew the fight for justice for the people of Washington." 34d

Auchincloss saw in the plank a direct indorsement of the principles of his home-rule bill.

Representative John J. Allen, jr., (R., Calif.), a member of the Auchincloss committee, said "I am very pleased to see the self-government section go into the platform. I think it assures the friendly consideration of home rule in the next session. 6-24-48

"Now that District self-government is in the national policy of the Republican Party, it's a favorable omen for home rule and an appreciated compliment to the work of the committee of which I was a member."

Auchincloss had earlier announced that if elected he will promptly introduce a home-rule bill and seek early House passage for it in the new Congress.

Negro Leader Warns GOP on Rights Pledge

The Post
Washington D.C.

Kansas City, June 22 (AP).—A Negro leader, Walter White, warned the Republican Party today that voters of his race would view "with skepticism" civil rights planks of its national platform.

Wed. 6-23-48

White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the "skepticism" was the result of the Republicans' failure to keep their 1944 election promises.

Here for the opening of the association's thirty-ninth annual conference, White in an interview said the Republican Party in 1944 adopted a strong civil rights platform.

"Did Absolutely Nothing"

"They came into power in 1946 with majorities in both Houses of Congress," he added, "and they did absolutely nothing to fulfill their pledges. Wed.

"We have told the platform committee that if they are planning to repeat their performance it will result in increased opposition of Negroes against the Republican Party. 6-23-48

"The Wallace crowd has hopes are not going to bolt lock, stock and barrel to a third party because they know a third party in the race simply results in an even more conservative group being elected than that now in power."

White came here from Philadelphia, where he talked to the Republican Convention platform committee. He explained he urged not only the adoption but the fulfillment of a civil rights program, including antilynching legislation, the institution of a fair employment practice committee, abolition of segregation in the armed forces and elimination of the poll tax.

"Most Independent" Vote

The Post

"In 17 States, with a total of 295 electoral votes, the Negro holds the balance of power," White said. "The Negro vote today is, by force of circumstances, the most independent vote in America."

White added that his group also would confer with members of the Democratic platform committee. He added the NAACP neither would indorse nor oppose any party, nor would it attempt officially to set a course for Negroes in individual political contests.

"If the Republican Party comes out with a civil rights platform we will first wait and see what the Democrats do and what the Wallaceites do," he explained. "We shall then follow our traditional policy of appraising factually, objectively and in nonpartisan fashion the possibilities of each platform." Washington, D.C.

Approximately 800 delegates from 40 States had registered for the conference today. The association claims a membership of 500,000 in 45 States.

THOMAS L. STOKES

The Constitution

It Would Help the South

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON.—The Republican convention in Philadelphia opened up the question of a long-overdue reform by one sentence in its platform: "We favor a revision of the procedure for the election of the President and Vice Presiden which will more exactly reflect the popular vote."

This was timely and appropriate for, during the last Congress, such a proposed reform by constitutional amendment was approved by the Judiciary Committees of both the House and Senate and reached the calendar, though failing of final action. It was sponsored jointly by a Republican and a Democrat—in the Senate by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican, Massachusetts, and in the House by Rep. Ed Gossett, Democrat, Texas. Consequently, endorsement of such a reform in principle in the Republican platform might very properly be followed by endorsement in the Democratic platform at the forthcoming Philadelphia convention. That would put it in a favorable legislative spot in Congress.

Senator Lodge's influence was seen in approval of the reform by the Republicans. He was chairman of the Resolutions Committee that drafted the platform.

Wed. 6-30-48

The Lodge-Gossett proposal calls for abolition of the Electoral College as such, though retaining the electoral vote, and for substitution of what would amount to popular election of President and Vice President. This would be done by giving to each candidate in each State the proportion of the State's electoral vote represented by his percentage of the vote in the State. For a simple example—if the vote of Ohio were divided 60-40 between the two major parties, then the candidates of one party would receive 15 electoral votes, the other, 10 electoral votes. As it is now the candidate who gets the majority of votes gets the whole electoral vote of a State—in Ohio, for instance, all of the 25 electoral votes.

While the need for such a reform long has been recognized to avoid what already has happened three times in our history, that is, that the candidate with the smaller popular vote has become President through the existing electoral system, there are other persuasive reasons which are dramatized at this very time.

One is the situation in the South growing out of resentment over President Truman's Civil Rights program. That has provoked proposals that a State committee be given authority to order the whole electoral vote of a State against the President, no matter what his popular vote may be. That would be impossible under the Lodge-Gossett reform.

Another healthy effect envisaged in the South would be encouragement for development of a real two-party system in that section. By making it possible for Republicans to get credit in electoral votes for the minority of votes they always poll in the South, it would be worthwhile to vote the Republican ticket there, for Republican votes would count. Senator Lodge says this would probably induce Republican candidates to campaign in the South.

A characteristic generally of our politics this year is tension over issues. This very likely will produce an intense and exaggerated appeal to minority groups, particularly in the large States where they are centered. The campaign will tend to be concentrated in such States. This invites not only arousing of projudice, but also actual corruption, as has been demonstrated in the past. The change in the electoral system would minimize the importance of the large States in elections.

The Constitution

Also the proposed reform would give electoral representation to independent and third parties if they are sufficiently strong in certain areas. In 1924, for example, the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, who polled just under 5,000,000 votes, would have been credited with far more than the 13 electoral votes which he got for carrying his own State. He ran second to President Coolidge and ahead of the Democratic candidate, John W. Davis, in ten other States west of the Mississippi. A showing of that strength in electoral votes widely scattered over the West, reflecting the discontent in that area, might of itself have had a moderating influence on Republican Party. As it was, the G. O. P. old guard capitalized the so-called "Coolidge landslide" in a course that ended inevitably in economic collapse that had its origin in distress in the farm areas. Wed.

Similarly, a real electoral count on the basis of popular votes for the Wallace Third Party ticket this year might have its effect. 6-30-48

It is at least helpful that the change to a popular vote system has been projected for thinking and discussion. Atlanta, Ga.

Flirting With the South

The Constitution

PHILADELPHIA — While the civil rights plank in the Republican platform was strengthened considerably in the unprecedented nine-hour redrafting wrangle in the Resolutions Committee, it is yet less drastic—and calculated to be more acceptable to the South—than that contained in the party's '44 statement of policy.

The civil rights plank was one of those Resolution Committee Chairman Lodge had in mind when he stated that the preliminary recommendations of the various subcommittees were no longer recognizable. Even so, it remains, by Republican standards, a moderate document and one which is already drawing the wrath of numerous Negro delegates.

The '48 platform makes no mention of an FEPC. Atlanta, Ga.

Whereas the '44 platform stated specifically: "We pledge the establishment by Federal legislation of a permanent FEPC," the new one platitudinously declares: Wed. 6-23-48

"One of the basic principles of this republic is the equality of all individuals in their right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. This principle is enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and embodied in the Constitution of the United States; it was vindicated on the field of battle and became the cornerstone of this republic. This right of equal opportunity to work and to advance in life should never be limited in any individual because of race, religion, color or country of origin. We favor the enactment and just enforcement of such Federal legislation as may be necessary to maintain this right at all times in every part of this republic."

Moreover, in contrast to the '44 platform, which pledged "Congressional investigation and corrective legislation of mistreatment, segregation and discrimination in the armed forces," the '48 plank states merely: "We are opposed to the idea of racial segregation in the armed services of the United States."

The Constitution

And finally, while the '44 platform called for "immediate submission of a Constitutional amendment for abolition of the poll tax," the one adopted here yesterday reads: "We favor the abolition of the poll tax as a requisite to voting."

Atlanta, Ga.

These general statements of policy rather than the specific pledges which extremists sought, represent a considerable compromise, especially since the leading candidate at this time is known to favor an all-out civil rights program. Gov. Dewey has the vast majority of the several hundred Negro delegates present. If he is nominated he can be expected to bolster the party's civil rights plank with campaign promises and allusions to the stringent Fair Employment Practices legislation enacted in New York State during his tenure as Governor.

Wed. 6-23-48

But if the nominee is Taft, who is on record as opposing the FEPC, or some other candidate with moderate views, the Republican statements on civil rights may be less repugnant to many Southerners than those of President Truman.

Especially could this prove true if the Democratic convention, in an effort to regain some of the Negro vote the polls show it is losing to Wallace, adopts a strong civil rights platform when it meets in this city next month.—J. T.

Rights Fight Carried To GOP Convention

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

PHILADELPHIA —(NNPA) — Southerners brought their fight against civil rights into the resolution committee of the Republican national convention last Thursday when Orwille Bullington of Wichita Texas, asked to be placed on the civil rights subcommittee. Tues.

At the organization meeting of the resolution committee, after Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts, had been chosen chairman, the Texan, a six-footer, rebelled at being placed on the economics and small business subcommittee and demanded that a representative of the "Deep South" be named to the civil rights subcommittee, saying civil rights was one of the most important issues to come up before platform makers.

Mrs. Agnes Jones Gifford, of South Orange, New Jersey, said she would yield her place on the civil rights committee to Bullington.

To counter the Texan's move Edgar G. Brown, president of the National Negro Council, who later appeared before the civil rights subcommittee ,went into a huddle with Senator Lodge and insisted that a colored delegate to the convention also be placed on that subcommittee. 6-22-48

Finding Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman for Mississippi. in a meeting of the Republcian national committee, Mr. Brown secured from him the name of Dr. Lee M. Owens of Vicksburg, Mississippi, whom the Mississippi delegation had designated as its representative on the resolutions committee. Mr. Brown also learned that Miss Elizabeth Talbot of Buckhannon, West Virginia, another colored delegate, had been designated to serve on the resolutions committee

Mr. Brown gave both names to Senator Lodge, who appointed both Dr. Owens and Miss Buckhannon to the civil rights subcommittee.

At the meeeting of the civil rights subcommittee at Convention Hall last Thursday afternoon, Bullington attempted to heckle witnesses who urged that civil rights be included in the 1948 Republican platform. He got nowhere and apparently gave up.

The Story of the Missing Delegates

He thought that the lack of Negro North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia and a few other Southern states. These are the states of the "lily-white" delegations with here and there Negro alternates. Thurs.

It is the lily-whitism which pales the platform planks on Civil Rights. The absence of Negroes from most of the regular delegations from the South is a reminder of the Negro purges instituted by Herbert Hoover in 1928. And it is rumored the "great engineer" had a lot to do with the writing of the present convention platform. 6-24-48

Mississippi has a full delegation of eight Negroes, the only Southern state so represented. I talked with a number of the Mississippians in their hotel rooms. One, a Negro businessman of Meadville, felt that "we would have to go slow as it would be too bad if the whole Civil Rights program was passed overnight."

He thought that the Negroes would be caught "unprepared" for such blessings. Another delegate closer to the pulse of the people, because he is a newspaperman, said he was satisfied with the platform, but that he thought the party and the people generally should concentrate financial aid to P.V., which it said "is tottering," if the Harlem paper would support Wallace.

Row Outcome 'Significant'

By JACK TARVER

Constitution Associate Editor

PHILADELPHIA, June 21—The Stop-Dewey coalition's effort to set the brakes on the New York Governor's bandwagon failed today as the Credential Committee voted 26-24 to seat Georgia's pro-Dewey Tucker delegation.

The Constitution

Upholding last week's action by the National Committee, the credentials group denied the claims of the rump delegation headed by Roy Foster, of Wadley, after an hour's hearing and another hour and twenty minutes of executive session deliberation. Atlanta, Ga.

The controversy had attracted national attention and banner headlines in the Philadelphia papers since it was regarded as the most significant pre-balloting test of strength between the Dewey and Taft-Stassen forces. 6-22-48

Gov. Dewey's chances of getting the nomination on the third or fourth ballot were being reappraised tonight following the Georgia action. Tues.

Several states with favorite son candidates turned up in the list of those voting for the Tucker delegation, which was known as favorable to Dewey.

WASHINGTON, June 21—(AP) Sen. Russell, Democrat, Georgia, a leader of the South's civil-rights bloc, today "disclaimed" a reported move to cast Georgia's 26 presidential votes for him at the Democratic National Convention. He said Georgia and other Southern States instead should back Sen. George, who has represented Georgia in the Senate since 1922.

These include, perhaps significantly, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Illinois and Missouri.

For Roscoe Tucker, Harry Sommers, Elbert Tuttle, Barnaby Hill, and other members of the seated delegation, it was a victory doubly sweet, since reports were widespread that a deal had been made to head off the front-running Dewey—by seating the Georgia delegation opposed to him.

No later than yesterday, Taft's manager, Clarence Brown, had expressed belief that the Credentials Committee would override the decision of the National Committee and seat the Foster (pro-Taft) delegation. The Constitution

An indication of the significance of the Georgia contest was seen in Brown's observation that such a reversal of the National Committee "may overturn the whole thing." Atlanta, Ga.

The Foster faction had secured the services of George Wharton Pepper, former Senator from Pennsylvania and one of the nation's best known lawyers, to represent it before the Committee. Tues.

Pepper reviewed the circumstances of the Georgia GOP split in detail, and made an impassioned plea that the Foster delegation be seated. 6-22-48

He presented in evidence the minutes of Conventions he said were conducted in 132 Georgia counties in endeavoring to show the validity of the Foster claims.

The State passed a law in 1946 providing that the Secretary of State should pass on such disputes, declared Pepper. "Both sides agreed to the umpire. Both sides presented their cases to him. And then, when the Tucker delegation lost, they suddenly decided that they don't like the referee."

Tuttle, speaking for the Tucker faction, of which he is a delegate, ridiculed the legislation which "provides that Republican contests—but not Democratic ones—shall be determined by the Democratic Secretary of State.'"

"The law was passed after Gene Talmadge sent for Harry Sommers in 1944 and wanted to get together and name six Republicans and six anti-Roosevelt Democrats as electors," Tuttle said. "Mr. Sommers of course refused and two years later a Talmadge-controlled Legislature passed a specially rigged law so that Republican—but not Democratic—contests would be decided by a Democratic Secretary of State."

"The law is applicable only to those parties polling less than 150,000 votes in Georgia in the previous presidential election. Tues.

"We haven't got a political office holder in Georgia competent to make that decision and never will have unless you gentlemen help us to build a second party in the State," Tuttle added. "Sec. Fortson did not consider the facts. He did not consider the law. He did only the bidding of his Democratic chieftains."

"I hope this case will stand on its own merits and not be influenced by the bigger issues of the Convention," Tuttle concluded. "I hope you will lay aside your feelings for the fine men who are seeking the Presidency and make your decision on the basis of right and justice." 6-22-48

This latter was apparently in reference to widespread reports the Foster delegation had made a deal to give six votes to Stassen in return for the support of the latter's following on the Credentials Committee.

"Collective bargaining is an obligation as well as a right, applying to workers and employers, and the fundamental right to strike is subordinate only to paramount considerations of public health and safety. Government's chief function in this field is to promote good will, encourage co-operation, and where resort is had to intervention, to be impartial, preventing violence and requiring obedience to all law by all parties involved. We pledge continuing study to improve labor-management legislation in the light of experience and changing conditions." Tues.

Simultaneously, a drive developed to make the preliminary platform draft call for new and severe legislation to control Communism—along the lines of the Mundt-Nixon Bill.

The Constitution

Trouble also threatened over the farm plank. Platform drafters were ready to praise a new farm program pressed through Congress in its closing hours, when Albert S. Goss, Master of the National Grange, rushed here from Washington to protest that it contains "too much regimentation."

Reps. Mundt, Republican, South Dakota, and Nixon, Republican, California, personally presented the anti-Communism plank proposal. Mundt said it proposes to "regulate, expose and identify Communism."

The general harmony of platform framing was interrupted as members of Congress, held in Washington for the late adjournment, took looks at the preliminary draft of planks prepared by members of the Resolutions (Platform) Committee in pre-convention sessions.

Some hinted there might be wrangles over housing and Federal aid to education.

But by and large, the proposed platform is reported to accept the challenge of President Truman and base its policy declarations on the record of the GOP controlled 80th Congress—with some elaborations. Atlanta, Ga.

The Civil Rights issue flared up anew as the Resolutions committee went into a crucial closed session to act on a draft of the platform. Tues. 6-22-48

A group of Negro leaders, including a number of late-arriving delegates, halted National Chairman Carroll Reece at the door of the resolutions meeting and demanded a reopening of hearings on Civil Rights.

One of their spokesmen told Reece some of the delegates wanted the platform to contain a pledge that Congress would refuse to seat any person who had helped "disfranchise Negroes.

He said they want the platform to mention specifically the name of Rep. John E. Rankin, Mississippi Democrat.

Reece replied that under its rules the Platform Committee closed hearings last Saturday. He said, however, he would see if anything could be done.

The proposed farm plank was quoted by the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin as favoring:

PHILADELPHIA—(S N S)—The credentials committee last Monday afternoon affirmed the action of the Republican National Committee in seating the Tucker faction delegates of the Republican Paarty in Georgia.

The vote came on the motion of Ed Schorr of Ohio to substitute the delegates and alternates of the foster faction for those of the Tucker faction. The motion was rejected by a vote of 26 to 24.

The action of the credential committee placed sixteen votes in the Dewey column. The Foster delegation is supporting Senator Robert A. Taft for the Republican Presidential nomination and the Taft forces, in an effort to win the sixteen votes of Georgia Republicans had former Senator George Wharton Pepper, a noted Philadelphia lawyer to argue the case for them.

The votes of two colored members of the Credential Committee, John T. Risher of Mississippi and Valores Washington of Illinois, gave the victory to the Dewey forces.

A committee representing colored delegates and alternates this afternoon was denied the privilege of presenting to the full resolutions committee resolutions embodying the colored delegates' views as to what the Civil Rights planks in the Republican platform should contain.

Tues. 6-22-48

Prominent members of the resolutions committee were buttonholed as they made their way into the committee meeting by Edgar G. Brown and other members of the committee representing colored delegates. None would promsie to offer the resolutions of the colored delegates as a substitute for the report of the Civil Rights Subcommittee of the Resolutions Committee.

One of those stopped was Carrol Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee. Brown told him that if colored delegates were not given an opportunity to present their views before the full Resolutions Committee, an effoort would be made to have them presented on the conventoin floor and, failing that, colored Republicans, would take them to the voters.

Georgia GOP Faction Beckoning To Outraged Democratic Elements

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

348

Thurs. 2-5-48

One branch of Georgia's Republican Party Wednesday laid out the welcome mat for Democrats fuming over President Truman's program for civil rights.

Roy Foster, of Wadley, Chairman of the faction regarded as "Lily White" (although it staunchly protests it has Negro members), sought to lure dissatisfied Georgia and Southern Democrats into the Republican fold with the statement that "there is plenty of room at the top in the Republican Party in the South."

Foster said his State Central Committee meeting here Saturday might recommend inclusion of planks to appeal to Southern Democrats in the Republican National Platform. 2-5-48

"I don't think the South ever will be treated by the Republican Party like it is about to be treated by the Democratic Party," he continued. "I believe the Republican stand on civil rights will be more in keeping with state's rights."

Foster said his group was being recognized by the Republican National Committee as the official Republican Party in Georgia, despite contrary claims by the faction headed by Roscoe Taylor, of Dawsonville. He said the Republican National Committee had made reservations for his delegation and he would take 16 delegates and 16 alternates to Philadelphia. Tucker previously had said the National Committee had asked for reservations from his group. Tucker was recognized by the National Committee in 1944 while Foster was recognized by the Secretary of State on the Georgia ballot. The Constitution

The Foster group Wednesday also won recognition of the Young Republican Clubs of Georgia which heretofore had steered clear of the feud raging in the senior party. By a vote of four to three following a three-hour debate, the Executive Committee decided to recognize Foster since the Secretary of State and the State Supreme Court did so in 1944. The Young Republicans scheduled a State convention here May 29.

Foster will ask his State Committee meeting at the Fulton County Courthouse at 10 a. m. Saturday to boycott the Republican Presidential Primary being sponsored by National Committeeman Wilson Williams May 11. The Committee will make plans for a State Convention. Atlanta, Ga.

Tucker Group Wins GOP Nod As Official Party in Georgia

The Wilson Williams - Roscoe Tucker group (backers of Gov. Dewey) was designated as the official Republican Party in Georgia yesterday by the Republican National Committee. Atlanta, Ga.

The Committee, in Philadelphia, voted 48 to 44 to seat Tucker's delegation instead of the Roy Foster group which was backing Sen. Taft for the Republican Presidential nomination. Constitution

The decision of the Committee probably will be appealed to the convention's credentials committee next week. The credential committee's ruling can be appealed to the full convention. Sat. 6-19-48

It was the second victory of the Williams-Tucker group over the Foster organization at a national convention. The former was seated at the 1944 convention. The late Secretary of State John B. Wilson [illegible] the Foster electors on the Georgia ballot. Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson recently decided in favor of the Foster group again this year. 6-19-48

Many National Committeemen contended their decision for the Williams-Tucker delegation from Georgia was not a straight-out test of the Taft and Dewey strength in the National Committee. They said the fundamental issue was whether a Democratic Secretary of State in Georgia, who certified the Foster faction as the legal delegation, or the Republican organization in Georgia was going to name the Republican delegates. ATLANTA, Ga.—A bitter fight for the right to represene Georgia at the Philadelphia Republican National Convention is in the offing.

Last week the heretofore "lily-white" Foster faction changed its hue and elected Negroes as delegates to the Philadelphia meeting. The about-face was seen as the result of the turnaway given the Foster group in 1944 when it had an all-white delegation. Three Negroes were elected this year. They include Dr. J. W. Griffin of Bainbridge, Prof. L. W. Bywaters of Fort Valley and Mrs. Beatrice Wallace of Augusta as delegates-at-large. 5-15-48

James L. Grant of Savannah was one of the delegates named by the congressional convention in his district.

The Tucker faction, which was seated at the 1944 convention, boasts a third Negro representation throughout its structure and has sent Neg oes to national conventions since the early Twenties. This faction challenged the legality of the Foster group to hold district and State conventions, but was overruled in court. 5-15-48

Most prominent Negro Republicans in Georgia are aligned with the Tucker faction, which had the support of the late B. J. Davis, the lamented politician and newspaperman.

Bitter Fight For Seating Is Predicted

Both factions of the Republican Party in Georgia now boast Negroes as delegates. This was evident as the Roy Foster State Republican group met here Monday and voted to send an uninstructed delegation to the Republican National Convention. The Tucker faction, which was seated at the 1944 Convention, already listed Negroes on its slate. Wed 5-5-48

The Foster group which lost its bid for seats at the "44 Convention on the charge that it was "Lily White" elected three Negroes as delegates and altrnates to this year's National Convention in Philadelphia. A bitter fight for delegation seating is predicted. Wed 5-5-48

Among those elected were Dr. J. W. Griffin, Bainbridge; Prof. L. W. Bywaters, Fort Valley and Beatrice Wallace, Augusta, as delegates at large.

James L. Grant, first district, Savannah, was one of the delegates named by the congressional convention to the national meeting.

The state meeting barely escaped a split in the Foster faction as some district leaders charged Foster had stacked the convention with 150 "illegal delegates," but no challenge was made on any county's delegation on the convention floor.

Senator Taft's Southern campaign managers were present at the meeting.

National Committeeman Wilson Williams and Roscoe Tucker leader of the other State faction, were present as "observers."

THE SHELDON MYSTERY

Nebraskans are always faintly surprised when they hear news of their former Governor, George L. Sheldon. He turns up every four years at Republican National conventions, seeking recognition for his faction of what passes for the Republican Party in Mississippi. He is regularly defeated by the other faction, led by National Committeeman Perry Howard, a Negro.

How come, Nebraskans ask, that a former Governor of Nebraska—all but forgotten—is living in Mississippi?

Mr. Sheldon was Governor of Nebraska from 1907 to 1909—40 years ago. He was, by all accounts, a capable Governor.

At the end of his term Mr. Sheldon, whose salary as Governor was only $2,500, found himself faced with the common necessity of making a living. He wanted to farm. He decided that land was a good deal cheaper in Mississippi than in Nebraska, so he moved there. In a few years he became a successful planter.

Jnr. 8-5-48

Mr. Sheldon's Mississippi neighbors wanted him to run for the Legislature. He was agreeable, since he had time to spare, but there appeared to be one insuperable barrier: he was a Republican and declined to become a Democrat. Since no Republican could beat any Democrat in Mississippi, a way had to be found out of this impasse. It was. Mr. Sheldon's neighbors arranged things so that no Democrat filed against him. Thus he became the one and only Republican to serve in the Mississippi Legislature since Reconstruction days.

8-5-48

A Republican who can achieve any prominence in Mississippi must be quite a man. It's too bad Nebraska lost him.

Mississippi States' Righters File Ticket; GOP Factions Wrangle

[illegible]

Wed 8-18-48

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 18 (AP)—States' Righters were putting finishing touches on papers to place a Thurmond-Wright slate of electors on Mississippi's ballot today, while a bitter battle was in the making between two groups of Republicans who would support the Dewey-Warren ticket.

Heber Ladner, secretary of state, yesterday received the Thurmond-Wright slate but said "official" filing awaits a technicality—the signature of the secretary of the State Democratic Convention.

The other slates have been filed with Ladner—one by the independent Republicans and another by the regular Republicans.

The independents are an all-white group headed by George L. Sheldon, of Clinton, Miss.

The regulars are headed by Perry Howard, Negro attorney, of Washington. They have recognition from the national party.

* * *

SHELDON AND SEVERAL other independents yesterday served Ladner with a writ of mandamus. The petition on which it was based called on Ladner to place on the ballot as the Republican slate only those electors presented by the independents.

Ladner had previously received an opinion from the attorney general's office that both Republican slates should be listed on the ballot.

Wed 8-18-48

In the mandamus petition Sheldon and his associates contend that "by virtue of their being the first such group of candidates for presidential elector so filing," the independent slate is entitled under a 1948 legislative act (House Bill 876) to be the only group listed as pledged to the Republican nominees.

Asst. Atty. Gen. James Kendall took the matter under study. So did W. E. Gore, attorney for the "regular" Republican Party in Mississippi.

Sought To Keep Electors' Names From Ballot

Atlanta, Ga

JACKSON, Miss. — (NNPA) — Lily-white Republicans last Friday lost out in their efforts to have Presidential electors of the "black and tan" faction of the Republican party in Mississippi excluded from the ballot in November when the Attorney General's office authorized two slates of Republican electors placed on the ballot.

The authorization was contained in an opinion by Assistant Attorney General James T. Kendall to Secretary of State Heber Lander.

Kendall held that the slates submitted by both, the regular Republican State organization and the lily-white group, who call themselves Independent Republicans, be carried on the ballot as pledged to support the Dewey-Warren ticket.

Wed 8-18-48

The lily-whites, headed by former Governor George L. Sheldon of Nebraska who is now a plantation overseer in Mississippi, had contended that they had been the first to file with the Secretary of State.

The regular Republican party organization, headed by Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman for Mississippi, contended that its group should be the only slate because the Republican national convention in Philadelphia had recognized it as the Republican organization in Mississippi by [illegible] its delegates over a contesting delegation of lily-whites.

The nine elector candidates of both slates are white.

South Remembers GOP's

Wash. Post

By Hunt Clement, Jr.

34d

ELEPHANTS never forget, but it is debatable how much the Republican elephant remembers.

GOP leaders apparently do not like to be reminded of the sad fate of the South's Hoover Democrats after 1928. Thousands of Southerners were then ready to cooperate openly with a Republican President. They were snubbed. Now, with Southerners unhappy again, Republican spokesmen are said to be "overlooking no bets in the long-range effort to make the two-party system more of a reality in the South."

The question arises, of course, what can the Republican Party do in the South, long-range?

June 10-17-48

Is the party to modify the position it has taken in its platform, and in the Eightieth Congress, to conform to the mores of Southerners who in large numbers will probably vote for Dewey? Hardly.

In truth, the GOP will be in a dilemma sectionally. It will know that in the Southern vote it again has a maverick, a maverick which has kicked out the slats of its Democratic corral but is by no means newly branded or bedded down. Yet it will suspect that among the dissatisfied Southerners who are still dissatisfied "Democrats," there are many who are willing to be shown how to live useful political lives in the Republican Party and prosper locally and sectionally.

Wash. D.C.

Colonel Had a Formula

HOW TO show them? One way is with patronage, and in its use of patronage to make friends in the South, the GOP has failed egregiously. In 1949, moreover, Federal patronage will be leaner; largely liquidated are the New Deal and wartime agencies which provided many thousands of clerkships. When the party bosses have run through the postmasterships and the jobs associated with the Federal judiciary the patronage hay will have been largely cut.

After 1928, it was patronage and "recognition" which were to be the mortar in a Southern Republican edifice; and for a brief season it looked as if the GOP meant business.

The late Horace A. Mann, a Washington tax lawyer, a Kentuckian called "Colonel" who was a warm friend of Herbert Hoover, had directed the Hoover campaign in the South. After the election, Colonel Mann proposed a realistic program under which leading Southern Democrats might be persuaded to break away from their traditional affiliations.

Many Southern Democrats, Colonel Mann reported, had borne the brunt of the regular Democrats' opposition—indeed, he had kept the Republicans in the background wherever possible—and those Democrats desired to help the new Republican President.

After all, Colonel Mann said, the Republican Party had been saying for years that it desired a strong two-party system in the South, and now many Southerners were saying the same thing. The time had come to show that the GOP was sincere, to show it not only by distributing patronage among the Democrats who had worked for Mr. Hoover, but also by advising regularly with a select number of them to the end that the nucleus of a respectable, aggressive Republican organization could be established and nurtured.

June 10-17-48

Mr. Hoover was favorably impressed at first. Then the Mann program was rejected, thrown out the political window, by an inner group headed, Colonel Mann believed, by Walter Brown of Ohio, who became Mr. Hoover's Postmaster General.

In any case, after Colonel Mann had confided to many Southern Democrats that Mr. Hoover had agreed with him wholeheartedly, the Kentuckian was repudiated. He became bitter, and in 1932 he hastened his own death by making a frantic and unsuccesful effort to prevail upon the late Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, to oppose Mr. Hoover for the Republican nomination.

Counting on the Rebels

THE REACTION of the Republican bosses in 1929 to what would have been at least a start toward the actual building of a two-party system in the South may, in late 1948, account for the obvious fact that the GOP is still only academically interested in the hammer-and-nails phase of a building program.

Republican architects are showing blueprints for a Southern exposure, but few carpenters are in sight. The Republican National Committee has promised that "topflight" Republicans will speak in every Southern State; it has employed a Southern editor, Bryan Collier, to instruct Southern Democrats how to vote a split ticket, and it is encouraging Southern Republicans to spend all the money the Southerners can raise.

In short, the Republicans are exploiting the South's "agin" vote. Happy in the conviction that Henry Wallace and the Dixiecrats are working for them, they sit in the shade while the angry Democrats whitewash GOP fences.

The Republicans could build in the South. Certain facts cause wonder that the Republicans do not forget about the poll tax, lynching and like matters, and concentrate on sending to the States a constitutional amendment calling for direct election of the President, with each State's party vote credited to the party's candidate.

The South would probably not vote for such an amendment, but if Dewey wins by the landslide the polls forecast, he should be able to prevail on three-fourths of the States to adopt it.

What such a system would mean to the Republican Party in the South is something to make the most practical Republican's mouth water.

1,677,000 'Wasted' Votes

CONSIDER that in the nine so-called Confederate States (Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia) the Democratic Party polled 2,252,802 votes in 1944, and lost to the Republicans only 34 out of 770 counties and not one electoral vote. In the border States of Maryland, Kentucky and Tennessee, the Democrats lost 93 out of 239 counties but won all the electoral votes.

However, while the voters in those 12 States were giving the Democrats 3,260,588 popular votes, they were also giving the Republicans 1,677,947 votes. In short, the Republicans in 12 States polled approximately 33 per cent of the popular vote, yet saw the Democrats sweep the electoral vote and take over State and local government bag and baggage.

June 10-17-48

Suppose that a citizen's vote for President were actually counted for the candidate for whom he voted. In the South, Republicans would come out of hiding in the areas which are "solidly Democratic"; their new enthusiasm would spill over into a new interest in government at levels where competition is so badly needed—in the counties, cities and crossroads communities.

Until the Republican Party changes the election system, or changes its own spots, it will save money, if not prestige, by staying north of the Potomac River.

Truman Program, Wallace Visit and Critical Spirit in North Said to Hurt Negro Aspirations

New York. N.Y.

TREND APPARENT IN POLITICS

34d

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—The political reaction in the South confirms the opinion of those temperate and enlightened Southerners who believed it would surely follow the current types of agitation for quick and drastic change in the social-economic system below the Mason-Dixon Line. Among those efforts they prominently list:

June 9-12-48

(1) The President's so-called civil rights program of Federal legislation which proposed to carry out, by force from the central government if required, measures to alter the whole structure of social organization in the South.

(2) The journey of Henry A. Wallace through the states of the old Confederacy, in which every measure to revive the most acute state of racial prejudice was deliberately taken by the candidate; and, prior to this journey, political activities and associations of Mr. Wallace elsewhere.

(3) The unsympathetic and uninformed rain of criticism in the East and North of the South's effort to make a reasonable solution of its great Negro problem.

(4) The warm reception in the East and North of any Southern literature, or books about the South, in which the plight of the Negro is dramatized and the work of those Caucasians who must solve it if possible is neglected or disparaged.

(5) The hero-making propaganda, in behalf of Southerners like former Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia, by Easterners and Northerners who are known in the South to favor quick and radical change in its social pattern. This weakened the influence at home of those Southerners who were beguiled by the flattery.

The first visible consequences, of course, were the stand of the Southern Democratic delegations at Philadelphia against the nomination of President Truman on a platform that endorsed the "civil-rights" program, and the development of this into the States' Rights national ticket.

Platform Compromise

The development was deliberately stimulated by the Americans for Democratic Action, a group in which the Roosevelt family and New Dealers are prominent and which has been active in movements to make drastic changes in the South. They stimulated it by opposing the platform compromise with which Mr. Truman and his spokesmen attempted to support the "civil-rights" program in language that would mean one thing in the South and another outside. And the ADA forced on the unwilling Administration a plank that spelled out in detail the things the President had told Congress he wanted. This made the States' Rights ticket inevitable.

Other consequences were the reappearance of Ku Klux Klan fiery crosses and hoods in areas where they have been seen but little in recent years; the renomination of Representative John Rankin over strong opposition in Mississippi; the renascence of the Huey Long family in control of Louisiana politics; the removal of Mr. Truman's name as the official Democratic candidate in that state; and the overwhelming nomination of Herman Talmadge in Georgia over an acting Governor, M. E. Thompson, who, though as much opposed to the "civil-rights" program, was burdened by the support of the non-Southern groups referred to above.

Southern Reaction

There will be other results of the same kind in the near future. This reaction, as was predicted by Southerners who understand the inequalities of their region and have tried to level them by gradual and reasonable means, will always follow an attempt of non-Southern politicians to change its social-economic structure by Federal force.

How little the problems and personalities of the South are understood by its outside critics was emphasized again this week after the victory of Mr. Talmadge. Many comments left the impression that Governor Thompson, who was backed by an unsavory state machine and has incurred no wounds in fighting the demagogy of "white supremacy," was a knight of social-economic reform in shining armor, and that in rejecting him Georgia citizens had dealt enlightenment a vital blow. Among these critics were some of the very persons who, by their fulsome patronage of his supporter, Mr. Arnall, had sapped the latter's influence with his fellow-voters.

Benefit to Communists

Who was benefited by the various agitations for overnight change in the South? Not Mr. Truman, who started the reaction, for in the most unlikely event of his election he would have stronger Democratic opposition from the South than before. Not the Southern Negroes, whose just aspirations will now be considered in a less favorable atmosphere than in recent years. Not the Southern whites, whose fears and prejudices have been aroused by the very persons who professed a desire to allay them.

The only beneficiaries are the Communists, whose purpose is to disunify the people of the United States in every possible way; and —if his "grand political design" has not been misrepresented—Mr. Wallace, who looks to reaction of any kind as the road to national political power for himself and his supporters.

But there can be some other benefit from the experience if the outside reformers of the South, including the sincere idealists, the practical workers for expansion of the Bill of Rights and the paid professional agitators of racial groups, have finally learned the lesson they hitherto have declined to learn.

Sun 9-12-48

Steady Advance

The South, on its own, and through the efforts of its best citizens, has made a long and steady advance since the fires of reconstruction died down. The Negro is voting in numbers which no one could have estimated ten years ago. The poll tax is in process of repeal by the states in which it exists. Lynching has become a remarkable occurrence because of its rarity, and Virginia under the prompting of Senator (then Governor) Harry F. Byrd has the most drastic anti-lynching law in the United States.

If the South is intelligently and sympathetically aided from outside in the solution of problems from which other sections are happily free, the progress will become very rapid.

But the South will not abandon the social forms of segregation while its population groups are as they are, and it will resist to any degree an attempt to end them by Federal legislation carried out by use of force. It will turn to the demagogues who voice this attitude with reckless and inflammatory speech which its better politicians decline to employ. And in national politics the Southerners will band together more closely, at the expense of some good laws and the two-party system, whenever it is convinced that its social-economic structure and its constitutional protections are in jeopardy from politicians elsewhere who would destroy them to get the votes of pressure groups in other sections.

White Ala. Editor Says GOP Has Soundest Racial Program

The Afro American
Date 9-18-48

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP)—W. E. Brooks Jr., 26-year-old editor of the Brewton Standard, white daily, called upon the South to "stop being a political province" and vote Republican this year, with the idea that the GOP Party's performance on the racial issue is "less offensive to the South."

34

Speaking at the Montgomery Junior Chamber of Commerce meet, Brooks criticized President Truman and the Democratic Party, declaring:

Baltimore Md.

"For the last 16 years, the people of the South have had a daily dose of what the Democratic Party intends to do about the color question here. If that is the primary issue with any voter in Alabama, it should take him about 10 seconds to vote against the Democratic Party.

"The States' Righters," he continued, "offer nothing on the question of what to do about the colored man except an assurance that everything will be fine if we will but stick with them. But they will lead us deeper into the mire of sectionalism and minority party policies; and the South cannot afford another retreat of that sort."

Georgia Stirs to Republican Call

Herald Tribune

Campaign for Dewey and Warren Finds Solid Support in Southern Stronghold

June 10-19-48
34d New York, N.Y.

By Elmo Greene

ATLANTA—For the first time in its history, the Republican party is waging a campaign in Georgia for its national ticket. And Georgia, long regarded as a Democratic, "in the bag" state, gives every promise of respdoning graciously to the Republican wooing—whether or not it actually gives its 12 electoral votes to Governors Dewey and Warren.

Indeed, there have been confident predictions that Georgia will go Republican this year, for the first time.

Georgia Republicans and Democrats-for-Dewey are conducting, not a token campaign, but rather a real "grass roots" campaign, involving door bell ringing and other types of personal contact. Precinct and ward captains have been chosen for urban areas.

ON Peachtree Street in Atlanta, capital of a state in which there is still much mental association of Republicans with Union troops of Civil War days, it seems not a little incongruous to see a big, street-level headquarters promoting Governors Dewey and Warren.

Yet there it is, with blatant signs and pictures. Inside, full-time and part-time workers confidently and cheerfully go about mailing out literature, arranging meetings, handling correspondence and other details. Similar headquarters are operating in Savannah, Macon, Augusta, Columbus and other Georgia cities and towns.

As a matter of fact, in 100 of Georgia's 159 counties, there are active Dewey-Warren organizations. And so far as this writer has been able to determine, no Truman headquarters has been opened in the state. Most Georgians—the State Democratic Executive Committee included—are opposed to President Truman because of his civil rights stand.

June 10-19-48

Governor Warren's speeches indorsing states rights have appealed to Georgians. Recently, Representative Hugh D. Scott Jr., of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican National Committee, came to Atlanta and said that the Republicans were striving to take the government out of the ivory towers of Washington and bring it back to Main Street." This statement also appealed to states rights sentiment in Georgia.

MR. SCOTT spoke, by the way, to more than 500 Georgians and Southern Republican leaders at a $50-a-plate dinner. The Democratic "Atlanta Constitution," edited by Ralph McGill, had this to say following Mr. Scott's visit:

"We have heard of the Dewey thoroughness. But we never expected him to be so thorough as to select as his National Chairman, and send into the South, a man whose grandfather was a Confederate soldier under Marse Robert E. Lee himself and who was wounded fighting for the Confederacy at Gettysburg.

"Yet that is this Republican's background. To send such a messenger into the Deep South in so critical a year is almost as unethical as shooting quail on the ground. We stand in awe of the Dewey efficiency."

The "Constitution," as well as a number of other newspapers in Georgia, is urging the formation of a strong two-party system in Georgia. The newspapers are urging the people who do not want to vote for President Truman, to vote for Governor Dewey. Indeed, the Savannah "Morning News" and "Evening Press" have announced their support of the Republican ticket.

TO quote "The Atlanta Constitution" again:

"The Atlanta Constitution, strongly of the opinion that the nation must maintain the two-party system and that splinter parties such as the Wallaceites and Dixiecrats are harmful, urges that every Southerner examine his or her political beliefs.

"Those who do not agree with the historical development of the Democratic party should determine now not merely to vote Republican, but to work Republican. Let us be sure that Georgia goes either Republican or Democratic on Nov. 2."

Take Macon, Georgia, in Bibb County, right in the middle of the state. There, a leading citizen in the person of Hamilton Holt, who has been urged in the past to run for Governor of Georgia on the Democratic ticket, has announced his support of the Dewey-Warren ticket. A business man, he is a past president of Kiwanis International.

And the Macon "News" has this to say of Macon citizens who are backing the Republican ticket:

"Among these are some of Macon's foremost and most highly respected citizens. There can be no doubt that they are Republicans on principle and they are to be commended for having the courage to come out in the open and say so. And though we are opposed to them on principle, we regard their action as a good thing for Macon and for Georgia."

June 10-19-48

FOR the first time in the history of the University of Georgia, at Athens, a club has been formed espousing the cause of Republican candidates for President and Vice-President. Its members are mostly law students, who say they realize in what jeopardy they are placing their future political careers, by forming a Dewey-Warren club.

Not only, however, are Republican leaders interested in carrying Georgia for Governors Dewey and Warren for the national party's sake, they also are eager to use a Georgia victory as a basis for establishing a two-party system for state offices.

Already, the State Republican Central Committee has served notice it will enter candidates two years hence in races for governor, lieutenant governor and all other state offices. Widely discussed as the Republican gubernatorial candidate in 1950 is Harry Sommers, Atlanta automobile dealer for 26 years and a national committeeman from Georgia; as lieutenant governor, Brigadier General Elbert P. Tuttle, Atlanta lawyer, who comanded a field artillery battalion in the South Pacific in World War II.

State Chairman W. R. Tucker, of Dawsonville, a lawyer and real estate man, says that "every one realizes that this is a golden opportunity to establish a real second party in Georgia, and all of us are working to that end. Reports from over the state are most encouraging, and if every one continues to work until Nov. 2, we have a chance of carrying Georgia."

June 10-19-48

He points out, though, that it will take a Republican majority of popular votes to do the job; not a mere plurality. Under a recently revised general election law, it is necessary for a party to get a majority of all votes cast before it can claim the election. "If we obtain only a plurality," said Mr. Tucker, "the Legislature will then name the electors."

IT is difficult to determine at this point just how strong Governor J. Strom Thurmond's States Rights party is in Georgia. Acting Governor M. E. Thompson opposes the States Rights Democrats, as do most of Georgia's leading newspapers. On the other hand, Governor-Nominate Herman Talmadge is thought to be quietly giving his support to the Dixiecrats.

If the Dixiecrats should succeed in preventing any party from receiving a majority of the votes cast, and subsequently the election of Presidential electors should go to the Legislature, it is likely the Talmadge-dominated Legislature would vote for the States Rights electors.

However, Georgia has approximately 1,250,000 registered voters—the large number due to no poll tax requirement for voting and the voting-age minimum being eighteen years—and only about 70,000 votes were cast in the recent Democratic primary. So, with concerted effort, it should not be too difficult for a party to get a majority of votes in the Presidential election.

Flirting With the South

The Constitution

PHILADELPHIA — While the civil rights plank in the Republican platform was strengthened considerably in the unprecedented nine-hour redrafting wrangle in the Resolutions Committee, it is yet less drastic—and calculated to be more acceptable to the South—than that contained in the party's '44 statement of policy. Atlanta, Ga.

The civil rights plank was one of those Resolution Committee Chairman Lodge had in mind when he stated that the preliminary recommendations of the various subcommittees were no longer recognizable. Even so, it remains, by Republican standards, a moderate document and one which is already drawing the wrath of numerous Negro delegates. Wed.

The '48 platform makes no mention of an FEPC. 6-23-48

Whereas the '44 platform stated specifically: "We pledge the establishment by Federal legislation of a permanent FEPC," the new one platitudinously declares:

"One of the basic principles of this republic is the equality of all individuals in their right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. This principle is enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and embodied in the Constitution of the United States; it was vindicated on the field of battle and became the cornerstone of this republic. This right of equal opportunity to work and to advance in life should never be limited in any individual because of race, religion, color or country of origin. We favor the enactment and just enforcement of such Federal legislation as may be necessary to maintain this right at all times in every part of this republic."

Moreover, in contrast to the '44 platform, which pledged "Congressional investigation and corrective legislation of mistreatment, segregation and discrimination in the armed forces," the '48 plank states merely: "We are opposed to the idea of racial segregation in the armed services of the United States."

The Constitution

And finally, while the '44 platform called for "immediate submission of a Constitutional amendment for abolition of the poll tax," the one adopted here yesterday reads: "We favor the abolition of the poll tax as a requisite to voting."

Atlanta, Ga.

These general statements of policy rather than the specific pledges which extremists sought, represent a considerable compromise, especially since the leading candidate at this time is known to favor an all-out civil rights program. Wed. 6-23-48

Gov. Dewey has the vast majority of the several hundred Negro delegates present. If he is nominated he can be expected to bolster the party's civil rights plank with campaign promises and allusions to the stringent Fair Employment Practices legislation enacted in New York State during his tenure as Governor.

The Constitution

But if the nominee is Taft, who is on record as opposing the FEPC, or some other candidate with moderate views, the Republican statements on civil rights may be less repugnant to many Southerners than those of President Truman.

Atlanta, Ga.

Especially could this prove true if the Democratic convention, in an effort to regain some of the Negro vote the polls show it is losing to Wallace, adopts a strong civil rights platform when it meets in this city next month.—J. T. Wed. 6-23-48

Randolph Says GOPs Court Southern States

St. Louis Argus

Fri. 7-2-48

PHILADELPHIA—(NNPA) — The civil rights plank in the 1948 Republican platform is a warning to colored people that the Republican party is courting southern states and does not give a "picayune" for colored voters, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, declared here last Tuesday.

Holding in his hands a copy of the platform, which had just been adopted by the convention, Mr. Randolph said "This is lousy," adding: 7-2-48

"It is not sufficiently strong to convey the perfect futility of the civil rights plank. It would be a joke were it not for such a tragic travesty upon decency and an insult to the common sense and pride of race of the Negro citizens of America.

GOPs Courting Southern States

"The Republican party has descended to its lowest depths of opportunism and has become more 'Dixie-crat' than Mississippi and South Carolina.

"It is sufficient warning to Negroes that now the Republicans are courting southern states and that they no longer give a picayune for the Negro vote.

"It is a signal for the Negroes to become more militant and aggressive in their fight to abolish Jim Crow in the Army, transportation, education and every other area of life in America by all of the forces they can mobilize, including the method of civil disobedience."

Republicans In New York, Democrats In South

Columbia Record.

A group of hidebound Republicans in the little town of Lansing in upstate New York, have issued an invitation to the Democrats of the South to join them in voting Republican this year.

The invitation, inserted in the Congressional Record by Representative W. Sterling Cole of New York, has not reached South Carolina or if it did, The Record missed it.

And some of its content should not be missed. It shows an appreciation of the South by some of the Republican voters, an appreciation that isn't seconded too often by the Republican politicians.

"We . . . from the rock-ribbed Republican town of Lansing . . . which has never voted Democratic," the resolution reads, "extend the hand of friendship to the Southern Democrats, our fellow Americans. We agree with Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, who said:

"'I see with the deepest affliction the rapid strides with which the federal branch of our government is advancing toward the usurpation of all the rights reserved to the states . . . and that, too, by constructions which, if legitimate, leave no limits to its powers . . . It is not by consolidation or concentration of powers, but by their distribution that good government is effected . . . What has destroyed liberty and the rights of man in every government which has ever existed under the sun? The generalizing and concentrating all cares and powers in one body. Columbia, S.C.

"We believe, as did the founders of our nation, in a federal republic of limited constitutional powers; and in the system of checks and balances between the legislative, executive and judicial departments—no one supreme, no packed court or rubber-stamp Congress. Tue. 8-3-48

"We resent the swarms of bureaucrats who suck their living from honest industry, swelling their functions to fatten their pockets. Tue. 8-3-48

"We abhor the demagogues who inflame strife to prey on the ignorant. We commend the law-enforcement officers of your Southern states who have so courageously reduced mob violence almost to the vanishing point, even when aroused by vicious crimes; we wish that an honest workman in the North could be equally protected against mob violence when going to work.

"We deplore the lack of mutual understanding between the good people of the North and South, which by dividing our strength has played into the hands of groups who would weaken and destroy our nation . . . Our public servants should cease to be sensitive to special pressure groups if and when the great body of our nation speaks its mind without the division of traditional parties . . . While the amalgamation of the two great parties may be impractical or even undersirable . . . we hope that your people and ours will so vote that our nation as a whole will emerge stronger to face the problems which now confront us."

And what is the difference between the creed of these rock-ribbed Republicans of up-state New York and the creed of the average South Carolina, Texas, Georgia or Virginia Democrat? It reads like a proclamation written by Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina or a resolution presented to the South Carolina Democratic convention by Senator George Warren.

8-3-48

Why then do these gentlemen call themselves Republicans in New York and Democrats in South Carolina and vote for different persons for President?

Why worship words and ascribe to them more power than are ascribed to ideas? Why be afraid of a word?

G. O. P. CAN CHANGE

8-21-48

Editor, The Advertiser:

It has been my privilege to hear two of our delegates to their recent Democratic Convention give their comments on the convention, and their ideas of what the future holds for the South. One of the delegates was of the walkout group, and the other remained in the convention until the bitter end. Both of these men apparently feel that the South's hope still is in the Democratic Party. It is my opinion that these men are without vision.

We need men who can look ahead for a decade or two and guide us through the shoals through which we are now passing. The old ideas, labels and shibboleths will no longer meet our problems of today.

We are now witnessing one of the great dangers to democratic government—government by the minority. Well organized, small groups, are exercising pressure and force absolutely out of proportion to their numbers. As one example we saw the recent Democratic Convention made subservient to the Negro vote in some of our large Northern cities. This vote is not large, but is decisive in turning the majority in these states in either direction. Even though we deplore the fact that minorities are now controlling our government; for our own preservation we must adopt some of their tactics.

The South is especially favored as a minority. We are the largest minority in this country. If we had been as wise as some of the minority politicians of the North, we would never have had to witness the past Democratic convention. How are we as a minority to exercise our influence. The only way is to have both the Democrats and Republicans compete for our electoral vote.

If each of the parties knew that the Solid South would support the party which adopted the most favorable platform, both would outdo each other to satisfy the South. Instead of being the whipping boy we become the fair lady with both parties seeking our favor. As matters now stand, the Democrats take us for granted and the Republicans make no efforts to please us as they know that we are lost to them anyway.

In the name of self preservation, we must let the Republicans know that we will support them if they give us more favorable attention than do the Democrats. True the Republican Party of the period of Reconstruction was our enemy and the Democratic Party was our friend. I feel certainly that the Republican Party is as capable of reversing itself as has the Democratic.

I am not dogmatic about the ideas set forth above. If anyone has a better plan let us hear it. We of the South who are interested in her welfare must devise some plan for her protection.

One-Party Rule Bane Of Dixie, State GOP Leader's Message

If the South can forget what happened to Grandpa and rid itself of the one-party rule, it will go forward in peace, prosperity and happiness.

9-28-48

That is the advice of Claude O. Vardaman, Alabama's leading Republican.

In a speech before the Young Men's Business Club at a luncheon meeting at Hooper's Cafe yesterday, Mr. Vardaman attributed the political ills of the South to the one-party system.

"Most of the reasons for the continuation of the one-party system," Vardaman said, "spring from prejudice and hatred which came from the War Between the States which was settled before any of us was born."

Mr. Vardaman, who is chairman of the Republican committee in Alabama, came to the meeting with a miniature elephant in his lapel and wearing a broad tie with large red elephants painted on it.

He told the Y. M. B. C. members that, if they voted the Dewey-Warren ticket for the presidency, they would know whom they were voting for. "But if you vote under the rooster," he added, "you won't know whom you are voting for."

* * *

HE SAID Truman followers have threatened court action to force all electoral votes to go for the Truman-Barkley ticket. "This will come after the election," he said. "And all of you can guess what will happen if it is taken to the Supreme Court, made up as it is today."

The Republican chairman described Dewey as the best fitted man in America to be president. He pointed to Dewey's success as governor of New York as an example.

9-28-48

Admitting that New York has an FEPC law, Mr. Vardaman said it was enacted by the state and conducted on a state level. He said it became necessary there because of the peculiar situation caused by immigrants.

The Republican Party, he said, has never tried to jam a civil rights program down the throat of the South. He described the Republican bills to outlaw poll tax and lynching as no more than gestures on the part of the congressmen who introduced them.

He read the Republican civil rights plank, which he said was in one paragraph. It stated merely that no person should be denied the right to work and improve himself because of his race, religion or national origin.

* * *

IN AN EXPLANATION he said, "Not one of you in this room would object to a Negro improving himself." He emphasized that Southern Republicans discussed and approved the plank before it came before the Philadelphia convention and pointed out that the plank did not mention segregation.

Mr. Vardaman accused men in the present national administration of being responsible for Communists in government jobs.

He also alluded to the fact that it was the Democrats who recognized Russia and added "It was not the Republicans who made the deals at Potsdam and who let the Russians enter Berlin first."

9-28-48

Mr. Vardaman said the people who have been following the Truman administration are disillusioned and are turning to Dewey.

The speaker's reference to leaders in the current administration as "soft-headed saps" and "bucklebrained bureaucrats" brought laughter from the audience.

Mr. Vardaman predicted victory for Dewey and Warren and added: "The 'D. C.' in Washington, D. C. means that Dewey is Coming."

GOP Flirt

The Post

By Drew Pearson

Washington, D.C.

Philadelphia.—The Republican Party has always flirted with the idea of breaking the Solid South. It has also posed as the party of emancipation, the champion of a square deal for the South.

Sen. Robert Taft

Yet when it comes to nominating the most coveted prize in the Republican Party, it treats Southern delegates as so many pawns to be bartered back and forth across the counter. These are the delegates traditionally bought and paid for, who can tip the scales for or against the leading candidates. Tues.

Once back in 1928 enough Republicans got so indignant about this barter of delegates that they held a Senate investigation of Herbert Hoover's Southern purchases. According to the sworn testimony before that Senate committee, Ben Davis, colored GOP national committeeman for Georgia, received $2200 of Hoover money to pay the expenses of Georgia Republicans.

Prior to this payment Ben Davis was not for Hoover. Afterward he was. 6-22-48

Perry Howard, colored GOP national committeeman for Mississippi, also received $2000 of Hoover money. The Mississippi delegates voted for Hoover.

Rush Holland, former Assistant Attorney General for Harry Dougherty, was the Hoover bagman who toured the South and paid off the Southern delegates.

Today, Perry Howard, the same GOP potentate of Mississippi, is vigorously in the corner of Senator Taft. Taft has used a technique different from Hoover's. Some time ago he gave Perry Howard's son a job in the Senate postoffice.

John E. Jackson, chief Republican mogul of Louisiana, is also a Taft man. He is reported to handle some of the law business forwarded by the Taft family law firm in Cincinnati.

This year, however, Dewey has a slice of the Southern Republicans, and the battle to carve them up is the chief backstage battle now being fought in Philadelphia.

Clifton st., Portland—Taft—was for Stassen over Dewey—elderly man—chairman of the delegation—former State chairman—defeated candidate for Governor many years ago—hotel business.

"Lamar Tooze—3814 N. W. Thurman st., Portland—was for Stassen—against Dewey, but will stay put on his pledge to Dewey until Dewey is out of it. What he will do then is anybody's guess—is a law partner of Ralph Cake. Cake is probably for Vandenberg and Tooze may follow him—friendly to Taft, Univ. of Oregon—Harvard Law Sch.—former president Oregon Republican Club.

"Second District—Carl Engdahl—317 N. W. Bailey, Portland—Stassen—Taft probably second choice—State Senator—Resolutions Committee—will be Phila. June 15. Walter Tooze will meet him there that day. 6-22-48

"Third District. Tommy Luke,

sending this report to the Congress in the form of a special message.

"The civil rights program as proposed by President Truman would build discord and strife, turn race against race, creed against creed, tear down all the progress that has been made through the years," he said. "It would trade our cherished principle of States' Rights for political expediency."

End Of Freedom Seen

Mr. Laney said the "diabolical program of civil rights" advocated by the President "would mean the end of freedom for liberty-loving Texans." Sun 6-27-48

"I refuse to see the welfare of Texas or Arkansas or any other Southern state ignored and trampled upon merely for the sake of placating any minority group's vote," he said. "If I know Texans, you are ready to stand and be counted in this fight."

They Do Not Have To Seek The Negro Vote

Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who once visited South Carolina in an abortive investigation of the Aiken lynching, predicts that Negro voters will view with "skepticism" the civil rights plank written into the Republican platform.

The Republicans, he pointed out, wrote a strong civil rights plank into their 1944 platform, but nothing has resulted from it. Columbia, S.C.

"They came into power in 1946 with majorities in both houses of Congress," he declared, "and they did absolutely nothing to fulfill their pledges." Fri.

And the 1948 civil rights plank is not as strong as the similiar plank in the 1944 platform. In 1944, with reference to the poll tax, the Republicans said: 6-23-48

"The payment of any poll tax should not be a condition of voting in federal elections and we favor immediate submission of a constitutional amendment for its abolition."

This year's Republican platform with reference to the poll tax simply says:

"We favor abolition of the poll tax as a requisite to voting."

There is nothing here about the method of abolishing the poll tax and it would be consistent with this pledge for the Republicans to advocate the abolition of the poll taxes, not by congressional action or by amendment to the constitution, but by action of the states. The Record

And there is no reference in the Republican platform to the F. E. P. C., to which the 1944 platform pledged them:

"We pledge the establishment by federal legislation of a permanent fair employment practice commission." Fri.

This year the platform reads:

"(The) right of equal opportunity to work and to advance in life should never be limited to any individual because of race, religion, color or country of origin. We favor the enactment and just enforcement of such federal legislation as may be necessary to maintain this right in every part of this republic." 6-25-48

This would, of course, allow the Republicans to make a choice after the election and do almost anything, or nothing.

And this kind of a civil rights plank doesn't especially please the Negroes. But the Republicans this year do not have to strive to please the Negroes. They can win without the Negro vote and this being so the Negroes have less influence with them than they have with the Democrats, who, if they are to win, must somehow keep together the incongruous groups that make up the Democratic party under Franklin D. Roosevelt—an impossible task, it would seem. Columbia, S.C.

The Eagle Has Had Enough

The Constitution

As expected, last week's refusal by the Democratic National Convention to reaffirm the Party's traditional States Right support is resulting in additional gains for Republicanism in the heretofore Solid South. Atlanta, Ga.

There had been indications, even before the strong Civil Rights plank was written into the Democratic platform, that the Republican Party would poll a respectable vote in every Southern state and might well carry several of the border states. A number of leading Southern newspapers had already shown signs of translating into concrete support for the GOP ticket the need-for-two-party generalities to which they have long subscribed. Tues. 7-20-48

The latest addition to this list is The Dothan Eagle, published in the staunchly Democratic southeastern corner of Alabama.

"There is only one answer for the South," declared The Eagle in a front-page editorial. "It must acknowledge, grudgingly though it be, that the Democratic Party as presently constituted is no haven nor friend. Support of a candidate chosen by the forthcoming convention of Southern Democrats will not suffice. Such a course will produce no lasting relief and will regain for us none of the consideration and prestige which rightfully belong to the South. The Constitution

"The only course remaining open is to support the Republican nominees, the nominees of a party which at least had the courage and the common sense to rebuff the advocates of South-baiting, South-hating legislation. Atlanta, Ga.

"And though Democratic office-holders of Alabama will in the coming election strive mightily to herd voters back into the Democratic Party with lusty rebel yells and mighty waving of the bloody shirt, this newspaper will not again be pilloried by Democrats of the stripe of Walter White and Harry Truman.

"This time, come hell or high water, we're supporting the Republicans—Govs. Dewey and Warren!" 7-20-48

The Morning News is delighted to welcome another erstwhile staunch Democratic, indeed another New Deal, Southern newspaper into the two-party fold, The Dothan (Ala.) Eagle, a daily afternoon journal which for generations has carried the torch for the one and only party!

At long last this estimable journal of opinion has seen the light. It is fed up with the way the Southern members of the party have been treated by their Northern compatriots, and it has decided to do something about it. Not back a third party, nor a fourth party, not trail some futile movement within the Democratic Party, but take a forthright course which really will pace the way for this region's political independence!

In a front page editorial in its issue of July 15, The Dothan Eagle comes out boldly in the following words—and The Morning News wishes it could be read by voters in all walks of life throughout the South: Mon. 7-19-48

We have had enough! Long the orphan of the Democratic Party, the South yesterday was made to suffer the crowning indignity . . . It was read out of the Democratic Party, the party of its fathers, the party which, on more than one occasion, has suckled at the breast of the South when sustenance could not be had elsewhere. GOP Flirt

The Post
Washington, D.C.

By Drew Pearson

Philadelphia. — The Republican Party has always flirted with the idea of breaking the Solid South. It has also posed as the party of emancipation, the champion of a square deal for the South.

Sen. Robert Taft

Yet when it comes to nominating the most coveted prize in the Republican Party, it treats Southern delegates as so many pawns to be bartered back and forth across the counter. These are the delegates traditionally bought and paid for, who can tip the scales for or against the leading candidates. Tues.

Once back in 1928 enough Republicans got so indignant about this barter of delegates that they held a Senate investigation of Herbert Hoover's Southern purchases. According to the sworn testimony before that Senate committee, Ben Davis, colored GOP national committeeman for Georgia, received $2200 of Hoover money to pay the expenses of Georgia Republicans.

Prior to this payment Ben Davis was not for Hoover. Afterward he was. 6-22-48

Perry Howard, colored GOP national committeeman for Mississippi, also received $2000 of Hoover money. The Mississippi delegates voted for Hoover.

Rush Holland, former Assistant Attorney General for Harry Dougherty, was the Hoover bagman who toured the South and paid off the Southern delegates.

Today, Perry Howard, the same GOP potentate of Mississippi, is vigorously in the corner of Senator Taft. Taft has used a technique different from Hoover's. Some time ago he gave Perry Howard's son a job in the Senate postoffice.

John E. Jackson, chief Republican mogul of Louisiana, is also a Taft man. He is reported to handle some of the law business forwarded by the Taft family law firm in Cincinnati.

This year, however, Dewey has a slice of the Southern Republicans, and the battle to carve them up is the chief backstage battle now being fought in Philadelphia.

Clifton st., Portland—Taft—was for Stassen over Dewey—elderly man—chairman of the delegation—former State chairman—defeated candidate for Governor many years ago—hotel business.

"Lamar Tooze—3814 N. W. Thurman st., Portland—was for Stassen—against Dewey, but will stay put on his pledge to Dewey until Dewey is out of it. What he will do then is anybody's guess—is a law partner of Ralph Cake. Cake is probably for Vandenberg and Tooze may follow him—friendly to Taft, Univ. of Oregon—Harvard Law Sch.—former president Oregon Republican Club.

"Second District—Carl Engdahl—317 N. W. Bailey, Portland—Stassen—Taft probably second choice—State Senator—Resolutions Committee—will be Phila. June 15. Walter Tooze will meet him there that day. 6-22-48

"Third District. Tommy Luke,

sending this report to the Congress in the form of a special message.

"The civil rights program as proposed by President Truman would build discord and strife, turn race against race, creed against creed, tear down all the progress that has been made through the years," he said. "It would trade our cherished principle of States' Rights for political expediency."

End Of Freedom Seen

Mr. Laney said the "diabolical program of civil rights" advocated by the President "would mean the end of freedom for liberty-loving Texans." Sun 6-27-48

"I refuse to see the welfare of Texas or Arkansas or any other Southern state ignored and trampled upon merely for the sake of placating any minority group's vote," he said. "If I know Texans, you are ready to stand and be counted in this fight."

Such words, appropriately might well echo and re-echo up and down and across the Southland as a battle-cry against the political party that has bitten the hand that so long has fed it, against a radical partisan organization that has become as much of an enemy of the South as were the Carpetbaggers in Reconstruction days! Vote Republican

To the Editor of The News:

I would like to answer Donald E. Whelan's charge that The Dothan Eagle deserves a booby prize for backing the Republican Party.

I am of the opinion that Mr. Whelan missed the real significance of the Southern revolt of the Democratic Party. I also do not believe that many Southerners have any intention of going with the Republican Party permanently. The Eagle wants the South to vote for the Republican Party just to show the Democratic Party that the South is not to be kicked around. 7-28-48

If Mr. Whelan will look around the South I don't think he will find very much the Democratic Party has really done for the South. The reason why it has not is because in order to get the Southern vote in the past they have had to do nothing. The states that get all the federal improvements are the so-called "doubtful" states. If the South can vote for something other than the Democratic Party just once it will prove that it can be a "doubtful" state and it will regain some of its political importance.

As to Mr. Whelan's charge that The Eagle has laid an egg, I would like to say that if the South votes for a ticket this Fall that has openly kicked it in the teeth, the South as a whole will have laid a bigger egg. We all know that there is really no ticket for the South to vote for and hope to win with. All the major parties have strong planks on civil rights. The South really has no choice. So why not vote for a ticket that has a chance to win, so as to put teeth in the "bite" that the South owes the Democratic Party?

STEWART M. BAKER, JR.

The essence of democracy is representative government. Are there still those naive enough to believe the South has representation in the Democratic Party? How long will the South, fettered by futile loyalty, cast forth its pearls to be trampled by swine?

Let the South once and for all demonstrate to the Democratic Party, the Republican Party and to itself, that it is a political power to be reckoned with. Then the scoffing and rebuke will turn to the respect which politicians accord all politically crucial areas.

State government should control problems which are basically of local, rather than national concern. When state authority is displaced by federal authority, the handling of local problems is often placed in hands which are too far from the problem and too far from the people.

Unhappily there are prominent national figures who believe social reform can be accomplished merely by the passing of a few laws. History has repeatedly shown (witness prohibition) the fatuity of such a motion.

Changes when they come must come from the people, and from those people directly concerned.

Too often the word "prejudiced" has been applied to the South. If the word means judging before the facts are known, certain very deluded, and very, very liberal hypocrites have thrown a verbal boomerang.

No one is attempting to persecute the Negroes. Their progress from slavery toward an effective Southern citizenship has been remarkable. I personally look forward to, and will in every way assist, their continued growth. The nurture for that growth will come from rich Southern soil and cannot be affected by some political mystic waiving a magic wand, chanting weird babble.

Dewey And The South

Uncertain Southern voters looking for a place to light in this political year have now a pretty clear idea of what the Republicans have to offer. The platform has been adopted, and Gov. Dewey has been named the standard-bearer. He has said very emphatically that he approves of the platform and will stand upon it and, if elected, do all that he can to see that its pledges are carried out. Birmingham, Ala.

That platform cannot be pleasing to Southerners who believe that civil rights questions should be decided by state rather than by federal action. One plank of the GOP platform reads: Sat.

"Lynching or any other form of mob violence anywhere is a disgrace to any civilized state, and we favor the prompt enactment of legislation to end this infamy." 6-26-48

The succeeding paragraph declares that the "right of equal opportunity to work and to advance in life should never be limited on any individual because of race, religion color or country of origin. We favor the enactment and just enforcement of such federal legislation as may be necessary to maintain this right at all times in every part of the republic." Although that section does not refer by name to a federal fair employment practices commission, a re-enactment of that system which caused so much annoyance and friction in the South is undoubtedly referred to.

Then follow two other short planks:

"We favor the abolition of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting.

"We are opposed to the idea of racial segregation in the armed services of the United States."

This last plank, incidentally, goes farther than a plank on the same subject in the 1944 Republican platform. Four years ago, the party merely recommended a commission to study segregation and to suggest legislation.

These are provisions of the platform on which Presidential Candidate Dewey says he firmly stands. They are in line with his own record. New York state, under him, has an active State Commission Against Discrimination, patterned after the federal Fair Employment Practices Commission. His political philosophy would seem generally to lean toward centralization of power in the federal government. The News

Southern Democrats who seek a large measure of state's rights certainly can find no comfort in Dewey or the GOP platform. Nor will they find any, of course, in Henry Wallace or the platform his party is expected to adopt at its convention in Philadelphia following the Democratic meeting in July. Birmingham, Ala

Are they still clinging to the will-o'-the-wisp hope of nominating some popular hero like Gen. Eisenhower, whose attitude on civil rights issues is largely unknown? Or are they hell-bent on splitting the Democratic Party and thereby destroying their best chance of an effective voice on civil rights legislation at this time? Sat. 6-26-48

It is probable, of course, that Dewey will pick up some Southern votes over his total of four years ago. That he will double his Southern support, as Alabama GOP Chairman Vardaman predicts for this state, is unlikely.

Warren Hinted Able To Swing Souths' Votes

Republicans Of Dixie Think He And Dewey To Draw Democrats

Sat. 6-26-48

By A. F. MAHAN, JR.

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—Southern Republicans predicted today the nomination of Governor Earl Warren of California for vice-president will swing a tremendous number of normally Democratic votes to the GOP in November.

He won both the Republican and Democratic nominations for governor in California in 1946.

John Wilkinson, North Carolina delegate and Republican senatorial nominee, flatly predicted in seconding Warren's nomination that his party will carry the Tar Heel State.

All was not peaceful, however, on the deep-South Republican front. 6-26-48

Emory Akerman, a Florida delegate and supporter of Harold E. Stassen for the presidential nomination, told a reporter that, while he assumes "all good Republicans" will support the Warren ticket, there "is strong resentment over the way things were handled" at the convention.

Resentment Seen

Asked what Stassen supporters resented, Akerman said:

"The way Mr. Stassen was squeezed out Friday (for the vice-presidential nomination), with nominating speeches going on until three or four in the morning (for president) and with the way we took long day recesses and held long night sessions."

Akerman said he found somewhat similar sentiment among Wisconsin's delegation, but hastily added:

"Everybody seems to think Governor Warren is a very fine man and nobody blames him for the way things were run."

C. C. Spades, chairman of the Florida delegation and its new national committeeman, said he thinks the selection of Dewey, whom he supported, "perfectly splendid." Sat. 6-26-48

Support Seen

"I think Governor Warren will have a tremendous appeal in the South because of his dual party position in California," Spades told a reporter. "I think he will appeal to Democrats as well as Republicans."

George Norwood, South Carolina national committeeman and an original supporter of Senator Taft (R), Ohio, said he was "very much pleased with the presidential ticket" and that Dewey always had been his choice, next to Taft. 6-26-48

"I suspect Governor Warren will add strength in the South," Norwood said. "I believe we will carry North Carolina."

Asked about GOP chances in strongly Democratic South Carolina, Norwood replied: "I'm sorry to say it, but I don't believe we have much chance of carrying my state.

Alabama Chairman Claude O. Vardaman, a Deweyite who yielded Alabama's first place on the roll call so Oregon could nominate Warren, said:

"It is the strongest possible ticket we could have nominated. I think its election is a foregone conclusion. It will get a tremendous vote in Alabama."

REPUBLICAN MEETING

South Votes Against Beliefs, Martin Says

The Record Columbia, S.C.

Fri. 4-9-48

By TINA CANNON

A determined plea for more South Carolina Republicans was made today by United States Sen. Edward H. Martin of Pennsylvania, keynote speaker at the state convention of the Republican party today at the Township auditorium.

"The Republican party today is closer to the ideals of Jefferson and Jackson than the present Democratic leadership," the speaker declared. "Millions of Southern Democrats believe in home rule and state sovereignty. But they vote for the party of centralized bureaucracy. They believe in economy in government. Yet they vote for the party of extravagance and taxing and spending. They want recognition for their consistent party voting. Yet they vote for the party which takes them for granted.

The Record

"They believe in old-fashioned Americanism. Yet they vote for the party which has nutured Communism in this country. It was the Republican party which forced Harry Truman, although he was as balky and reluctant as the Missouri mule, to take steps toward combing the Reds out of the hair and hide of the government. It was a Republican Congress which passed the loyalty legislation for federal employment that the previous Democratic Congress did not pass."

Promises Housecleaning

Senator Martin continued that there is only one way to get rid of the communists in the state, commerce, labor, and national defense department, "by electing a Republican president, and by reelecting the Republican Congress next November. Then we'll clean house from top to bottom. We'll fumigate the federal structure. The lovers of Stalin and his aggressive dictatorship will be driven from their comfortable hiding places.

"I am inviting the 364-day Republicans of the South to join us on that other day of the year, Election Day."

Columbia, S.C.

He accused the Democratic administration of "incompetence, inefficiency, waste, extravagance, and misuse of public funds," plus "15 years of deficit financing", and said that "the brain-trusters, the parlor pinks, and the muddle-minded theorists took over the once-great Democratic party and tossed overboard the principles of Jefferson and Jackson, the bedrock philosophy of the Democratic party."

Martin did not mention the racial legislation now being sponsored by the majority in the Republican Congress and steered clear of all 'civil rights' talk. Fri.

His address was broadcast over WIS, WTMA, and "WFBC. He is a former major-general in the army, and was a wartime commander of the 28th Division. 4-9-48

J. Bates Gerald of Charleston, state party chairman, was nominated for United States senator, together with these United States House of Representatives candidates:

W. Tate Baggett, Jr., of St. Stephens, first district; Edward Moore of Sumter, second district; D. F. Merrill of Easley, third district; Frank Bradfield of Dillon, sixth district.

Candidates from the fourth and fifth districts will be named by the district executive committees.

Presidential electors nominated were Gerald, C. B. Ruffin of Bishopville, Mrs. John E. Messervy of Charleston, George Norwood of Greenville, Joe E. Hines of Spartanburg, Mrs. G. J. Cherry of Charleston, J. C. Hambright of Rock Hill and W. B. Daughtry of Sumter.

Named delegates to the National party convention were Gerald, Mrs. Messervy, Edgar Morris of Pickens and Modjeska Simkins of Columbia, delegates at large, and Baggett and Norwood from the first and fourth districts, respectively.

34d

Norwood and Mrs. Messervy were reelected as national committeeman and committeewoman. 4-9-48

Delegates were present today from every South Carolina county except Beaufort, Hampton, Edgefield, Allendale and Cherokee. Approximately 125 persons attended.

A number of the delegates were Negroes, who sat segregated from the white delegates.

On the platform of the Township auditorium today were several signs, one of which read, "Got Enough? Vote Republican." Another said, "Let's Win the State in '48." Fri

Gerald repeated his claim to the official state party chairmanship last night after B. L. Hendrix of Estill, rival claimant to the position, said he would "appeal to the courts for a decision as to the state chairman." Columbia, S.C.

Hendrix, heads a faction known as the "old Line" Republicans who plan a state convention here April 22.

The Record

Gerald said he had been named to the chairmanship at the 1940 and 1944 national party convention. He added that Hendrix would have to take "any fault he might find to the national convention."

ADDRESSES STATE SENATE

United States Senator Edward H. Martin, Pennsylvania Republican, told the State Senate today to beware of "a great centralization of government at the national and state capitals."

The Record

Martin was presented to both Senate and House before addressing the state Republican convention at the Columbia Township auditorium.

He declared that "we cannot have the local self-government we should have . . . as long as state and local governments seek grants of money.

Columbia, S.C.

"These are critical times," he said. "This is the only country in the world where we can get together as we are here today. It's worth fighting for." Fri. 4-9-48

STRENGTHEN CIVIL, POLITICAL LIBERTIES, ESTABLISH RACIAL EQUALITY, SAYS SOCIALIST PARTY

READING, Pa. — (ANP) — The seven-point national platform of the Socialist party, adopted at its convention here May 7-9, contains two items of interest to Negro Americans. The two are: "Strengthen Civil and Political Liberties," and "Establish Racial Equality."

Under the racial equality heading, the party declared "Democracy cannot tolerate two classes of citizenship. Complete political, economic and social equality, regardless of race, religion or national origin must be established."

It advocated the abolition of segregation in the armed forces, in all public institutions and in housing; passage of legislation for a fair employment practices committee, "long overdue"; anti-lynching legislation to "wipe out the worst blot on the American scene;" naturalization rights for Japanese immigrants who had demonstrated their loyalty and indemnification for those who suffer losses of property during World War II; removal of discriminatory barriers against immigration on grounds of race, color or national origin; and guaranteeing the right to vote by citizens now robbed of suffrage.

Let's Welcome The Growing Pains

34d

The Constitution

Time was when the tourists came down to look at our magnolias; to sigh over our camellias; to walk softly amid the ghosts of our old ante-bellum mansions which the owners showed for cash, calling them "pilgrimages" to mask the exacting commercialism of the tours.

Now, they come to see our eroded fields; to develop statistics on tenancy; the incidence of various diseases, our literacy quota, and our diets.

Tues 10-24-48

Even our own engineers tell us that the old mansions are really uncomfortable and costly. They can, by lowering ceilings and pumping in great amounts of rockwool, make it possible to heat one in terms of the ordinary budget. They must have been uncomfortable on cold days in the so-called good old days when there were plenty of hands to tote in logs and to keep the logs poked up.

All this has been good for us, even though it often tastes worse than the sulphur and molasses which used to be given to one and all in the Springtime to thin the blood and rid it of the Winter vapors and miasmas.

Atlanta Ga.

There is great joy in and around Natchez, where the pathetic pilgrimages were centered and where the patient old homes received their annual horde of the curious, looking at these museum pieces, as at a new kind of pyramid or a variation of the Navaho cliff dwellers, with their pottery, their silver work, wood carving and rugs.

Oil has been found near Natchez and the town has shed its genteel air of poverty and soon the pilgrimages will be no more and the old houses will take on a new air of pride. Maybe, even, they will finish that queer one where the old paint buckets and the ancient brushes remain, just as they were left on that sad day when war called and the workers went away to fight.

Trends The South is in transition as our people continue to leave the soil; as the white and colored displaced persons and high school graduates continue to migrate; as the new industry comes and its trend continues to indicate that in the years ahead the migration will slow down and our best young people will be able to stay at home. The industry is coming. It isn't coming fast enough, but it will. The period of transition is going to be an uneasy one, full of wild and heated reports; filled with tensions and with some flares of violence. But nothing is going to stop the trend.

Everything reflects it. The States in the South that are losing population; those that are barely holding on; those with a higher average income but whose troubles are magnified in that their sounder raw material resources are about used up and industry is not coming fast enough to take up the slack; the increase in city population; the troubles of towns with factory jobs for women and not enough for men; the ceaseless hunt for places to live. All these factors and more testify to the fact of transition.

Politics So, for that matter, do our politics. The Dixiecrats are the beginning of the death rattle of a way of politics. The Dixiecrats will gasp and rattle on for another two or four years, but they, too, can hardly fail to see they are an impossible paradox.

Tues 10-24-48

They cannot go on expecting to defend the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution with a fine frenzy and ignore the other nine.

They cannot speak of democracy and of the rights of people, and refuse to allow Truman's name to be on the ballot in their States so that the people may exercise the right to vote for whom they please—another guarantee of the Constitution which the Dixiecrats, interested in only one paragraph of the Constitution, ignore.

The Dixiecrats are themselves one with the old houses at Natchez; the fireplace to heat a great room with high ceilings; the julep stirred with the silver spoon and songs from "the quarters."

We are in a period of change and we will suffer through it, but pretty soon we will begin to see what a light there is ahead in the way of better living and more prosperity and schools and medical care and we will wonder why we ever clung so fast to much that was a part of the dead-and-gone-and-buried past which, however beautiful and sentimental, was past and gone.

Mon 10-25-48

I am going to be hovering around, peering over the shoulder of the cub reporter assigned to do my obituary—which I trust will be many years from now—and if he doesn't have one line in it I am going to scare him right out of the place by writing it in myself.

The line I want is this—

Atlanta Ga.

"He was one of those who worked to save and establish 'The Voice of America'."

I think I am prouder of that than any other job I've done. It proved something to me that I believe fundamental. I believed that if we could tell the story of America to the peoples of the world—the real story—it would do great things for us and for our way of life. Now that "Voice" is paying dividends.

South I think the same thing about the South. That is one reason I make a lot of appearances on platforms outside the South. I try to tell the real story of the South. I am proud of what the South is trying to do. I admit our problems, our errors and our failures. But we have a story to tell which is a good one. It makes for better understanding. It is helpful. You can be honest and aggressive, not dishonest and apologetic. I try to say, "Yes, these things are true and this is why they are true and this is what we must do to correct them. This is what the real South believes and wants."

The trouble is, too many of our Southern "voices" have been self-promotional voices. It is best illustrated by so many of our political figures who ate the Klan's bread and then turned on them, with never an explanation to the rest of the nation that many of our people are not well informed; that they have just grievances; that they are caught in the mills of friction and prejudice. They just go on beating their publicity drums, trying to make it appear that the people who go to the Klan, fooled and cheated by those who exploit their fears, are wilfully mean and vicious people. The Klan exists only where government has failed to solve local problems.

Mon 10-25-48

Work So, you have to try and work it out your own way—to say that the Klan is wicked and evil and not a solution for troubled fearful people. But you must present a solution. You've got to keep pointing out that the Dixiecrats and their fake states rights platform isn't the Southern answer either—that the answer is to be found in more jobs and more opportunity for all the South—not in isolation or the legalization of wrongs.

The fakers and the self-servers make it a hard job to do. But you have to keep trying. The real "Voice of the South" has a difficult time being heard. There are many who make up that voice, but the clamor from the other sort is loud.

Well, anyhow, the truth does its own work, if slowly. And the truth is the best tool to use.

"—— of America Two years ago the Congress had killed the radio "Voice of America" as an economy measure. I worked, without pay, for William Benton, then Assistant Secretary of State. I had only a minor part in it. But I, with others, appeared before congressional committees—I lobbied—I appeared on radio programs—I wrote for it—I wrote letters to congressmen. . . . I served as chairman of a national committee to help save it.

And we saved it. "The Voice of America" is just a news report. It is beamed to Russia, among other nations. It is truth—a true account of life and news in this country—not of gangs, Hollywood divorces, lynchings, strikes, and so on.

The Russians attacked it viciously. We then knew it was being heard.

They then sought to "jam" it. They succeed now and then.

They then attempted to ridicule it.

Results But, things happened. More and more deserters came over to us. More and more evidence was at hand that the Russians were learning we were not war-makers; that we did not want to conquer Russia—that we did not seek to "encircle" her.

Now comes two young Soviet aviators. They flew a plane into our German zone. They told of the growing dislike of the Soviet system. They had determined to come to the Americans because of "The Voice of America." They were asked how many listened to the program. They said they believed everyone with a radio listened.

Mon 10-25-48

They had heard, from the voice of this country, the stories of the Berlin blockade; of the Russian schoolteacher who jumped to escape her own countrymen; of the many disputes between the two countries. They chose to accept the "Voice of America" versions.

Truth does its own work.

"The Voice of the South" can do that if all those who go to make up that voice will not lose faith, but will keep on with the truth.

Political Sentiment In South

The News

Yesterday's Gallup poll report of political sentiment in the South respecting the presidential campaign testifies to deep divisions prevalent in this traditionally Democratic region.

While the survey was made with uncertainty and confusion still existing in some states respecting the choices actually to be presented on the various state ballots, general trends are clearly evident and in considerable measure, though not in all cases, likely will be reflected in the results.

Sat 10-16-48

The situation in Alabama presents one example, however, of the probable variation between this indicated sentiment and the outcome of the voting. A 32 per cent support for President Truman is shown by the poll, but there is no prospect that an opportunity will be presented to express that sentiment as the national Democratic candidate apparently will not be represented on the ballot.

B'ham, Ala.

All of the state's Democratic elector nominees are pledged against Mr. Truman. Gov. Thurmond, candidate of the States' Right group, was given a 43 per cent backing in this poll in any case and doubtless will get a much higher proportion at the polls. Pro-Truman leaders have been urging that Democrats vote for the anti-Truman elector nominees. They are planning post-election court action seeking to force the counting of Alabama's electoral vote for Mr. Truman.

* * *

Besides Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina evidently are safely in the Thurmond column and Louisiana also seems very likely to go for him.

This poll indicated that the race between Truman and Dewey is close in both Virginia and Florida.

In Georgia, Truman was shown far in the lead but since the poll was taken, a States' Rights slate has been named with strong backing in the Talmadge organization and the results probably will vary widely from the poll indications.

In North Carolina Truman obtained a poll percentage of 44 compared to 34 for Dewey but many observers believe the results there will be close.

* * *

It is apparent then that a broad split prevails in the ranks of Southern Democrats and that the Republicans will make a very substantial advance.

Whether the Democrats will come together in strong unity after this election, as they did after the Hoover-Smith race in 1928, and how much of their gains the Republicans will be able to hold—these are important questions bearing on the political future both of this region and the country as a whole.

Sat 10-16-48

It is much too early to form any positive conclusions in these connections, but even if the great gap in Southern Democratic ranks should be closed the trend toward a decidedly stronger Republican opposition in the South seems to have a good chance of being maintained. Such a trend has many promising aspects. It is an accentuation of splintering tendencies that would be alarming.

As the Votes Were Cast

The Constitution

As we write, the cold fingers of an Autumn wind still drip a rain that has fallen all day over most of the central and northern section of the State as Georgia and the sister States went to the polls.

Wed 11-3-48

The hour for closing the polls is still a little while away, as this is written, but one may see in the balloting many results other than those of the winners and the losers. Particularly is this so for the South.

342

While the critics talk of disfranchisement in the South, the South points to the fact that more Negroes are voting than ever before in her political history. While the viewers-with-alarm speak of the Ku Klux Klan and intimidation, the South points to the fact that it has been but 25 years since the Klan was a terrifying force, and that while today it is as contemptible, and as harmful to justice as before, it is but a shell of the power it knew a quarter century ago.

Atlanta Ga.

Against it is rallied all that is best in the South. It cannot achieve any real substance.

There were, in the balloting, many factors of which the civil rights controversy, distorted and perverted to the basest political use, was but one. Already written in the results is the inevitable fact that more and more human rights are to have fuller and fuller recognition in the South, stripped of legislative fiat, and existing because a just people will them to exist.

The barriers against such a development are not built on rock, but on sands of poverty and inadequate information.

Written in this election, too, is the fact of a troubled South, seeing little to feel good about in either major candidate and none at all in Wallace or Thurmond.

A region in transition, seeing the mule going and the tractor and cotton picker coming; witnessing the steady loss of rural population and the corresponding growth of urban totals; uneasily recognizing that while industry is coming it must come faster to take up the pressure in the cities and towns; hopefully observing the pastures where once cotton only grew—a region in this transition period is fearful that in this election there is some awful portent of an attack by industry on the farm support plan which would smash a South stretched thin by all that is involved in the going of the mule and the coming of the tractor.

Wed 11-3-48

Written in the balloting, too, is another fact for which the vote totals are not required. That is the real revolt against the one-party system. This year it is not an angry South against Al Smith because he is a Catholic and a wet, but a South angrily examining itself and debating its political bonds, and determined to make this campaign the starting point of a real assault on the ancient barricades of the one-party system, with its feudal demands of loyalty.

All this, and more, is written in the balloting and all this is known even before the ballot boxes close and the first ballot is counted.

The South, Dewey and Truman

The Constitution

Recently, Public Opinion Surveyor Elmo Roper announced that Gov. Dewey, of New York, was so far out in front in the campaign for the presidency he saw no reason to take any more polls.

That would seem to be an accurate report.

342

Nowhere is there any enthusiasm for Harry S. Truman. Even those who support him do so largely because they have less enthusiasm for Tom Dewey.

Tues 9-14-48

Dewey will carry enough States outside the South to make what the South does merely an emphasis of his victory. At least 45 electoral votes in the 11 Southern States are already lost to the President. Most of these will go to the Dixiecrats. There may be others, Georgia's, for example, which will go for another Democrat.

Atlanta Ga.

Some Southern States, and Georgia is expected to consider this, will wait to see what happens in the election. The electoral votes are not cast until well after the November election. A decision as to what to do can be made after the election if any wish to wait. Some Southern States, realizing that Truman is to be gone after this year, may decide to cast their votes with the party in order to be "regular" for the future. Virginia has done this.

Tues 9-14-48

At any rate, the wise States will wait and see what is needed. If their votes could elect Truman they would then be able to defeat him or throw the election into the House of Representatives. If he is soundly defeated, as indicated, by voters outside the South, they can then determine whether or not they wish to remain "regular."

There is the very real possibility that the Republicans may crack the Southern States as widely, or even wider, than they did in 1928 with Herbert Hoover. Hoover carried Florida, North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Texas.

Dewey is given an excellent chance today in Florida, Virginia, North Carolina and there is a growing chance for him in Texas and Tennessee.

The South---At the Political Crossroads

The Constitution

Atlanta Ga

Sun 10-10-48

Well, folks, here the South is at the political crossroads. Let's go sit on the porch of the crossroads store, whittle and talk politics.

We have plenty of conversational topics.

The fourth-party Dixiecrats, calling themselves the States' Rights Party, will meet in convention at Augusta on Monday. Even their nominee, Strom Thurmond, knows they would be doing the South, and its best interests, a real service if they would adjourn as a fourth party of vanity and ambition and say: "We want to defeat Harry Truman. Therefore we will support Thomas E. Dewey." Their claim they seek to throw the election into the House of Representatives is ridiculous on its face. Let every thoughtful Southerner look toward France and Italy and see what happens when a country gets away from the two-party system and sets up many parties. The States' Rights Dixiecrat Fourth Party is a dead-end street and is as harmful to the American two-party system as the Wallace Third Party. It is a concoction of false motives and has no principles save expediency.

The only arena where the States' rights issue can be settled is in Washington. We can look only to Congress, to whatever administration is there, and to whom we send there, in the great decisions concerning Federal and State powers.

Let's bolster that statement with two buttressing facts: Three weeks ago the Republican vice presidential nominee, Gov. Earl Warren, made a speech in Springfield, Mass. He forthrightly said that he and the Administration would try in every way to decentralize the Federal government so as to turn back to the States every possible problem which could be solved by State and local government.

Sun 10-10-48

On Friday night Hugh Scott, Chairman of the National Republican Committee, spoke in Atlanta. We have heard of the Dewey thoroughness. But we never expected him to be so thorough as to select as his National Chairman, and send into the South, a man whose grandfather was a Confederate soldier under Marse Robert E. Lee himself and who was wounded fighting for the Confederacy at Gettysburg. Yet that is this Republican's background. To send such a messenger into the Deep South in so critical a year is almost as unethical as shooting quail on the ground. We stand in awe of the Dewey efficiency.

Chairman Scott—the National Committeeman—said: "Our constitutional system has been reared upon the fundamental concept of the rights of the States and of local home rule."

This sets many a Southerner to wondering. The Republican platform calls for an FEPC; Thomas E. Dewey himself established a State FEPC. If the Republican attorney general were to so advise, the anticipated Republican Administration might suggest that it was in favor of a Fair Employment Practices Commission, but that constitutionally it was not possible to establish a Federally policed FEPC. Therefore, the States would be urged to establish their own, as New York has done, while the Federal Government established an acceptable committee to conciliate, negotiate and recommend in the field of employment discrimination.

So much for the Republican aspect of it—and of their campaign to win some Southern States.

The Democratic Party in the South is at this same crossroads. In North Carolina, Tennessee and Texas leading Democrats have publicly said they would vote the ticket. That is true of Sen. McKellar, the arch Truman foe in the Senate, and of others in the same anti-Truman position. They see, as those in Georgia cannot avoid seeing, that Truman is not the party.

Sun 10-10-48

They see, too, that if the intent of the Southern revolt, other than that of the "kept" States' Rights Dixiecrats, is to defeat Harry Truman, then the result is assured. The recent registration in New York City, lower even than in 1944, was a vote against Harry Truman. It means even New York City may go Republican for the first time since 1924. Harry Truman is defeated. That is what Southern revolt wanted. Its leaders must now either fish or cut bait. With Truman's defeat assured, they must now turn to keeping the Party intact and in operation for future years. Whatever the defeat, it will not be worse than that in 1928. After that it looked as if the Democratic Party was wiped out for a generation. It was back in power in 1932.

So, we hope that Georgia and other Southern States will, with an eye on France and Italy where too many political parties have helped bring political ruin, vote either the Republican or Democratic ticket. Let's not deceive ourselves with the follies and farces of the Dixiecrats or the Wallaceites. Let us protect ourselves and the nation with the two-party system. Don't throw away your vote. Make it count.

The South's Year Of Decision

BY HARRY S. ASHMORE

(From The Southern Packet)

B'ham News

B'ham Ala

Mon 12-6-48

DURING THIS DISTURBED political season it was customary for Southern political writers to draw a political parallel between the elections of 1860 and 1948. The comparison was as disturbing as it was obvious. The whole political South seemed to be suffering from another attack of secessionist fever, and if armed rebellion was never actually threatened, there was a full-fledged political revolt which became the basis for a new Southern party boasting its own candidate for president and vice president. The sole issue in the campaign, so far as the rebels were concerned, was states' rights, and the principal right in question, even as in 1860, was the right of the South to treat her Negro citizens as she saw fit without interference from the federal government.

Mon-12-6-48

Harry Truman's remarkable victory seems at first glance to have left the faces of the Southern political pundits as red as those of their confreres across the nation. As it turned out, the Dixiecrat movement was one of the most conspicuous failures in American political history. The 38 electoral votes accorded Gov. Thurmond in South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana are meaningless, for in those states the Dixiecrats had seized the local Democratic machinery and presented their candidates in the guise of regulars. Elsewhere in the region the Dixiecrats ran under their true colors and could not muster sufficient popular support to throw a single Southern state into the Republican column.

Yet the Dixiecrats did have a considerable importance. Although they tried to be polite about it, it was quite clear that they were in fact the anti-Negro party. Whatever their real motives may have been—there were those who thought they could detect a distinct odor of tidelands oil—the case they presented to the Southern voter was a familiar one. They appealed to his prejudices and played upon his fears. They hurled the reckless charge that election of either major candidate would mean Negro domination of the South, and for good measure added the allegation that the federal civil rights program endorsed by both the Democrats and Republicans is Communistic in nature and in inspiration.

Unpleasant as all this was, the Dixiecrats inadvertently performed a great service for the South by demonstrating that the race issue is no longer a certain ticket to public office for any demagogue who cares to use it. They employed it in all its historic variations under the most favorable of circumstances—in a season when the Democratic Party seemed doomed to defeat, when ther was a genuine Communist threat abroad, and when so determined an evangelist as Henry Wallace had invaded the region to make the first direct appeal for the Negro vote since reconstruction. With all the odds apparently in their favor, the Dixiecrats succeeded in proving only that white supremacy, in its classic form at least, is a dead issue.

* * *

A Political Factor

WHATEVER MEN MAY SAY privately, the votes cast on Nov. 2 make it quite clear that it is no longer good politics to stand up in public and proclaim that the Negro is all right in his place, but that his place is not at the polls. Segregation can be defended, but the denial of civil rights that has always accompanied it has become indefensible even in the South. The simple and eloquent fact is that the Negro—who has always been a tremendous negative factor in shaping our political institutions—has already become a potent, positive political factor in the region.

The record speaks for itself. Despite all the barriers to the franchise that still exist in the South, something like 700,000 Negroes were qualified to vote in the recent election, an increase of more than 600 per cent since 1940. In another four years, if that rate of progression is maintained, the total will be more than 2,000,000. And the ballot is not now confined, as it was in the past, to a meaningless general election. These Negroes are voting in the primaries, where their ballots count.

The practical results of the trend are already beginning to show—directly in Richmond, where a Negro has taken his place on the city council of the old seat of the Confederacy, indirectly in Arkansas where the state university this fall admitted a Negro student to its medical college without prejudice. The Negro voter has arrived in the South. He may be greeted with fury, as in the case of the Dixiecrats, or with rejoicing as in the case of the Progressives, but he can no longer be ignored.

The passing of the one-party system is inevitable with the enfranchisement of the Negro. It was domed from the moment the United States Supreme Court in a Texas case ruled that the party primary is an integral part of the general election and is therefore subject to the suffrage provisions of the constitution. This means simply that the Negro can no longer be disfranchised under law, although he can be—and thousands doubtless will be in the rural South for many years to come—by extra-legal processes.

* * *

No White Primary

IN THE WAKE OF this decision and those that followed the last practical reason for maintaining the one-party system vanished. There were other factors in the South's loyalty to the Democratic Party—tradition, the bitter memories of the GOP as the party of military occupation, the natural economic identity of the agricultural South with the low-tariff Democrats. But 80 years dull memories and alter economic considerations. It has long been preposterous to assume that there is no important area of political disagreement in the South, as there is in the rest of the nation. The South stayed in the Democratic bag in recent years because, under the then court-approved doctrine of states' rights, she could do her electing in her white Democratic primaries.

But in 1948 the primary was no longer white even in South Carolina, and the Democratic Party has itself formally and finally abandoned the doctrine conceived by John C. Calhoun. It is no longer practicable for a Southerner to choose his political party in terms of where a man shall sit in a streetcar. The civil rights planks of the two major parties are almost identical, and the splinter party established in protest, as most Southerners recognized, offered no politically meaningful alternative.

It is the pressure of public opinion inside the South as well as out of it—that has made the enfranchisement of the Negro inevitable. Whether or not that pressure is immediately reflected in federal legislation, it will soonor or later wear down many of those Southern political institutions which have served to set the region apart from the nation. It will have its effect, too, upon our social and economic institutions, although there is no reason to believe that segregation itself will disappear in accordance with the impetuous schedule laid down by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

On The Credit Side

Bham. Ala.
Bham News
Mon. 12-6-48

MOST STUDENTS OF Southern politics agree that the dismantling of the one-party system and the increasing participation of the Negro in public affairs belong on the credit side of the ledger. Certainly the white Southerner has been no less a victim of his peculiar institution than the Negro; the practical results are written in every one of those dismal charts which record the relative standing of the states in per capita income, health, and educational attainment.

But the old political system did preserve a sort of order and stability—even if it was all too often the motionless order of stagnation. Politics, like nature, abhors a vacuum, and when the one-party system disappears some other system must replace it. The tumultuous campaign of 1948 makes it clear that the transition is not likely to be orderly. We have felt the first birth pangs of political competition in the South, but the Dixiecrats were reluctant midwives, loath to abandon permanently the Democratic monopoly which has served them so well. It is one of the monumental ironies of our time that these men, whose purpose was to prevent the Negro's active political participation, have actually contributed materially to breaking down the party machinery that shackled him.

Mon. 12-6-48

This is the reality underscored by the strange elections of 1948: A great mass of ill-equipped votes are thrusting against the hard shell of the Southern political system, and it is cracking in many places. With the help of God and a few politicians, the South can, without serious disruption, accommodate the millions of Negro citizens who are beginning to exercise the powers conferred upon them 80 years ago. It is heartening that the voter, who often seems far wiser than the men he puts in office, apparently recognized the nature of the challenge before him when he went to the polls and made certain that the Dixiecrats would be buried beneath Harry Truman's landslide.

Inheriting The Remains Of The Democratic Party

Columbia Record
Columbia, S.C.

It has always been the hope of the South that when the day of the New Dealers was passed that the Democratic party should be returned to the Southern Democrats for safekeeping.

Thur. 7-15-48

And the South, if it had played its cards that way, might have been in a position to inherit the remains this year.

But can South Carolina and the other Southern states—not all of them—who have been participating in the Southern revolt expect to inherit?

They are ready to break their ties with the national party and go off in a fourth splinter party, nominating their own candidate and writing their own platform. This would leave them blocked in a dead-end street, going nowhere, divorced from both major parties, denounced by the third or Wallace party.

The big city Democratic organizations will go down in defeat with Truman, of course, but they will survive and may even salvage a little from the general wreck of the party's hopes.

Columbia, S.C.

Some of the Southern states, also, such as Texas, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee have not, of course, yet planned to break with the national party and, where the Republicans do not win, will be in a position with the big city machines to pick up some of the pieces.

7-15-48

But what can South Carolina and the other Southern Revolters do? They seem to have gone too far to turn back. And nothing that happened in Philadelphia was designed to ease their aches or placate them. Their arguments and pleas went unheeded. The platform committee turned down their request for a state rights plank and wrote a compromise civil rights statement which went too far for the South, not far enough for the North. And when the Southerners took their state rights plank to the convention the majority added insult to injury by rejecting it and adopting instead the Humphrey amendment commending the President for his civil rights fight and pledging the party to support the Truman civil rights proposals item by item. The appeal to the convention proved to be a tactical error, but Southerners couldn't leave well enough alone.

Columbia Record.

For all practical purposes the New Dealers completed the job which had been begun under Roosevelt. They took over the Democratic party in 1933. Yesterday, however, under Truman they went beyond this and virtually read the Southern Revolters out of the party, certainly gave them an invitation to get out.

If the Revolters now had the vision and the foresight to accept this invitation and use it as an excuse to set up the two-party system by voting Republican they could snatch victory from this defeat, swelling the Republican majority in the House and guaranteeing that the Republican majority in the Senate, otherwise threatened, would be secure by electing some Republican congressmen from the South.

7-15-48

But they are not doing this. They still call themselves Democrats although the party moved far away from them. They expect to cast their electoral votes for somebody else than Truman. But they still hope somehow they will be there to pick up the fragments when the explosion is over.

It will have its effect, too, upon our social and economic institutions, although there is no reason to believe that segregation itself will disappear in accordance with the impetuous schedule laid down by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Sun 11-21-48

MOST students of Southern politics agree that the dismantling of the one-party system and the increasing participation of the Negro in public affairs belong on the credit side of the ledger. Certainly the white Southerner has been no less a victim of his peculiar institution than the Negro; the practical results are written in every one of those dismal charts which record the relative standing of the states in per capita income, health, and educational attainment.

But the old political system did preserve a sort of order and stability—even if it was all too often the motionless order of stagnation. Politics, like nature, abhors a vacuum, and when the one-party system disappears some other system must replace it. The tumultuous campaign of 1948 makes it clear that the transition is not likely to be orderly.

We have felt the first birth pangs of political competition in the South, but the Dixiecrats were reluctant midwives, loath to abandon permanently the Democratic monopoly which has served them so well.

Montgomery Ala.

This is the reality understood by the strange election of 1948: A great mass of ill-equipped votes are thrusting against the hard shell of the Southern political system, and it is cracking in many places. With the help of God and a few politicians, the South can, without serious disruption, accommodate the millions of Negro citizens who are beginning to exercise the powers conferred upon them 80 years ago.

Truman Gives South Reply: "I'm Everybodys President"

The Defender

Sat 3-20-48

WASHINGTON—Governors of seven Southern states meeting here last week pledged themselves to make a last ditch against the nomination and election of President Truman.

In a "little convention" held four blocks from the House, the conference of Southern Governors adopted a resolution calling on the people of the South to join them in their fight repudiating the President's stand on civil rights.

The resolution was adopted less than 24 hours after President Truman reaffirmed his intentions to fight to the last inch for his civil rights program. Asked by Mrs. Nanna Thomas of Alabama, National Democratic Committeewoman whether she could "go back and tell my people that you are not going to tear up our social structure in the South and that you are everybody's President," the President is said to have replied: "I do not take back one word I said. I stand on the Constitution of the United States, I am everybody's President."

Sat 3-20-48

Repudiate Party

The seven governors put their grievances in a scorching report, the heart of which declared: "We go on record as repudiating the present national leadership of the Democratic Party in sponsoring the so-called Civil Rights program.

Sat 3-20-48

"We recommend to the people of the southern states that they fight to the last ditch to prevent the nomination of any candidate for President or vice-President who advocates such invasions of state sovereignty as those proposed in the said program.

"We recommend to the people of the southern states that, if the National Democratic Party should nominate any candidate who advocates such invasions of state sovereignty as those proposed in the said program, that we shall see to it that the electoral college votes of their states are not cast for such nomination."

Those governors joining in the report were: Fielding Wright of Mississippi; Beauford Jester of Texas; James E. Folsom of Alabama; M. E. Thompson of Georgia; Strom Thurmond of South Carolina; Ben Laney of Arkansas. Governor Preston Lane Jr. of Maryland presided at the meeting, by virtue of his post as chairman of the Southern Governors Conference.

Sat 3-20-48

He refrained from voting and took no part in arguing the merits of the report. Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia and Governor Millard F. Caldwell of Florida, were understood to favor the report. The governor of Kentucky took no part in the conference and significantly has not joined the Conference of Southern Governors in their controversial regional educational pact.

Birmingham News

Asleep Too Long

To the Editor of The News:

South, wake up! We have been asleep too long already. Go to the polls and vote. Vote your convictions instead of leaving it to others and criticizing the officials later.

Birmingham, Ala.

The South has some splendid leaders like Lister Hill and Sparkman of Alabama, R. B. Russell and Ellis Arnall of Georgia and any number of others in different Southern states. It is up to the leading newspapers of the South to start, immediately, getting their names before the public.

The Republican and Democratic conventions should have been serious and dignified but they sounded like a group of little boys playing marbles. Order was hard to restore. Conditions are too critical, all over the world, to take a convention so lightly. 7-28-48

If the convention, in Philadelphia, was conducted in a democratic manner, I do not know the meaning of democracy. The South was ignored every time an important issue came up. Sam Rayburn said the "yeas" won every time, but once or twice it was a "toss up." This is not a "fair method" in deciding critical issues. We believe in 'secret ballot' and this should have been used Wednesday, July 14.

One section of the country cannot force an issue on another, which they did at the convention, without protest. If this is a democracy should the federal government step in and take our states' rights away? Each section has very serious problems to work out and it isn't up to one section to try to solve them for another. For instance, the North, East and West have the foreign-born Americans and what are they doing about it? We, in the South, are not trying to run their affairs, for we do not know the circumstances involved. We are progressing with our problem, and rightly so, but it cannot be solved overnight, so to speak.

Meddlers Handicap South

WASHINGTON. — The political reaction in the South confirms the opinion of those temperate and enlightened Southerners who believed it would surely follow the current types of agitation for quick and drastic change in the social-economic system below the Mason-Dixon Line. Among those efforts they prominently list:

1. The President's so-called civil rights program of Federal legislation which proposed to carry out, by force from the central government the whole structure of social organization in the South.

2. The journey of Henry A. Wallace through the states of the old Confederacy, in which every measure to revive the most acute state of racial prejudice was deliberately taken by the candidate, and, prior to this journey, political activities and associations of Mr. Wallace elsewhere.

Commercial Appeal

3. The unsympathetic and uninformed rain of criticism in the East and North of the South's effort to make a reasonable solution of its great negro problem.

4. The warm reception in the East and North of any Southern literature, or books about the South, in which the plight of the negro is dramatized and the work of those Caucasians who must solve it is possible is neglected or disparaged.

5. The hero-making propaganda in behalf of Southerners like former Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia, by Easterners and Northerners who are known in the South to favor quick and radical change in its social pattern. This weakened the influence at home of those Southerners who were beguiled by the flattery.

The first visible consequences, of course, were the stand of the Southern Democratic delegations at Philadelphia against the nomination of President Truman on a platform that endorsed the "civil-rights" program, and the development of this into the States' Rights national ticket.

Commercial Appeal

THE development was deliberately stimulated by the Americans for Democratic Action, a group in which the Roosevelt family and New Dealers are prominent and which has been active in movements to make drastic changes in the South. They stimulated it by opposing the platform compromise with which Mr. Truman and his spokesmen attempted to support the "civil rights" program in language that would mean one thing in the South and another outside. And the ADA forced on the unwilling Administration a plank that spelled out in detail the things that President had told Congress he wanted. This made the States' Rights ticket inevitable.

Other consequences were the reappearance of Ku Klux Klan fiery crosses and hoods in areas where they have been seen but little in recent years; the renomination of Representative John Rankin over strong opposition in Mississippi; the renascence of the Huey Long family in control of Louisiana politics; the removal of Mr. Truman's name as the official Democratic candidate in that state; and the overwhelming nomination of Herman Talmadge in Georgia over an acting governor, M. E. Thompson, who, though as much opposed to the "civil-rights" program, was burdened by the support of the nonSouthern groups referred to above.

THERE will be other results of the same kind in the near future. This reaction, as was predicted by Southerners who understand the inequalities of their region and have tried to level them by gradual and reasonable means, will always follow an attempt of nonSouthern politicians to change its social-economic structure by Federal force.

How little the problems and personalities of the South are understood by its outside critics was emphasized again after the victory of Mr. Talmadge. Many comments left the impression that Governor Thompson, who was backed by an unsavory state machine and has incurred no wounds in fighting the demagogy of "white supremacy," was a knight of social-economic reform in shining armor, and that in rejecting him Georgia citizens had dealt enlightenment a vital blow. Among these critics were some of the very persons who, by their fulsome patronage of his supporter, Mr. Arnall, had sapped the latter's influence with his fellow-voters.

WHO was benefitted by the various agitations for overnight change in the South? Not Mr. Truman, who started the reaction, for in the most unlikely event of his election he would have stronger Democratic opposition from the South than before. Not the Southern negroes, whose just aspirations will now be considered in a less favorable atmosphere than in recent years. Not the Southern whites, whose fears and prejudices have been aroused by the very persons who professed a desire to allay them.

The only beneficiaries are the Communists, whose purpose is to disunify the people of the United States in every possible way; and—if his "grand political design" has not been misrepresented—Mr. Wallace, who looks to reaction of any kind as the road to national political power for himself and his supporters.

But there can be some other benefit from the experience if the outside reformers of the South, including the sincere idealists, the practical workers for expansion of the Bill of Rights and the paid professional agitators of racial groups, have finally learned the lesson they hitherto have declined to learn.

THE SOUTH, on its own, and through the efforts of its best citizens, has made a long and steady advance since the fires of reconstruction died down. The negro is voting in numbers which no one could have estimated 10 years ago. The poll tax is in process of repeal by the states in which it exists. Lynching has become a remarkable occurrence because of its rarity, and Virginia under the prompting of Senator (then Governor) Harry F. Byrd has the most drastic antilynching law in the United States.

If the South is intelligently and sympathetically aided from outside in the solution of problems from which other sections are happily free, the progress will become very rapid.

11-4-48

But the South will not abandon the social forms of segregation while its population groups are as they are, and it will resist to any degree an attempt to end them by Federal legislation carried out by use of force. It will turn to the demagogs who voice this attitude with reckless and inflammatory speech which its better politicians decline to employ. And in national politics the Southerners will band together more closely, at the expense of some good laws and the two-party system, whenever it is convinced that its social-economic structure and its constitutional protections are in jeopardy from politicians elsewhere who would destroy them to get the votes of pressure groups in other sections.

How Is The South Going To Vote?

The Columbia Record

In a division of the southern vote on the civil rights issue most editors expect the bulk of that vote to remain in the Democratic party, with the Dixiecratic Party receiving too few electoral votes to throw the Presidential election into the House of Representatives. Some editors see the Dixiecratic party continuing after the coming campaign as a separate party. But the majority opinion is that the greatest long-range effect of the Democratic party split will be an increased sentiment—and vote—fo a strong Republican party in the South to give the South a bargaining position between the two major parties.

Sat 8-7-48

Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald-Journal (Ind.): "Assuming the embattled Southern Democratic states succeed in obtaining 127 electoral votes for their states' rights candidate Governor Thurmond of South Carolina) for President, Mr. Truman obviously would be sunk politically. But it remains to be seen whether these states that have been in the Democratic column ever since the Civil War actually will bolt. That national Democratic leaders are busy behind the scenes pulling strings to keep them in line is certain. If some of the prophets of old were around today perhaps they could tell us what the results will be, but without their assistance we'll have to give it up for the moment."

Norfolk Virginia-Pilot (Ind. Dem.): "Our own guess is that... the Birmingham war dance...will amount to practically nothing... There is no evidence that it was more representatives of the South's responsible Democratic leadership than the Jackson, Miss., convention that was its parent. The same three Governors that came to Jackson—Wright (of Mississippi) Thurmond and Laney, of Arkansas—came to Birmingham (and Laney withdrew) ...Absent from the Birmingham meeting were all the other top-drawer Democratic leaders of the South, including Senator Russell, of Georgia, whom all but a handful of the Southern delegates supported for the Presidential nomination at ...Philadelphia."

Sat 8-7-48

Cincinnati (Ohio) Times-Star (Rep.): "Three influences are astir in the South. One...would stick by the old party regardless of repeated rebuffs. A second, which got the nod at Birmingham, is breaking away from the Democratic party and forming another. A third... would like to merge with the Republican party..The immediate outlook...is for the appearance of a separate party, a minority, of course, but with the opportunity to make the same bargains with the two leading parties that other minorities have been doing."

Washington (D. C.) Post (Ind.): "From the walkout at Philadelphia has come a splinter party that may be expected to make its influence felt in the years ahead. From the viewpoint of the Democratic party that is a misfortune. but from the viewpoint of the South it may be a blessing in disguise. Certainly it is conducive to more honest politics. And if it results in genuine political contests between two well-defined political groups, the net effect should be salutary."

The Columbia Reco

Columbia (S. C.) Record (Ind.-Dem.): "The whole (Dixiecratic) movement, like the Hoovercrat movement in 1928, is futile. Any splinter party is futile, as the Prohibitionists, the Socialists, the Communists have demonstrated. The United States has built its political system around two parties, now styled the Republicans and the Democrats. If the South wants to make its protest meaningful and effective it will have to shift not from the Democratic party to the Dixiecratic splinter party but to the Republican party."

Sat 8-7-48

Austin (Texas) American (Dem.): "Texas and other states of the South would have a decent two party system if the Republicans infiltrating the party and using its precinct convention machinery, in alliance with Democrats thinking like Republicans, to obtain control of Democratic party processes would get out of the party, adopt their own label publicly and take with them all those who pretend to talk like Democrats, who get elected on the Democratic ticket by saying they are Democrats, and promptly become the messenger boys of the Republican party."

~~They~~ Hinder The Negroes' Advancement In South

The Columbia Record

The South, under Southern leadership, has been making real progress in eliminating the handicaps under which the Negroes have been forced to live and work in the South and in so doing it has benefited the entire South, whites and Negroes, both.

And this process has been speeded up in the past 15 years. Lynching has almost disappeared as a crime; it is the only major crime in which there has been any substantial decline. And this was done by Southerners under Southern leadership. The Negroes are being accorded everywhere the right to vote and to participate in party affairs. It took a federal court decision to win this right for them in South Carolina, but the decisions which prohibited the Democratic party of South Carolina from discriminating against Negroes on account of race were written by Southerners—a South Carolinian and a North Carolinian.

Thur 8-5-48

Columbia S.C.

And the South has also made marked progress in eliminating the poll tax as a requirement for voting. Georgia is the latest of the Southern states to act; Virginia will vote next year on a repeal amendment submitted to the voters. South Carolina might already have acted if the federal anti-poll tax bill had not been made a hardy congressional perennial. The constitutional amendment to repeal the poll tax as a qualification for voting passed the Senate of South Carolina overwhelmingly. The measure was favored by the House judiciary committee, only one member of which opposed it. It failed to pass, but the effort to secure it eventual passage has not been abandoned. It has simply been pushed aside by the agitation for the federal anti-poll tax law.

Thur 8-5-48

It has made progress in improving the education of Negroes and is making more progress. And what is still more important Negroes are now earning good wages in the South. It is a sellers' market for labor.

Now this progress isn't as rapid as it should be. It isn't even as rapid as it might have been had not the civil rights issue been raised to set off a new racial prejudice exhibition. It would not have been half so hard to convince the Democratic party of South Carolina that it should accept the inevitable and admit Negroes to membership if Truman had not entered the competition for Northern Negro votes by making the South the goat of his vote-seeking.

The civil rights program, as a political issue, has retarded and handicapped the Southern effort to do justice to all races.

"Federal laws designed to end segregation, to force social equality and revolutionize the customs of a whole people, must," The Christian Science Monitor warns, "be questioned.

Thur 8-5-48

"Action of this kind can do more harm than good. The new awareness of injustices is a healthy development. Reform is overdue. But reform is a bigger thing than passing a law. Unhappily, much of the civil rights issue is today surrounded by ignorance and intolerance as between races and sections which retard real reform.

"In the South even those most ready to concede the need for change feel that the South is misunderstood, and are resolved to defend their own rights of local self-government. In the North, hasty, doctrinaire concepts of reform tend to foster an unfortunate holier-than-thou attitude and to overlook the discriminations—often unconscious but still cruel—experienced by Negro and Jew in the North.

"There is really little disagreement on the need for reform. The big question is, How? Both education and legislation are needed in the great enterprise of extending and developing civil rights in America. But legislation—impelled by a combination of sincere but overzealous reformers and politicians seeking partisan or personal advantage—can easily get too far ahead of education. Such measures would be 10 times harder to enforce than prohibition; they would be nullified and in the process would engender new bitternesses.

Thur 8-5-48

"The great need in the civil rights picture today is not for more coercion, but for more Christianity. With more understanding—more willingness to put oneself in his brother's place and to examine the beam in one's own eye—reform can be speeded."

Here is a voice of sanity from the North. But it will not be heeded. There are no votes to be gathered by sanity on either side. Every year the civil rights fight will be repeated.

But it should be remembered also that making a political football of these problems simply plays into the hands of the demagogues and the race-baiters.

REVOLT IN THE SOUTH

The Defender

The true revolt in the South is not to be found in the childish and ill-tempered outbursts of the raning Dixiecrats. Its real manifestation is in the growing awareness of the common citizens of both races of that long backward segment of the nation that differences in race and color of skin are too flimsy a foundation upon which to build a society, an economy, a political system which will endure.

Sat 8-21-48

Chicago Def

Each day brings fresh evidence that an ever increasing number of Southerners whose vision has been stultified by the mists of racism and fears kept stirred up by a little handful of demagogues, are opening their eyes to the realities of life in a democracy. Slowly but surely the understanding is dawning upon the South that no man's rights and privileges are secure so long as any man's are hampered or flouted.

In Tennessee last week, Negro voters were in the vanguard of the peoples' movement, which broke the 30-year strangle hold of "Boss" Crump on the political life of that state. In one Texas city, Negro and white voters jointly elected a colored neighbor to serve as their party precinct chairman, while in another a white man went to court to enforce his right to attend a law school designated "for colored only." In Alabama, white and colored farmers pooled and exchanged their labor and machinery to get in their bumper cotton crop before the market breaks.

Sat 8-21-48

In Oklahoma, the legislature is taking steps to revise the laws which for 40 years have required the separation of the races in the state's institutions of higher learning. In Georgia, Negro citizens have boldly challenged in the Federal court a sneak attempt to purge them from the voting lists, with public support from daily newspapers and white community leaders. In South Carolina 30,000 Negro citizens, armed with a ruling handed down by a Federal judge, who is a member of one of the state's oldest and most distinguished white families, flock to the polls to vote in the Democratic primaries for the first time in 75 years.

All of these unprecedented happenings in the South occured within the span of the past week. These are the true signs of the revolt of Dixie.

For What Reason?

The Record

Why should not any Southerner who thinks as a Republican, acts as a Republican, believes as a Republican vote the Republican ticket in any election? Columbia, S.C

Mon. 2-9-48

There was a time, of course, when a single issue—the "white supremacy" issue—kept Southerners in the Democratic party. But that time is now past. The Democratic party is vying with now the Republican party in the promotion of a legislation program aimed at capturing the Negro vote. Actually the Democratic party has done more for the Negroes than the Republican party has since it was in a position to do more.

The other day Senator Taft, the Republican leader on domestic affairs in the Senate and a candidate for the Republican nomination for president, voted in committee against the F. E. P. C. bill, the enactment of which is asked by President Truman, the Democrat.

It offers an opportunity to build up two political parties in the South. And the South needs the two-party system, if it is ever to get anything out of the federal government. Mon. 2-9-48

Ridiculous

Says Representative Joseph R. Bryson of Greenville, South Carolina's prohibitionist in the Congress, talking at Charleston: 3-10-48

"It would be ridiculous to desert the party of our grandfathers simply because one man betrayed it." The Record

In the first place, of course, Representative Bryson has his facts mixed. The Democratic party has not been betrayed by any one man—Harry Truman or any body else. Truman didn't invent the policies that he is following; he isn't the inventing kind. And he isn't alone in his advocacy of these policies. The Democratic party, which Mr. Bryson means by his grandfathers' party, was a changed party before Harry Truman ever became vice president even. Let the Greenville Congressman compare the 1932 Democratic platform with the 1936 platform and confess that Harry Truman is not the author of the evils of which he complains and which he naively persists in thinking can be cured by any device so simple as nominating somebody born south of the Mason and Dixon line, even if that were possible. Columbia, S.C.

The ridiculous thing in this situation is that the South is angry at Truman when the South itself is the author of all of its troubles, when it has the remedy within its grasp and does not have the courage nor the sense to seize upon it. For the South's impotence in national affairs, of which its present unhappy condition is only one instance, derives from the fact that the South deliberately elected to make itself a one-party area, to put all of its eggs, its liberties and its existence in the Democratic basket. The result has been what might have been expected. The South has no real influence in either party. And it must be so until the South erects in every Southern state, two parties—one Democratic and one Republican either of which may win an election and both of which nationally will court the South for the South's votes. Wed.

Even more ridiculous, however, is the whole idea of a grandfathers' party. South Carolina before the Confederate war, when it was a state of some influence in national affairs, was no one-party state. And the notion that the South Carolinians of today should keep themselves in thrall to the Democratic party because their grandfathers after Reconstruction made a choice which seemed wise in that day is downright silly, even when advocated by a Democratic member of the Congress from South Carolina. Those grandfathers were men of courage and sense and initiative and you can put it down that in the light of today's conditions they would not simply be squirming and squealing, threatening to go off nowhere in a splinter Southern party. They would have the wisdom to meet today's issues face to face and to reject their own post-Reconstruction decision. After all Reconstruction's remedies are not the cure for today's ills.

3-10-48

If today's South Carolinians were worthy of them they would reject these abortive ideas and those of them who think more nearly like the Republicans would vote Republican and those who think more nearly like the Democrats would vote Democratic. In everything else we have grown and built in the spirit of our grandfathers. Why allow the politicians to keep us tied to an ox cart in politics in the day of paved roads and automobiles, airplanes and television?

The Record

Columbia, S.C.

Isn't this the ridiculous thing that we cling to one party because our grandfathers' voted for it in a different day, under different circumstances, to meet that day's crisis?

Movement To Free Dixie From One-Party Status Is Gaining Momentum With Rapidity

BY FRED TAYLOR The News

For years critics of the South have been saying, among other things, that what we needed most was to be freed from the shackles of one-party government. Birmingham, Ala

As long as this condition continued, they pointed out, the South could expect little from the Democratic Party and nothing from the GOP. Sun. 2-29-48

TAYLOR

It also might be pointed out that the first step toward shaking off a one-party government is for the South to free itself from the shackles of one candidate.

A Southwide movement to do just that is gaining the momentum of a roaring prairie fire. The blaze of revolt against the Truman leadership in the Democratic Party burned brighter in Alabama at week's end, with agitation over the president's "civil rights" program feeding the flames.

* * *

FROWN ON GOP—The Republicans have done little to win friends and influence Democratic voters in the South. This might be considered natural enough, as politics goes, since the GOP rarely had a look-in down this way. There was the exception of the 1928 campaign, when the religious issue so stirred Southern voters that six states—Texas, Tennessee, Florida, North Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky—in the so-called Solid South voted for Herbert Hoover over Al Smith. While Alabama was counted for Smith by a margin of some 7,000 votes, some party leaders chuckled over reports that a good job of Democratic counting was done. Sun. 2-29-48

It has been difficult for the Deep South to forget many things associated with the Republican name since the horrors that followed in the wake of the War Between the States. Sun

* * *

HOSTILITY—It is only natural that Democratic leaders should expect little help or sympathy from the GOP. Despite the urging of a few GOPers that the Republican Party now woo the Southern states, the GOP-controlled Congress is hastily pushing toward enactment of the same "civil rights" proposals advocated by Mr. Truman.

Montgomery's Marion Rushton, state Democratic national committeeman, who is running for reelection, declared that "We cannot expect help from Republicans, Communists, appeasers nor apparently from certain leaders of our own party."

In that statement, Rushton apparently was hitting not only at President Truman but some Alabamians who have been elected to high office.

Talladega's Tom Abernethy, State Democratic Executive Committee member and editor of The Daily Home, sees no help coming from the GOP. As a candidate for presidential elector, Abernethy pledged to vote against Truman, declaring "I would not cast my vote for a Republican candidate, seeing no gain for the South in choosing between two factions of demonstrated hostility to our way of life." 2-29-48

* * *

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY — When Republicans hold their rallies in Alabama, GOP leaders invariably predict that "one of these days Alabama will go Republican."

Those were the exact words of GOP State Chairman Claude Vardaman at the Republican Lincoln Day rally in Birmingham a few weeks ago. But when he made that prediction, he had no inkling of the Democratic revolt that would be started by Truman's "civil rights" proposals.

Some Alabama Republican leaders feel that the GOP now has a golden opportunity to grab off Alabama and other Southern states. The News

But they'll have no more chance than President Truman, if he is the Democratic nominee, as long as the Republican-controlled Congress bulls ahead in an attempt to enact the "civil rights" proposals. Birmingham, Ala

Obviously, the Republicans are trying to do exactly what Truman and other Democratic bigwigs had in mind: Win the heavy minority Negro vote in population centers of the East and Middle West. Sun. 2-29-48

* * *

LOST BALL — No one who knows his political A B Cs now doubts that President Truman is a lost political ball.

The South alone can bump him off, even if he is nominated. And many now doubt whether he'll be nominated.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that Alabama is going to choose presidential electors who will vote against Truman.

State Democratic Chairman Gessner McCorvey predicts the state will send to the Democratic National Convention unpledged delegates who will refuse to vote for Truman or any other candidate advocating his "civil rights" legislation.

Gov. Folsom is trying to discourage the Democratic revolt in Alabama. He contends, none too convincingly, that differences can be ironed out in the party. And he holds himself out as the "favorite son" presidential candidate Democrats of Alabama and other Southern states should support to help work out those differences.

But Chairman McCorvey sums up the attitude of Alabama and other Southern states Democrats rather neatly.

"The South," he says, "is no longer in the bag."

The Dothan Eagle

The Dothan Eagle having viewed it fore and aft, came out the other day for the Republican ticket. And the letters to the editor flowed like wine. One of these was written by one H. M. Shelton of San Antonio, Texas, who said:

"Editor, The Eagle: We've all had enough but . . . why not lead a fight for Southern Autonomy. We can appeal to the United Nations Organization to partition the United States, as it partitioned Palestine . . . and perhaps avoid war . . .

"Let us go all-out for secession and Southern Autonomy. We can win . . . Both Ireland and India whipped the Britis without war. Surely the South can do th same for the North."

Bitter Debate Expected On Civil Rights Issue—Program Seen As Truman's Efforts To Win Votes Of Negroes In Other Sections

340

By WILLIAM D. SISSON

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Eighty-seven years ago, in 1861, it was the determined effort of the North to change the way of life in the South that brought on the Civil War . . . the bloodiest conflict of all history for the number of men involved.

Today the efforts of the North to again change the way of life in the South has brought on what is in effect a bloodless civil war. This time it is a battle of words, of political maneuvering. But the effect is the same. And once again the South finds itself outmanned but full of the courage of its convictions.

7-18-48

Mr. Sisson

That this is indeed a bloodless civil war was evident at the Wednesday afternoon session of the Democratic National Convention when the big cities of the North teamed with the so-called liberal fringe of the party to ride rough shod over the South and write into the party platform the strong but misnamed civil rights program. It was this same combination that ruthlessly beat down the efforts of the South to put a states' rights plank into the platform.

The battle will get into full swing when Congress meets July 26 for what promises to be a bitter but historical session.

Both parties, Democratic and Republican, have promised more and more civil rights in their platforms.

President Truman has been fighting for a 10 point civil rights program since last January and now he has put the Republicans on the spot. He has in effect told them to produce or shut up talking about civil rights.

Civil Rights Issue Puts South In The Middle

The Commercial Appeal

The President has thrown a challenge to the Republicans on other issues but the concensus is that the principal fight will center around the civil rights proposals.

President Truman and his advisers and leaders want to get the civil rights proposals enacted into law as a move they believe will assure them the votes of the Northern negro and other minority groups.

Memphis, Tenn

The Republicans want the votes of those same groups.

7-18-48

The result will be that the Southern Democrats will find themselves caught in the crossfire between the Northern and "liberal" elements of their own party and the Republicans.

Sun

It looks right now like a superhuman job the Southerners face if they are to prevent the passage of the anti-poll tax, the anti-lynching, anti-segregation, a fair employment practices law and similar measures. But the Southerners have always had to fight. They knew how to fight and they will be in there this time battling with every possible weapon.

WHAT "happened" to the Southern position at Philadelphia has been long in the making. It has been happening, if we want to use that word, for some years.

In a time when it is essential that we think clearly and understand the position in which the South finds itself, it will be a tragic error if we in the South think of what happened at Philadelphia in terms of a sudden plot, or a political gamble quickly conceived in one of those smoke-filled rooms.

7-24-48

What "happened" at Philadelphia, basically, was that the Eastern and Western party leaders determined to go ahead with the sort of party most likely to succeed in their regions. They deliberately made the choice not to appease the Southern position because they believed their political existence in the East and West depended upon their being a liberal party. They formally rejected the long-held theory that in years of defeat the Southern wing must be the reservoir of the party's remaining strength.

In thus shaking out of the party's decisions the conservatism of the Southern businessman, banker, farmer and professional man—which often in the past had jostled harshly and out of tune with the Eastern and Western conceptions of party policy—the Democratic Party became an urban party, dedicated chiefly to the interests and pressures of city masses and of the expanding West which is fighting for industry.

Sat. 7-24-48

But all of this didn't happen suddenly, but very gradually. Until the eighties, this country was a rural country. But since that time its population has been shifting to the cities. This movement was accelerated by two wars. In the South, we got an extra push to migration by the boll weevil of 1920-21, which drove thousands from the farms.

The recent world war, which was a war of supply, jammed our cities with new residents. They remained when war was done. And from the rural regions the movement to the cities continues.

The United States of America now has about 60 per cent of its population in cities of from 2,500 population on up. In addition to that, it has thousands of persons in every state who are in the rural bracket of population because they live on small farms. Actually, these are subsistence-type farms and the owner works in industry, leaving to his family the business of keeping the chickens, the few pigs, the cow or so, and the small acreage of grain and vegetables. If we could have an accurate break-down of our population we would find a surprisingly large portion of it tied with industry.

The packed cities, with their labor unions, their herd fears and emotions; their restiveness in the face of the always-present threat of unemployment; reduction of working days, and strikes, are not, and never will be, conservative in politics. They will want, and get, more and more "liberalism" from political parties.

ALL this has been growing gradually. What "happened" at Philadelphia might have happened in 1944 had it not been for the war. But what took place there in 1948 will not be reversed. The Democratic party of the old era ended on July 14, in the afternoon session of the convention. It was ended out of no malice for the South. There was no joy in the doing. But there was determination.

What the answer is for the South none may say with confidence. But certainly the answer is not the dismal fourth-party doings at Birmingham, where existed the same sort of leadership that in 1860 pushed a South, reluctant to indulge in the Civil War, into conflict with an unreasoning denial of history and reality. It was "leadership" which tried to justify the moral wrong of slavery with the Bible; which tried to create a nation with slavery as its keystone. Of all the Southern States at the time, only South Carolina and Mississippi were blindly whooping for war—a war that need not have happened.

No more unrealistic or futile demonstration could have been made than that at Birmingham. It was no wonder that even those who seek to defeat Harry Truman withdrew themselves from that wild affair, with its gyrating persons who would solve everything by having the band play "Dixie" very loudly while the crowd cheers. Arkansas' Gov. Laney came home from Philadelphia, where he had led the early fight, to say the answer lies within the party. So, at Birmingham, there was South Carolina, Mississippi, and the smell of tidelands oil money—and a cold shiver as one thought of 1860.

Sat.

The answer does lie in the party—or in the establishment of the two-party system down to the precinct level. The answer is not in forming another splinter party to go along with Henry Wallace's in accomplishing nothing.

7-24-48

The South, too, has cities fighting for industry and for more income. The South cannot turn away and find the answer or its own future in madder and louder band music or the jigs and shrieks of those who want to secede and repeal the emancipation proclamation.

All this has been "happening" since the eighties.

Time and economics and the machine age have caught up with us. The cities have taken over. And we have cities in the South. We must continue to progress and fight for our place. We cannot "walk out."

Why Try To Conjure Up Impossible Bugaboos?

The Record

The Greenville Observer conjures up the idea of an all-Negro government for the South as a bugaboo or red herring.

"James Ford, the Communist candidate for vice president four years ago," it points out, "advocated that an all-Negro state be set up in the South and it is expected that this will be the next clamor of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People except that it would want the state to include several of the present Southern states.

34 Sat. 7-10-48

"A showdown is going to come in the South before many years. It is inevitable. Either the better class white people are going to have to put up a stiff fight against further encroachment on their rights, move out or live under conditions that will be unbearable." Columbia, S.C.

The Record is not privy to the plans of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and it does not know what it may have in mind. But it does know that the whites constitute a majority in every one of the Southern states. From a minority of 243,000 the whites in the six states of the lower South, in which the Negroes are concentrated, have increased since 1880 to a majority of 3,600,000 in 1940. The Record has a naive idea that the whites of the South being in the majority, are capable of taking care of any suicidal threat that might be made by the Negro minority. And if this idea isn't sound what happens then to "white supremacy?"

The question at issue is not Negro government, but Negro representation in the process of choosing the men who govern both whites and Negroes. And there is no more reason to expect a revolution in South Carolina than there was to expect it in the other Southern states which already are allowing Negro participation in Democratic party affairs. The state Democratic convention of Texas was attended this year by Negro delegates. And the sky didn't fall.

There are enough real problems in South Carolina and in the South without conjuring up bugaboos. And one of them is the problem of granting the Negro the minimum rights as a citizen to which the courts say he is entitled and so make it more difficult for him to become a victim of Communist propaganda. They Should Have Taken Time To Think First

Record. Columbia S.C.

The Southern Democrats, who attended the national Democratic convention and were flattened by the Truman-New Deal steamroller, probably have reasons to feel agrieved at the treatment accorded them. MON.

There is no mystery about it, of course, and the defeat should have been expected. It is the inevitable result of the single-party system that has kept the South in the bag and denied it an effective voice in either party. 34d 7-

But the inevitability of the Southern rout at Philadelphia nor even the South's ultimate responsibility for its own disaster do not alter the fact that the Democratic party was kept alive through the lean years of Republican victories chiefly by Southern support and during these years took its color largely from the South.

The South deserved better treatment from the Johnnie-come-latelies who took over the Democratic party after the Roosevelt victory.

It was given almost no consideration. Politics is a profession in which appreciation for past favors must always give way to today's or tomorrow's ambitions, but usually these things are done with more finesse and in a manner and a style such as not to create new wounds on top of the old ones. At Philadelphia this was disregarded.

The so-called civil rights plank, written into the Democratic platform, was in its final form not an expression of liberal thought—it involves ideas that are the negation of liberalism and are more consistent with totalitarism than with Democracy—but merely a cheap political device to win the support of the minorities and the left-wingers in the North.

Clearly the South was called upon to take some action in its own defense. But the action taken should have been the result of calm study and considerable planning. It was not the time for any spur-of-the-moment flare-up, no time for intemperate oratory. The Southern politicians needed to give themselves a cooling off period. They needed to think, before they leaped.

The Dixiecrats who met for their rump conference-convention at Birmingham did not take time to think. There was some talk, before the meeting, that it would be simply a conference at which the Southerners, who feel they cannot support Truman and Barkley, might discuss their future and plan what might be done. Suddenly it turned into a convention nominating Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for the presidency and Governor Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi as vice president. Apparently the oratory was too much for the wiser counselors who wanted to think before they acted. MON. 7-19-48

There was talk at the conference-convention that it was a "grass-roots" movement. But the fact is that it was not. The persons attending the meeting were not delegates named to attend a convention. Of necessity they represented only themselves. Governor Thurmond was there, but not as the representative of South Carolina, nor as the representative of the Democratic party of South Carolina. Record

His selection by the conference as the Dixiecratic presidential nominee is, of course, a compliment to him and to South Carolina. It is a signal tribute to the role played by him in the state rights fight both before and during the national Democratic convention. Columbia S.C.

But there isn't any certainty that Governor Thurmond as a presidential candidate will have the support of the Democrats of South Carolina. The South Carolina delegates to the national convention were pledged to Thurmond, but the vote on the resolution, pledging the state's delegates to him, was anything but general or unanimous. The party's electors are intended to be pledged to vote against Truman and they may be pledged by the state executive committee or by the state convention to support the Thurmond-Wright ticket, picked for them but without their authority by the Birmingham conference-convention. But this isn't a foregone conclusion. MON.

The whole movement, like the Hoovercrat movement in 1928, is futile. Any splinter party is futile, as the Prohibitionists, the Socialists, the Communists have demonstrated. The United States has built its political system around two parties, now styled the Republicans and the Democrats. If the South wants to make its protest meaningful and effective it will have to shift not from the Democratic party to the Dixiecratic splinter party but to the Republican party. 7-19-48

SO HERE WE ARE

EDITOR, The Advertiser: It seems to me—as a traditional Southern Democrat—that the time is as ripe as it ever could be for the emergence of a two-party system in the South, the lack of which clearly has been the bane of our political and economic existence. The party of our fathers has been too sure of us. The opposition party has owed us nothing. So here we are.

The reason for our unhappy predicament—our position of complete disinheritance—is that the average Southerner, whatever his political leanings, has been unable to bring himself to the point of breaking with a tradition so deeply rooted as the one that demands that he vote as his forbears have been voting since secession and reconstruction days. Call it loyalty, call it what you will, what is the whole business but a form of regimentation? For, after all, what is loyalty? And to what should a man be required to give his ultimate fidelity, if not to his innermost convictions? The Advertiser

The choice of a political party for the intelligent voter in the South today should not be a difficult one, despite all the tumult and the shouting. The two major parties are, admittedly, so close together in creed that the choice simply resolves itself into a question of leadership. Which party, for the time being, offers the better men at the top? That is the question the intelligent Southern voter must answer in his own mind and of his own free will—not only now, but so long as the tenets of both major parties are so closely aligned. Montgomery, Ala

This is not to say at all that any man should vote for any given ticket. It is to say simply that he should strive to throw off the shackles restraining the exercise of his own free will and intelligence. Let him vote as he believes. For in this direction—and in this direction, alone—lies emancipation for the individual voter. And until he achieves this, democracy is a mere fiction.

Southern Democrats Adopt Senator Morse's Tactics

The Record

Senator Wayne Morse, of Oregon, killed the Southern regional education compact measure by injecting the segregation issue into the debate and insisting that there should be written into the resolution approving the agreement a provision that no school established under it could comply with Southern segregation laws. It was a bit of quick thinking.

348

Wed.

But in so doing he taught the Southern Democrats the lesson of how they can prevent any of President Truman's civil rights measures being brought up. 5-26-48

The Congress is now set to adjourn June 18. And it has a pile of "must" measures which it is required to pass if the government is to function in the months ahead.

A Southern filibuster would stymie this adjournment move. And the Democrats can offer themselves the chance to talk at length by offering segregation amendments to such measures as supply the excuse, for their own purposes taking a leaf out of Senator Morse's book. Columbia, S.C.

The first bill on which they will use the Republican method for this purpose is the draft bill. Senators Richard B. Russell of Georgia and Senator Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina are prepared to introduce an amendment to the bill giving all inductees the right to demand that they serve only with members of their own race.

The army, navy and air force practiced racial segregation during the war, with a few exceptions, and the Negroes have been campaigning for the abolition of this segregation. Senators Russell and Maybank profess to believe—and they may be right—that President Truman, as commander-in-chief of the armed forces, will issue the orders abolishing segregation. Secretary of Defense Forrestal and Secretary of the Army Royall, however, have undertaken to assure the Senators that no such change is contemplated. The Record

But Senators Russell and Maybank want more assurance than this.

"If there is any one civil right," Senator Russell said, "it is the right of choosing one's associates." Columbia, S.C.

There has, of course, never been a "voluntary segregation" clause written into a draft bill. The Southerners have never before felt that they needed any such assurance. And, as it turned out, they didn't.

Maybe they do not need it now, but this is a political year and all the furore raised about civil rights and segregation in the armed services, including even the threat of two Negro leaders to institute a civil disobedience campaign against the draft unless segregation in the armed services be abolished, isn't too reassuring. Wed.

And they do need to consume some time, if they are to prevent the anti-poll tax bill or the anti-lynching bill's being brought up for passage. 5-26-48

Stassen's Bid in the South

Atlanta, Ga. Wed 5-12-48

WASHINGTON—The announcement that Harold Stassen is opening Southern headquarters in Atlanta is interesting and significant, indicating that the young man from Minnesota is going to make a real, organized campaign for Republican delegates from the South. But it takes on added significance with the almost simultaneous showing in the Gallup Poll that he runs neck and neck with President Truman in the South. This might be expected to give Mr. Stassen ideas—if he does not have them already—to try, if nominated, to capture some Southern States for himself and the Republican Party. This is no new enterprise for ambitious and energetic Republican candidates. It lures them periodically.

It would, indeed, be a healthy thing for the Republican Party to get a real foothold in the South and establish the two-party system there. You can get lots of Southerners to agree with that. To be effective and permanent, however, such a party division would have to be along economic lines—that is, a division on economic issues between what we term conservatives and progressives. There are plenty of both in the South.

But, ever since the War Between the States, this natural division has been confused and beclouded by the Negro issue and the traditional stand of the Republican Party and its association wtih the War Between the States and Reconstruction, so that the South has clung to the Democratic Party, with a single exception.

The Constitution

Because of this and other circumstances, there has been no incentive for those in the South who would normally be Republicans—and there are many of them—to create a real Republican Party there. So they accept the Democratic custom. And it suits them and the conservative interests with which they are affiliated.

For it is all right with them when Republicans are in charge of the Government. And, with Democrats in charge, it is generally all right, too, for they are able to send plenty of conservatives to Congress because of the control they exercise through restrictions on the franchise both of Negroes and of poor whites—the elimination of which is a part of the Truman civil rights program. Atlanta, Ga.

And, when there is any real threat to their vested interests, as there was in the New Deal of President Roosevelt which his successor espouses, then there is always the Negro issue to fall back upon for exploitation. That explained the big interests that supported Gene Talmadge in Georgia two years ago. It explains what's going on now. "White supremacy" is a convenient cover and camouflage. Wed 5-12-48

So now the South boils up and, as usual, Republicans see an opening. It is worth remembering that the only Republican success in breaking into the solid South since the War Between the States was because of extraneous issues, not economic issues. In 1928, it was the religious and prohibition issues—embodied in the candidacy of Alfred E. Smith, a Catholic and a "wet"—that diverted enough Southern votes away from him to give Herbert Hoover four States—Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and Texas. That looked at the time like a start for a Republican Party in the South, but there was no firm foundation in an economic division on issues.

Now it is the racial issue, not an economic issue. In their spleen, a great many Southern voters seem ready to rise up and vent their wrath in extraordinary ways, judging from the Alabama primary and the Jackson, Miss., convention. They can have a party of their own or, lacking that, they can be mad enough to go off and vote Republican. Harold Stassen is an attractive figure, though he stands alongside other Republicans and Harry Truman on civil rights.

What is happening is very satisfying to big Southern interests, some of them absentee-owned, and encouragement is coming from that quarter. This, however, is not to minimize the real resentment of many other folks at President Truman. They seemingly are so aroused that they are willing to forget basic economic issues—such as, for example, the current attempt in the Republican Congress to check expansion of TVA, which, if successful, could set back development of the South for many years; and the attack also on the wage-hour act, passed primarily for unprotected Southern workers. Wed 5-12-48

While some Southern States might go Republican this year, the Republican Party is not likely to establish itself in the South on a permanent basis until the civil rights issue is finally settled, so that there will be a real division along economic lines which is essential for political parties. A Republican administration, of course, could do something about the civil rights issue, and it would be an achievement comparable to its original freeing of the slaves.

Who Is Confused?

To the Editor of The News:

You continually write of confusion among what you choose to call the "bolters."

Yes, there is some confusion in the South, confusion generated by the same kind of "Tories" who tried to confuse the 13 colonies, confusion in the minds of timid and self-centered false political leaders who are constantly crying that we have nowhere to go.

Like our illustrious colonial "bolters" we propose to cut out a new road to civic honor and political respectability. In this labor of love for political freedom there will be no "Tory" newspaper or self-centered false political leader found with an ax in his hand or sweat on his brow among the pioneers digging this new road. No, they will be too busy spreading false reports and crying that we are digging a road to nowhere. [illegible]

There is no confusion in the minds of those hardy pioneers who are even now digging that road. There is no uncertainty in the determination of those courageous, real statesmen who are pushing that road ever nearer to honor and respectability.

Into that road will go sweat and tears, toil and sacrifices and the hope for the future of the South, all invested by loyal hands and hearts who will complete the job in spite of the "Tory" newspapers and the fair-weather politicians. In the presence of courage, confusion retreats, for confusion is the weapon of the selfish and cowardly.

When love's labor is finished and the new road is opened to traffic, who will demand the place of honor? None other than the "Tories" and their fellow travelers, the faithless political leaders whose false leadership made the new road necessary, but who would not aid in its building.

South Would Be Loser

The Constitution

Thur 9-16-48

Editor Constitution: We mustn't overlook that every citizen that is born in the United States is an American citizen and under the Constitution and the Bill of Rights is guaranteed life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. On the other hand, assuming that these persons left Georgia, then Georgia would be the loser and it wouldn't be long before they would be clamoring for these citizens to return.

Do we recall several years ago when agents from the East were trying to entice the laborers away from the cotton plantations, that we rebelled? Many tried to stop them.

Atlanta Ga.

Do we realize that these citizens are consumers and that they are responsible, in large part, for our economy being successful?

Those who advocate such a policy not only are shortsighted but they are doing a great disservice to us here in Georgia.

There are some who tell us that if the Northerners would leave us alone we would get along beautifully and it is equally true if some of our Southerners would be more realistic in evaluating the blessings that we enjoy as is, they, too, would leave us alone.

SUDDEN DEATH FOR SOLID SOUTH

34d

The Advertiser

It seems to The Advertiser that our political architects, in considering the South's political future, are giving too little thought to the implications of the indicated reform of the electoral college.

In the tumult of the Presidential race and the activity of the third and fourth parties of Wallace and Thurmond we are preoccupied with plans based on the present election system.

The candidacies of Wallace and Thurmond are methods of insuring the defeat of Truman Both are punitive in character. We speculate on the highly remote possibility of throwing the election of the President into the House of Representatives.

We speculate that Thurmond will get more electoral votes than Truman. We debate whether, after Truman, the South can re-invest the Democratic Party and mold it nearer the heart's desire, and whether the Southern revolt would have been more telling and availing if we had wrenched ourselves loose from Reconstruction remembrances and voted Republican this year.

In any event, all the divergent thinking on the likely future of the South politically has one thing in common—assumption that the present method of electing a President will endure.

That is far from certain. There is, for example, a strong movement in motion to revise the electoral college system under the terms of the Gossett-Lodge amendment. This would usher in a functioning two party system in the South inevitably.

Sun 9-12-48

Under the present system, if Thurmond gets but five more votes than Dewey—he garners Alabama's entire 11 electoral votes. But under the proposed new system, the 11 electoral votes would be divided on the basis of a popular vote percentage. Thus, if Dewey got 30 per cent of the popular vote in Alabama, he would also get 30 per cent of its electoral vote. That would give the G. O. P. something to work for in Alabama.

This bill has already received favorable report from congressional committees and no doubt the South's present manipulation of its electoral strength will intensify sentiment for reform of the outmoded electoral college—which hasn't served its original purpose in more than a century.

Montgomery Ala

Among the advocates of the reform is Senator John Sparkman. So far, the advocates of the measure have had all the best of the argument. Chiefly they concentrate on the weakness of the present system which permits the election of a President although his opponent is the choice of the majority voting in an election (Grover Cleveland was defeated in 1888 despite a popular majority). It is contended with obvious logic that such a change would immediately crack the Solid South and make it a prize to be contested by all parties.

The only substantial objection to the reform so far adduced is that it would go far beyond making the South a two-party system. It might make it, with the rest of the country, a 10 or 12 party system with the lamentable results witnessed in France.

Nevertheless the heat is on for electoral college reform. If it comes, we Southerners will have to entirely reorder our political planning. We should be considering now whether or not this reform is more solid and enduring than all the devices, such as electoral vote withholding put together. The possibilities and desirabilities should be commanding more of our thought.

THE SOUTHERN LIBERAL

(34d)

The Defender

WE Negroes spend a good deal of time being sorry for ourselves and we are without doubt largely justified; but once in a while we begin to realize how difficult and almost impossible it is for other people to be themselves, especially if they happen to want to fight on our side. I think I have always had a great deal of sympathy for the young Southern white man who wants to be honest, and I know there are such persons. I remember that one of my first experiences in the South was witnessing the driving out of a liberal white professor from a North Carolina University because he had the temerity to say in print that the two greatest figures in the South since the Civil War, were Robert E. Lee and Booker T. Washington. He did not suffer mob violence, but he found that the climate of Massachusetts was a great deal pleasanter for him after that. He went there and finished his life's work there.

Sat 9-25-48

Every time I see a young white Southern Liberal say something fair and decent on the Negro problem, I watch him. Pretty soon the pay-off is bound to come. After a while he either becomes silent and you gradually forget everything he said, or he begins slowly, and deftly to walk backwards. He tries rather desperately to maintain his small reputation as a liberal, as one representing the forward-looking South, but gradually you begin to place him. He is a Southerner who has liberal instincts, but no courage. I do not for a moment say that these people were not honest in what they said. But I do say that when they realize that what the cost in the South is for a person who is liberal on the Negro problem, they usually do not have the courage to go forward. They either stand still or they walk backwards. And the reason for all this is shown perhaps most clearly today in the case of Don West.

Chicago Ill

DON WEST

Don West is a fine young Southern white man, born and reared in Georgia and choosing Georgia as the place of his life's work. On my way from Atlanta to New York, I used to drive through the little town called Lulu, in North Georgia, where Don West became a school teacher. I did not know him at that time, I did not meet him there. I met him when he was in New York on a scholarship, and heard him talk bravely and finely. I hoped that he would keep it up and be among that small and scattering vanguard which is trying to bring modern civilization to the South. But I knew it was going to cost him something.

Sat 9-25-48

Now today we can see what it is costing. Don West is a poet. He has published several little volumes; one of which is called: CLODS OF SOUTHERN EARTH, and one of the poems in that book dealt with Harlan, Kentucky. Everybody knows that Harlan, Kentucky, is one of the nastiest places on earth for workers, black or white. It is in the hands of a consciousless monopoly and anybody who thinks liberally or talks liberally would better keep away from Harlan. Now Don West had this little school in North Georgia and did some rather fine things in making the people think straight on the Negro problem. Then he became Professor of English and Southern Folk-Lore at Cglethorpe University in Atlanta. Oglethorpe is not much of a school. It used to be celebrated chiefly for wholesale distribution of honorary degrees to rich Northerners, who could not get them in any other way. It has low standards and difficulty in keeping going; and this probably was in part the reason that Don West taught at Oglethorpe.

Sat 9-25-48

CHARLIE LEWALLEN

The Cocoa Cola University in Atlanta would not have had him on a golden salver, not with the economic liberalism that he talked about. There are not many other institutions in the South who wanted him and I do not know, but I have a suspicion, that the school board at Lulu began to look at him with a certain disfavor. At any rate Don West came to Atlanta, and then a libel suit for $10,000 was brought against him. In one of the poems in his book he had used a purely fictitious name "Charley Lewallen". Somebody in Georgia who claimed to have that name sued Don West for libel.

Now there is no way of proving that this man was not lying. Georgia does not keep birth records to any extent. If a man says his náme is "Lewallen" or "Chigureus" then that is his name. So this man sues Don West. He probably has no case in any real court, but what he or his backers can do in Georgia, and indeed in most of the United States, is to keep Don West on the hotseat. He can make him spend money, as he already has for a year, fighting a case, which at best in nonsense and in its worse aspects, simply persecution of a man in Georgia who dares to be liberal. Back of this man undoubtedly is the power of the Ku Klux Klan, the power of the unspeakable Talmadge, and of other bigots.

Sat 9-25-48

If you are interested in helping white people in the South, and God knows you ought to be, send a dollar to S. T. Capps, a teacher in the Atlanta School System and buy Don West's book.

Let Not the Worst Obscure the Best

(34d)

The Constitution

Georgia and the South are going through a period which will not be ended with words or with prayer, although both will help. Nor with violence, which hurts the cause of the South.

White people and colored people in the South have a record of co-operation and mutual regard which far outweighs that of violence and dislike.

Sun 9-26-48

We think it highly important the thoughtful men and women of both races take stock and face our present dilemma, not avoid it. It must be solved within the famework of law, not violence.

The officials of Georgia, elected and nominated, must make it plain to the people—all the way from the Governor to the county legislator—that the laws of Georgia are paramount and that any action necessary in the field of racial tensions must be taken by the legally constituted officers of the law. To allow any other course is to invite anarchy which will grow like a civic cancer and will consume the South.

Atlanta Ga

We do not believe that Federal fiat

Sun 9-28-48

will solve our problem. But the South must face the fact that while we properly resist what we believe to be unconstitutional proposals, and while the problem is not one to be solved overnight either by law or good intent, we, nevertheless, have not moved fast enough to give the Negro in the South that to which he is entitled, namely, better homes, better schools, better medical care, an opportunity to work for good wages, and equality before the law. We can provide those without upsetting the pattern. The platform of the State Democratic Party includes all those things, as adopted at Macon in 1946 and as reaffirmed thereafter.

At a time when the South has seen, we believe, that it has acted too slowly in providing what the Negro long has been entitled to; at a time when the feeling of strain and ill-will is being exploited by the Communists as well as by the political machines of each party; we beg of every person in the State and the South, white and colored, to refuse to be stampeded by propaganda and false witnesses.

9-26-48

Those Southerners who produce violence, through the Ku Klux Klan or whatever other agency, are doing the South great disservice and delivering her into the hands of her enemies. Violence allows our enemies to prove their distortions.

There is no sovereign specific.

Only a fool would say the Southern pattern of separation of the races can, or should be overthrown. But only a worse fool would say that within that framework the South should not do what is right and proper and long overdue.

Sun 9-28-48

Let the great decency of the vast majority of our people, of both races, rise to dominate this period of crisis so that the worst among us shall not obscure the best.

One thing was abundantly clear at the Democratic Convention: the South is still the "Solid South." But whether or not the South will be solidly Democratic in November may not be quite so sure.

It now appears at least possible that in some Southern states the regular Democratic organizations will run electors pledged to candidates other than President Truman. In at least a part of the South, there may be a two-way race between Truman and the rump convention Democrats. In some of the upper states of the region below the Mason-Dixon line, such as Virginia, where the Republicans have on occasion polled almost 40 per cent of the vote, the three-way split might allow the Republicans to break into the Solid South for the first time in twenty years.

Our Presidential surveys over the last two years among voters in the South indicate a decline of great proportions for President Truman.

April, 1946	37.0	35.0	3.2	24.8
July, 1948	37.4	41.1	3.8	17.7

These results clearly show that a large number of voters of the South are at least flirting with the idea of bolting the Democratic party over the civil rights issue. In the year during which the President has made his recommendations on civil rights, his support among voters in the South has dwindled by more than one-third. On the other hand, Republican strength—undoubtedly benefiting from the protest—has almost doubled.

Yet it is still too early to write off the South from the Truman column next November. The vast majority of the voters in that region are accustomed to voting Democratic on election day—and it's a custom that seems hard to break. It would be more likely that the rebel Democrats stand a better chance of winning the support of the voters than does the Dewey-Warren ticket. Then, too, the Republican margin which we found existed just before the Democratic Convention took place is by no means decisive. It is possible—perhaps probable—that most of the delegates who did not walk out of the Philadelphia convention will be loyal to regular Democratic organizations and will be able to win a considerable portion of the South for Truman at the polls.

But the fact remains that the Democratic party at this stage can no longer look upon the South as a firm anchor of 115 "sure" electoral votes. It is now necessary for some one to campaign in the South to win votes. And, for the first time in two decades, it might well be worth the effort of the Republican candidates to take their campaign into the deep South.

Columbia, S.C.

The revolt of the South may cost the Democrats dearly in the November elections.

But whether or not this possible loss in the South over civil rights will be a net loss for Truman is something else again. In passing the strong civil rights plank in its platform, the Democratic party now holds out greater promise to the underprivileged minority groups of the nation than it did before. The position of the Northern big city machines and labor and liberal elements of the party has been strengthened.

Thurs. 7-22-48

We don't know yet how much the civil rights debate has helped the Democratic party cause in the big cities of the country where there is a concentration of minority peoples. We will, of course, have some indication when the results of the first post-convention survey, now in the field, are known.

But a special between-conventions survey, taken just after the Republicans met in Philadelphia, showed that the traditional Democratic strongholds in the big cities were in precarious shape, indeed.

Undoubtedly some of the Wallace appeal in the big cities stemmed from the belief of some minorities that there was little hope in a Democratic party which had to compromise with the South on civil rights. Part of the Dewey vote in these cities is probably a protest vote against Truman.

The best guess now is that the action of the Democratic convention on the civil rights issue has increased Truman's chances in the big cities but has weakened him in the South. Only time will tell which of the two is the greater political advantage. One thing is certain: the strange coalition of Southern conservatives, Northern big city machines and Northern liberals which was held together by the personality of Franklin Roosevelt sorely misses that personality now.

Task Confronting The South Outlined

Journal + Guide

Norfolk, Va.

Sat.

ATLANTA, Ga. — The South is confronted with the task of building respect for individual human personality, asserted Paul D. Williams, president of the Southern Regional Council, in the opening address of the Southwide meeting on human and civil rights held in this city on Friday, Feb. 27.

The meeting, sponsored by the council, an interracial organization, and held in the Schroeter Building of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, was attended by upwards of 400 white and colored delegates. It was called to make a study of civil rights and to seek some means of strengthening these rights throughout the South.

"We live in an hour of crisis for the South, for the nation and for the world," declared Mr. Williams. "Anyone who thinks otherwise is so wrong it is useless to waste time convincing him he is wrong."

Continuing, the council president said:

"The President of the United States, in a recent reply to the executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, wrote the following about civil rights: 'The objectives, of course, is to implement a program of justice and fairness from the ground up and that is as much a matter of education as of legislation. The program which I sent to the Congress is a minimum one from a legislative standpoint, but, unless we educate our people of all colors to live and get along together, all the laws in the world will not work, as the 14th Amendment has amply proven.'

"This need for an enlightened public opinion is one phase of the civil rights report which has been largely overlooked. In the words of the President's committee itself: 'Government action alone, whether federal, state, local, or all combined, cannot provide protection of civil rights. Everything that government does stems from and is conditioned by the state of public opinion. Civil rights will never be adequately protected until the intelligent will of the American people approves and demands that protection.'

"That is why we are here today.

"This meeting was called by the Southern Regional Council in conjunction with a number of other organizations, most of them educational or religious in character. It is not a political meeting. At the time of its planning, the country had before it the Report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, issued in November, 1947. We in the council have thought it a proper part of our function to help to build in the South a knowledge of the duty which confronts the South of strengthening our region's respect for individual human rights. We, and most of the organizations cooperating in the conduct of today's meeting, have long been engaged in one phase or another of that effort. It is an effort calling for accuracy, reasonableness and temperatures. It is an effort to do nothing less than bring about among a whole people—thirty-odd millions of southerners—an attitude of mind respectful of individual human personality, and devoted in matters public to the administration of justice, and in matters private to the enlargement of human liberty. Our conference today is a part of that long task.

"Certain things are set before you as a basis for discussion. You have the full report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights. You have a convenient short digest of that report. You have also in mimeographed form a pamphlet here called 'The Condition of Our Rights, from the Files on Civil and Human Rights in the South.' This latter will give you the background of recent history within the South on the problem of getting popular respect in local communities for everyone's rights as people and as American citizens.

"Whatever is the outcome of the controversy now in progress about legislation in this general field, the South confronts and will confront the task of building this respect for people which is our high inheritance in religion, in law, in government, and in culture. Much has been said in anger about preserving 'southern traditions.' Let us remember that the truly great southern traditions go back deep into our history. They are the traditions of Washington, Jefferson, and Mason, who had much to say about bills of rights and basic human freedoms. Those are the southern traditions worth preserving.

"Your workshops today afford us an opportunity for all of us as southerners to put our minds on this positive and constructive job. It is the job of bringing about in our home communities a habit of

Survey Shows Break in Solid South Is Possible

Thurs, 7-22-48

One thing was abundantly clear at the Democratic Convention: the South is still the solid South. But whether or not the South will be solidly Democratic in November may not be quite so sure.

It now appears at least possible that in some Southern states the regular Democratic organizations will run electors pledged to candidates other than President Truman. In at least a part of the South there may be a two-way race between Truman and the rump-convention Democrats. In some of the upper states of the region below the Mason-Dixon line, such as Virginia, where the Republicans have on occasion polled almost 40 per cent of the vote, the three-way split might allow the Republicans to break into the solid South for the first time in twenty years.

34

Our Presidential surveys over the last two years among voters in the South indicate a decline of great proportions for President Truman.

JUDY BROWN: South Was Making Progress, Now Truman Has Set Us Back

It is a tragedy that now that the North and South have gradually grown together and have come to feel again as one great country, the president and those who think with him should have thrust a wedge between us. It is nonetheless tragic because we know that it will be mended and in time perhaps forgotten. But this will not be today or tomorrow. For the fact is that not being understood we are deeply offended.

Birmingham Ala 7-21-48

THE TENOR of many of the editorials and of a number of well-known columnists' articles, while perhaps meant to be kind, are, in fact, superior and even arrogant in tone. They say we are an over-sensitive people but that is not a good word for us. We are high spirited and proud and do not relish being spoken of as the poor South, the unfortunate South—almost as though there was something inferior in our civilization. Few of the articles written by these Northern and Eastern people show intelligent understanding of our situation. They have blundered badly. The president, if one may be allowed to say so, by his tactless, stupid, unnecessary, ill-timed and ill-advised civil rights effort, made a great ~~mistake. For~~ it is a blow which will strike in more ways than one. Wed

For the fact is, as we Southerners know, the relations between the Negroes and the whites of the South are better than they have ever been—the former are no longer held down by poverty. They have the things which they have always wanted and the lack of which has made them unhappy. While educational advantages in the South are not what they should be for the Negroes, they are not for the white people either. And this is true not only of this section but of the entire country. While there is an excess of crime, surely it is no worse in its ratio to the population than crime among the white people of the North and East. 7-21-48

We are trying with every means in our power to educate our Negroes, to give them constantly better advantages and to care for their health. There are free clinics everywhere. Every day we come to understand each other better. The progress of the race here is steady and sure. Housing was never before what it is today with comforts and luxuries.

7-21-48

* O DEAR! One could wail and weep indeed, for we were getting along so nicely, and the Negro was, with the help of his white friends marching steadily forward to the destiny for which he was intended. Every day he was proving himself of better stuff more worthy of the privileges which he most desired. Few of the Negroes really wish to associate intimately with the whites. Few care to live side by side with them. In most respects they really like things as they are.

Perhaps we are off our stride in discussing this matter in our little column. Certainly we do not speak for the paper or anyone else. But even a mere average woman can see what has been done to our Democratic Party, how important friendships of long standing have been broken. How enmities have been engendered; what changes will come to pass because of the insistence on this plank when it was so obvious that it was distasteful, shall we say insulting, to the South. Of all Mr. Truman's mistakes, this was the worst. Wed

News

To the Editor of The News:

I read in The News the telephone poll which was taken on how the average Birminghamian feels about the recent political situation. I was shocked by many of the responses.

As we well know, the South has always been considered inferior by the rest of the nation. The views shown by some of those interviewed certainly did not help to prove that we are an intelligent, free-thinking people. Many said they did not like President Truman or his platform, but because they are and always have been Democrats, they could not possibly change. Birmingham

My husband's family has always voted for one party, and my family has always voted for the other. Just because my parents vote one way, I do not find it imperative that I follow them. My husband and I agree that we will carefully study each nominee and his platform and decide who we think is the best man, regardless of his political party.

I realize it is difficult to break away from the way one has been brought up, but when one is given the privilege of voting he should be able to stand alone and decide for himself. Granted the man your grandfather and father voted for was a good man, but that does not necessarily mean that that party still has an able man. No one political party is completely infallible. Ala. Wed.

The thing we all want is the most fit and able man for the position of president. What difference does it make whether he is a Democrat, Republican or dark horse?

Everyone should form his own opinion and then go to the polls in November and vote with his head, not his heart!

Walter White Cites "Real Americanism"

Believes Bolters Do Not Represent Southern Majority

NEW YORK — Describing the civil rights plank adopted on July 14 in the platform of the Democratic Party as an example of "real Americanism," Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Saturday expressed the appreciation of the half-million NAACP members of this action.

Mr. White declared the NAACP delighted at the specific inclusion of remedial legislation and other action against long-standing abuses like lynching, th poll tax, job discrimination and segregation in the Democratic platform. "We believe," Mr. White stated, "the victory of decency at Philadelphia marks the greatest turning point for the South and for America which has occurred since the Civil War. Both parties are now committed to implementation of the major recommendations of the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

NOT MAJORITY

The NAACP secretary expressed the belief that the southern delegates who walked out on the Democratic convention in protest against its firm stand on civil rights do not represent majority opinion in the South. "We have more than 700 branches in the South through which we keep closely in touch with opinion there," Mr. White pointed out. "Except in a few isolated instances, the type of sectional selfishness and bad manners exhibited at Philadelphia are not approved by church, labor, student and veterans' groups in the South. In sheer self defense, the South is going to find new political leadership to replace that which disgraced the South in fighting civil rights." 7-18-48

South May Agree on '44 Rights Plank

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP)—Rep. Rankin, Democrat, Mississipi, a leader in the Southern revolt against President Truman's Civil Rights Program, today indicated that Dixie Democrats may agree to repeating the party's 1944 plank on that issue. Wed.

In a statement issued after a conference with the President, Rankin declared that he was "not without hope that the Democratic Convention will reach a satisfactory agreement on the civil rights issue." 6-23-48

He added:

"If that convention adopts the same plank on this question that was inserted in the platform of 1944, I am assured that it will be adhered to.

"It would be far less offensive to the people of the South than the plank on this subject inserted in the Republican platform of 1944, and which I understand is being inserted in its platform in Philadelphia now."

Not In The Bag

The News
Birmingham, Ala.

To the Editor of The News:

It's not in the bag any longer. The states' righters are to be congratulated on their successful convention in Birmingham. The race now is definitely between Gov. Dewey and Gov. Thurmond for president. Truman will not, in my opinion, carry a single state in the electoral column. Gov. Thurmond will carry the electoral vote of the majority of the Southern states whereas Gov. Dewey will sweep the rest of the states.

In my humble opinion, Gov. Dewey will be our next president and inasmuch as the Republicans and Southern Democrats have lots in common, Gov. Dewey should, when he takes office in Washington next January, appoint such staunch believers in a free government to high government offices, such men as Gov. Thurmond and Gov. Wright. They should be "drafted" to serve in our free federal system of government. Fri. 7-23-48

Two Parties

The News
Birmingham, Ala.

For many years there has been intermittent talk in the South of the establishment of a genuine two-party system. This newspaper, along with a great many Southerners, has long recognized benefits that might be derived from such a system. The present confused political situation in this region, with its indications that many more Southerners than usual may vote Republican in the national election this year, again brings the two-party issue to the fore.

There are many Southerners who are disposed to be Republican yet who, for local and practical reasons, continue to vote Democratic. They desire to participate in the Democratic primaries which generally determine the occupants of local and state offices. Participants in those primaries pledge themselves to support the nominees of the party. They do not always do so in national elections, of course. Many have voted for Democratic local candidates and for Republican presidential electors. Sun 4-11-48

But not so many have voted Republican nationally as might otherwise have done so because of the realization that a Republican administration, though its general national policies might seem more satisfactory, still at this stage of things might not give as much sympathetic consideration to the South as would a Democratic administration.

* * *

This business, then, of establishing a really competitive Republican Party in the South is very complicated. How it can be done by anti-Truman Democrats who nevertheless insist on designating themselves as faithful Democrats is very hard to see. In fact, we don't think it can be done.

These anti-Truman Democrats are going to be facing some very hard choices, in all probability, if they stand by their pledges to oppose Truman under any circumstances.

Obviously the choice in the electoral college, as we have suggested so many times, may be between Truman and someone less acceptable. Southern electors may have the balance of power. It may not be a question simply of refusing to support Truman when his defeat was assured in any case. It may be a definite choice between Truman and a less acceptable Republican—Dewey, for instance, who has long championed the civil rights program which now actually prevails in New York state—with Southerners having decisive votes. The News

It may even be that in the Democratic convention Southern delegates may face a choice between Truman and a less acceptable candidate. What, for instance, would Southern anti-Truman Democrats think of the liberal Douglas, who is being increasingly mentioned for the nomination?

Do We Want A Southern Party?

The News
Birmingham, Ala.

The talk increases that if the Democrats at Philadelphia next week either nominate President Truman or adopt states' rights and civil rights planks unsatisfactory to them, then Southern Democrats will hold a convention of their own and name their own candidates.

That will be no new step for Southern Democrats. In 1860, the Democratic Party was unable to agree either on the slavery issue (states' rights) or a presidential candidate. So they split and held two conventions. The Southerners nominated John C. Breckinridge and the Northerners Stephen A. Douglas.

The result was the election of Abraham Lincoln as president. Combined, the Democrats would have won in 1860, as Breckinridge got 845,763 votes, Douglas 1,375,157, and Lincoln 1,866,352. The Democrats lost in 1860 because they could not get together. And they did not win another presidential election until 24 years later, 1884. Will a split in 1948 bring about another long party drouth? And will it be worth it? Thurs. 7-8-48

* * *

It is the history of politics in this country that no party split or third party has succeeded if it was built upon a single issue. A sectional party, no matter how lofty its motives and sincere its purposes, would remain a sectional party. It could never expect to win a national victory. Its influence would always be the limited influence of a minor party.

Just what would the Southern "bolters" expect to accomplish if they hold their projected convention in Birmingham and draw up their own platform and name their own candidates? They do not expect to win the election, of course. Do they still cling to the dream of throwing the election into Congress and stampeding a Republican majority there into accepting Eisenhower over the Republican Party's own choice?

Within the national Democratic Party, the South's votes and influence both count. Outside the party, neither would count.

Birmingham, Ala.

If the South loses the fight in the convention but sticks by the party, it will be in position to continue the battle, in the party and in Congress, for the principles it holds. If it quits the party, it will have injured its position. Thurs. 7-8-48

We might as well face the fact that the South is only a wing of the Democratic Party.

That was true in 1860. It is still true. The "Solid South" provides fewer than half the electoral votes needed for election. We should not expect to dictate to the party.

A minority, of course, always has the right in a free country to rebel. But before it does so, it should carefully consider what it would gain by rebellion, and what it would lose. In this case, the losses would be many and obvious; the gains nebulous.

South Is Not Without Support

Journal + Guide

Norfolk, Va.

Sat. 7-31-48

FREQUENTLY spokesmen for the South complain that "the North does not understand the South's race question" and wants to force upon the South the acceptance of a northern concept of the question, which, it is assumed, is contrary to the southern concept. Actually, the South has very strong support in the North on questions involving the traditional southern race issue.

Most conservatives in the North, Republicans and Democrats, believe that the South should be allowed to proceed in its own way. Failure of the Republican Party leaders to comprehend the meaning of this position to Negroes gradually lost that party this vote in the big cities of the North, which received about a million migrants in the exodus of Negroes from the South between 1920 and 1940.

Northern capital is heavily invested in southern industries. Especially is this true of the textile, utilities and transportation industries. These investors have felt that their capital outlays were safer when the southern states have had their way about labor and other economic and social conditions in the region. Some have felt it was to their interest to be as aloof as possible toward the Negro, and to go along with the region's politics. In some cases certain political characters like the late GENE TALMADGE of Georgia were financed by the absentee financial interests, which according to current reports, are financing young HERMAN TALMADGE in his present unholy crusade.

A good many Democratic and Republican writers in the North who wield considerable influence have taken sides with the southern dissenters on the civil rights proposals. Mr. RAYMOND MOLEY, once a ROOSEVELT follower, thinks the TRUMAN administration blundered badly in taking a stand on the civil rights issue. "Instead of consulting southern leaders," he says "and soliciting their help in achieving more equality through cooperative action with the states, TRUMAN hurled the book at Congress."

Mr. DAVID LAWRENCE, Republican stalwart, thinks that, "the problems of race antagonism . . . must be solved by evolution—by appealing to the sense of fair play and the spiritual side of human beings, who must come to know that all of us are God's creatures and that no discrimination on the basis of race or color or creed can be justified by anyone believing in the Christian philosophy."

The trouble with Mr. MOLEY's prescription is that for eighty years it has been tried but has failed to work. It did not work under the late President WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, who applied it faithfully. Nor did it work under Mr. HARDING, Mr. COOLIDGE and Mr. HOOVER, who tried it. It failed to work under FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT, who despite his progressivism, carried the South along with him. In eighty years the South has refused to give its Negro citizens a single civil right or civil liberty of its own accord. Such limited civil rights or liberties as Negroes enjoy have come through annulment by the courts of statutes adopted by the southern states with the specific purpose in view of denying Negroes the full benefits of the Bill of Rights and the 14th and 15th amendments.

Sat. 7-31-48

Mr. LAWRENCE expresses beautiful sentiments which imply that the Christian philosophy can be brought to bear upon the problems of the races with some salutary results. That is a reasonable expectation. The heart of his remedy is the churches. On the question of slavery, the churches split into northern and southern bodies, the latter taking the side of slavery in the 1860's. As far as is ascertainable the southern churches, while accepting the abolition of slavery as a fact and as desirable have rejected the Christian philosophy whenever it came to matters of "race and color."

Journal and Guide

The South is by no means alone in its advocacy of the right to deal with the race problem in its own way. The South has plenty of sympathizers in the North. Meanwhile the cause of human rights is gaining more and more advocates in the North and South. Never before were so many Americans in disagreement with the wishful thinkers who are waiting for nature to solve the problems of humanity.

The South's Influence

News-

Birmingham News

Birmingham Ala.

To the Editor of The News:

Your editorial entitled "Do We Want a Southern Party?" misses the point entirely.

What, we should ask ourselves, is the South ever going to become of age politically?

The same paper that carried your editorial carried an account of the nauseating and disgusting spectacle that took place in Philadelphia when the Negro, Walter White, and other Negro political leaders bearded the pre-convention platform committee in their den and proceeded to lay down the law to the national Democratic Party. That committee sat there and heard leading Southern Democrats denounced as bigots and stigmatized as conservatives without manifesting any resentment whatever. Had a group of Southerners appeared before the committee and denounced leading Northern Democrats as bigots and conservatives, their action would have been resented and resentment would have been manifested on the occasion. Instead of that, the South is expected to take these insults lying down, and yet you tell your readers "within the national Democratic Party the South's votes and influence both count. Outside the party neither would count."

7-13-48

The trouble is that your statement is not supported by the facts. We have no influence in the national Democratic Party, not enough influence to cause resentment at this maligning of Southern leaders. It does not matter what anybody says about us. It is okeh by the North. Nearly 50 per cent of the electoral vote necessary to elect a president is in the South. That vote can be delivered with clocklike regularity for the Democratic Party if that party stands for the decent things in life. We do not have to campaign for that electoral vote.

Tue. 7-13-48

It does not cost the Democratic Party any money to get those votes. Instead we send money to doubtful territory and yet we are expected to stand by and let the tail wag the dog and the Northern and Eastern Democrats, so called, cater to the basest element in society and destroy our way of life and repudiate our most cherished traditions, all because The News says that we have some influence and votes in the Democratic Party.

We already have a Southern party in Alabama and all the other Southern states. The only question before us is whether or not we will support a national organization that is not in harmony with our way of thinking. If we will keep the Democratic Party in the state intact and absolutely independent in national affairs, a repetition of the disgusting spectacle that occurred in Philadelphia, as reported in your paper, will not be repeated.

Money Willed To Help North And South Relations

Journal + Guide

Norfolk, Va.

Sat. 8-7-48

By Associated Negro Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — A n undetermined sum was left for the establishment of a fund which would work for better relations between the North and the South by a wealthy Boston lawyer, it was revealed here this week when the will of Edgar J. Rich was filed in the Middlesex County Probate Court.

Sat.

Rich, who died at the age of 83 July 17, named this fund the Lincoln and Lee trust fund for the Winchester Public Library to "bring about better relations better the North and South."

8-7-48

His will left $100,000 in specific bequests to friends and relatives and the rest of the estate to the Lincoln and Lee fund. The value of the latter fund will not be determined until the estate has been evaluated.

A native of Winchester, Rich had specialized in the study of the history of the Civil War and the Reconstruction period in American history.

Journal + Guide

Income from this fund, he said, would buy "books, pamphlets, pictures and mementos relating to Abraham Lincoln and Robert E. Lee, including books relating to the Civil War and the causes leading to it, and books relating to the Reconstruction period, in the hope that by the lives of these great Americans there may come about a better understanding between North, and South."

Norfolk, Va.

Sat.

Rich's will also provided that in case the fund could not be spent "wisely" for the purposes indicated, part of it may be used to pay for lectures on Lincoln and Lee and to give prizes to pupils of Winchester High for the best essays on these men.

The South Inherits Control

Atlanta, Ga. Thurs, 7-15-48

PHILADELPHIA—Over the still live and kicking frame of Harry Truman the fight started at the Philadelphia convention for control of the Democratic Party—and it will go on henceforth. The President, still the titular leader of the party though somewhat scarred, must carry it through the campaign. If he loses, he probably will not have too much influence in the continuing fight for party control. If by some outside chance he should win, he would have more to say.

In the case of such temporary bankruptcy as that in which the party would find itself in defeat, if it does not already exist to a considerable degree, it is usual that the holder of the most notes takes over. On that theory, it seems that the Southern conservative leaders, who must be distinguished always from the Southern people as a whole, would assume control temporarily, as they always have in such contingencies in the past.

They hold the most notes. They control States which, under ordinary circumstances, always can be counted upon to go Democratic by party label, and thus provide a nucleus for victory, even though Franklin D. Roosevelt would have won every one of his four victories without a single Southern State. But those were unusual conditions in unusual times and cannot be considered the norm.

Furthermore, the South controls key minority posts in Congress because of the one-party system that gives them full benefit of the seniority system, and it is there, in Congress, between times, when the party is out of power, that not only the record but the decisions on leadership and policy are made.

President Truman got less than a draw in his battle at the convention with Southern-wing leaders. While his renomination was not successfully challenged, nasty as the Southerners tried to make it for him, that is about all he got out of the convention.

He did not get the forthright civil rights plank he wanted in the platform. He did not get as running mate a representative of the younger, progressive element. While his choice, Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court, refused to enter the contest, the President nevertheless would have had plenty of trouble getting him nominated, not only because of almost solid opposition in the South, but formidable resistance elsewhere. Thurs.

A group of convention leaders, including Senators, took both of these matters out of the President's hands. They compromised the civil rights program to appease the South and dictated the selection of Sen. Alben W. Barkley, the 71-year-old party warhorse, as vice presidential nominee, the latter also designed as a peace overture to the South, though not too graciously received.

President Truman's defiance of the South is most commendable and very courageous and is a highlight of this convention that probably will become historic. But it cannot end with that. The Southern leadership that he so bravely flaunted cannot be dismissed airily and forgotten, as some are suggesting. 7-15-48

Rather, for the long-range future of the party, they must be constantly kept in mind as constituting the major problem for anyone who wants to make the Democratic Party a progressive party and, for that, to tap the reservoir of progressivism in the South which is more potent than many people suppose. For this it is necessary to appeal to the people of the South over these leaders who so misrepresent so many of them so often, and some of President Truman's advisers recognize the wisdom of such a course.

The Constitution

It is necessary to arouse the people to raise up new and progressive leaders. But for the people to be able to do that, it is necessary that they participate in politics more widely. This will require some sort of civil rights program to remove the shackles of disfranchisement in poll taxes and "white" primary dodges, as well as racial discriminations. There Congress comes in if States themselves cannot be induced to shake off these fetters. This brings into the picture Republicans and progressive Democrats from outside the South. As President Truman himself has seen so plainly, a civil rights program is very essential to a progressive Democratic Party. Atlanta, Ga.

How hard it is to raise up new leaders in the South under present conditions is illustrated by recent events, including some at this convention. There is, for example, the case of Sen. Claude Pepper, of Florida, who professes to be a progressive Southern Democrat. He indulged here in day dreams, chasing around for a candidate to "stop Truman" and finally ended up, like Narcissus, by looking in a mirror, being charmed by what he saw, and printing his own name at the bottom of posters of "The People's Candidate," originally made for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Thurs. 7-15-48

There are the cases of Sens. Lister Hill and John Sparkman, of Alabama, who have good records on economic issues. But both took fright at the civil rights program, joined the anti-Truman movement, and thereby raced right back into the sheltering arms of big interests in their States, which always had fought them and which use what is commonly called "the nigger issue" to work their purposes.

Rebuilding the Democratic Party will be a slow and painful process, perhaps. It will require new leadership all around, as well as recognition of the younger generation. But it should not overlook the South. 7-15-48

ixiecrats 'Hold Fire' Under Negro's Attack

Atlanta Constitution

Fri. 7-9-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 8—(AP)—Southern Democrats held their fire today as a Negro leader called them "bigots" and demanded that President Truman's civil rights program be written into the 1948 Democratic Platform.

The Southerners not only kept quiet but one of them predicted that a compromise will be reached in the battle over racial issues which has started a small war within the Democratic Party.

Sen. Hoey, of North Carolina, told a reporter:

"I am confident that we can reach an agreement on civil rights that will be satisfactory to President Truman and probably satisfactory to the South. We do not, however, expect to satisfy the extreme elements of either end."

Walter White, of New York, Executive Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the Democratic Platform Drafting Committee: 7-9-48

"The Democratic Party has been too much dominated by those who have attained and held power through disfranchisement, lynching and racial discrimination. The day of reckoning has come when the Democratic Party must decide whether it is going to permit bigots to dictate its philosophy."

The CIO also urged that the Truman program be adopted—including laws to ban poll taxes, lynching and racial discrimination in hiring. This is the program the Southern Democrat leaders don't like.

The CIO asked the Democrats to adopt a "Roosevelt platform." And the CIO spokesman, Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey, rapped the '48 Republican platform as "one of deceit, designed to fool the people." He said there is nothing in the GOP platform that attracts the interest of labor.

The CIO proposals included repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor act, price controls, broader social security, Federal housing, Federal aid to education, health insurance, an excess profits tax and other measures.

Joseph A. Beirne, President of the Communications Workers of America, also asked for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and proposed a lot of other planks. But unlike the CIO he said nothing about lynching, poll taxes and fair employment practices.

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, a Negro religious leader from New York, appeared with Walter White. They said they spoke for 21 national Negro organizations with 6,000,000 members.

The handful of Southerners on the committee said not a word. It was a surprising contrast with the stormy reception White and Tobias got when they testified before a Republican platform committee here last month.

Progressives Hit Snag in Georgia

The Constitution

Wed 9-22-48

Atlanta Ga

The Henry Wallace group in Georgia may have a shock coming to it when and if it comes into the Secretary of State's office with petitions bearing thousands of names by Oct. 2. Approximately 60,000 names of registered voters in Georgia are required on a petition to get Wallace's name on the ballot—and the names of Larkin Marshall, Macon Negro running for the Senate, and James Barfoot, a former University of Georgia teacher, running for Governor.

Disorders have broken out in Atlanta when Wallace workers allegedly blocked streets and virtually tugged at the coats of pedestrians, insisting that they sign the petition. Many persons have said they signed the petition under misrepresentation when the Wallaceites merely told them: "This is a petition to cut the cost of living."

Now comes Secretary of State Ben Fortson with the warning that he isn't going to accept a jumble of thousands of names on a petition on the theory that they represent 5 percent of Georgia's registered voters.

"The burden is on the petitioners to show that the names on the petition are bona fide registered voters," Fortson warned. "In my opinion, the only sure way to determine that they are registered voters would be for those signing from each county to have their petition attested to by the tax commissioner or clerk of the Supreme Court that they are registered voters. I don't think a petition presented with a jumble of names without evidence they are registered voters would serve as a proper document to enable any candidate to get his name on the general election ballot."

The Georgia law requires a person to obtain signatures of 5 percent of the voters if he was not a member of a party polling 5 percent of the votes cast in the past election. This law was passed at the request of the late Secretary of State John B. Wilson for the purpose of eliminating from the Georgia ballot the Communist Party, Socialist Party and some individual candidates who perennially cluttered up the ballot without a chance of carrying a county. In effect, however, it also eliminated the Republican Party from State races and made opposition to the Democratic Party impossible without a petition. The constitutionality of this law has been protested in speeches and articles, but not in court.

Wed 9-22-48

There has been talk of the 1949 Legislature repealing this act. However, the activities of the Henry Wallace group are putting a damper on this move.

It may or may not be of any political significance, but 10 of the 29 counties which Thompson carried in the gubernatorial primary had in them State parks—parks on which the State had spent money improving.

The race was close in four more counties in which parks were located.

When Jim Gillis, Sr., of Soperton, resumes the post of State Highway Director—which he held under a Rivers administration and during the 67 days Herman Talmadge claimed the office of Governor last year—he will have a close supporter in the House. His son, Hugh, is the newly nominated Representative from Treutlin County. Hugh's older brother, Jim, Jr., formerly was in the Senate.

Have The Liberals Surrendered?

Journal & Guide

Sat 8-21-48

Norfolk Va

HAS the organized liberal movement in the Southland surrendered? At times the silence of those who have fighted in movements for improvement of conditions in the South makes one, even with the friendliest of regard, wonder. We refer specifically to the conferences culminating with the organization in 1943 of the Southern Regional Council as successor to the Southern Commission on Interracial Cooperation.

After the notable Durham Conference of southern Negroes on Oct. 20, 1942, a statesmanlike and far-reaching manifesto was issued as "A Basis for Interracial Cooperation and Development in the South." Southern white men and women could not ignore that conference nor the firm and sane program drafted there, so that a second conference was held at Atlanta, with spokesmen for the majority race participating. Their reply, known as the Atlanta Statement, was signed by more than three hundred southern white people on April 8, 1943.

Out of these two conferences grew a third, bi-racial in character and composed of delegated individuals. From it came the Richmond Statement of June 16, 1943, drafted in collaboration by white and Negro delegates from the Durham and Atlanta conferences.

While the Southern Regional Council, which grew out of these three conferences, is doing a yeoman job in seeking to hold in check the most adverse characteristics of southern demagoguery, it at times seems to be waging a losing campaign.

These were liberal or progressive men and women. If ever their voices were needed to be raised in defense of decencey, humanity, and democracy this is the time to do so. GEORGE S. MITCHELL, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, wired a statement to the Southern Governors Conference held in Florida early in February, and submitted it to two of the three wire news services. Either they failed to distribute that important statement on an issue of national interest or the southern daily press, with rare unanimity, suppressed it—instead however, playing up every unfavorable facet of the civil rights issue that was available.

There are admittedly fair-minded editors on the South's daily press, but the chiefs of the news desk are far less objective in their selection, display, and treatment of news of a racial or interracial character. This is the statement sent to the southern governors by MR. MITCHELL:

"Surely the statesmanlike thing for the South to do in the civil rights controversy is to declare a nhonest intention to provide speedily the fundamental civil rights which the nation and the world expect from us. These include protection from physical violence, the right to citizenship (including service on juries), equality of opportunity in education, health, housing, and travel, and persistent efforts to get fair play in private employment.

"Should also include access to state and local administrative employment in at least the degree of fairness shown in this regard by southern offices of federal agencies.

"If the governors speak responsibly to this effect the nation will gladly let the South implement these rights itself. More, the nation will help with funds. That way lies sound progress, the other nothing but bitterness. We of all peoples understand the less of history on this sort of thing. Responsible citizenship can do no less than this.

Similarly, the white press gave scant consideration to a statement (published elsewhere in this edition of the Journal and Guide) issued by the board of directors of the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association. This statement endorsed the civil rights proposals of the Administration and the civil rights measures now before Congress, and deplored the irresponsible words and actions of certain governors and legislators, some of them "northerners," following President TRUMAN's message to Congress on civil rights—not only for Negroes but for others short-changed on them.

In truth, then, have the liberals surrendered?

Fascist Trends in the South

Atlanta, Georgia

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, who was handpicked as a Presidential candidate after several others had thrust aside the crown, is now using his temporary prominence in an effort to improve his chances as a reputed candidate for the upper house of Congress against Sen. Johnson. And in his addresses, he accuses almost everyone who disagrees with the Dixiecrat point of view as being tinged with the Communist brush.

The facts are, however, that it is the Dixiecrats themselves who are guilty of resorting to totalitarian methods. This was never more blatantly indicated than in the recent action of the Louisiana Central Committee in ruthlessly removing the names of Truman and Barkley from the Democratic ticket and in substituting the names of Thurmond and Wright as nominees of the Democratic Party. This was done with utter disregard for the expressed wishes of the people.

Wed 10-6-48

'The Party'

The Democrats of Louisiana were lawfully represented at the Democratic National Convention. They participated in its proceedings and did not walk out as the Mississippi and part of the Alabama delegation did when the South failed to get a States' rights plank written into the platform. It was assumed, therefore, that they accepted the verdict of the majority in good faith according to traditional Democratic procedure.

But now we find the successors of Huey Long throwing the Democratic procedure into the discard and setting up the claim that they are the Democratic Party in Louisiana, after the fashion of Louis XIV of France, who said, "I am the State!" Moreover, we now find the Democratic Executive Committee of Tennessee, the State of Boss Crump, with somewhat of equal ruthlessness removing the names of anti-Truman electors from the Nov. 2 ballot in retaliation.

Started in Alabama

This callous procedure was started here in Alabama when the Chairman of the State Committee used the common funds of the Committee to help elect himself and his Dixiecrat sympathizers over the opposition of ex-Gov. Sparks and others who had contributed equally to the election funds.

The Anniston Star has never been very much interested in

Harry Truman as a man. The editor of this paper was in London when his nomination was maneuvered by many of the same persons who are opposing him so vigorously today. The prospect of his becoming President was greeted with great gloom by conservatives and liberals alike throughout the United Kingdom. But today he is arrayed against the selfish interests who thought they could control him, and we are interested in him as representative of the Democratic Party.

Because of our interest in Democracy as the party of the people, we have been alarmed at some of the appointments Mr. Truman has made and some of the associates he has cultivated. His championship of Ed Pauley, who is a representative of Tidelands oil interests, now so concerned with the Dixiecrat movement, is a case in point. For if private monopoly gains control of that essential resource we would be immeasurably handicapped in the event of another war.

Party Is Bigger

But the Democratic Party is bigger than any one man, and that fact should be emphasized when the Dixiecrats and the Republicans center their fire on the man who temporarily occupies the White House. It is the Party that has successfully led the fight against totalitarianism in two great world wars, and hence it is that we become greatly alarmed when we see a group of men who call themselves Democrats walk out of deliberative assemblies every time they fail to enforce their composite will, as the Dixiecrats did at Philadelphia and more recently in Texas.

But big money is involved in American politics today, and selfish interests do not quibble over the means they employ to attain their ends.

Mer-11-6-48

Here in Alabama we had thought the late B. B. Comer had ended corporation rule in the affairs of our State for all time; we thought that Teddy Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and FDR had decided the issue nationally. But monopoly never sleeps, and existing trends toward totalitarianism, viewed in the light of the aftermath of another world war, lead us to fear that some man on horseback may crucify American democracy and set up in its stead a corporate state after the pattern of Mussolini's Italy.

In view of such a national tragedy it is time for us to cease our divisiveness and stick together, all for one and one for all in defense of our country and its traditions.

Is the South Being Unreasonable?

The Constitution Mon 8-9-48

The writer, Democratic Representative from Arkansas, is completing his third term in the House of Representatives. A resident of Little Rock, Ark., he is a graduate of the University of Arkansas and of George Washington University Law School. Congressman Hays was formerly Assistant Attorney General of Arkansas, a Democratic National Committeeman and, from 1936 to 1942, he held administrative posts in the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Atlanta Ga

WASHINGTON—The respectable and thoughtful individual in the South is experiencing two equally authentic reactions to the controversy over civil rights. One day he says, "Why can't these agitators leave the race problem alone? I'll vote Dixiecrat if this doesn't stop." The next day, he weighs the intemperance of some of the "bolters" and the dangers of a Splinter Party and is depressed by that development.

He knows that the "States' Righters" won't get far. Following strictly the constitutional pattern, proponents of civil rights still can give us plenty of grief. Our reliance must be placed on the sense of justice of the American people and their political representatives.

Fourteen years ago a speech in a Senate debate over civil rights ended with these words "Do not enact this legislation. It will awaken the sleeping monster that brought on the Civil War."

It was the plea not of a Southerner but of one completely above suspicion on race matters and firmly attached to the liberal tradition—the late great George Norris, of Nebraska.

We of the South are quick to disavow a revival of issues provoking disunion (the occasional fears of our Northern friends on this score amuse us) but the Truman civil rights proposal goes deeply into the basic assumptions and fixed ways of life upon which our social stability rests. We will have none of it.

The Constitution

... apply a harsh judgment upon us for repudiating the Truman program in its totality. We are not unreasonable. When we threaten to be unreasonable, our better natures always become assertive and then we seek a basis for a compromise.

The dramatics at the Democratic Convention this year overshadowed the significant fact that every Southern member of the platform committee okayed the compromise civil rights plank. We do not oppose civil rights. We do oppose mixing civil rights with certain social aspirations, even legitimate ones, which are not subject to realization by legal penalties.

A fact that many of our critics overlook is that since Reconstruction most Southern lawyers have been sensivtive to basic rights of Negro citizens and have sought, often without compensation, to protect them in court actions against invasion of the rights of person and property. Much remains to be done toward the grand ideal of equality before the law, but progress is being made. Every sensible observer knows that Federal legislation would retard rather than help this development.

Mon 8-9-48

What about the health of Negroes? I know that any suggestion related to the physical well-being of this race often is dismissed by those who are absorbed in political controversy. But my point is that progress is being made in attitudes, and through better health practices both races are demonstrating how to attack a common enemy. Tremendous progress is being made because the intelligent leadership of the South knows that the penalty for non-cooperation is a high mortality rate.

What about education? In Arkansas, we are comparatively poor in economic resources. We have at all times found it difficult to maintain minimum school standards for white children. Yet we have made significant strides toward providing equal facilities for Negroes.

In Arkansas we have provided an increase of $5,500,000 for each of the next two years to improve Negro schools. This will mean better buildings and transportation and more and better teachers. There is now in effect a planned program to equalize the two school systems. This cannot be done overnight but shortly, in those towns having an accredited high school for white students, there will be an accredited high school for Negroes.

One of my Negro friends in Mississippi wrote me: "Negro education has too long been inadequate and insufficient. I believe that our people are now willing and anxious to do something to improve educational opportunities for Negroes; but neither group (white or black) is willing to wreck the white standard in order to raise the Negro standard immediately. If Mississippi is required to equalize educational opportunities within its own resources, it will mean the lowering of the inadequate standards for whites."

Atlanta Ga.

That is why we of the South have fought consistently for Federal aid to education.

In the field of higher education, I admit that we have, to some extent, lagged in our obligations. But something has been done. Southern Governors made an outstanding contribution to the solution of this problem in proposing a system of regional universities offering professional and graduate study. The States needed Congressional authority to enter into the necessary interstate compacts, yet the bill failed of Congressional approval. Thus, the Federal Government blocked one of the region's self-initiated programs.

In the economic field, also, new attitudes are developing. We need an enlightened Negro citizenship. As his zeal for education is realized, the Negro can contribute more toward supporting community, State and National institutions. His influence is felt far outside strictly racial matters: progress among Negroes will be reflected in the general progress of the section.

Despite the attitude of some of our critics, we are not fighting a defensive rear-guard battle in opposing these proposed Federal programs. We are insisting on the right, reserved to us under the Federal Constitution, to make those far-reaching decisions upon which the happiness of both races depends.

South Has Own 'Iron Curtain,' McGill Declares

Montgomery Ala

LOUISVILLE, KY., Oct. 20—(AP)—The South has its own "iron curtain," Ralph McGill, Atlanta newspaper editor, said in an address here today.

Speaking before the first day's session of the Southeastern Library Association convention, McGill said:

348

"We have our own iron curtain in the South, and it's lack of information and education. Even radio hasn't become the mass educational medium it should."

Referring to the Ku Klux Klan, McGill called the organization a "sucker trap to enrich its promoters and a refuge for Fascist type sadists." The speaker said the Klan carries little weight in the South.

Adv. 10-21-48

"In Georgia," he said, "we feel like getting down on our knees and thanking God that old Doc Sam Green is the imperial wizard." He said Green wouldn't "make it a dangerous thing."

Miss Helen Harris of Knoxville said the worst library service in the nation is found in the Southeast and that Mississippi and Kentucky are among the lowest in the group.

The observations came from a two-year survey of library services over the nation.

Let the South End Its Political Slavery

The Constitution – Mon 11-1-48

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following was written as a Letter to the Editor by W. A. Thompson, of Atlanta. The editors feel that the views expressed are so pertinent to the present political situation as to warrant publication in full.

Atlanta, Ga

Editor Constitution: How long will we people of the South continue to worship the fetish that regardless of merits of issues and fitness of candidates, we must vote the Democratic ticket in national elections merely because such was the habit of our fathers and grandfathers?

Ever since the War Between the States the South has been treated as a neglected stepchild simply because Northern Democrats always knew in advance that they had us in the bag and would keep us, and the Republicans knew that they didn't have us and couldn't get us even if they tried. So, for over three-quarters of a century the leaders of both parties have quadrennially written us off ab initio, knowing that we would vote the Democratic ticket even if the devil himself were its candidate and the only plank in his platform called for the hanging of every man residing south of the Mason and Dixon line.

All that the Northern Democrats have had to do to get us into the bag was to hold their convention, pick a candidate who was to their liking and then stand off and watch us take the bait. And we have always swallowed it, hook, line and sinker. I am a son of a Confederate veteran, have been a Georgia voter all my adult life, and am about as guilty as any of the rest of us. But not so from here on out. Hereafter I vote for the man and what he stands for.

But I thoroughly agree with you, Mr. Editor, on your recent editorial, "The South at the Crossroads," which was further emphasized in your radio address of last Monday evening on the obvious evils and danger of any but the two-party system. Even if J. Strom Thurmond should win enough electoral votes to throw the election of a President into the House of Representatives, he could not possibly win in that forum because there are enough States represented in that body by Republicans to elect Dewey on the first ballot, if they all so voted. But suppose a few of them didn't so vote. There are still enough brainy and courageous men in the House—Republicans and Democrats—who would see to it that Thurmond is defeated because they know that he just doesn't have the stature and experience to fit him for successfully steering this nation through the turbulent and dangerous diplomatic waters that even now threaten to engulf us. So, a vote for Thurmond on Nov. 2 is a vote for Dewey in any event.

If it had been a debatable question as to whether the South would be carried by the Democrats or by the Republicans in the approaching election, no amount of persuasion could have induced Mr. Truman to even whisper anything about civil rights, which now appears as the throbbing issue in the South, and certainly no spokesman for the Republican Party would have dared whisper about it, for it would have meant certain defeat for whichever party committed the indiscretion. But I am not so much concerned about that particular issue as I am about our past stupidity in overlooking the vast benefits that would be right now flowing to our section of the nation if about half of us had joined up with the Republican Party years ago, for by having done so the South would today have an active and influential part in shaping the policies of both of the parties and all of us would feel once more that we are a real part of the United States of America.

Mon 11-1-48

And why wouldn't this be a good time to start while we have a good face-saving issue? If Mr. Dewey should win the election by virtue of having carried the South, or any substantial part of it, he and the Republican Party would naturally want to keep us, and the Northern Demcrats would just as naturally want to win us back four years hence. Then for the next four years both parties would be falling all over each other in their efforts to see which could do the most for us.

For nearly a century the campaign battles between the Republicans and Northern Democrats have all been waged on ground so far removed that we hardly knew that the battles were in progress. Who in the South ever saw on our soil a presidential candidate of either of the major parties, or heard one make a campaign speech—until radio came along and assisted us in eavesdropping on what was going on? But if Mr. Dewey should become the winner by virtue of help from the South, then there will be so much campaigning in this area four years hence that we will once again realize that we are really and truly a great part of so great a nation.

I shall vote for Mr. Dewey.

A Forward-Looking Southerner

Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON—Things move by fits and starts in this world. Now forward a little, now backward, and vice versa. A backward step here is often offset by a forward step there. Typical of the forward step is what is going on in the State of Arkansas in the Deep South. It was brought to national attention again recently by the visit here of the young, newly elected Governor, Sidney S. McMath, and a group of his young associates, many of them war veterans like himself, who helped him to his election and will occupy key posts in his young men's administration which begins with his inauguration Jan. 11.

Mon 12-27-48

The Governor-elect, who had a distinguished war record with the Marines and in the gruelling Pacific campaign from island to island, has likewise proved his mettle on the political battlefield. He attracted wide notice with a clean-up of rackets as Mayor of Hot Springs, a resort city, and he and his vigorous young lieutenants broke up a poll-tax racket to defeat the machine and win his election as Governor. It was the old device familiar in Southern politics where bosses buy up poll tax receipts by the thousands and vote lists of names en bloc. This vote is often the balance of power.

Atlanta Georgia

The victory was along a wide front, for the McMath group enlisted young men of like mind all over the State to run for the Legislature. As a result, the new Governor will have a Legislature sympathetic with his program. Their success shows what a political group can accomplish if it has ideas, ideals and energy and gets right down to the precinct level with an organization to do a job.

It was heartening to sit around with the young men and listen to them talk about their aims—new schools, new roads, expansion of public power projects to utilize the power potential of the State's many rivers, the greatest power potential of any State in the union.

An objective in the political field is elimination of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting. Arkansas is one of seven Southern States that still has this restriction. It is imbedded in the State Constitution. The new Governor will ask the Legislature to start the protracted process of repeal by passage of a resolution to submit the issue to the voters.

While his opponents exploited the racial issue in their campaign against him, he refused to use it, saying flatly that the Negro was not an issue in the campaign. That is not an easy position to take in the South.

The Arkansas adventure offers a hopeful offset to what is going on in other Southern States. In Georgia Gov. Herman Talmadge is taking a backward step. He is seeking to deprive the Negroes of suffrage through an educational test device which can be distorted, as it has been in Alabama and other Southern States, to stop Negroes from voting. In South Carolina a move is under way to upset court decisions upholding the right of Negroes to vote in the Democratic primary.

Among other reasons, the new Arkansas Governor and his young men came here, frankly, to find out what Federal funds are available to their State for various purposes, such as schools and roads and public health. One of them remarked, with a grin, that they had discovered the State was entitled to three or four millions more than they knew. They deployed all over the city in their mission.

Mon 12-27-48

There was a little political missionary work done while they were here, too, designed both for their interest and for that of President Truman and the Democratic Party nationally. The President received the Governor-elect at the White House and he also dropped in at a reception of the Arkansas Society in honor of Mr. McMath and his associates.

Arkansas gave the President the largest vote proportionately of any Southern State. It is the President's desire to encourage progressive Democratic forces in the South, and Arkansas is a good symbol now with its incoming administration. The President hopes to see the Democratic Party in the South become, in time, a real progressive party which can root out such influences as those represented by the Dixiecrats. He owes the Dixiecrats nothing. He defied them, and they were shaken loose by his victory. His interests lie elsewhere, and so do those of the Democratic Party nationally.

The South in Struggle

Sun 10-31-48

TUESDAY IS THE DAY. Not only one of the most fateful election days in the history of our country and of the world, but in a very particular way a great historic day in the life of the South.

Of course, the people of the South are bound up with the struggle for war or peace, fascism or democracy—the key issues in this election. But also the South is fighting to break through the bonds of semi-feudal exploitation and win some of the democratic rights that are enjoyed now in the rest of the country.

Above all, Tuesday's election in the South marks a milestone in the struggle for the liberation of the oppressed Negro people in the South.

In Tuesday's election probably 800,000 Negro southerners will be eligible to vote as registered voters. Many will be kept away from the polls by terror and intimidation—many more will vote in spite of such intimidation. This in itself will make Tuesday's election one of the most important in the South since Reconstruction.

New York N.Y.

TO THOSE WHO, like the Communists, take a long view of the election, the new Progressive Party's initial bow to southern voters Tuesday will mark the beginning of a new day in southern politics.

Since Reconstruction the South has been ruled by a one-party dictatorship. The Democratic Party in the South has been controlled throughout this time by the Wall Street-landlord combination and it has been the "white supremacy" party.

Only once before was there a serious challenge to this dictatorship. This was at the turn of the century when the Populist Party made rapid gains in the South and even won state power in North Carolina. At first, this party united, at least to a degree, Negro and white, but it did not consistently fight to liberate the Negro people. It failed. And this failure underlined a truth that the Communist Party has been hammering on ceaselessly since it was organized. That truth is that no political movement can achieve anything progressive in the South unless it fights for the liberation of the Negro people.

★

THE PROGRESSIVE PARTY has made a good start in fighting on the question of full rights for the Negro people. It has nominated Negro candidates for office in the South and it has begun the fight for full voting rights for the Negro people and against the anti-Negro terror.

Thus at a time when the forces of the people in the South are stirring into action, there arises a political weapon which is indispensable for the people's struggle. The Negro people in the South are surging forward more militantly than at any time since Reconstruction.

Many sections of the white population are in motion. White students are militantly undertaking struggles with the Negro people against Jimcrow in higher education. The white workers, with all their backward prejudices, are moving through their trade unions and have learned the first lessons of Negro-white unity. Small white farmers in several states are joining the Farmers Union, alongside Negro farmers and are making their demands heard.

The solid South is cracking wide open. The desperate move of reaction to use the Dixiecrat movement to again solidify the South through anti-Negro prejudice is doomed to failure, regardless of what temporary successes it might achieve at one place or another.

Sun 10-31-48

INTO THIS POLITICAL flux is thrust the new Progressive Party. Already it is acting as a pole attracting sections of all the various people's tides. This process will continue. That is why the fact of the organized Progressive Party in the South is the most important aspect of the 1948 elections.

This is not to minimize the importance of a maximum vote on Nov. 2. Just the opposite. Future success in building this party will depend greatly on the size of the vote in the various states.

Anyone would be naive to think that the Progressive Party will be built in the South without facing the most vicious opposition and attack. The greatest protection against future attack on this party is a large vote on Nov. 2.

The Ku Klux Klan politicians will hesitate to open up with fascist attacks on the new party as it moves ahead in the future if the Nov. 2 elections have proved that thousands of voters in each state support the Progressive Party.

There are some who say that after the elections they will help build the Progressive Party, but that on Nov. 2 they don't want to waste their vote, so they'll cast it for Truman.

We know the whole political argument against this reasoning, but I want to close this column with just one aspect of the case for voting Progressive on next Tuesday. A vote for the Progressive Party now is the best way to guarantee the building of that party tomorrow.

Senator Olin Johnson Furnishes Nation's Press A Perfect Symbol Of His Southland

Journal Guide

By ARTHUR P. DAVIS

646

THE WIDELY publicized picture of Senator Olin Johnston's "empty table" at the recent Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner here in Washington struck me as being unconsciously symbolic.

The South Carolina Senator, of course, was trying to broadcast and dramatize the South's antagonism to Truman's civil rights proposals. This he did very effectively, but he also did much more. Unwittingly he furnished to the national press a perfect symbol of his native Southland.

Sat 3-6-48

In all the modern world, there is no region that is more "empty" than the South. Morally and spiritually empty, empty of genuine culture, of Christianity and of even ordinary human decency, it is one of the most depressing wastelands in our modern society. And I can think of no better symbol for it than an empty table placed, as was Senator Johnston's, in the midst of numerous other tables around which sat normal human beings, enjoying the company of all their fellowmen.

* * * *

THE SOUTH HAS ALWAYS BEEN THE PROBLEM CHILD of our nation—a vicious but imbecilic child in a family of normal children. We are ashamed of the unfortunate brat, and we hide her away from the public view as much as possible. Bue she will break out and act up as she has done recently. On these occasions, she not only embarrasses us deeply; she also distresses us because we realize that there is absolutely no hope of the child's recovery.

Norfolk Va

Frankly, there is something utterly fantastic about a group of responsible legislators—senators, congressmen, and governors—stating hysterically that they will fight to the bitter end rather than have ordinary human decency come to their region. Such fanaticism in the twentieth century makes you wonder about human nature.

It is not only the viciousness of the idea that hurts. It is also the religious zeal with which these southern leaders openly voice their opposition to what the rest of the civilized world considers a good action—the giving of minimum freedom to all people. It is hard to understand the self-righteous wrongness of these southerners. In fact, allowing even for the whole tragic history of the region, it is still difficult for a sane man to understand their attitude.

* * * *

ANOTHER REMARKABLE THING ABOUT THIS attitude is the essential unity of southern opinion concerning it. A highly educated leader like Darden, the president of the University of Virginia, takes the same stand that Senator Byrd, a relatively uneducated politician, takes. The governor of a comparatively liberal state like North Carolina joins hands with the governor of Mississippi. The liberal editor and the yellow-journalist close ranks whenever there is danger of freedom coming to their homeland. There is seemingly no opening wedge anywhere. Whenever there is a question of touching the status quo, the whole region falls back upon tradition, and nothing can pass that iron curtain.

Sat 3-6-48

It would perhaps be therapeutic for the whole nation if the South were really to carry out its threats and secede politically from the Democratic Party.

* * * *

SUCH A STEP WOULD CLARIFY MANY ISSUES and give that party a chance to represent adequately the groups it is supposed to represent. If Truman's party remains as it is now, half-modern and half-medieval, it will not only lose the coming election: it will go out of existence. The thinking of the world has gone too far to allow such strange bedfellows even in politics. Although the President is neither a great liberal nor a great genius, he has enough good, hard, political common sense to realize this fact.

Returning to Johnston's empty table—I for one sincerely hope that the senator's gesture of protest is not only symbolical but truly prophetic. If the southern Democrats withdrew and formed their own empty little party, Negroes for the first time could vote the Democratic ticket without feeling unclean.

South Benefits By Party Split, Andrews Says

Future Political Gain

Seen If Dixie Firm On Rights Issue

Fri-10-8-48

The present split in the National Democratic Party was described Thursday by Rep. Andrews (D), Alabama, as "the South's greatest political opportunity since the Civil War."

"If we continue to present a solid front on states rights," he said in an address to the Exchange Club, "it will pay dividends . . . the rest of the nation will turn to us for leadership."

The congressman lambasted President Truman as the "worst enemy of the South since Thaddeus Stevens" and blamed him almost wholly for the situation now facing the Democratic Party.

"All the king's men and all the king's horses couldn't keep Governor Dewey from being elected the next president," he said. "Democratic leaders in Congress tried to keep Truman from announcing for re-election.

Certain Defeat

"He was told that his entry into the picture would mean almost certain defeat for the party. But Mr. Truman is a headstrong man and wouldn't take this advice."

Andrews said Truman has been calling the present Congress "the worst in history" because it wouldn't pass his civil rights legislation and "set him up as a dictator."

Fri-10-8-48

'If Truman had his way, he added, the nation will have a federal F.E.P.C. law and a division within the justice department which could be the "most powerful gestapo force in the world."

The congressman from Union Springs praised States' Rights Candidate J. Strom Thurmond as the only man running for the presidency who is not catering to minority interests and "playing cheap politics."

He said Thurmond is a cleancut person with high morals who "has had the courage to campaign for the old fashioned principles of constitutional government."

None Needed

Andrews turned to the major planks in Truman's civil rights program. None of them are needed, he said, and all are a violation of states' rights and the U. S. constitution.

"If we ever decide to abolish the poll tax," he said, "let's do it on Capitol Hill in Montgomery, not on Capitol Hill in Washington. The federal constitution clearly gives this authority to the states."

Fri-10-8-48

As to the proposed anti-lynching bill, he said all states have laws against murder. That's what lynching is, he added, and the southern states are prepared to handle it.

States' Vs. 'Civil Rights'— Just What Is It All About?

34d

BY BEM PRICE
Associated Press Staff Writer

The News

What's all this Democratic fuss about?

What prompted the delegates from Mississippi and some of those from Alabama to quit the national party convention at Philadelphia in a huff and head for Birmingham to hold their own convention tomorrow?

Fri.

A fast answer to both questions would be "civil rights" or "states' rights."

7-16-48

And both answers would be correct, though one is a part of the other and both are becoming synonymous.

Birmingham, Ala.

* * *

ACTUALLY THE "CIVIL RIGHTS" angle is part and parcel of the states' rights issue and the latter is as old as the constitution.

The South, you say, objects to President Truman's proposals for an anti-lynch law, abolition of the poll tax, an end to segregation and a fair employment practices commission.

Jefferson held, though his actions sometimes deviated from his beliefs, that the Federal Constitution was to be interpreted strictly and the government had no powers not expressly granted in the basic law.

Fri.

Ironcially, the fourth chief justice of the Supreme Court, John Marshall, of Virginia, held during Jefferson's administration that the constitution implied many powers, and he so held in opinion after opinion.

7-16-48

By establishing these legal precedents, Marshall laid the foundation for the thousands upon thousands of laws, rules and regulations now part of the accepted functions of the government.

The South's first revolt against broad interpretation of the constitution came in 1832 during Anrew Jackson's administration.

South Carolina, objecting to the imposition of federal tariff laws, sought to rule them void. Jackson, a Southerner, promptly moved federal troops to Charleston and the incipient secession died.

That is true and one Southern objection is that these laws are aimed at the South in an effort to legislate an answer to the race problem.

But even more fundamental than that is the South's belief that these proposals go beyond the powers granted to the federal government in the constitution, and encroach on the law-making rights of the individual states to govern their internal affairs without interference.

No sooner was the U. S. Constitution ratified, Sept. 17, 1787, than a wrangle began over interpretation.

Fri. 7-16-48

* * *

ALEXANDER HAMILTON fought hard for a broad interpretation of the document's wordage and in doing so gave rise to the Federalist Party.

His chief opponent was Thomas Jefferson—to become the third president—whose followers became known as Democratic Republicans. He is the man present-day Democrats regard as the founder of their party.

THERE WERE OTHER MINOR revolts off and on during the years, but the great one did not, of course, come until 1860 when the Southerners withdrew from the Democratic convention again on an issue of "states' rights."

The News

This time it was over the issue of territories determining whether they should enter the union as free or slave states. The party refused to incorporate the proslavery Southern view in the platform.

Birmingham, Ala.

South Carolina, incidentally, had decided in 1852 that a state had the right to secession from the union, the idea being that the states voluntarily had formed the nation and were at liberty to withdraw.

7-16-48

The South, of course, lost the great war.

So, you see, this issue of states' rights has been going on for quite a spell.

From the way the present Birmingham conference is shaping up, it is likely to go on for some time, too.

An Argument Over States' Rights in Virginia

Tues. 8-3-48

New York, N.Y.

34d

By ARTHUR KROCK

The decision of the Southern Democrats to elevate their filibuster above the usual level by concentrating on the powerful historical arguments and records which support their position against the Truman-Republican "civil rights" program brings back into contemporary news the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798. This is inevitable because the respective, authors of these celebrated political papers, Jefferson and Madison, based them on the separation of powers in the Constitution between the Federal Government and the several States.

By this reasoning, which is founded on a simple phrase in the Tenth Amendment and has been repeatedly sustained in the courts, no Federal statute is valid which supervenes the right of a State to establish such voting qualifications as a poll-tax or to enact laws for segregation of whites and Negroes as now practiced in the South. Furthermore, by this same reasoning, there is no Federal statute which could interfere with the States in enforcing their police laws or prescribe local employment standards (a Federal Fair Employment Practices Commission).

8-3-48

In 1798 the central Government was attempting through the Alien and Sedition Laws to prevent the states from protecting the liberties of their citizens. It was then that Jefferson chose the Kentucky Legislature to make the famous declaration that the Union is a compact of the states; that powers not specifically granted to the central Government are reserved by those states to themselves; that hence each state has the right "to judge for itself, as well of infractions as of the mode and measure of redress." John Breckinridge, who presented Jefferson's views to the Kentucky Legislature, toned them down by eliminating the phrase that in such instances "nullification of the act is the rightful remedy." And Madison's draft for the Virginia Legislature was even more modified.

Long a Precedent

Later, despite these elisions, the resolutions were cited as a sound basis for the nullification of a Federal law by a state and then for outright secession. But, though these interpretations were unsound, justified neither by the background nor the text of the Jefferson-Madison documents, the effect of the resolutions was that Federal statutes which infringe on powers reserved to the states are unconstitutional, and they set a precedent against such usurpations which was respected for many years.

Now, however, a contrary suggestion has appeared, and a recent expression of it comes from Virginia, whose Senators—Byrd and Robertson—oppose the so-called civil rights legislation on the ground of unconstitutionality as marked out in the Federal charter and strengthened in the resolutions of 1798. Virginia also is the state which changed its election laws last spring so that Presidential electors on a party ticket that got a popular majority are not legally committed to vote for the head of that ticket. The device was to remove the names of the national candidates from the ballot, leaving only the names of the electoral candidates there.

The Times

This change was proposed to the Legislature by Governor Tuck a week after Senator Byrd told a Richmond audience that the Truman program was "a mass invasion of States' rights never before even suggested, much less recommended, by any previous President of any party affiliation in the nation's history." And for this statement he relied on the doctrine of the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798.

Why Jefferson Acted

Whereupon two young historians made a fresh survey of these papers, developing one or two new details concerning their preparation, and came to a different conclusion as to their chief significance which they addressed to the present controversy in Congress. The result of their research not only was published in the quarterly of the ancient College of William and Mary, at Williamsburg, Va.

New York N.Y.

It was preceded by an exultant editorial note in which Senator Byrd and Governor Tuck were admonished to be sure of their history before they felt such confidence that "one hundred and fifty years later they were following in the footsteps of Jefferson and Madison." The reason for this warning is to be found in the following summary of the resolutions by Adrienne Kock and Harry Ammon, the latter a professor at Sweet Briar College in Virginia:

> However interesting these famous resolutions may be for the Constitutional doctrine they contain, they were intended primarily as a defense, practical and spirited, of civil liberties. * * * The Alien and Sedition Laws were therefore more than the occasion of the resolutions; they were the cause.

This apparently is expected by the historians and the editor of the William and Mary Quarterly to be a sockdologer for Senator Byrd, Governor Tuck and all others who oppose the Truman program as unconstitional. Yet how it affects their position is not easy to see.

Tues. 8-3-48

In 1798 the Federal Government through a majority in Congress sought to usurp states' rights for what many people then and most people since considered an evil, totalitarian purpose. In 1948 the President and a majority in Congress seek to usurp these same rights for what many people now consider a good democratic purpose and many do not. But, if these rights of the states exist, they are the same in 1948 as they were in 1798. The purpose of their infringement cannot change that.

Fiery Mississippian Talks In Memphis For Candidates Of States' Righters

Claims President Is Already 'Hopelessly Defeated'—Hits Often At Proposals For Civil Rights Legislation

(Pictures on Section Page)

By ROBERT TALLEY

If the South surrenders in its fight against President Truman's civil rights program, its traditions and culture will be "destroyed and mongrelized," Senator James O. Eastland, of Mississippi, declared in an address in Memphis last night.

The fiery Mississippian, speaking in behalf of the States' Rights Democratic Party's candidates for president and vice president, addressed a large crowd at Bellevue Park in the first local rally staged by that group. The party's candidates are Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for president, and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi for vice president.

Hits Eastern 'Mongrels'

He was introduced by T. Walker Lewis, Memphis business man and civic leader, as L. C. Gaerig, temporary chairman of the local States' Rights Committee, presided.

"If the Southern states should surrender and support Truman, as the Eastern bosses of the party have boasted that we would do, the whole civil rights program will be enacted and our Southern institutions, our traditions and our culture, will be destroyed and mongrelized by the mongrels of the East who now control both of the old political parties," Senator Eastland said.

Sat. 9-11-48

Confidently, the speaker asserted that President Truman already is "hopelessly defeated," and declared that the race lies between Governor Thurmond and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican nominee.

Expects Democratic Control

"The least the South will gain is control of the Democratic Party," Senator Eastland continued. "We will control the minority committee assignments if the Republicans win because the Southern states that support Thurmond and Wright will have more senators and congressmen than the Eastern wing of the party, and they'll have to come to us to get their committee assignments."

The senior Mississippi senator, one of the originators of the States' Rights movement, declared flatly that "we'll get more electoral votes than the Truman Democrats."

"The independent attitude of the South in not giving its electoral votes to any candidate who sponsors this monstrous civil rights program has been of tremendous help in defeating it thus far," the speaker continued.

Says South Threatened

"We must now have support from other sectons of the country and I say to you, as one who has played a small part in this program's defeat so far, that the attitude of the Southern people has brought us help from totally unexpected sources."

The senator again paid his respects to Mr. Truman by declaring that a vote for the President would be "a wasted vote."

"A vote for Thurmond," he went on, "is a vote for the South. It will aid us in defeating this civil rights program that threatens the very foundation of our Southern customs and Southern institutions.

"We ask the people of Tennessee to join their brothers in the South and vote for Thurmond. There is no way to vote for either Truman or Dewey without indorsing the civil rights program. That is just what it all means.

Greeted By Committee

"If the South should take this thing lying down, it will sacrifice its self-respect."

34a

Senator Eastland came to Memphis by auto from his home at Ruleville, Miss., and planned to return there last night. He was accompanied by a number of North Mississippians.

Greeting him at the Peabody was a Reception Committee headed by Mr. Gaerig. It included Troy N[illegible], chairman of the Executive Committee of the local States' Rights group; John H. Rawlings, treasurer; Dr. T. R. Montgomery, chairman of the Finance Committee, and A. W. Bonds, Ed Worthington, Ed Erwin and Nathan Goff. Senator Eastland was the group's guest at a dinner at the hotel before his speech.

CA 9-11-48

Unable To Get Band

Among those who called at the hotel room to greet the senator was Edward S. Elliott, 81, 675 Adams, who has been a public accountant here for 67 years. Another was Preston Parks of Somerville, Tenn., Democratic presidential elector for the Eight Congressional District, who recently announced he would support Governor Thurmond in preference to President Truman.

Music at the Bellevue Park rally was supplied by a sound truck, as the local committee's efforts to obtain a high school band were unsuccessful. The invocation was pronounced by Jimmy Stroud, head of the Memphis Union Mission.

Says Truman Victory Only Temporary Loss; GOP Hopes Crushed

B'ham News

BY FRED TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

The amazing victory of President Truman has only temporarily defeated the States' Rights Democratic movement in the South, Alabama Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey had declared today.

As McCorvey was making this statement, Gov. James E. Folsom proceeded with plans to institute court action in an attempt to force the state chairman and 10 other Democratic electors to vote for Truman in the electoral college.

The Democratic ticket in Alabama, pledged to States' Righter Strom Thurmond, registered an even more lopsided victory over Republicans than expected and all but crushed GOP appeals for rebirth of a two-party system in the state.

AS INDICATED from early vote returns, only one of the 11 constitutional amendments had been rejected by the state's electorate. The defeated proposal was Amendment No. 11, which would have paved the way for consolidation of Birmingham and Jefferson County governments by referendum.

McCorvey predicted that the Dixiecrat forces, which carried Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and South Carolina, would have an "even stronger" organization in 1952, with more Southern states joining.

Thur 11-4-48

"We may be temporarily defeated, but we're not going to give up," said McCorvey.

Gov. Folsom, who took the stump for Truman and was elated over the president's triumph, said court proceedings were being filed so "this thing can't happen in Alabama again." He was referring to the fact that Truman was not represented on the Alabama ballot in the general election.

DEWEY FORCES, who had hoped to poll 75,000 to 100,000 votes in Alabama, were jolted by a five to one shellacking. Returns from 1,622 of the state's 2,408 boxes gave:

Democrats	127,634
Republicans	25,540
Wallaceites	1,126

The Prohibition ticket polled only a few hundred votes.

Sen. John Sparkman's victory over his Republican opponent, Paul G. Parsons, Birmingham attorney, was even more of a landslide. Reports from 1,517 boxes gave Sparkman 129,354 and Parsons 21,888.

Meanwhile, Sen. Lister Hill predicted that the South would be able to block enactment of the Truman "civil rights" program in the next Congress.

HILL, VACATIONING at Point Clear, Ala., said Southern senators and representatives would receive more important committee assignments under the Democratic majority, and consequently would be more influential in the 81st Congress. Sen. Hill was Senate whip during the latter years of Roosevelt's administration and held this key post until Republicans wrested control of the Senate from the Democrats in the 1946 elections.

"We will continue to oppose the civil rights program just as vigorously as we have in the past," Sen. Hill said, "and I have every reason to believe we will be as successful in defeating this legislation."

34a

The States' Rights Democrats had hoped to show sufficient strength in Southern and border states to gain the balance of power and throw the presidential election into the House of Representatives. Failure of other states to join in the movement kept them from doing this, McCorvey said, in predicting that other states would come in during the next four years

THE NINTH (JEFFERSON) District's Rep. Laurie Battle won an overwhelming victory over his GOP opponent, Hiram Dodd, Birmingham attorney. Returns from 195 of the county's 258 boxes gave Battle 28,833 and Dodd 4,502.

Democrats likewise retained three other contested congressional seats by huge majorities. Incomplete returns gave Rev. Bob Jones, Scottsboro, 6,954 votes to 805 for his GOP adversary, Harry J. Frahn, Sheffield, in the Eighth District.

In the Sixth, Rep.-Nominate Ed deGraffenreid, Tuscaloosa, polled 6,947 to 1,180 for GOPer Bill Ivey, Columbiana, and in the Fourth, Rep. Sam Hobbs got 6,590 to 650 for Republican B. Hogan Stewart, Sylacauga.

Democratic nominees also won lopsided majorities over Republican opponents in Jefferson County races, with returns from 195 boxes giving:

Plans Drafted To Make Party Permanent, Nationwide

From The Commercial Appeal
Jackson, Miss., Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 9.—Win, lose or draw in the Nov. 2 presidential election, the States' Rights Democratic movement "is here to stay."

That was the decision Saturday of leaders from seven states and reports from five others as plans were drafted to make the organization permanent and nationwide.

"The States' Rights fight is a long-range campaign with the 1948 phase one battle in a total war," said Merritt Gibson of Longview, Texas, national campaign director in the headquarters here.

His statement followed a conference here of party leaders from Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, Kentucky, South Carolina, Louisiana and Mississippi, and reports from Tennessee, Georgia, Texas, Virginia and North Carolina.

"The States' Rights movement will continue in existence long after the Nov. 2 general election and will fight subversive elements seeking to bypass the constitutional rights of the states," he announced.

"We agreed that ours is not a campaign from a partisan sense but is a movement against a dangerous trend toward a total state in the United States," he said. "We are striving to prevent America from following the pattern of European countries which lead first to a totalitarian state and then the destruction of individual liberties and the government themselves."

Officials attending Saturday's conference here included: James G. Horrell from Florida, Leon Nonal from Alabama, Amis Guthridge and Talbot Field, both from Arkansas; O. W. Baylor from Kentucky, Mel Glenn from South Carolina, Leander Perez and John U. Barr from Louisiana and W. W. Wright from Mississippi.

Trumanites Win Texas Bout; Seven Primaries Draw Eyes

President Truman bagged Texas' 23 electoral votes Tuesday [illegible] a roaring Democratic state convention which climaxed a struggle of states righters to capture the big vote prize.

Winning out two-to-one, the Trumanites scratched four anti-Truman county delegations from the convention roll. The purged groups promptly marched out, some [illegible] Thurmond banners. The convention, held at Fort Worth, thundered applause to keynoter C. C. McDonald who said that Democrats fighting among themselves might permit the election of Republican Candidate Dewey.

The convention's action promised President Truman the sixth largest electoral vote bloc in the nation, assuming the customary Democratic victory in Texas.

Seven other states held primary elections with interest centering on how large a vote the two parties can poll on the heels of a record-smashing Republican victory in Maine Monday.

Maine elected Rep. Margaret Chase Smith its first woman senator with a margin of 94,651. The previous high GOP margin in the strongly Republican state was 8[illegible] 481 [illegible] 193[illegible].

Fascism Will Not Come to America

The National Guardian
New York New York
3d Party

I DO not fear the next four years; I do not foresee the success of American reaction; I see only its attempts and its failure. By 1950 there will be no fascist threat in our land.

I have seen fascism in many places, and I know something of how it works, but I know more of why it does not work for long.

Too often we consider minutely how the fascists will come, what devices they will use, how swiftly they will move; too rarely do we consider the mechanism of resistance.

Wed 12-15-48

I have seen both fascism and resistance, overseas and in our own country. I know that resistance to fascism is growing far more rapidly than fascism itself in our land.

When I toured the South I saw that resistance sending its Close to 1,000,000 Negroes live in states governed by Talmadge and guided by Thurmond. That dilemma of democracy must be resolved.

Many people sought to resolve that and similar dilemmas by voting for Harry Truman and the Democratic Party. The fact that they did not vote for Henry Wallace does not greatly dismay me. It is most important that they saw those dilemmas clearly and voted for a promise of solution. If by their votes they succeed in forcing the Democrats to progressive action, our aim will have been won. If the Democrats dare this time to betray their promise, and if we are there with the people, by 1950 the Progressive Party will be on the path of victory.

BUT we must learn to work a little better. During the campaign we Progressives made mistakes. Some of those were inevitable. We were building then, and we had to build fast.

We worked too much as if our road pointed to election day and ended on election day. We did not reach the street-corners save at the last moment. What we said in the great meeting halls was good, but the people were in their communities, on their farms. We were not there, or not enough of us were there. Vito Marcantonio is one man among us who has known how to work with people. Vito Marcantonio is back in Congress.

Now we have a new opportunity for work. We can go to people; we can serve them without asking for their votes. We can work to clear their slums and to lower their rents; we can get them better schools and playgrounds. Then when election day comes around, we shall not be strangers ringing doorbells; we shall be friends.

Wed 12-15-48

Long before an election was in sight I sang in little Negro churches and on picket lines, and I did not then ask for votes. Now I will go back and sing again. If other Progressives now begin to work close to the people, close to their homes, then we shall build a party that can last, a party that is not suspect because it ends on election day.

WE of the Progressive Party offer a form, a channel for American resistance.

When the chips are down the names our enemies may call us will not matter. Once a slaveholder said this: "We warn the North that every one of the leading abolitionists is agitating the Negro slavery question merely as a means to attain their ulterior ends . . . a surrender to socialism and communism — to no private property, no church, no law, to free love, free lands, free women and free children."

Wed 12-15-48

Though the language is that of our modern white supremacists, it was first used by George Fitzhugh, a Southern slaver, in 1857.

The abolitionists were not frightened, not dismayed, not defeated by that language.

hird Party

Americans have always nurtured a great distrust of the ranting politicians and the ranting press. But when that distrust is confirmed by the hard evidence of oppression and terror, then the sly, easy tolerance of corruption will vanish, and Americans will come out fighting.

LET no one be deceived by the election returns. Let every man who would know the true feelings of Americans count up the Progressives who voted for Truman; the voteless Progressives in the South, and in Illinois, Nebraska, Oklahoma; those who were frightened but who will not stay frightened.

The bipartisans still hold the government, but let us not look through the spectacles of the enemy. The abolitionist Wendell Phillips, speaking at the grave of John Brown, said: "True, the slave is still there. So, when the tempest uproots a pine on your hills, it looks green for months—a year or two. Still, it is timber, not a tree. John Brown has loosened the roots of the slave system; it only breathes—it does not live—hereafter."

Wed 12-15-48

IN the final months of the campaign I was in a little Southern town. The Progressive Party candidate was scheduled to hold a meeting at a Negro church. For days before, the Klan in the neighborhood had circulated handbills warning the people to stay away, promising to ride that night. On the day of the meeting the Klan mobilized in the hills. Yet the meeting was held.

Some people came, but not many. The candidate and I and a few others stood inside the church watching the handful trickle in. At dusk the Klan came down in their cars. But when they came abreast of the church there were a hundred or more Negro men from the fields standing in front of the church, silent and ready. And the Klansmen did not stop.

We had not called those men to defend us. The Progressive Party had not summoned them. They were not Progressive Party people. They came because they would not allow the men of force and violence to keep them from something they wanted to hear.

Wed 12-15-48

That resistance is hard to measure at the ballot box.

BOSS Crump swore that we would not come into Memphis. The American Legion and the Ku Klux Klan threatened that if we did sneak in, we would not get out so easily. We did not sneak into Memphis; we entered it boldly after a Negro church invited us, and no one dared to move against that Negro community, aroused and militant.

When I think of American resistance to fascism, I think of that preacher in a little Florida town who stood up in the square, looked at the menacing Klansmen and said, "I am going to stay in the Progressive Party. If anyone wants to find me, this is my name and here is my address."

The South is filled with such preachers and such people. roots deep into the soil, and if any man tells me that American fascism will come out of the South, I laugh. I know that American fascism will meet its first and most crushing defeat in the South. I know that American fascists, no matter what name they bear, no matter what banner they fly, will go down into dust, and that it will not take long.

GEORGIA U FIRES PROFESSOR FOR SUPPORTING WALLACE

Seattle, Wash.

Supporters of Henry A. Wallace reported setbacks today on three fronts in the Deep South.

James Barfoot, the Wallace party's proposed candidate for governor in Georgia, said he had been fired from his assistant professorship at the University of Georgia at Athens, and that he planned to fight the ouster on the principle of academic freedom.

Dean O. C. Aderhold of the College of Education wrote President Harmon Caldwell of the University that Barfoot's political activities had become so extensive and involved that his effectiveness as a teacher had become impaired.

The dismissal of the 35-year-old teacher is effective June 1.

At Miami, Fla., a meeting of the University of Miami student senate was called to discuss the discharge of three instructors who say they were victims of a "political purge."

The three instructors—Dr. Leonard Cohen, Jr., Dr. Charles C. Davis and Prof. Daniel D. Ashkenas—told a student rally yesterday they were fired because they supported Wallace for President.

Larkin Marshall, publisher of a Negro weekly newspaper at Macon, Ga., and a candidate for the U. S. Senate on Wallace's People's Progressive Party ticket, was denied a ballot when he refused to sign a pledge of allegiance to the Democratic Party.

The Reaction To Wallace

The Columbia Record

Thirteen cases of political pressure or intimidation against school, college and university teachers who have taken an active part in support of Henry Wallace's Progressive party are now on record. In addition to which two preachers have lost their pulpits for showing an interest in the third party movement.

34d

All such cases so far reported have been from the Eastern part of the United States, but 10 have been in the North, as against only five in the South. Aside from the Constitutional "freedom of speech" guarantees involved, these cases have raised again the old controversy over academic freedom—allowing teachers and professors complete freedom of thought, without censorship from higher authorities.

March 23-48

Columbia S.C.

This year's cases of faculty intimidation are by no means confined to backwoods institutions. Columbia University, Northwestern, Williams College, Oglethorpe and University of Georgia are among the tonier institutions of learning involved.

At Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., 25 professors have been forced to withdraw from active work for the Wallace movement. Prof. Curtiss MacDougall, third party candidate for United States senator from Illinois, has defied this order by refusing to withdraw his candidacy, and he is still hanging onto his academic job.

Firing of Prof. Frederick L. Schuman was first demanded by Williams college alumni after he had written a critical review of ex-Secretary of State James F. Byrnes' book, "Speaking Friendly." Schuman refused to quit, however, and at the third party convention in Philadelphia, he played an active part in drafting the Progressive platform.

Columbia University Teachers' college dropped Prof. Clyde Miller from its faculty after his name had appeared on a list of some 700 members of the national committee for Wallace.

Prof. James Barfoot was fired from an assistant professorship at University of Georgia after he was nominated as third party candidate for governor in the state. At Oglethorpe university, Prof. Don West was dropped for Progressive Party activities, but he was later reinstated for the remainder of the term.

A similar temporary reinstatement has been reported at Methodist college, Evansville, Ind. Several days after he had presided at a political rally where Henry Wallace spoke, Dr. George Parker was asked to resign his post as an instructor in Bible and philosophy. After students and Evansville citizens had protested, however, Dr. Parker was given his job back for the remainder of the term.

Mar 8-23-48

At Lycoming college, Williamsport, Pa., Dr. Clarence R. Athearn last March accepted appointment as Lycoming county chairman for the Progressive party. Athearn was then asked to resign this position by the college president, Dr. John W. Long, and he did. Two months later Dr. Athearn was notified that his contract for the following year would not be renewed.

Three professors claiming to be the victims of a political purge have been dismissed at University of Miami, in spite of protests by the student body of the Florida institution. They are Dr. Charles C. Davis, Dr. Leonard Cohen and Prof. Daniel D. Ashkenas. Their cases are now on appeal before the university board of trustees.

Prof. Lyndon K. McNair voluntarily resigned his post as Dean of the State Teachers college, Lyndon, Vt., after he had announced his support of the Progressive party and had been denounced for it in Vermont newspaper editorials.

Censure of grade and high school teachers for political activity has been reported from Chicago, Buffalo and Tarpon Springs, Fla. In Chicago the city council's school committee set up a group to investigate charges of subversive teaching by a Senn High school civics instructor, Miss Emily Noack. Charges of "un-Americanism" brought against Eleanor R. Dushane, a Buffalo, N. Y., East High school teacher, were carried to the state supreme court after a six months' controversy had involved students, parents and fellow teachers. For organizing a Wallace Committee in Tarpon Springs, Fla., George T. Frantzis was fired as Greek Parochial School principal.

Columbia S.C.

The two preachers who have thus far been reported dismissed from their pulpits for political activity are the Rev. Richard H. Bready, Centenary Methodist church, Cumberland, Md., and the Rev. Isaiah J. Domas, Unitarian church, Atlanta, Ga.

Wallace Supporters Hear Georgia Speaker

The Columbia Record

Larkin Marshall, Negro candidate for the United States Senate in Georgia and co-chairman of the Georgia Progressive party, was to be keynote speaker at the Wallace for President conference which was being held in Columbia this afternoon.

The conference, which was held in the Carpenter's Hall on Heidt street, opened with less than 25 people, including reporters, present. Of these nine were Negroes. The conference was opened by Mrs. Robert New, co-chairman of the state party with the Rev. J. A. Dyer, Negro pastor of Plymouth Congregational church.

Columbia S.C.

Dyer said just before the meeting opened that it was planned for the Progressive party to nominate men for all statewide offices for which there are races this summer, including also the races for Congress.

Asked if there was any significance in the Progressive party's meeting in the union hall, Dyer answered that "it was just a place to meet."

Miss Jeannette Lee, acting secretary of the party in South Carolina said that this was the first attempt at a statewide meeting.

The purpose of the meeting was to organize and coordinate activities of the party in South Carolina, according to Jim T. Crown, field organizer in the Southern states.

Mr. Crown, who is a student at the University of Florida, was in receipt of telegrams of support from Henry Wallace, Progressive party candidate for the presidency, and from Paul Robeson, Negro baritone and supporter of the Wallace party. Both telegrams expressed confidence in election. Crown said that he would read the telegrams at the meeting.

The meeting was opened with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

One delegate from Charleston, Samuel Richardson, said that he had voted in Ward 11 in Charleston in the Democratic primaries this month. He said that he was a Progressive on the "national" level.

MR. WALLACE VERSUS LIBERALS

The Defender

Chicago, Ill.

Henry Wallace has declared he has no intentions of abandoning his Third Party movement despite the fact that the platform of the Democratic Party is so liberal that the Southern bigots have voted to secede. The charges which Mr. Wallace has repeatedly hurled against the Democratic Party were fully answered in Philadelphia. As a matter of fact, both Republicans and Democrats have decisively defeated the reactionary elements in the two major parties.

Mr. Wallace charges everyone else but himself with hypocrisy. He alone, according to his own estimate is the sincere leader of the common people.

We believe Mr. Wallace's claim requires analysis. One question comes to mind immediately: If Mr. Wallace and the Third Party are so dedicated to liberalism, why have they put up candidates to run in opposition to nationally recognized liberals?

Robeson's wife, 17 others seek office with Wallace

Tribune Los Angeles

NEW YORK — Seventeen Negroes are candidates on the ticket of the Henry Wallace party in 13 states, the Progressive Party claimed today.

Boos Greet Wallace's 'Dixie Aid'

The Constitution

DURHAM, N. C., Aug. 29—(AP)—Henry A. Wallace's Southern campaign met with violent opposition here tonight as he proposed a $4,000,000,000 Federal aid program for the South.

Mon 8-30-48

Eggs were hurled into his audience, some members of which stopped his oratory with boos. Firecrackers exploded in the meeting hall of the North Carolina Progressive Party convention bringing several hundred persons to their feet.

Atlanta Ga.

Wallace, previously halted several times by boos and catcalls as he tried to get across his message, stopped completely for a time and pleaded with the audience:

"Please sit down! Please sit down!"

Portions of the audience, estimated by police at 1,300, began a chant:

"We want Wallace! We want Wallace!"

His speech, climaxing the State Party Convention, was the closing event on his first day of a whirlwind campaign tour of the South.

Shortly before Wallace reached the Armory in downtown Durham, a group of 20 men—identified by police as mostly war veterans, marched through the hall displaying derogatory signs.

Some read: "Wallace—the Hitler of today" and "Send Wallace back to Russia."

One of the men was knocked down by a Progressive. The marcher said he was hit with a chair. Police separated them.

Earlier today the tousel-haired Iowan spoke before non-segregated audiences in Virginia without incident. He told a news conference here he was well pleased over the absence of racial segregation thus far.

Asserting in his dinner speech that the South wants to own its industries and farms, Wallace added:

"I propose that the Federal Government advance a billion dollars a year for four years to aid Southern industry and agriculture. And this should be in addition to Federal aid for schools, hospitals, homes, health and social security."

The money would be no handout, he declared.

"Each year billions, literally billions of dollars of profits are drained from Southern labor in field and factory by large corporations owned by wealthy and powerful men who reside elsewhere. We Progressives propose only that the Federal Government, through taxation of these riches, return to the people of the South a part of the stolen fruits of their toil and sweat."

At Richmond earlier, Wallace declared the Dixiecrats are an invention to make the Trumancrats look liberal."

"The Dixiecrats are an invention to divert the people of the South from real problems to false ones, from high prices to hot words, and from the great issue of war and peace to the rantings of demagogues," he said. "The men who have held the South in bondage for so many years are frightened."

Chi Progressives Name 5 Negroes

The Lighthouse

CHICAGO—(ANP)—Five Negroes have been drafted as candidates for Cook County offices on the Progressive Party slate, it was disclosed here last week. They are Dr. Clifford M. Doyle, for ctiy coroner; Thomas M. Clark and Ulysses S. Keys, for associate judges of the Municipal Court; Sam Parks, for sanitary district trusteeship and Atty. Earl B. Dickerson as congressman for the First District.

Currently the Progressive Party is seeking declaratory judgment in Circuit Court here to place it on the April primary and November election ballots as a regular party. Its suit is based upon the fact that Prof. Homer F. Carey, party's candidate for state's attorney, amassed 313,000 votes to lead the Progressive ticket for Superior Court judge Nov. 4. Hearing on the case is set for Monday, Jan. 5.

MIAMI BEACH—Henry Wallace doesn't think he'll have to resort to Paul Robeson as a running mate in order to get Negro votes for the presidency.

Asked what he thought of Robeson as a vice presidential candidate during a press conference, attended by Negro and white reporters at the swank Roney Plaza hotel, Wallace answered:

"I do not think it's necessary to put a Negro on the ballot with me to get a large part of the Negro vote."

Face to Face

Wallace and the New Party Become an Issue in the NAACP

By Benjamin J. Davis
Member, New York City Council

(34d)

RECENTLY, the dominant leaders of the NAACP, despite numerically small but important top differences, have been profoundly disturbed over certain refreshingly democratic and politically independent currents which are beginning to appear among the organization's 600,000 members. 4-25-48

Most significant of these currents has been the marked upsurge for Wallace and the New Party, reflecting the grass-roots orientation of the whole Negro people. In order to combat this trend, the NAACP leaders issued a statement re-affirming the organization's conditional "political non-partisanship." The statement hit out at several states where local branches and leaders have expressed themselves in favor of Wallace, in particular at Pennsylvania, where Judge Rainey, popular and militant president of the Philadelphia branch, is candidate for Congress on the Wallace ticket in order to give this large, Negro underprivileged community its first representative in Washington. Obviously, this statement was anything but non-partisan.

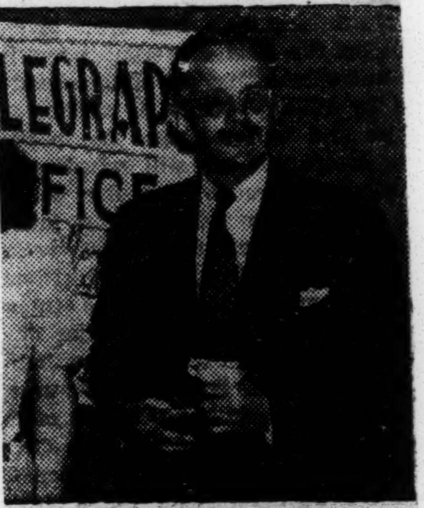
Further, a group of nationally prominent Negro spokesmen recently convened at the behest of the NAACP leaders and issued a political declaration, which was supposedly non-partisan and neutral, but which even a babe could see was weighted in favor of Truman. Besides, everyone knows that Walter White, chief executive officer of the NAACP, who should be a "paragon of political neutrality," has been using the "non-partisanship" policy as a smokescrene to campaign for Truman, that is, until he stuck his neck way out for Jimcrow army Eisenhower and had to quickly draw it back when a wave of revulsion swept the ranks of the NAACP and other Negro and progressive organizations. (In justice to White, he withdrew his eulogistic, if unofficial, nomination of Eisenhower. But will he draw the same conclusion as will thousands of other NAACP members: that the terrible and awful Communists who first warned against danger of Eisenhower's candidacy, were right?)

4-25-48

NEVERTHELESS the Wallace-New Party sentiment in the NAACP has continued to snowball. It has become such a serious problem for certain leaders that the April issue of the Crisis, official monthly organ of the NAACP, had to take special note of a large proportion of pro-Wallace letters criticizing a previous editorial dealing with Wallace. And that is unusual procedure for the NAACP national office.

Soon the annual NAACP convention, scheduled for June, will be taking place. Therefore certain stop-Wallace "non-partisan" leaders of the NAACP want to make sure that the Wallace groundswell among the members and branches does not burst forth at the convention. It might break out in many forms, not the least of which would be sharp opposition to some of the undemocratic features of the organization. Thus far their stop-Wallace maneuvers have not worked any too successfully; so now desperation is beginning to set in.

Consequently, the main editorial in the April issue of the Crisis is headed "Keep an Eye on Communists," proving once more that red-baiting, like Soviet-baiting, is the last refuge of those who try to dam up the peoples' tide of progress. Evidently, the position of the stop-Wallace camp is getting more precarious and the 600,000 NAACP members are about "to get out of hand."



WALTER WHITE

Based upon a slanderous interpretation of recent developments in Czechoslovakia, this scurrilous editorial warns the NAACP members against "being taken over" by the Communists as "Czechoslovakia was captured," lest the members find themselves "backing up the Communist Party's current line of action." That the Communist line is to combat the bi-partisan Truman program of war, fascism and police state reaction, the editorial does not attempt to discuss—it just yells "Communists!" That the NAACP's own secretary Walter White White had to apologize when he disagreed with the Communist line against Jimcrow Eisenhower, it discreetly avoids.

ALTHOUGH certain national officers of the NAACCP, pretend to invite an inter-racial membership, the editorial raises questions about welcoming whites" into the branches implying that they are the Communists. This is not only an attempt to incite division between Negro and white at a time when the cause of the Negro most needs Negro-white unity, it is also a cowardly ruse to launch a witch-hunt in the NAACP, of all places!

Nowhere in the editorial are the words "Wallace and the New Party" mentioned; but the intelligence of the NAACP members, which certain stop-Wallace leaders seem to underestimate, will put two and two together.

If Negro and white Americans were as free from war hysteria, monopoly domination, and fascism as the people of Czechoslovakia, our country would indeed be lucky. Considering that even the NAACP is "suspect" in the eyes of Rankin, it is disgusting to see NAACP leaders picking up Rankin's line of "Keep an eye on Communists."

However, it remains to be seen whether the red-baiting of certain NAACP leaders will be able to stifle the free expression and honest convictions of the membership on Wallace, the New Party and on other major issues at the June convention.

Sen. Taylor's Arrest

Daily Worker New York

(34d) 3rd Party

THEY arrested Wallace's running mate, Sen. Taylor, down in Birmingham. He tried to walk through a door marked for "Negroes only."

In Nazi Germany, they had signs for "Jews only."

Our imitation-fascists are getting bolder—and more worried.

While they were arresting Sen. Taylor for trying to bring the American Constitution to Alabama, Attorney General Tom Clark was reviewing a "counter-May Day" parade in New York. No doubt, to Attorney General Clark, true loyalty consists in supporting the filthy Jimcrow system of which he and his Democratic Party are a vital part. To challenge the Jimcrow filth of "white supremacy" will become a crime punishable by $10,000 fine and 10 years in jail if the anti-Communist" Mundt Bill is passed. The arrest of Sen. Taylor shows that the anti-Communist hysteria is really aiming at the establishment of the KKK philosophy over the entire United States. That is, it is speeding American fascism.

While Sen. Taylor is arrested for defying Jimcrow, President Truman's so-called Civil Liberties program, hailed by the anti-Wallace "liberals," has completely collapsed. The Democratic Party leadership through Sen. McGrath, assures the Southern lynchers that Truman has no intention of ever enforcing it by "invading states' rights." Mon. 5-3-48

The hope of the Negro people—as of the entire country—is the New Party, challenging the trusts, their Jimcrow and their war plans.

On Wisconsin Ballot

The Herald

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 4 (AP).—State Attorney General Grover Broadfoot ruled today that the Secretary of State may place Henry A. Wallace's name on the November election ballot in Wisconsin despite the fact that there is a variance in names used by the party. Mr. Wallace's national party has adopted the name Progressive. In Wisconsin the party took the name People's Progressive to avoid being identified with the former Wisconsin Progressive party.

The Third Party Should Get The Credit

Black Dispatch – Oklahoma City

34

"Why," you ask, "is all of this confusion, dissension and revolt extant in the Democratic party respecting the question of civil rights?" This subject has been up for discussion before in the Republican and Democratic parties without creating any such wild disorder. Why should everyone explode like a bomb when the subject is mentioned in 1948?

The answer is simple. The Third party in the United States in 1948 hangs over the heads of the two old parties as did the ancient sword of Damoclese in the days of Dionysius. The Third party is exposing the pretense, double dealing and deception of the parties of Jefferson and Lincoln, and President Truman and his advisers decided that something had to be done about it, if the Negroes in the doubtful states of the North are to be held in the Democratic column, come November.

Sat. 7-24-48

The same party planks over which so much ado had been made in the past thirty days in the City of Brotherly Love, were incorporated in body of the old party platforms four years ago, but there was no Third party to expose the duplicity of the mule and the donkey in those days. But with Henry Wallace and Glenn Taylor putting empty words into vigorous action, with their unsegregated meetings down in Dixie, and thousands of Negroes deciding they will vote this fall for priceless principles in which they believe, the inner circles in both parties realize they must match the action program of Wallace and Taylor or they are lost.

The leaders of the revolting governments in the South are not dumb. They sat in the convention four years ago and saw this type of plank placed in the Democratic platform without protest—at least without violent severance of party relationship. We must analyze the difference between their placid emotionalism of 1944, as compared with their desperation and suicidic attitude in 1948. There's some substance in the political waters in 1948 absent in 1944. We have already told you what it is.

7-24-48

Well, when thieves fall out honest men get their just desserts. Civil rights planks in political party platforms hitherto have meant nothing in America. Truman in 1948 had more guts than Governor Dewey in 1944, who refused to allow his civil rights committee in the state of New York to report until after the presidential campaign. That's when the fireworks started. Failing to secure the presidential nomination, Governor Dewey had Senator Ives and associates to enact a fair employment practice act in the state of New York, and while we understand there has been no positive and stern enforcement of this law since placement on the statute books, it nevertheless is there, and was going to plague the Democrats this fall, as evidence of the Dewey position on civil rights. Dewey also has appointed a large number of prominent Negroes to high office since election as governor.

Oklahoma City, Okla.

Mr. Truman knew earlier in the year he would have to do something tangible about civil rights, but it is doubtful that he would have gone further than offering lip service to the question had it not been for the Third party menace. You hear all this talk about the Negro going to remain with the Democratic and Republican parties this fall. That's a bunch of bumcombe. The masses of Negroes, after you leave the conservative and very careful leadership, have decided fully to vote for a team of men who have the moral courage to speak out in the nation against evil and who spell wrong out in terms of lynching, voting, the right to fair employment, educational opportunity and health.

Never again should shallow-thinking Negro leaders in the South join in with reactionary forces opposing outside influences. It is the Northern Democrats who have told

Progressive Party Strategy

Issues and

By ERNEST

Times-Picayune

If the performance of the Wallace Progressive party at its Philadelphia convention left any room for doubt that it had been captured by the Communists, its subsequent maneuvers in various senatorial and congressional contests should be persuasive. The pattern of its behavior is so characteristic of the Communists that its inspiration could come from no other source. It is concentrating its fire on liberal candidates in states and districts where they have the best chance of winning. The beneficiaries of its intervention will be the kind of ultra-conservatives it professes to dislike most.

34a

As usual, there is method in the Communist madness. Both their short-range tactics and long-range strategy call for defeat of liberals and election of what they call reactionaries. Their immediate test is support of the Marshall plan. They want to beat anyone who favors European rehabilitation, whatever his record on any other issue, because that is the line of Russian foreign policy and adjustment of their own operations to the service of this line is always the first concern of non-Russian Communists everywhere. Liberalism itself is the secondary test. The Communists always prefer conservatives to liberals in public office because they think conservatism impedes the kind of reforms that would postpone the day of the world revolution they believe inevitable.

Thurs 8-19-48

ILLINOIS PROVIDES the best demonstration of the Communist-Progressive party attitude in this campaign. Here Paul Douglas, a member of the University of Chicago faculty and a liberal by any known test, has won the Democratic nomination and is opposing Senator C. Wayland Brooks, a conservative isolationist, who has won the Republican nomination for re-election. Douglas is campaigning on a platform that Henry A. Wallace would have to agree to on all important domestic issues. But Douglas also is defending the Marshall plan. So the Progressive party is running Curtis McDougal against Douglas and Brooks. McDougal has, of course no chance of winning. All he can hope to do is split the left-of-center vote enough to re-elect Brooks. And that is obviously why the Progressive party is keeping him in the campaign. It prefers the conservative Brooks to the liberal Douglas.

Americans for Democratic Action, an organization of anti-Communist liberals, charges in a booklet just published that "in Illinois the GOP helped circulate third-party petitions to make sure they (Progressive-party candidates) got on the ballot." The Progressive party, under its controlling leaders, wouldn't hesitate to accept this kind of help.

* * *

SIMILAR SITUATIONS exist in some congressional districts in Pennsylvania, Oregon, and New York, where the Progressive party may have enough votes to throw elections to anti-Marshall plan candidates. While Wallace himself has been evasive about the question of contributing to Republican victory in local elections, the Communists have not been so reticent. In the Daily Worker of December 29, 1947, a Communist party writer warned candidates for Congress to "come to terms with the third party" or they would "come into sharp collision with mass pro-Wallace voters." In other words, they were threatened with third-party opposition unless they voted against Marshall plan aid to Europe.

Thurs 8-19-48

Mrs. Helen Gahagan Douglas, liberal congresswoman from California, was very bluntly told that the third party would enter a candidate against her unless she toed the line against the Marshall plan. She supported the plan and Wallace later appeared publicly with the third-party candidate in her district.

As originally conceived by the Communists, the third party was intended to help elect a Republican president by taking votes away from Truman. But now that Dewey is supporting the essentials of the Truman foreign policy, this has become less important than the congressional elections. That's why the Progressive party is shifting its emphasis.

Rebirth of New Deal Party Aim, Says Candidate

(International News Service)

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 24.—Henry A. Wallace said tonight his Progressive party would like to see "a government of the people purchase and operate the Wall Street banks and railroads and power trusts."

34

The Progressive party presidential candidate offered the plan in an address at Louisville's Memorial auditorium during which he denounced "monopolists and profiteers" for high prices that he said are "murdering" people who cannot afford the necessities of life.

New Orleans, La.

Wallace declared that the Progressive party is dedicated to the rebirth of the New Deal, and he again urged President Truman to initiate a meeting with Premier Stalin.

The former vice-president said: "And I call upon him to publicly announce that until such a conference is held he will not undertake to proclaim the draft. I call upon him to announce that no American boy will be called into service until every avenue of peacetime settlement has been attempted.

"It is in the president's power to do just that, to hold off the draft that has been passed against the will of the people.

"This is one time when the president does not have to sign a measure with regrets. He needs not proclaim and draft and then blame Congress for it. He can stop it now."

Wed 8-25-48

Wallace attacked both major parties and asserted that the Progressive party is the only party which will cut out the root of todays' inflation — "war expenditures." He also said that his party will destroy what he called rigged prices and monopoly control of our economy.

Wallace Says Democrats Furnish 'Tweedledum Style of Tweedledee'

'Bipartisan' Record Assailed

New York, July 15 (AP)—"Only the tweedledum version of the Republican tweedledee" came from the Democratic convention, Henry A. Wallace said today.

Assailing the record of the "bipartisan 80th Congress," the New Party's standard-bearer said in a statement that the Democratic convention "underscores the futility of placing any hope or faith in the Democratic Party."

Promises a 'Preview.'

The party's platform and convention speeches, he said, "would give the impression that the party . . . has been a knight in shining armor jousting endlessly with the Republican dragon in Congress.

"But who can forget," Wallace added, "the bipartisan responsibility for military adventures in Greece, Turkey, and China, for high prices, for no housing, for the Taft-Hartley antilabor law?"

He assailed the Democrats' record on minimum-wage standards, social security, and health legislation.

He said "The New Party welcomes the call for a special session of Congress. When Congress meets it will give the country a preview of what bipartisan campaign promises mean.

Won't Aid the People.

"We shall see each party trying to outmaneuver the other so as to snare votes," he said, "but at the same time passing no bills that might really aid the people."

Wallace claimed "it was the creative fresh strength of the New Party that forced the old parties to talk liberal even though they acted reactionary."

The Wallaceites will move into Philadelphia this week to complete the convention cycle. The New Party's convention will be July 23 to 25. Headquarters will be established in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel by Saturday.

And one week later the party will choose as its standard-bearers Wallace for President and Idaho's Senator Glen H. Taylor for Vice-President. 7-16-48

Wednesday the party's platform committee, headed by Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, professor at the University of Chicago and onetime New Dealer, will begin hewing its campaign planks.

Proposed for the party's keynoter is Charles P. Howard, 53, Negro attorney and newspaper publisher of Des Moines. Howard has been prominent for 25 years in Iowa Republican circles.

Wallaceites Ready to Move Into Philadelphia Saturday

Washington Post
Washington, D.C.

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—Wallaceites move into Philadelphia Saturday to complete the political convention cycle.

Howard

The Nation's newest political party, which variously has called itself the Progressive, New, Third and Wallace-for-President party, will hold its founding conclave here July 23 to 25.

The Republicans held sway in Philadelphia the week of June 21 and the Democrats wound up their session early today. Fri 7-16-48

Wallaceites will establish headquarters at the Bellevue-Stratford by Saturday.

And one week later the party will choose as its standard-bearers Henry A. Wallace for President ad Idaho's Senator Glen H. Taylor for Vice President.

Tugwell Heads Platform Group

Wednesday the party's platform committee, headed by Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, professor at the University of Chicago and one-time New Dealer, will begin hewing its campaign planks.

Proposed for the party's keynoter is Charles P. Howard, 53-year-old Negro attorney and newspaper publisher of Des Moines, Iowa. Howard has been prominent for 25 years in Iowa Republican circles.

Opening of Wallace headquarters Saturday coincides with a meeting of another fringe of the Democratic Party at Birmingham, Ala., where Southerners will hold a rump convention to select their own presidential candidate and separate platform.

Delegates Summoned

Luke W. Wilson, assistant manager of the Wallace convention, said the National Wallace-for-President Committee "has issued our convention call 'broadside' for 4248 delegates and 531 alternates."

That's eight delegates for each of the Nation's 531 electoral votes and one alternate for each vote.

In States where the party has not been established the convention call was sent to the State Wallace-for-President Committee with authority to designate delegates. 7-16-48

Other States elected delegates at founding conventions.

The Wallaceites will shift from Convention Hall to Shibe Park for the acceptance speeches of Wallace and Taylor on the night of July 24.

A price ranging from 65 cents to $2.60 will be placed on the 33,000 seats at the park. Convention Hall seats 13,000.

Wilson said proceeds "will help pay convention expenses. The city of Philadelphia gave the Republicans and Democrats $200,000 each for holding their conventions here. But we didn't get a cent."

The city did, however, extend to the new party the use of Convention Hall.

Wallace and Taylor will come to Philadelphia Thursday or Friday of next week. Their nomination will be sometime Saturday afternoon. Washington D.C.

Wind-up Sunday

Sunday, the final day of the conclave, the new party will adopt a platform, elect officers and lay down party rules.

Elmer A. Benson, former governor of Minnesota and chairman of the national Wallace-for-President committee, is scheduled to come to Philadelphia early next week along with five cochairmen.

They are Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the CIO-United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers; Singer Paul Robeson; Sculptor Jo Davidson; Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine of Chicago and Dr. Tugwell.

Miami Police Stop Wallace Delegates

Star Dispatch

Said Call Came From Oklahoma City to Hold Them

Five delegates who left Oklahoma last Thursday to attend the national committee of the Wallace for President organization meeting in Chicago, were arrested by police in Miami, Okla., just before they reached the Kansas line on mysterious charges that have never yet been fully explained. The group was held around 45 minutes and grilled separately as to their antecedents and what they were doing, and their luggage searched. [illegible] group they had been arrested for speeding.

Oklahoma City

Kate Walker, who has been doing a deal of work circulating Wallace petitions over the state, was singled out by the police to be questioned, and as a matter of fact, when the group was brought into the police station, the captain said, "I want to talk to Kate Walker." One of the policemen questioned another youth separated from Mrs. Walker, said a police radio call from Oklahoma City had asked that the Wallace group be held for questioning.

"We reached Miami without anything important happening and were coasting slowly down the main street, noting a road-block ahead, and when we arrived there perhaps a half dozen cars in front of us blocked our passage. A policeman walked up and observing our car with large Wallace stickers on it, said, 'This is the car we're looking for,'" declared Mrs. Walker during the course of an interview regarding her experience.

"I told him I owned the car when he asked us regarding who owned the automobile in which we were riding, and the officer got in our car. We turned around and drove into a little lot, where they questioned us sufficiently to decide we were the folk they were looking for. He then told us we would have to go to the police station," Mrs. Walker said.

"On our way to the station we saw a large trailer that we later learned is owned by a preacher who is running for congress in that district. He had across the trailer, 'White Supremacy.' In the station we were separated into groups and subjected to sharp questioning," said Mrs. Smith. "The captain promptly proceeded to take my purse and search it and I said to him, 'Why are you searching my purse?' and he said, 'That's a usual procedure.'"

Sat 4-24-48

The young woman says she was subjected to grilling as to where she lived, what her work is and where she was going. The interrogator constantly went outside consulting with someone, but shortly his demeanor changed and he became almost totally another person and very conciliatory, said the Wallace worker.

The sister of Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Ophelia Roy, questioned in another room, asked to go to the car and get her identification papers from her purse, which the officer allowed her to do, but going with her. Mrs. Roy said that when they arrived at the car she found two plainclothesmen going through all of the luggage in the car. When Mrs. Roy inquired what authority the men had to search her luggage and purse, she states the officer said, "That's the FBI."

Later, being released, the group went on to Chicago where they attended the Wallace meeting. Mrs. Roy said just before they left the officer took pains to tell her that it was not the FBI that searched her bags, but two plainclothes policemen.

The three passengers in Mrs. Walker's car were students from the university at Norman. "Talk about a police state, we seem to have it right here in Oklahoma," said Mrs. Walker.

Remember Senator Taylor? The Flurry And The Roar? The Answer Remains Three-Ply

Sen. Glen H. Taylor still owes the city of Birmingham $50.

Remember the senator? Around Birmingham Jail, they claim him as their most distinguished alumnus.

Thur 10-21-48

After all, it isn't every day you can meet a candidate for vice president right in the same jail.

Police Judge Oliver C. Hall said the senator should pay the $50 for trying to persuade an officer to let him enter a door marked for Negroes.

GLENN TAYLOR

* * *

ONLY JUDGE HALL said the senator's persuasion was: assault and battery, disorderly conduct and interferring with an officer in performance of his duty.

The judge also gave the senator 180 more days in jail—suspended.

The Idaho lawmaker, quite a guitar player, was' put on six months' probation. If he came back to Birmingham and tried to persuade any more officers, the 180 days would stick.

Six months have passed and Birmingham has seen no more of the senator.

Now about the $50. City taxpayers need have no fears. The senator has covered his fine with a $100 bond.

B'ham, Ala.

Sen. Taylor, who didn't like Judge Hall's verdict, appealed his case to Circuit Judge Lewis Bailes at the courthouse.

AN UNUSUALLY slow-moving case, the Taylor affair is not expected to come up again before early 1949.

By that time, with the presidential question settled, the senator may:

1. Forfeit (pay) his $100 bond to the city and forget the whole thing.
2. Return here for an entirely new trial in criminal division of Circuit Court.

If Judge Bailes agreed with Judge Hall, this could go on and on.

"There's considerable doubt, however, that the Taylor case will ever reach the Supreme Court. Few disorderly conduct cases do.

These are the city's chances: (a) If the senator wins his appeal, they lose $50; (b) if he loses his appeal, they win $50; (c) if he doesn't show up, they get $100.

It was stated in a letter written by college dean O. C. HOUSTON, Tex. — Four uniformed Negro police officers were on duty when the Dixiecrats staged their rebel convention at the huge Coliseum here, last week.

With a widely publicized promise by Wallaceites to picket the rebel meet fading out, and with only four pickets appearing in an abbreviated effort, the convention was minus racial incident and eight Negroes sat in the Convention Hall.

NEGROES NAMED

At the Progressive convention in Dallas, Wednesday, nine Negroes were named to run for offices. The Rev. Stacey Adams, formerly a Democratic precinct chairman, will make the race for Lieut. Governor. Herman Wright, white Houston attorney, heads the ticket.

Paul Robeson arrived too late to participate in the convention proper, but rendered a concert and made an address before an unsegregated crowd at Dallas' exclusive Yacht Club.

Other Negro candidates named by the Progressives were: F. M. Johnson, Waco newspaperman, State treasurer; John Gipson, Dallas, railroad commissioner, and Mrs. Marie Anderson, Dallas, State Legislature.

ELECTORS CHOSEN

Nominated for Presidential electors were Volita Fountaine, Longview; Ronnie Cook, Houston; the Rev. S. Y. Nixson, Longview; the Rev. L. V. Bolton, Houston, and R. D. Dixon, Dallas.

At the Republican convention in Waco, a bold bid was made for the States' rights Democratic vote, but a resolution was passed approving of "one or more Negroes" to places of importance on the Dewey-Warren campaign committee.

PARTY OFF LLOT, HIGH URT RULES

Tribune 9-3-48 Chicago Ill

allace Leaders Plan Write-In

BY GEORGE TAGGE

Illinois Supreme court yes- kept the Progressive national and state candi- the Nov. 2 ballot.

Leaders of the new party met here with Henry Wallace, Presidential candidate, to plan a write-in campaign of unprecedented magnitude.

A single word—"denied"—was all that came out of the high court in blasting the hopes of Progressive leaders and workers. This word turned down a motion for leave to file a petition for mandamus to compel the state certifying board to put the candidates on the Illinois ballot.

Wed 9-15-48

Thus the Supreme court refused to examine the question of constitutionality raised by the Progressives regarding a legal provision that 200 valid nominating signatures must come from each of at least 50 counties. The electoral board ruled Aug. 31 that this requirement was not met.

Write-In Only Recourse

There is talk of taking the case to the United States Supreme court and of getting the state legislature to amend the election laws but neither action could help the Progressives in the coming election.

A write-in campaign appeared to be the only recourse for Nov. 2 voting. In Cook county, where Progressives have most of their strength, the write-in drive will be facilitated by the fact that Progressive candidates for county, sanitary district, Municipal court, congressional, and legislative offices will be on the ballot.

Democratic officials took the offensive in the long legal battle to bar Progressives from the ballot. James A. Farley, former Democratic national chairman, estimated recently that 85 per cent of the Progressive votes will come from Democratic ranks.

Valid In 41 Counties

Secretary of State Edward J. Barrett, Democrat, organized the objections to the state-wide Progressive petitions. Testimony of county clerks before the electoral board knocked out enough signatures so that Progressives were left with valid petitions from only 41 counties instead of the required 50. In nine counties the Progressives averaged 190 valid signatures instead of 200.

Of no avail was the fact that the Progressives amassed 75,000 signatures in the state. Only 25,000 are required.

The electoral board acted on the basis of a 1935 amendment to the election law, enacted when the Democrats had unchallenged control of both the state legislature and executive departments. This 50 county requirement was assailed as unreasonable and unconstitutional.

Discrimination Charged

Progressive party attorneys in their brief contended that the geografical feature discriminates against voters in the more populous counties in putting candidates on the ballot.

Under the 1935 amendment, the 87 per cent of the voters who reside in the 49 most populous counties could not form, by themselves, a new political party, the brief set forth. Yet 25,000 of the remaining 13 per cent of Illinois voters, properly distributed, could do so.

Wed 9-15-48

Particularly galling to the Progressives' leaders is the fact that the Prohibition, Socialist, and Socialist Worker parties got on the Illinois ballot without any trouble. None of these splinter parties came any where near satisfying the stringent election law requirements for nominating petitions. But Democrats did not bother to knock them out of the race.

Tells Need For Law Revision

Edgar Bernhard, chairman of the Chicago division of the American Civil Liberties union, said the Supreme court action points up the urgency of obtaining "reasonable" provisions in the state election law.

"It so happens that I personally am opposed to the Progressive party," Bernhard said, "but that does not alter the fact that it should not be impossible for a new party to get on the ballot even if challenged."

Atty. H. I. Green of Urbana, prominent downstate lawyer, told a reporter that the 1935 amendment falls in with a trend toward totalitarianism.

3d Party, Off Ballot, Scans Next Move

~~Daily~~ Tribune

Thur 9-2-48

BY GEORGE TAGGE

Progressive party leaders, shaken by an order barring Henry Wallace for President and state candidates from the Illinois ballot, said they will remain active in the fall campaign. The only question was how.

Chicago

Last resort of the Wallace crusaders would be a write-in campaign. But they still hoped to do better than this, and huddled with attorneys trying to find some recourse from the decision of the state electoral board Tuesday which held their nominating petitions invalid.

No Basis For Appeal Seen

Most lawyers were agreed that there can be no appeal from the decision. It was reached primarily by Justices Francis Wilson and Walter T. Gunn of the Illinois Supreme court, sitting on the board in place of Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett, Republican, and Secretary of State Edward J. Barrett, Democrat. Both Barretts were barred because they are candidates for re-election.

State Auditor Arthur C. Lueder, Republican, made the decision unanimous. The political result would have been the same if he hadn't. A layman, he received several messages during the deliberations suggesting legal points to be raised. These were speedily knocked down by the justices.

Thur 9-2-48

Twenty-three county clerks had testified that fewer than 200 valid signatures appeared on Progressive petitions in each of their countries. This reduced to 41 the number of counties in which Progressives had the required signatures.

The decision merely said that the Progressives lacked valid petitions from the required 50 counties, not stating how close they had come to the goal.

Now the Progressive leaders have intensified interest in a case before the Supreme court involving their candidates for Cook county and Municipal court offices. Whether these candidates will be on the Nov. 2 ballot here is at issue. Progressives won a Circuit court order to put them on the ballot. Democrats got an Appellate court order blocking this. The Appellate court action is being appealed by the Progressives.

Chicago Ill

Strength in Cook County

Most of the Progressive party strength in Illinois is in Cook county. If the county candidates are on the ballot, the Progressives will be assured of a column which would facilitate a write-in drive for Wallace and the state candidates.

Chief Justice William J. Fulton of the Supreme court was informed yesterday at his Sycamore home that unless the high court decides the case today, four Progressive candidates for congress and 11 candidates for the state legislature will have no chance of getting on the ballot in Cook county.

Thur 9-2-48

Further, if the Supreme court ruling is delayed until Sept. 8, the Progressive county candidates will not get on the ballot regardless of how the decision goes. Today and Sept. 8 are statutory deadlines for the certification of these candidates by election officials.

The next regular term of court opens Sept. 13. Chief Justice Fulton said he would ascertain the wishes of the other justices.

THE WALLACE PETITIONS

Daily Tribune

The state electoral board has stricken from the ballot in Illinois the names of Henry Wallace for President and his Progressive party candidates for state office.

Fri 9-3-48

Because two statutory members of the board are themselves candidates, their places on the board were taken by two justices of the Supreme court, one Democrat and one Republican. The third member was State Auditor Lueder, a Republican. The law requires that petitions for state and national office must be signed by at least 200 qualified voters in each of 50 counties in the state. The Progressive petitions were attacked by a former Democratic candidate for office on the grounds that sufficient valid signatures had not been obtained in a sufficient number of counties.

Chicago Ill

The justices, it must be presumed, acted as judges and not as political partisans in the matter. Mr. Lueder's vote to make the ruling unanimous was clearly against the interests of his own party. It is obvious that few if any Republican voters are going to be attracted to Wallace.

We think it sound public policy that any candidate with appreciable support, which Wallace undoubtedly has in this state, should be given a position on the ballot. The laws on filing of candidates should be construed liberally in this respect. These theoretical rights, however, cannot overcome clear illegalities, and the Wallace petitions, from the evidence presented, seem clearly to have failed to comply with the law.

building the segregation law did not apply.

Both meetings were sponsored by two locals of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union affiliated with the CIO. Union spokesmen charged the police used violent methods in halting the meeting in the City Auditorium—a charge that Police Chief Truman F. Ward stoutly denied.

Raid on Negro-White Dance Is Protested by Wallaceites

Wash Post

The Progressive (Wallace) Party of the District yesterday protested to President Trumar and the District Commissioners a police raid on a Negro-White dance of Wallace supporters here Saturday.

Times 10-13-48

Seven persons, arrested in the raid on charges of lottery or liquor law violations, were granted continuances of hearings until October 19 and 20.

The arrests were made at a dance sponsored by the United Negro Allied Veterans of America, in Laborers Hall, 575 New Jersey ave. nw., after police undercover men bought whisky and "chances" on a rafle of liquor. More than 35 policemen participated in the foray.

Wash D.C.

The number of policemen participating was stressed by the Progressive Party in a telegram to the District Commissioners which said in part:

"We note that Major Barrett has given as a reason for the high crime rate in Washington that he does not have enough police. We should like to call you attention that . . . he used nearly 50 police to break up a veterans dance on the pretext that certain individuals were selling liquor without a license and holding a rafle . . ."

In the telegram to Mr. Truman, the Party cited a raid several days ago on a private home where a number of white persons and one Negro had gathered. Police had declared they had received a report of a shooting at that address.

The telegram state "Civil rights of all people of Washington are endangered . . ."

[Both Maj. Robert J. Barrett and Assistant Supt. Floyd E. Truscott were in New York attending a meeting of police chiefs when the dance was raided.]

Acting Police Supt. Robert S. Bryant yesterday refused to comment on the telegrams except to say an investigation was underway into the raid on the private home.

Times 10-12-48

Slated for a hearing October 19 on liquor charges growing out of the dance incident are Walter E. White, 23, of 1313 49th st. ne., Winfield Shirley, 23, of 2327 Virginia ave. nw., Bernard C. Campbell, 29, of 1007 15th st. se., Winston C. Edwards, 30, of 2914 Sherman ave. nw., and Sidney Goldreich, 25, of 3812 Florence dr., Alexandria.

Edwards and Goldreich together with Edmund S. Majchrzyk, 24, of 516 2d st. nw., and Frank E. Trusclair, 27, of 2911 Sherman ave. nw., were also charged with lottery law violation. Their hearing was continued until October 20

Wallace Hits Arrest of Communists

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Thurs. 7-22-48

3rd Party

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Henry A. Wallace, candidate for President of the new party, today denounced the Federal indictments against leaders of the Communist Party as an action "intended to suppress political freedom." In a message telephoned to the New Party's convention headquarters here late this afternoon, Wallace sharply challenged the motives of the bi-partisan administration in producing indictments at this time. Citing the concern of the American people over the critical situation in Berlin and the powerful opposition rising against inflationary home policies of both old parties, Wallace charged that the arrests were a diversion aimed at stifling opposition to these policies.

"It is interesting and highly significant," said Wallace, "that these red scares over the past two or three years have been timed to silence opposition to new turns in the bi-partisan get tough foreign policy. . . . Both the administration and the bi-partisans in Congress make allegations to make headlines, make headlines to make fear and make fear to stay in power."

He warned that bi-partisans were embarking on a path similar to that of the Hitler anti-Comintern axis and asserted strongly that he would continue to fight against these policies "in defense of the constitutional liberties of all the American people."

Daily Worker

"Defense of the civil rights of Communists in the first line in the defense of the liberties of a democratic people," the New Party standard-bearer declared. "The history of Germany, Italy, Japan and Franco Spain should teach us that the suppression of the Communists is but the first step in an assault on the democratic rights of labor, national, racial and political minorities, and all those who oppose the policies of the government in power."

New York, N.Y.

HOLD PLATFORM HEARING

Wallace's statement on the indictments came toward the close of a day devoted to hearings on the platform to be adopted by the new party. In contract to the old parties, public hearings to which representatives of peoples organizations were invited were held here and testimony taken on planks they wanted to see in the platform.

Thurs. 7-22-48

Seated behind a long table in the ballroom of this hall, the 74-member platform committee, shirt-sleeved because of the oppressive heat, heard the testimony of more than a score of organiations.

Today's testimony was devoted largely to organiation interested in foreign policy and in civil rights and a series of specific recommendations covering U. S. policy in the Far East, Latin America, Puerto Rico and the Panama Canal Zone, the Middle East and the Balkans were made.

David Kuselwitz, 36, of 118-14 national chairman of the Progressive .Zionist .League .(Hashomer-Hatzair) asked inclusion of a plank in the New Party program for immediate lifting of the arms embargo against Israel and announced that his organization had voted to become an integral part of the new party. Kuselwitz followed to the microphone Hyman A. Schulson, of Washington, who testfiied for the American Zionist Emergency Council.

New York N.Y.

The Platform Committee announced that it supported the principles proposed by both Zionist spokesman and that the platform would include their proposals.

PUERTO RICAN PLANK

Other planks sought by representatives who testified included:

- Independence for Puerto Rico, with U. S. economic aid to repay the Caribbean people for 50 years of imperialist exploitation.
- Ending aid to Chiang Kai-Shek and advancing economic help to China through the United Nations only after a democratic coalition government has been formed.

Economic aid to Latin America through the UN, ending the arms standardization plan with these countries and withdrawal of U. S. forces from military bases in that area.

Thurs.

- Ceasing U. S. expenditures in Greece to continue the civil war, which is costing American taxpayers $102,000 daily.
- Breaking relations with Franco Spain.
- A universal suffrage bill, in addition to an anti-poll tax bill guaranteeing the vote to every one who meets qualifications of age, residence, freedom from criminality and freedom from insanity.

TUGWELL REPORTS

Rexford G. Tugwell, chairman of the Platform Committee, announced results of the first executive session of the group in drafting the platform, which will be presented to the convention Sunday. Planks have already been written into the document, although changes are expected to be made as a result of testimony being offered at the hearings, Tugwell added.

Those planks already drafted include:

- Effective price controls to take the profit out of inflation.
- Public ownership of the largest banks, the railroads, electric power and gas industry and "industries primarily dependent on government fund and purchases."
- Repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and re-enactment of the principles of the Wagner and Norris-LaGuardia acts.
- Government credits at low interest to assist tenants, sharecroppers and small farmers.

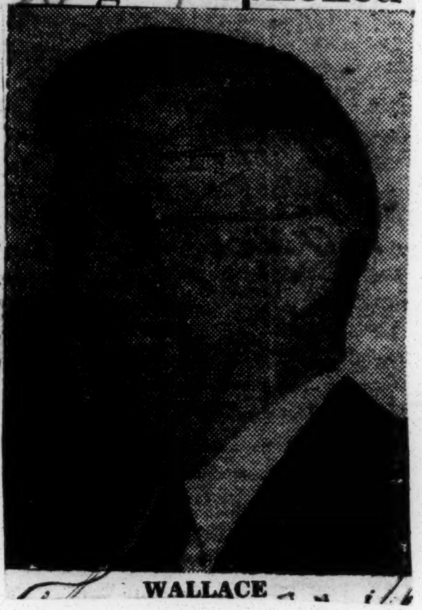
7-22-48

Among those who testified today were the National Teachers Division of the CIO United Public Workers, the Society for the Prevention of World War III, the Negro Elks, the Council for the advancement of the Americas and the Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy.

Testimony on the platform will continue tomorrow, with the convention proper set for its official opening Friday night. On Saturday Wallace and Sen. Glen Taylor will be nominated and will make their acceptance speeches at a great mass meeting in the evening at Shibe Park.



WALLACE

Wallace Followers Vs. Rebecca West

Herald Tribune · New York, N.Y.

Third-Party Advocates Disagree With British Writer's Philadelphia Report

Fri. 7-30-48

To the New York Herald Tribune:

Maybe I am prejudiced because my own son was among the youth described as "horrible" by Rebecca West in an article on the Wallace convention and therefore should keep silent. Nevertheless, I feel I must speak out my shock that a woman of Miss West's caliber and assumed perspicacity should have gone so far astray. I personally know many of the boys and girls whom she labels "stupid," "unintelligent," etc. May I tell her that, far from being the failures she thinks they are, they are unusually alert, fine young people and exceedingly well read. They are the kind who know and love good music, prefer intelligent English and Continental films to Hollywood's tawdry concoctions and are devotees of the Museum of Modern Art.

I have been trying to be fair and understand what she means by the words "sullen" and "sad" which she applied to them. Many of the kids had little money and hitch hiked or sat up in buses for great distances. Then, with beds at a premium, sat up again all night in Philadelphia. Perhaps Miss West mistook fatigue for sullenness.

For many years I was in newspaper work in Europe. I attended many of those early Nazi and Fascist meetings to which she referred. If Miss West wrote equally vitriolic articles about those gatherings, I never read them. One of my earliest impressions of Vienna, where I lived three years, was the sharp division between Nazi and democratic youth. I saw that division again in Germany, in Italy and in Spain. Therefore I believe I know what I am saying when I assure Miss West that the only thing "horrible" about those kids in Philadelphia the other day was her complete misunderstanding of them. Also, that even if they were as she construed them, good taste and simple kindness should have saved her from flailing any group of youngsters with such calloused words.

7-30-48

As for "their inciting to riot" by joining hands in brotherhood with their Negro fellow Americans, when has friendship ever maddened instead of placated? What epithets would Miss West not find for Abraham Lincoln, Harriet Beecher Stowe and Julia Ward Howe!

Fri.

There has been much comparison lately of the present post-war generation with that which followed the first world war. Which would you rather have? The hurt and disillusioned youth of the jazz age, who carried hip flasks full of law-breaking liquor or fled, when they could, to expatriation in Europe or a youth, whether you agree or not with their political views, who can be excited about housing and prices, poll taxes and education, national health problems and a Department of Fine Arts? Regardless of politics and Presidential campaigns, please let us accord these young people's interest in the problems of their country a greater respect than Miss West would allow it.

MARTHA FOLEY.

New York, July 26, 1948.

To the New York Herald Tribune:

I count myself among those "horrible" persons to whom Rebecca West refers in her article in today's New York Herald Tribune, i. e., a follower of Mr. Henry Wallace.

I also was at the convention this past week end and mingled "with the crowd," but what I saw and heard was contrary to what Miss West reports. It is quite evident that Miss West is consumed by a passionate hate, that she came to the convention with a prejudiced mind, and that she has poured her bitterness into her articles published by your paper.

Herald Tribune

In my opinion, her articles are a disgrace to your paper and serve only to lower your standard of news reporting.

New York, N.Y.

AUGUSTA SARGENT.

New York, July 26, 1948.

Fri. 7-30-48

To the New York Herald Tribune:

I am not a follower of Mr. Henry Wallace, so my withers are unwrung, but I imagine a good many Americans of all political faiths were unpleasantly surprised by Miss Rebecca West's comments on the absence of personal pulchritude in the young people at the Wallace convention.

7-30-48

Miss West begins by describing the young delegates as "horrible"—a word which, in this particular context, has more of a tea-at-Schrafft's quality than we have come to expect from Miss West's sturdy intellect.

Fri.

Miss West goes on to say that she has never seen so many young men with sullen eyes and dropped chins, or so many young women "with the restless look on their faces that comes of profound insecurity, of consciousness that neither their physical or mental resources are adequate. . . ."

Whatever her faults, Miss Rebecca West is certainly not calculating. At one fell swoop, she has given a nasty and unforgettable shock to all those of her readers who are too unsymmetrical to be gainfully employed by John Robert Powers. Accurate Miss West may possibly be, but from now on, it will be a rare cotillion which she is asked to lead.

It is not quite clear, from Miss West's piece, just exactly what her convictions are, but whatever they are, she certainly has the courage of them. With admirable recklessness, she completely ignored the two questions which were bound to come to any reader's mind.

1. To Miss West, the young delegates looked "horrible." But how did Miss West look to the young delegates? Did they find her the tastiest arrangement of protoplasm their sullen eyes had ever lit upon?

2. How, for that matter, does Miss West look to anybody?—young or old, political or non-political?

It would have been an editorial inspiration for the Herald Tribune to have printed Miss West's picture along with her piece. One assumes, of course, that Miss West's own chin is undropped and unimpeachable. It is, at any rate, the structure with which she leads.

MARGARET HALSEY.

New York, July 26, 1948.

Herald Tribune

To the New York Herald Tribune:

Miss West's article on the Wallace convention succeeded more in covering a cynical woman's philosophy of life, or I should say death than covering a political convention. The abhorrence and hatred of people who differ with Miss West's immaculate existence is so apparent that reportage is nonexistent—only a sickening hatred of human beings is discernible through the whole piece.

GWEN ANDERSON CHODOROV.

New York, July 26, 1948.

New York, N.Y.

To the New York Herald Tribune:

As a not unyouthful observer at the Progressive party's convention this last week end, may I respectfully declare that Miss Rebecca West has come up with a fascinating commentary on that event. (Herald Tribune, July 26, 1948.)

It had not occurred to me before that one might indulge in personal aestheticism and amateur psychoanalysis as bases for judging a group of young people.

Miss West has depicted the majority of the youth at that event as "very horrible indeed."

The boys were "sullen," chinless and apparently witless. The girls were "insecure" and maladjusted.

This physiognomical once-over fills me with awe, especially when one reflects that many of these repulsive faces and Babbittish bodies were beautiful enough to defend Miss West's homeland.

7-31-48

If Jewish faces, Negro faces, Asiatic and Indian faces, the rough, red faces of farmers and steel workers and the faces of Irish and Armenian and Italian, do not appeal to Miss West's own notion of what faces should be, then she should eschew the unfortunate and ignorant method of judging people by their fleshly outwardnesses. I have never been of the impression that a "sullen eye" and a "dropped chin" meant a lack of cerebral capacity. I think that when we start judging people by their bony structures, we might as well put Miss America up for President.

Herald Tribune

In conclusion may I say that as a very collected, strong-jawed and extremely secure young woman, I was forcibly reminded, as I read Miss West's report on our youth, of those who attempted to perpetuate a race of stalwart blond Aryans.

[We are glad to give full opportunity to the critics of Miss Rebecca West to reply to her articles on the Wallace convention. As our readers know, it is the policy of the Herald Tribune to open its columns to widely varying types of opinion. Both because she ranks among the most distinguished of British writers and because she is a singularly keen observer of events, the work of Miss West has always been welcome in our pages. Her reports should be equally welcome, in our judgment, in the mind of every one who desires to form his opinions upon the basis of a complete, rather than a partial record.—Ed.]

Third Party (California)

New Republic

Two weeks ago, Henry A. Wallace devoted one of his two days in Los Angeles to appearances in the Douglas 14th District. He and Sidney Moore, a Negro who is the New Party's candidate for Mrs. Douglas' congressional seat, rode up and down Central Avenue, the center of the Negro neighborhood. The two of them conferred with Negro leaders, and the next night 32,000 persons in Gilmore Stadium heard Wallace extol Moore's virtues.

Probably, the immediate damage that Wallace's participation in the primary campaign has done to Mrs. Douglas' chances is slight. There are only 832 registered IPP voters, out of a total of 175,000, in the district. The real danger for Mrs. Douglas will come in the fall. A strong campaign for Moore then might divide the progressive vote and assure a Republican victory.

Wallace found great interest in the New Party's attitude toward Mrs. Douglas when he went on into Oregon and Washington. In response to repeated questions, he said his party might still support her. Mrs. Douglas, he said, "has one of the outstanding progressive voting records in the US Congress. Whether we fight for Moore or not depends on how the situation works out. If Helen Gahagan Douglas becomes a war-monger we'll do everything we can to put Moore across."

Supporters of Mrs. Douglas point out that she was worked hard from strategic spots in the US delegation in the United Nations and the House Committee on Foreign Affairs for better relations with the Russians and a genuinely democratic foreign policy. She opposed the Truman program for aid to Greece and Turkey and fought attempts by reactionaries to twist the Marshall Plan to their uses.

Iowa ex-Republican last night's keynoter; Wallaceites promise Negroes 'the moon'

L.A. Tribune Sat 7-24-48

Los Angeles Calif.

PHILADELPHIA—Charles P. Howard, Des Moines, Iowa, who was a Republican for 25 years, was keynote speaker of Henry Wallace's New Party convention when it opened here last night.

Three times chairman of the Negro division of the Republican Party of Iowa and an alternate delegate to the Republican national convention in 1932, Howard resigned from his Republican county central committee early this year to support Wallace.

34d

"It is obvious that only the New Party of Wallace really intends to fight racial discrimination and segregation in America," he gave as his reason. "The old parties have repeatedly broken their pledges to Negroes and will continue to do so."

L.A. Tribune

Fifty-three years old, Howard has been practicing law in Des Moines since 1930 and publishes two weekly newspapers. As infantry lieutenant in the first World War, he has three sons, who are veterans of World War II.

Sat 7-24-48

"The strongest platform on civil rights for Negroes since the Reconstruction era" was promised by new party officials here today.

The convention is expected to demand of President Truman that he use executive powers to end segregation in the armed forces immediately; to call for "complete outlawing of racial discrimination and segregation . . . an end to discrimination in federal service and federal supervision of polling places in the South where Negro voting rights are ignored."

L.A. Calif

The platform is expected to call specifically for anti-poll tax and anti-lynch legislation, "halting of federal aid to any agencies practicing discrimination, prohibition of discrimination in government contracts, a permanent FEPC, state legislation to outlaw discrimination and segregation, and abolition of immigration restriction based on race."

Some 500 Negro delegates and most of approximately 30 Negro candidates, running for state and federal office on the New Party ticket, will take part in formally organizing the New Party and writing the platform.

Larkin Marshall, Macon, Ga., publisher and first Negro candidate in Georgia to run for the U. S. Senate since post-civil war days, is scheduled to nominate Sen. Glen Taylor, of Idaho, for Vice President.

Sat 7-24-48

Both Wallace and Taylor will accept the nomination Saturday night before an expected crowd of 35,000 at Philadelphia's Shibe Park, city baseball grounds, scene of the only outdoor session of the political conventions. Opening speaker at today's session will be Magistrate Joseph Rainey, president of the Philadelphia NAACP.

Among writers of the platform are: Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, dean of Howard University medical school, and Estelle Massey Osborne, former president of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses.

L.A. Tribune

Paul Robeson, now one of four co-chairmen of the National Wallace for President Committee, is, as was to be expected, playing a leading role in the convention.

Howard To Keynote Wallace Meet

NEW YORK—(NNPA)—A former colored Republican leader has been selected to deliver the keynote address at the third party convention that meets in Philadelphia July 23-25, the National Wallace for President Committee announced here last Thursday.

34d

C. B. Baldwin, Wallace campaign manager, said the keynoter would be Charles P. Howard of Des Moines, Iowa, attorney and publisher and a Republican leader in Iowa for 25 years. He said Mr. Howard would be proposed by the Convention Arrangements Committee, headed by Josiah Gitt, publisher of the New York (Pa.) Gazette and Daily.

Mr. Howard was a Republican until he resigned from his Republican County Central Committee early this year to support Mr. Wallace. He was an alternate delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1932 and was three times chairman of the colored division of the Republican party in Iowa.

He is 53 years old and a graduate of Drake University, where he was a four-letter athlete. He was a 1st lieutenant in World War I, serving overseas with the 366th Infantry. He practices law and publishes two weekly papers in Des Moines. He is married and has three sons, all veterans of World War II.

New Party Proved Friend Of Negro People by Deeds

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Mon. 7-26-48

348

By Abner W. Berry

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—The convention of the two old parties were haunted by the struggle of the Negro people for their rights. They sought a winning slogan with which to channel that struggle into the ballot box, much in the fashion of a crew of crafty advertising specialists planning to market a new soap.

Henry Wallace's Progressive Party convention, too, was dominated by the Negro people's anti-jimcrow struggle. But the new party delegates and committees were concerned with making their party the channel of the people's struggles. It makes a big difference as to how a vote comes to the ballot box.

Earlier on Friday Charles P. Howard, the keynoter, told members of the press that he had deserted the Republican party after "hoping for 30 years" to realize the broken promises. "I found there was no hope in that party—or the emocratic Party—for human dignity," he explained as the main reason for leaving the GOP.

This attitude was mirrored on the floor of the convention. Rev. Shelton Hale Bishop, of New York, sat coatless in a clerical collar, cheering the opening night's speakers. River boatmen, sitting across the aisle from him under the Tennessee standard were equally rapt, as were the tobacco and furniture workers of North Carolina and the Negro college professors of Virginia.

ATTACKED BY KLAN

I made my way down the crowded aisle to where James L. Barfoot, Georgia Progressive gubernatorial candidate sat. He answered my mock question about contending delegations from Georgia, as the Dems had, with a half-serious but emphatic reply: "We're united here," and to back it up a wag shouted above the roaring cheers, "Say, I bet it will be Wallace on the first ballot." And then there were ripples of laughter mingling with the cheers.

Barfoot, who lost his professional job at the University of Georgia because of his political activities, was flanked by eight Negro delegates—one-half of the delegation. He and the delegates told a story which most of the Southern delegates have to tell. It's a story that the television cameras and radio commentators can't pick up. The Georgia Progressive Party, the day before they left, held an anti-Klan rally on the ground of the State Capitol.

After tiffs with the police, delaying the meeting, Barfoot was followed home by two carloads of Klansmen. The cops, fearing a scandal in connection with a gubernatorial candidate, finally showed up and herded the mobsters away. Alabama delegates were baited by the Birmingham Post. Their addresses, published, drew hostile calls and in one case a delegate's home was searched.

The delegates from the South had seen the ugly face of white supremacy and were seeking in the convention a weapon with which to fight it. Mrs. Pauline Dobbs, the pretty and willowy young leader of the picket against the Dixiecrat white supremacy convention in Birmingham, in a seconding speech said to tumultuous applause:

"The white supremacists say they are out to defend womanhood, but we white women—and Negro women—of the South are learning to defend ourselves."

The nominating and seconding speeches starred Negro and Southern delegates. Larkin Marshall, senatorial opponent of the white supremacist Richard Russell of Georgia, gave a partial reason for this in his speech nominating Glen H. Taylor for the vice presidency. "I say our country, knowing all too well that in the minds of the old parties my people are not citizens, but subjects. In the eyes of Glen Taylor, however, I am a free man. I am equal among equals."

A dozen seconding speeches, or more were made by Negro delegates during the nominating sessions. And Southern delegates, Negro and white, concentrated on the Negro question and Civil Rights.

It is significant that very first ovation, bordering on a demonstration came the first night before the keynote address was given Miss Shirley Graham when midway through her remarks she shouted: "Jimcrow must go." The floor and the galleries took up the chant while the banners waved and swirled. The states' standards seeming to dip a little more approvingly than the others.

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

The three days of the convention here for white and Negro delegates, alike, were just like the keynote speech had said of it.

Attorney Howard, the Negro leader from Henry Wallace's Iowa, who had found human dignity for the first time," declared:

Taylor Opens Door To 'Pink' Group Support

He Says Reds Will Vote Dewey Ticket To Help Bring New Depression

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—Henry Wallace's third party convention gets going Friday with vice presidential hopeful Glen Taylor already openly accepting any votes the Communists want to offer the ticket.

In fact, the issue of communism in one form or another stalks through nearly all the preliminaries to the formal founding of the "new party."

It comes up in platform making, committee meetings and news conferences.

The rules committee even met in the Pink Room Thursday at convention headquarters at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel, and the badges passed around to the press were—bright red.

Americans for Democratic Action called the new party a Communist "tool."

Noisy Row

James Loem, Jr., ADA national executive secretary hurled that charge at platform committee hearings. It stirred up a noisy row.

Rexford Guy Tugwell, committee chairman, barked back that ADA's statement was "intemperate and insincere" and intended to "impune the motives of the new party."

The spectators hissed Loeb, cheered Tugwell.

Then, Dr. Joseph Johnson, dean of the medical school of Howard University, Washington, D. C., a committee member said:

"I resent very much the appearance of Mr. Loeb before me as a Negro to state that a week ago the ADA won a fight for civil rights (in connection with the Democratic party patform)."

He said this was "an insult to every Negro" because just getting words into a platform was not accomplishing anything.

Loeb's statement was given to newsmen nearly 20 hours in advance of his appearance before the committee. Immediately after Tugwell and Johnson finished their replies to him, copies of their remarks prepared long before, were passed to reporters.

Not Worried

But Taylor and other convention figures say they aren't worried about all the talk of Communist infiltration into the party, because the party isn't Communist and isn't being run by Communists.

When party founder Henry A. Wallace comes to town Friday he is expected to say plenty more along the same line.

The pattern for this convention has been all worked out ahead of time. Wallace, former vice president who was fired from President Truman's cabinet for his ideas about Russia, will be the presidential nominee. Taylor, the crooning Idaho senator who says he originated the "cowboy campaign" and expects to sing in this one, gets second place on the slate.

The platform was hammered together ahead of time. It is against the Truman Doctrine and Marshall Plan for European recovery. It is for cooperation with Russia to obtain world peace.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Chicago University professor who was an original New Deal brain truster, is running the platform committee. He gives out a few splinters at a time in a sort of strip-tease effect.

For Thursday's installment, Tugwell announced the platform recommends that anyone 18 years old be allowed to vote, that laws be passed against lynchings, poll taxes and racial discrimination, that the House Unamerican Activities Committee be abolished.

Would Get Votes

And at hearings on the platform, 81-year-old Dr. F. E. Townsend said the new party would get "millions of votes" if it would go for his plan for $100-a-month pensions for the old and needy.

Both Wallace and Taylor have said they don't like communism but expect to get some votes from Reds.

Taylor did tone the color down to pink at a news conference Thursday.

"I think the pink Communists will support the new party," he said, "and the red Communists will support Dewey because the best way to get a revolution is to get another Hoover depression."

Sparring nimbly with questioners, Taylor defined a pink Communist as one who believes in democratic progress, in evolution instead of revolution. A red Communist, he said, wants revolution.

Republican presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey let Taylor's remarks pass. His executive assistant, James C. Hagerty, said at Pawling, N. Y.:

"Governor Dewey never has any comment on anything that Mr. Taylor has to say."

Not Particular

Taylor went on to say he would accept the votes of anyone. He said he renounces and denounces Communists, but there is a difference between Communists and Communists' votes. He said he isn't renouncing votes of monopolists, either, although he doesn't expect to get any.

He said no, he would not concede that Communists are helping to make party policy. He said he doesn't know of a single Communist engaged in third party work.

The Communist program, Taylor said, "calls for nationalization of everything." He said the new party wants only nationalization of basic, key industries.

"The difference is a matter of degree and not of kind?" a reporter inquired.

"Of course it's a matter of degree," Taylor shot back.

Americans for Democratic Action slugged away at the new party over the red issue when Executive Secretary James Loeb, Jr., said in a statement prepared for platform committee hearings:

"Mr. Wallace's candidacy does not obscure the fact that the Communists and their collaborators guide the main policies and word the major pronouncements of this (new) party."

Without cracking a grin or hedging an inch, Taylor told his news conference:

"We'll get enough votes to be elected."

"Where?" someone challenged.

"I'm not a statistician. I just take the issues to the people and depend on their good judgment."

The senator has done some banjo-strumming campaigning on horseback in past years.

Edgar Brown Urges March on Capital During Stirring Speech to Platform Unit

Baltimore, Md.

Promises Made by Other Major Parties Not Enough, Group Representatives Insist

Sat 7-31-48

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

PHILADELPHIA

Branding the platforms of both the Republican and Democratic Parties as meaningless, Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, Thursday, urged the New Party to demonstrate its avowal to protect all citizens by riding herd on the special session of Congress.

34

In an eloquent five-minute speech before the platform committee, Wednesday, Brown proposed that the New Party reassemble in Washington Monday morning after its adjournment here Sunday and lead a march on the Capital to insure passage of strong civil rights measures and other legislation important to minority groups.

Brown recommended that the convention re-assemble at the Washington Monument, proceed to the Jefferson and Lincoln Memorials and then to the Capital. He said they would be joined by at least 100,000 persons in such a march.

Sat.

Congress, he thundered, should stay in session "until the Constitution is enforced against Dixiecrats" and if necessary until Federal troops are sent into the South to see that colored citizens are protected "in their Constitutional rights to vote in the November elections for President and Congress."

Tugwell Seeking Rights Action

In a statement Thursday, Rexford G. Tugwell, chairman of the 72-man platform committee, said the New Party's plank on civil rights would be couched in forceful language.

He disclosed that the draft which would be submitted to the delegates on Saturday would call for a Presidential proclamation ending segregation and all forms of discrimination in the armed services, in Federal employment and in the Panama Canal Zone and all territories, possessions and trusteeships."

The platform, he said, would demand Federal antilynch, anti-poll tax, anti-discrimination and fair employment practice legislation and legislation abolishing segregation in interstate travel.

Further, Tugwell said, the platform would call for special programs to raise the low standards of health, housing and educational facilities for minorities and hold that Federal funds should be denied to any State or local authority which witholds opportunities or benefits for reasons of race, creed or color.

Brown Draws Applause

Brown's appearance was one of the highlights of the hearings and drew a resounding burst of applause when he finished.

He declared that Henry A. Wallace, the New Party's Presidential nominee, "struck the first historic blow for civil rights and full enforcement of the Constitution, regardless of race, creed or color, four years ago at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago."

The New Party, he said, was in a position "to blaze the way and get the record straight on the Republican and Democratic Representatives and Senators and their respective nominees for President before 13,000,000 colored citizens are called upon this time to cast their ballots in November."

The Afro-American

If Wallace were President, Brown added, there would be no hesitancy about sending troops to the South to protect the rights of minorities.

Baltimore, Md.

In addition to passing the entire civil rights program, Brown said Congress should be demanded to expel Democratic Senators Olin D. Johnson, South Carolina, and Eastland and Stennis of Mississippi; and Rep. John E. Rankin of Mississippi.

7-31-48

Representatives from more than 60 organizations were heard by the platform committee during its two-day session.

Committee Mixed

Among members of the committee were Joseph Johnson, of Washington, Mrs. Paul Robeson of Enfield, Conn.; Mrs. Estelle M. Osborne, New York;! Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, New York; the Rev. Stacy Adams, Dallas, Tex.; and Julius Jones, Kansas City, Mo.

Most of the persons who addressed the committee said they had been disappointed with the deeds and promises of the two major political groups.

The only person to attack the policies of the New Party was James Loeb Jr., national executive secretary of the Americans for Democratic Action, who was in turn bitterly denounced by Johnson, dean of the Howard University Medical School.

Just Words So Far, He Says

Grabbing the mike after Rexford G. Tugwell, chairman of the committee had labeled the ADA's attack as "unscrupulous demagogic denunciation," Johnson said he resented Loeb's claims that the ADA had won the civil rights fight within the Democratic Party by having a civil rights plank adopted.

He said the insertion of a civil rights plank in the Democratic platform did not mean that a civil rights program would be passed by Congress.

Panama Represented

Thomas Richardson of Panama City, representing the United Public Workers—Panama Canal Zone appeared before the committee to speak against discrimination in that possession.

Sat

Although the NAACP went on record as opposing the New Party Madison Jones, of New York, who said he represented the organization, asked the party to pass a strong civil rights program.

Shirley Graham, noted New York author and lecturer, asked the party to pay particular attention to the needs of colored women, who she described as the "lowest-paid group" in the nation.

She said that since colored women were largely employed in domestic work, they could not unionize and were without the benefits of social security.

7-31-48

Opposition to Draft

Speaking for the United Negro and Allied Veterans of America, Winston Edwards, delegate from Washington, said the colored soldier was opposed to the draft and deplored the "cold war talk."

Nelson M. Willis, Chicago attorney, speaking for the Illinois Elks, asked the party to request Congress pass a law enumeratnig the requirements which a State can set for voting. He said he feared that some States will find other means of keeping colored persons from voting if an anti-poll tax law is passed by Congress.

Motion Defeated To Declare Party Does Not Indorse Russian Policies

D.C.

Mon. 7-26-48

Post Reporter

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, July 25.—The Progressive Party today elected its permanent officers and adopted its 1948 platform, after defeating a bitter but one-sided floor drive to declare in its platform the party does not give "blanket indorsement to the foreign policies of any other nation."

34d

The party's first convention, a which it nominated Henry Wallace for President and Senator Glen Taylor for Vice President then was adjourned at 8:12 p. m. (EDT).

Permanent Officers

Permanent officers elected are:

Chairman, Elmer A. Benson, Farmer-Laborite former Governor and former Senator from Minnesota.

Cochairman, Paul Robeson, Negro baritone, and Albert Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical Workers, CIO.

Secretary and campaign manager: C. B. (Beanie) Baldwin.

Treasurer, Clark Foreman of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The Post

Vice chairman, Mrs. Eleanor Gimbel of New York, Fred W. Stover of Iowa and Alvin Jones.

Adoption of the platform, which calls for negotiation with Russia, rpudiation of the Marshall Plan, and repeal of the draft, among its many planks, after some five hours of debate and speeches.

Vainly Fitzgerald permanent chairman of the convention, called for the referral of all amendments to the national committee.

Washington

When the showdown came on a question of whether the convention would go on record as not indorsing the policies of the Soviet Union only a few scattered votes, throughout the hall were heard in favor of it.

D.C.

The proposed amendment snowed under by vociferous opponents, would have said in effect that while the Progressive Party was critical of the foreign policies of the United States, it did not indorse all those of Russia.

The convention did adopt an amendment to the platform's peace plank saying it is the "joint responsibility" of Russia and the United States to end the menace of war. The amendment said this country has grater responsibility for peace than Russia "because it has vastly greater power for war."

Mon.

Other Amendments

Besides beating down the mild plank designed to keep the party from implied indorsement of Soviet Russia's foreign policy, the convention amended its platform to:

7-26-48

1. Eliminate a demand for a unified homeland for the Macedonians.
2. Indorse the idea of a world government and a world federal legislature.
3. Call upon the Arab peoples and the Jews to resist British and American imperialism.
4. Demand preservation of rights of conscientious objectors and restoration of civil rights to conscientious objectors who have been penalized.
5. Indorse establishment of a department of culture, with a secretary of cabinet rank.

Vermonter Offers Plank

The attempt to amend the platform to put the Progressive Party specifically on record as not indorsing the foreign policy of the Soviet Union, was touched off by Delegate James Hayford of Vermont.

The Post

Hayford asked the convention to add this plank to its section on peace:

"While we are critical of the foreign policy of the United States it is not our intention to give blanket indorsement to the foreign policy of any other nation."

Hayford said the plank was offered without any intention of indulging in 'Red-baiting" but he said without such a plank the general impression might be given that the party was condemning the foreign policy of this nation, while supporting that of the Soviet Union.

34d

The summer's campaign, he said, would be far more easier if this impression were specifically rejected by the convention.

De Lacey Opposes Proposal

Hugh De Lacey, former left-wing Democratic Representative from Washington, promptly rose in opposition to the amendment.

"If there is any merit in the platform at all," De Lacey declared, "it is that it comes out fighting for a firm, solid positive basis of friendship between this country and the Soviet Union."

The Vermont amendment, De Lacey declared, is the result of "pressure from outside."

Platform Committee

Chairman Rexford G. Tugwell said the committee believed the position of the Progressive Party had been made perfectly clear in an amendment approved by the committee.

Washington

The platform makers, Tugwell said, were satisfied they had not indorsed any nation's foreign policy by saying:

D.C.

"Responsbility for ending the tragic prospect of war is a joint responsibility of the Soviet Union and the United States."

Pennsylvanian Speaks Up

Mon

Then a delegate from Pennsylvania, Albert Hartunian, said:

"From reading this platform studied here, one would be perfectly justified in drawing the conclusion that we indorse the Soviet Union's policies 100 per cent."

"I do not support the Soviet Union's policies 100 per cent. I favor this amendment that we make our position clear."

The Rev. Mr. Frye of New York State, urged adoption of the amendment.

7-26-48

"I am in favor of peace and friendship with the Soviet Union," he said, "but not blind friendship. e are not Communists, here."

ate Edwin Smith of Vermerly a member of the Labor Relations Board, opposed the amendment, saying it was a compromise with Red-baiting.

When Fitzgerald put the question the few scattered votes for the amendment were drowned out by the volume of "Noes" that rocked the hall.

A last-minute committee sponsored change in the plank relating to colonial and dependent peoples which resulted in the striking out of a demand for a unified homeland for the Macedonians was made quickly today. Coincidentally, news had come from Belgrade that the Yugoslav Communist Party, in its defense against the Cominform, charged that the Macedonian minority in Bulgaria is being repressed.

Plank Overwhelmingly Adopted

However, Louis Adamic, author, a native of the Balkans, said that the decision to change the platform had been made without any advice from any foreign nation.

The plank, complete with the elimination of Macedonia, was overwhelmingly adopted.

The committee's new preamble to the peace plank, adopted without dissent, called for providing a "structure of peace through Government by making the United Nations an effective agency for cooperation among nations" and added:

"Responsibility for ending the tragic prospect of war is a joint responsibility of the Soviet Union and the United States. We hope for more political liberty and economic democracy throughout the world. We believe that war between East and West will mean Fascism and death for all. We insist that peace is the prerequisite of survival.

"We believe with Henry A. Wallace that 'there is no misunderstanding or difficulty between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. which can be settled by force or fear and there is no difference which cannot be settled by peaceful hopeful negotiation. There is no American principle or public interest, and there is no Russian principle or public interest, which would have to be sacrificed to end the cold war and open up the century of peace which the century of the common man demands.'

"We denounce anti-Soviet hysteria as a mask for monopoly, militarism and reaction. We demand that a new leadership of the peace seeking people of our Nation—which has vastly greater responsibility for peace than Russia because it has vastly greater power for war—undertake in good faith and carry to an honorable conclusion, without appeasement or saber-rattling on either side, a determined effort to settle current controversies and enable men and women everywhere to look forward with confidence to the common task of building a creative and lasting peace for all the world."

Tighe Woods Assailed

Delegates approved a demand for "removal by the President of the present national housing expediter," Tighe Woods, on grounds he is under the wing of the real estate lobby.

They approved a pledge to work for amendment of the Railway Labor Act which would permit rail workers to "enjoy the right to strike." They also called for $100 monthly retirement pensions, promised extension of price guarantees and crop insurance to all basic crops and plumped for Social Security extension to cover all agricultural workers. Also they approved a move for $35 weekly unemployment compensation and gradual elimination of excise taxes on "the basic necessities of life."

They voted to condemn military control over scientific expression and communication.

They approved a committee amendment to include the aircraft, synthetic rubber and synthetic gasoline industries among industries the party wants to nationalize.

Proposals Rejected

Th convention rejected an amendment which would have called upon the President to recall his representative to the Vatican.

It also rejected an attempt to strike out a provision calling for legislation to make it a Federal crime to disseminate anti-Semitic, anti-Negro and all other propaganda by mail, radio, motion picture or other means of communication.

The session brought a quick succession of speeches.

Anna Louise Strong, California author, assailed American policy in China, underscoring demands for withdrawal of American troops from China, and an immediate stop of aid to Chiang Kai-shek.

Paul Robeson, cochairman of the Wallace-for-President Committee, told the delegates he was strongly opposed to the Marshall Plan and "the whole fabric of American imperialism."

Rogge Hits Loyalty Program

O. John Rogge, former assistant to the Attorney General who quit the Justice Department in a dispute revolving about the department's decision not to continue the sedition trials, made a blistering attack on the President's loyalty order, and on the type of charges being brought against Federal employes.

"We must take successful action in the form of this Progressive Party or we shall be saddled with fascism, American style," Rogge said.

Writer Howard Fast told the delegates he was the first of the writers, artists and scientists to be attacked by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and declared he was proud to have been a member of an organization devoted to the interest of republican Spain.

Rockwell Kent, artist and illustrator, successfully urged the convention to adopt a plank calling for a department of culture, with a secretary of Cabinet rank.

In its final minutes the convention approved a resolution protesting the slaying some months ago of George Polk, CBS correspondent in Greece. The resolution said there were "strong indications" Polk was slain by agents of the Greek government.

Again Parries Questions on Red Influence in Party; Convention Sessions On

Sat. 7-24-48

By Don Irwin

A Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, July 23.—Henry A. Wallace indorsed today the principle of industrial nationalization now under study by the platform committee of the new party convention that will nominate him for President here tomorrow.

Mr. Wallace made the statement shortly after his arrival here from New York at 11:40 a. m. to take over the reins of the convention, which held its first business session tonight in Convention Hall.

34

At the meeting, Charles P. Howard, Negro publisher from Iowa, in his keynote address, condemned wholesale the foreign and domestic policies of the two major parties and praised Mr. Wallace and his running mate, Senator Glen Taylor, of Idaho, as the men to chart new trails.

34 Sat.

With thousands of partisans expected here by special trains for tomorrow's session, tonight's audience hardly more than half filled the 14,000-seat hall. But it was a lusty throng, singing catchy Wallace songs and applauding Wallace slogans, sweltering all the while under Kleig lights. Most unusual of the Wallace symbols was a row of corn stalks that stood in the Iowa delegation.

7-24-48

Shortly after he stepped off the train and greeted the knot of enthusiastic supporters who met him at Broad Street Station, Mr. Wallace declared his chances for victory were "better than the dopesters will admit," but he declined any election forecast.

Interviewed later at the party's headquarters in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Mr. Wallace backed the principle of public ownership of basic industries and "large" banks if it improves service to the public. He said he favored a "progressive capitalism" consisting of "a certain amount of planning between government and industry."

Although outspoken on this and some other fields of new party policy, Mr. Wallace refused, a bit grimly at times, to answer questions on others—notably reports of Communist infiltration into party leadership. His stand brought heated exchanges with some reporters and bursts of applause from others among the 250 persons who jammed the steamy conference room.

In an effort to forestall questions that came anyway, Mr. Wallace said in his preliminary remarks: "There is one subject on which I won't talk, and it will be a great waste of time for you to bring it up—Communism."

Mr. Wallace said he was sure reporters wanted him to announce that he was either repudiating or embracing Communist support. Reading from the text of a two-month-old radio interview, he said he would repudiate no support that came to him because of his interest in world peace. He observed that Communists want peace because they want to see success for the "Russian experiment," while he wanted it to make way for social progress.

Trying another angle, a reporter asked for comment on the Russian-American deadlock over the Soviet blockade of Berlin. Mr. Wallace shut this one off with a promise to deal with the issue in his acceptance speech tomorrow night.

Thomas Brushed Off

Discussion struck a snag again when Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president who is doubling as a convention correspondent for "The Denver Post," raised the question of a debate with Mr. Wallace. Mr. Wallace replied that he would debate with President Trumon or Governor Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, his Republican opponent, but otherwise he would "conserve my strength."

Mr. Wallace also tangled with Dorothy Thompson, the columnist, when she objected to his declaration that pre-Communist Yugoslavia had a "medieval" land-ownership system.

The keynote address at Conention Hall was delivered by Mr. Howard, who was until recently a member of the Des Moines Republican organization.

Declarin gthat "this is really only the second convention to meet in this election," Mr. Howard described the Republican and Democratic conventions, whose decorations are being re-used by the third party, as "two sections of the same convention."

The Progressive Party Convention was the most spirited and spontaneous of the three national political conventions in this city this year. It also was the best disciplined. But anybody who thinks that there was anything mechanical about the enthusiasm is being misled, as can be attested by a witness of the wild scenes in Convention Hall and the madcap throng that packed about Henry Wallace's automobile as it threaded its way out of Shibe Park after the acceptance ceremonies there, scrambling to grasp his hand in a frenzy reminiscent of that seen in similar demonstrations for the late Franklin D. Roosevelt at the peak of his career.

7/22/48

Perhaps the real tragedy here, for those seeking, searching people and for their groping Messiah, who seems caught up in a spell of hypnotism, is the attempt by a hard and shrewd group, including Communists, to manipulate this movement for purposes of their own, with no conscience about using explosive issues to divide the nation in a precarious time, or stirring up trouble for trouble's sake.

And for this the major parties must take part of the blame by leaving undone during recent years some of the essential things that should have been done, and by being wary and political and diplomatic when boldness was required and a quest sought for new ways in a new age.

Tues. 7-27-48

For this Henry Wallace's third party, like other third parties through our history, will provide an irritant to make the two major parties seek new and bold solutions of our problems. That it already is having this effect was demonstrated to a degree by the platforms of the Republican and Democratic Parties adopted at their own conventions here recently, and likewise by the new aggressive tack of President Truman, leader of the party that will obviously suffer most from the new Progressive Party, in pointing out the derelictions of the Eightieth Congress to which his party also contributed and which he is now asking Congress to repair in its special session.

Withdrawal uld Help, 000 Told

Courier-Journal 7-25-48

OBERT L. RIGGS.

pondent, The Courier-Journal.

Philadelphia, July 24.—Henry A. Wallace called tonight for the removal of United States troops from Berlin.

He demanded that action, which would leave Russia in military control of the German capital, in a speech accepting the Progressive Party's nomination.

Addressing a crowd of close to 0,000 in Shibe Park, Philadelphia's baseball field, Wallace laid upon the shoulders of the United States Government the entire blame for the Berlin crisis.

The crisis, he said, is the inevitable result of the Truman Administration's "get-tough-with-Russia" policy. Instead of pressing for a showdown with Russia over Berlin, Wallace said, this country should pull out its troops in a search for peace.

Says Truman Would Suffer.

Such a military withdrawal, he said, would not cost the American people any loss of prestige. It would cause President Truman loss of prestige, he said; it would cause a loss of prestige to John Foster Dulles, who is Governor Thomas E. Dewey's foreign-policy adviser.

All the bankers, brokers, and generals who dominate the Truman Administration, Wallace said, would lose prestige if there is no showdown over Berlin. "But," he added, "the American people won't lose prestige by demanding fundamental discussions looking to peace.

"Our prestige in Germany went sinking when we divided Germany and established the western sector as [illegible] British colony. When we [illegible] we gave up Berlin politically. We can't lose anything by giving it up militarily in a search for peace."

Nominated [illegible]

Wallace and his running mate, Glen H. Taylor, cowboy-singer Democratic senator from Idaho, were made the new party's nominees this afternoon at a convention session which formalized a decision made months ago.

Tomorrow the convention will approve a platform which goes somewhat to the left of the Roosevelt New Deal on domestic issues and which disagrees with the Truman Administration's foreign policy at every point at which it conflicts with Russia's wishes.

A condensation of the platform text and other convention news are on Page 6. Governor Dewey says on Page 7 the U. S. must not surrender its rights in Berlin "under duress."

Senator Taylor, in his acceptance speech to the crowd at the ball park, echoed the platform's denunciation of the Marshall plan, of the Truman Doctrine in Greece and Turkey, and echoed its demand that the United States pull out of China and Korea—which would give Russia a free hand in Asia.

'Free Samples Around World.'

"The European Recovery Administration," Taylor said, "is not a plan to aid friendly nations to recover economically. It is not even a plan to feed hungry people. It is a cynical scheme to enable our cartelists and exploiters to filch billions of dollars from the pockets of American taxpayers for a scheme to corner world markets. The idea is to use taxpayers' money and send free samples all around the world."

For more than a half hour before the acceptance speeches the crowd responded like the faithful n old-fashioned revival while iam Gailmor, Wallace's fund-raising expert, extracted money from it.

Gailmor did not announce the amount raised in pledges and cash, but it ran into a large figure. He got at least 10 promises of $1,000, many more for $500 and $250, and smaller pledges.

The climax of the money raising came when Gailmor called on all those willing to give from $1 to $20 to stand and wave the folding money at the television cameras. At least 15,000 responded to his plea and waved their money.

The crowd had been warmed up for the money-raising by fiery speeches from Vito Marcantonio, the extreme left-wing representative in Congress from New York's American Labor Party, and by Paul Robeson, the famous Negro baritone.

Robeson Talks and Sings.

Robeson, who long has proclaimed his admiration for Russia, not only spoke, but sang. The crowd joined with him on the choruses of "Marching On With Henry Wallace," which is sung to "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

There were not more than 3,000 vacant seats in the stands, which hold 33,000.

Taylor, the most informal of left-wingers, closed his speech by participating in a barbershop quartet with his wife, his brother, who is a railroad engineer, and the Taylors' teen-age son. The two young Taylor boys also joined in. The song was "I Love You As I Never Loved Before."

Snake Dance Held in Park.

Before Wallace mounted the speaker's stand at second base, he and Taylor, accompanied by their wives, rode around the ball park in an open car while the crowd chanted, "We want Wallace." A second car followed, carrying Taylor's children and brother.

Behind the car several hundred spectators poured onto the field in a well-organized demonstration. Most of them were young. They joined hands in a snake dance like college students celebrating a football victory.

This country would not be in the midst of a crisis with Russia if he were President, said Wallace, who was dumped as Vice-President by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944 and dropped from Truman's Cabinet two years ago because he publicly opposed the policy of halting Soviet expansion.

'Carbon-Copy' Republicans.

Had he or Roosevelt been President during the past two years, Wallace said, this country would have reached an agreement with Russia. Until such agreement is reached, he said, Germany will continue to be the core of every world crisis.

Wallace charged that the Truman Administration and the "carbon-copy" Republicans who cooperate on foreign policy have slammed the door twice recently in the face of Russian efforts to seek peaceful solutions to Soviet-American problems.

He recalled that two months ago Premier Stalin and Foreign Minister Molotov interpreted a note from U. S. Ambassador Bedell Smith as an invitation to negotiate.

Tells of Russians' Eagerness.

"Do you remember," he asked, "how the Russians responded with what seemed like real eagerness? You remember that day. It was as if somebody suddenly declared peace. But what happened?

"Within 24 hours our Administration, having consulted its carbon-copy opposite party, slammed the door it had itself swung open."

Wallace reminded the crowd that he then sent a letter to Stalin, setting forth a program for negotiations which Stalin welcomed.

"When Stalin responded to that letter," Wallace said, "the get-tough boys slammed the door again. Since that time there have been no more approaches—except toward conflict. There are two sides to every curtain.

"And so Germany still festers at the heart of all peacemaking. Yet, by closing the door to peace talks with Russian leaders, nothing remains but the fruitless discussions of minor officials in Berlin.

"I say the peace of the world is far too fragile to be shuttled back and forth through a narrow air corridor in freighter planes.

"I say the lives of our children and our children's parents are far too precious to be left to the tempers of second lieutenants at road barriers where zone meets zone, or to the generals who are quoted calmly as favoring a 'show of strength.'

"I say that if reasonable men, men without special interests, peace-loving men — if Franklin Roosevelt were in Washington today—there would be no crisis in Berlin. Long before this, the leaders of both nations would have rooted out the causes for conflict.

Lashes At Big Bankers.

"We hear it said that we should have a showdown at Berlin. But what is the showdown about? What is the American public interest which will be served by a showdown? There may be some private interests, some interests of Dillon, Read, and international bankers.

"Dillon, Read's distinguished alumni, Secretary Forrestal and General Draper, and Dewey's Wall Street lawyer, John F. Dulles, are major advisers on this issue.

"But I have yet to meet the American in shop or field or college or independent business who wants to give up his life to defend Dillon, Read."

Two years ago, Wallace said, he warned President Truman that the bankers and the brokers and the big brass had launched us upon a dangerous policy—the get-tough policy.

"Berlin need not have happened," he said.

"Berlin did not happen. Berlin was caused. When we were set upon the road of the get-tough policy, I warned that its end was inevitable. Berlin is becoming that end."

The Wallace party, which yesterday named itself the Progressive Party, set up a permanent organization under rules which give its leadership firm control of its affairs.

Majority Can Do Business.

Those rules permit the national committee to call a national convention at any time and to limit the gathering to the consideration of such subjects as shall be decided upon by the committee.

The rules also provide that it shall not be necessary for a majority of delegates to be present before business can be transacted. Instead, a majority of those present, no matter how small their number, can do business. This is a technique familiar to Communist organizations.

In addition to his assault upon Truman's foreign policy, Wallace charged the President with deserting the Roosevelt New Deal on the domestic front.

"In Hyde Park," he said, "they buried our President. In Washington they buried our dreams. One day after Roosevelt died, Harry Truman entered the White House.

'Ghosts' Entered Government.

"And 46 days later Herbert Hoover was there. It was a time of comings and goings. Into the Government came the ghosts of the great depression, the banking-house boys, and the oil-well diplomats.

"In marched the generals—and out went the men who had built the T.V.A. and the Grand Coulee, the men who had planned social security and built federal housing, the men who had dug the farmer out of the Dust Bowl and the workman out of the sweatshop.

"A time of comings and goings—the shadows of the past coming in fast—and the lights going out slowly—the exodus of the torch-bearers of the New Deal."

Wallace's Answer On Reds Is Neutral

7-24-48

Philadelphia, July 23.—Henry Wallace, still refusing to renounce or embrace his Communist support, came here to witness the birth of his New Party.

For nearly an hour he parried questions on everything from communism to the famed "Guru letters," at a press conference as unusual as this so-called "people's" convention.

Then he sat around in his suite waiting for his party to be founded at a convention hall singfest tonight. He had only one thing in common with Harry S. Truman. He never waited around in suspense.

3rd party

Saturday the still unnamed new party will nominate Wallace and Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho as inevitably as the Democrats chose Truman and Barkley. And Saturday night, in the Philadelphia Athletics' sprawling Shibe Park, Wallace and Taylor will "accept."

The highlight of Wallace's day was the embattled press conference, in which another presidential candidate, in the role of a reporter, vied with other newsmen in Wallace point and counterpoint. No referee was present and there was no decision count.

Only one point was really settled, and Wallace scored that at the start. He reread an old statement saying Communist support was "a political liability" but said he wouldn't repudiate any support "which comes to me on the basis of interest in peace."

"No matter how hard you try," he told reporters, "you are not going to get me to indulge in any Red-baiting, and no matter how hard you try you are not going to get me to say I embrace communism."

7-24-48

Met By Chorus

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace arrived from New York at 10:40 a.m. A small but enthusiastic crowd of about 500 greeted them as they stepped off the train. A banjo-strumming "youth for Wallace" club chorus struck up "We're going to Roll Wallace Along." Wallace himself allowed that "after this convention things are really going to roll."

Unlike his more sanguine running mate, Senator Taylor, Wallace said he never has predicted he will win in November but "my chances are better than many of the dopesters will admit."

The crowd trailed along as Wallace walked the few blocks to his Bellevue-Stratford headquarters. Senator Taylor, C. B. (Beanie) Baldwin, his campaign manager and Elmer Benson, former Governor and Senator from Minnesota and chairman of the National Wallace for President committee, hoofed it with him.

Conference on Roof

Normal mid-morning street crowds showed only passing interest. There were some cheers and a few boos. In his seventh floor suite Mr. and Mrs. Wallace posed for pictures, then Wallace faced the mass press turnout on the roof of the hotel.

The new party's preselected standard bearer opened the strange press conference by reading excerpts from a letter from George Polk, American newspaperman recently murdered in Greece, and personally presenting Bill Polk, brother of George, to reporters.

The letter inclosed a copy of George Polk's resignation from Newsweek magazine complaining the magazine wasn't objectively "resisting the impluse to drift with public feeling."

Wallace quoted George Polk's December, 1947, London letter to Bill, referring to "frightening developments in the U. S. A," and saying: "Molotov has assumed a very stupid line here and has succeeded in getting the United States, France and Britain to put aside their own differences just to oppose Russia."

'Guru Letter' Mystery

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, appearing here as Reporter Thomas of the Denver Post, got in a few questions about the Smith Act, under which 12 top Communist Party leaders were indicted.

Then questioners hit the one issue Wallace wouldn't discuss, the vague and mysterious "Guru letters" written to the late leader of a New York mystic sect. The question was did Wallace write them. And Wallace wouldn't say.

"A great deal has been published about the Guru letters; will you tell us if you wrote them?" a reporter asked.

"I never discuss Westbrook Pegler (the syndicated columnist who has written often about the letters)," Wallace replied.

"I'm Westbrook Pegler," came Pegler's own voice. "I don't want you to discuss me, but the letters—did you or did you not write them?"

"I will never engage in any discussion with Westbrook Pegler," replied Wallace. 7-24-48

Martin Hayden of the Detroit News, tired his luck and Wallace snapped: "I will never engage in any discussion with a stooge of Westbrook Pegler."

Warren B. Francis of the Los Angeles Times asked the same question and got the same reply.

Washington Post Reporter Mary Spargo then spoke up. She said she was not acquainted with Pegler and did not like his column. But she said the question was being asked by legitimate newspapermen and wanted to know if Wallace were going to call everyone a Pegler stooge when asked it.

Mencken Speaks Up

Wallace then varied his line to say, "I will handle that in my own way but I will not discuss it on this occasion."

But the press barrage wasn't over. A dry voice spoke up.

"My name is Mencken, H. L. (Baltimore Sun papers)," it said. "Will you call me a stooge of Pegler?"

Wallace said he wouldn't.

"Then will you tell me—did you write them?" asked Mencken.

Wallace saidhe wanted to get on to something important.

"Why not answer now? We're all here," said Mencken. Wallace didn't answer. Doris Fleeson of the Bell Syndicate tried again, with the same results.

Some Definitions

The press conference got back to Wallace's views and the New Party candidate told reporters what he meant by "progessive capitalism," limited nationalization of industry and cooperation with Russia for peace.

Progressive capitalism—the opposite of reactionary capitalism which he said controls production to create a scarcity and to obtain maximum tprofits. He said progressive capitalism involves planning at key spots to obtain moderate prices, moderate profits and maximum production.

Nationalization—He was less definite than the New Party's platform. Wallace said he favored public ownership of aircraft factories and public utilities and might be for nationalization of the coal industry, but would go slow when it came to steel. Public ownership of large banks might become necessary, he said, if present Government policies force a depression "more serious than in 1932."

Relations with Russia—He neither plans another letter to Stalin or a trip to Russia but he would try both "if I thought it would further the cause of peace."

No Answer to ADA

He was asked if he thought it possible to negotiate in good faith with Russia—if Russia hadn't shown "bad faith" after Yalta and Potsdam. Wallace conceded Russian pledges of free elections in liberated territories had not been honored but said both sides were partly to blame. Part of the difficulty, he said, was a misunderstanding of the meaning of the word "free."

Asked how he would define the word "free" he said both sides should agree in advance on a meaning, adding: "I'd like to see a free election in this country, as far as that goes."

Wallace said he plans no answer to Americans for Democratic Action for charging his new party is the Communist-dominated instrument of the Soviet.

"You are not going to entice me into saying anything about the rank and file of ADA," he said, "because they really ought to be with us."

He was asked if he might step out of the race in view of the strong civil rights plank adopted by the Democrats.

"I am not going to quit," he said. 7-24-48

He told reporters that if he were President one of his first acts would be to end segregation in the armed forces by presidential proclamation.

Scrap Bombs, Repeal Draft, Party Urges

Washington Post

Washington, D.C.

7-24-48

Philadelphia, July 23 (AP).—Destruction of all atom bombs, repeal of the draft law and peace with Russia! That was the cry today of Henry Wallace's third party in the semi-final draft of its 6500 word platform.

The platform, being whipped into final shape by the 74-member party resolutions committee, calls also for "full equality" for Negroes and other minorities.

It asks Government ownership of a large segment of the Nation's economy—at first the large banks, railroads and electric power and gas industries.

It demands a return to price controls to fight the high cost of living.

It promises "a greater New Deal."

It proposes a Federal bonus for war veterans "based on length of service."

In the "peace, freedom and abundance" platform, the party declares itself the heir of "Jefferson Jackson and Lincoln—of Frederick Douglass, Altgeld and Debs—of Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Here are other things the pre-

Russia—The New Party pledges "through negotiation and discussion with the Soviet Union, in good faith, to find areas of agreement to win the peace."

Disarmament—Work through the United Nations for a world disarmament agreement to outlaw the atomic bomb, bacteriological warfare, and all other instruments of mass destruction; to destroy existing stockpiles of atomic bombs; to establish United Nations controls, including inspection, over the production of atomic energy.

United Nations—"The new party will work to realize Franklin D. Roosevelt's ideal of the United Nations as a true world family of nations, by defending its charter and seeking to prevent its transformation into the diplomatic or military instrument of any one power or group of powers."

Also, in the interest of peace, repeal the peacetime draft, and repudiate the Marshall Plan for European aid nad the "Truman Doctrine." Establish in the United Nations a fund to promote international recovery.

Civil Rights—"Full equality" for the Negroes and other people and enactment of Federal antilynch, antipoll tax, antidiscrimination and fair employment practices legislation, and legislation abolishing segregation in interstate travel. Abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee and prohibit the FBI "from investigating or interfering with the political beliefs and activities of citizens." Abrogate President Truman's "loyalty purge order." 7-24-48

Monopoly—Public ownership "of key sectors of the economy wherever monopolies block expansion of the economy or deny the people the enjoyment of an abundance of goods and services at fair prices. As a first step, the largest banks, the railroads, the electric power and gas industries, and industries primarily dependent on Government funds or Government purchases will be placed under public ownership."

Labor—Repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act and "restore labor's equality in collective bargaining by re-enacting the principles of the Wagner and Norris-La Guardia Acts. Grant employes in publicly owned industries the right to organize and to strike. A $1 an hour minimum wage for all workers.

Housing—An emergency Federal Housing program "to build within the next two years four million low-rent and low-cost dwellings for homeless and doubled-up families, with priority to veterans, a long-range program to build 25 million new home sin 10 years.

Agriculture—Price supports for all major crops; low-cost crop insurance; protect the family-size farm; help tenants to farm ownership; support co-ops.

Security and Health—"Extend Social Security protection to every man, woman and child in the United States, providing old-age pensions of $100 a month for all persons at the age of 60, disability and sickness benefits."

Taxation—Free from income taxes all families and individuals "whose income falls below the minimum necessary for a decent standard of living." Tax corporations "at steeply graduated rates to eliminate profiteering."

Education—Guarantee with Federal funds "every man, woman and child in America" the right of a good education.

Women—Legislation "to guarantee full economic and political equality to women."

Independent business—"Encourage and safeguard independent business by providing adequate working capital and development loans at low interest rates, granting tax relief, and giving independent and small business a fair share of Government contracts."

Youth—Guarantee to youth "the right to education and employment without discrimination. The New Party will lower the voting age to 18."

Economic planning — Develop, on the TVA pattern, hte regional plans nad river-valley authorities projected by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Israel—Immediate full recognition of the new state, lifting of the arms embargo to permit shipment of arms to Israel; employment of economic and diplomatic sanctions against nations "carrying on or abetting aggression against the ew state; prompt generous finan- ial assistance."

Freedom of "colonial peoples—Grant independence to Puerto Rico.

Wallace's Stage Managers

Washington

PHILADELPHIA.—At this third political convention to be held in Philadelphia there can be few surprises. The ground has been too carefully prepared from the first day, now more than six months ago, that Henry Wallace gave his consent to lead a third-party movement.

Childs

The resentment of non-Communist liberals and radicals at the domination of the Communists and fellow travelers may boil up. And there is reason to believe Wallace would welcome such a protest, which would show that the convention is not too tightly stage-managed.

But otherwise the program will move on toward the climax in Shibe Park when Wallace and his running mate, Senator Glenn Taylor of Idaho, appear before a crowd that is certain to be wildly enthusiastic. This is a propaganda show, and the propaganda is aimed not so much at the present as at the future.

The shrewd stage managers are aiming at 1952. They do not believe, as Wallace says he believes, in the future of American capitalism. They see in inflationary prices and the trembling uncertainty of the stock market the symptoms of a new crash and depression, and they want to be ready to lead millions of dissatisfied Americans in another political direction.

These stage managers are something new on the national political scene. With one or two exceptions, they have never before engaged in the rough-and-tumble of American politics and they never held elective office. Behind a barricade of mimeograph machines these dedicated men and women have carried on a propaganda warfare.

Sun. 7-24-48

THIS IS not said to belittle their influence. In organized labor, before Philip Murray of the CIO decided on a showdown, the power they exerted was far out of proportion to their numbers. Almost the only substantial labor support for the Wallace party comes today from the United Electrical Workers.

The most conspicuous stage manager is C. B. Baldwin, one of the few former associates of Wallace in the New Deal, beside him in the present venture. A Virginian, he has an easy surface manner that belies his intense energy and organizing capacity, as does his smooth, boyish face.

Almost as important in some respects as Baldwin, himself, is his new wife, the former Lillian Traugott, who was in Europe for the Office of Strategic Services for part of the war. Mrs. Baldwin is thoroughly familiar with the politics of the Left both in Europe and this country.

Post

The individual who has made himself invaluable to Wallace personally is Lewis Frank, jr. Soft-spoken, a brilliant intellectual, Frank is always at hand to help in the preparation of a speech or to discuss with the third-party candidate his doubts and difficulties.

The son of a wealthy paper-box manufacturer in Detroit, Frank might almost be a character out of one of the highly successful plays of Lillian Hellman with their sharply drawn villians, their pathetic victims and their heroes. Miss Hellman is one of the "big names" that lend prestige to the party and who presumably also comes through with generous contributions.

Sun. 7-24-48

ONE OF the few officeholders active in the party is Representative Vito Marcantonio of New York City. Marc, as he is called by almost everyone, must be rated as one of the four or five top managers of the party. He knows a lot about practical politics and he has a demagogic skill in stirring a crowd.

Between Marc and another active manager, Lee Pressman, a rivalry is said to have grown up. Pressman, who resigned as counsel for the CIO when Murray forced a showdown over Wallace, is running for Congress on the third-party ticket in a Brooklyn district. He has an aggressive personality and a powerful intellect.

Paul Robeson, the Negro singer and a member of the executive committee, is high on the list. So is Clark Foreman, who was formerly the active force in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Another former CIO executive taking a leading part in the Wallace movement is John Abt.

Perhaps the major theme of the convention is peace with the Soviet Union. This is sounded at a moment when relations between the two nations, at the point of greatest friction in Berlin, have deteriorated so that alarmist talk of war is heard frequently.

7-24-48

The dedicated men and women working for the third party know this very well. Berlin is a kind of lurid backdrop for what happens here. If war with the Soviet Union should come, the FBI would move at once to confine thousands suspected of allegiance to world communism rather than to the United States. And it is no secret that some of those who would be confined are here at this convention. That is part of the drama just offstage, but you would never suspect it watching the stage managers go about their work.

Wallace Men Set Date For 3d Party Convention

The Courier-Journal

Louisville, Ky.

(34d)

From Wire Dispatches.

Chicago, April 11.—Leading supporters of Henry A. Wallace today hit the U. S. stand in the Italian elections and issued a call for a national convention at Philadelphia July 24-25 to launch formally a third party.

About 400 members of the Wallace for President Committee, meeting here with Wallace to lay the groundwork for the new party, called on his supporters and clubs to send representatives to the convention, to found the party, select a name, and adopt a platform.

4-12-48

The organization already has its candidates—Wallace and Senator Taylor, (D., Ida.), as his running mate.

Told to Ignore U. S. Advice.

The committee, repudiating the U. S. Government's stand in the crucial Italian election next Sunday, sent cables to Italian political leaders calling on their followers to ignore American advice and to vote for any candidates desired.

The committee also called for a defeat of the draft and universal-military-training programs as part of a nation-wide "peace drive."

The delegates called for "establishment of a truly representative democratic Italian Government.

They condemned "the efforts of our Government to interfere in the April 18 elections and to dictate their outcome."

Preach War Is Inevitable.

The Courier-Journal

The peace resolution declared, "the militarists and monopolists preach that war is inevitable . . . against a great ally in the common struggle" and that "responsible leaders are moving with calculated steps to militarize our way of life."

"Under cover of war hysteria," the resolution said, "political bankruptcy seeks to retrieve its losses, monopoly to maintain its profits, and militarists their dominance."

Louisville

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, president of the Townsend Clubs of America, used delegates to work for a national "cradle-to-grave insurance plan as the best guarantee against depression."

Ky.

The message to the Italian people urged them "to vote for the candidates of their free choice and not to yield to coercion or intimidation."

It said, "we repudiate our Government's threat to cut off food from Italy unless the election results please it. Hungry children must not go unfed because their parents do not vote as ordered from abroad." The message indorsed "the Wallace plan for international aid through the United Nations to all needy peoples regardless of their political beliefs."

4-12-48

The peace resolution also called for a halt to "wasteful" arms expenditures and a stop to "the militarizing of our science."

Declares He Alienated Almost All Questioners; Reading of Polk Letter Puzzles Reporters; His Handling of 'Guru' Issue Criticized

By Rebecca West

PHILADELPHIA, July 23.—I have just come from a press conference given by Henry Wallace, and I wish the general public could have attended it. People could have learned so much just by watching the faces of Henry Wallace and the men and women who questioned him. There was a reciprocal process of softening and hardening which it was fascinating to observe.

First, Mr. Wallace came in, very attractive with that handsomeness which at first recalls the ruggedness of Lincoln, though perhaps it would be more accurate to call it the male counterpart of the windswept picturesqueness of Katharine Hepburn.

He began the press conference oddly by reading a letter which George Polk, the American Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent whose tied and mutilated body was recovered from Greek waters, had sent some time before his death to "Newsweek," announcing his resignation on the ground that that paper lacked objectivity in the handling of news. The letter was in his hands because George Polk had sent a copy to his young brother, a Harvard student, who sat on the platform.

Wonders What Was Meant

It was a dreadful crime, and this was a pietous occasion, and one wondered just why Mr. Wallace had brought the matter up. He ended his reading of the letter by an intimation that th thought not enough was being done to track down the murderers of George Polk. This seemed puzzling.

Was he hinting that nobody cares if an objective reporter gets killed? If so, who in particular was he alleging did not care? Did he mean that the State Department or C. B. S. was rubbing its hands and saying, "We are so pleased that Mr. Polk was murdered because he told the truth and we certainly are not going to put ourselves out to find the murderers, except for the purpose of slipping them a few bills?"

If he did not mean that, what did he mean? If he meant that, then this country is in a terrible which in almost eevry case alienated the questioner in a deep way It was as if he had heard a great deal about sabotage as an admirable thing from his far-left friends and, being an absent-minded man, had started sabotaging himself.

He did not answer the extremely logical and sensible question of a Negro who wanted to know whether he would send troops down South to enforce a Federal law giving Negroes full civil rights, and every time he dodged this question his face grew softer and less rugged.

Then somebody asked him whether he wrote the celebrated "Guru" letters. These letters appear to be remarkable only for their resolute mysticism, and as this is no crime nor even bad manners it seems odd that Mr. Wallace should not admit that he wrote them if he did write them, and deny that he wrote them if he did not. It would also have been comprehensible if he had told the questioner to mind his own business and leave other people's private letters alone.

Will Speak at Own Time

But instead his face got softer and softer, and he said that he would answer no question put to him by a stooge of Westbrook Pegler. There was not the slightest evidence that the questioner had anything to do with Westbrook Pegler, and the newspaper men began to look more granitish than ever.

Then Mr. Pegler got up and said, "I am Westbrook Pegler," and the name seemed hard as iron with all its consonants. Mr. Wallace refused to answer him because he was Westbrook Pegler, and his face and voice seemed pappy.

Other people pressed him for an answer, among them Henry Mencken. He is a short man and Mrs. Wallace a tall man, but he seemed to be made of a more durable substance, and his very blue eyes looked hard as fact itself. With perfect good humor he asked what possible reason Mr. Wallace could have for not answering this question, when obviously the matter had gone so far that it was only sensible to clear it up.

Mr. Wallace, his face now the same substance as a tallow candle, said that he would speak of this matter at his own time and his own discretion. Others pressed him along the same lines, and he remained as immitably evasive.

Questioned by Thomas

Sturdy old Norman Thomas got up and asked him why he attacked Dewey and Truman for refusing to debate with him when he had refused to debate with Norman Thomas himself, and he clung with gentle obstinacy to his inconsistent stand.

Then somebody asked him about Tito and the Cominform, he was inspired to deliver a shi address on Yugoslavia which was technically remarkable because it revealed in a very few words that he knew nothing whatsoever about the present or the past of Yugoslavia, two quite large subjects.

He spoke of the "feudal economy' of Yugoslavia, in spite of the fact that there has been no feudalism in Yugoslavia since the fourteenth century owing to the Turkish occupation, except in the districts which formerly belonged to the Austro-Hungarian Empire, where they were abolished on the fall of that empire in 1918. Yugoslavia is a land of small landed proprietors, without a tract of feudalism.

That brought up Dorothy Thompson, who knew Yugoslavia well, and she came down on him like a ton of quite well-mannered but still crushing bricks. He then excused himself in a short discourse which showed that he did not know the meaning of the expression "feudal economy."

Raises Polk Case

What was also remarkable was that he appeared to think that Moscow had been trying to make Tito break up large estates and give the peasants the land, when anybody conversant with the facts knows that Moscow wanted Tito to break up the peasants' properties and form collective farms.

Then the contrast of substance in questioned and questioners became most remarkable. A man got up who said htat he represented C. B. S. He was a quiet man and he spoke politely and without raising his voice. But he asked Mr. Wallace what exactly he thought C. B. S. could have done more than they were doing to find the murderers of Mr. Polk, and told what they were doing.

Mr. Wallace found no answer. He just said that he thought that they could be doing more, and the man quietly asked him what he meant by more.

If one is to supply the objective truth about the occasion, one must say that Mr. Wallace was like a candle in great heat, twisting, pliable, deliquescent.

The Henry Wallace Way

The Times-Picayune

The Henry Wallace convention closed, appropriately enough, with a circus session in a baseball park. It was featured by oratory lurid enough to please all malcontents here and abroad who are wholly displeased with these United States. Its platform calls in practical effect for "making America over" into a totalitarian state very much after the Moscow pattern, with government ownership of many industries and regimentation of employments in such private enterprises as may be left for a time unseized. It calls for repudiation of the European recovery plan, for "peace with Russia" to be negotiated by Henry. And it promises, after the totalitarian fashion, that the rulers of the remade government will give prodigally, out of the nation's assumedly illimitable and inexhaustible abundance, to gratify the wishes and satisfy the cravings of the discontented.

7-26-48

New Orleans, La.

Its plank on Communism reportedly was rewritten and toned down into a promise to fight for the "constitutional rights" of Communists to free speech. Whether that implies their "right" to advocate the overthrow of democratic constitutional government by force and violence is not set forth by the platform summary. But some of the convention orators denounced the indictment of Communists charged with plotting our government's overthrow by violence—apparently conceding by implication at least, that practice as a "right" to Mr. Stalin's American followers and agents.

Here we have the closest approach yet recorded by any American party to the Communist "ideal" of despotically centralized power administered by a ruling group of "representatives of the people" to bestow blessings upon their wards. How it worked out in Hitler's Germany, how it is being worked in Stalin's Russia, may cause misgivings in millions of American minds. But Henry might do better, according to his own belief and that of his admirers. If you want that sort of thing, you might get it more quickly under Henry. But if you don't, you will be wise to let him go wherever he is going without your company or vote. 7-26-48

Wallace Backers Are Seen Trying To Sing Him Into the Presidency

Tunes Have a Prominent Place in New Party's Convention, With 'The Same Merry-Go-Round' Likely to Be Theme

Special to The [N]

PHILADELPHIA, July 22—Supporters of Henry A. Wallace are going to try to sing him into the Presidency. Every session of the national convention of the New party, which will convene tomorrow night in the Municipal Auditorium, will open with a "Sing for Wallace" program, lasting half an hour.

Apparently the theme song of the convention will be "The Same Merry-Go-Round," published by People's Songs, New York, which says: Fri. 7-23-48

"It's the same, same merry-go-round

"Which one will you ride this year?

"The donkey and the elephant bob up and down

"On the same merry-go-round.

"The elephant comes from the North,

"The donkey may come from the South.

"But don't let them fool you

"Divide you and rule you

"Cause they've got the same bit in their mouth.

"If you want to ride safe and sound,

"Get off-a the merry-go-round.

"To be a real smarty,

"Just join the New party

"And get your two feet on the ground."

Wallace supporters man a sound truck, bearing a miniature merry-go-round with elephants and donkeys instead of the customary horses, from which they appeal for support for the Wallace-Taylor ticket on the streets here.

Another song, entitled "Great Day," reads in part:

"One of these mornings bright and fair Fri. 7-23-48
"Harry Truman won't be there.
"Dewey was a washout in '44,
"In '48 he ain't much more."

Still another song reads:

"Columbia's the gem of the ocean, they say.
"We're fighting Jim Crow in Columbia today."

The New party's publicity department had said that the headquarters of the convention's rules committee, of which Representative Vito Marcantonio of New York is chairman, would be in the Pink Room of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. However, a later notice on the hotel's bulletin board said that the committee's headquarters were moved to the Green Room.

The convention's committee of arrangements avoided possible sarcastic comments by assigning the Western Union to the Red Room. However, the press badges for the convention, which were distributed today, are a bright red.

Atlanta Constitution

Mooning For Henry Wallace

Atlanta, Ga. - Tues. 7-27-48

348

PHILADELPHIA—The three-day national convention and ceremonies here attending the formal birth of Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party carried a deep undertone of tragedy, like the throbbing theme of a great orchestra, despite the excited surface gaiety and enthusiasm generated by its preponderantly youthful chorus.

These people gathered here from all over the country, many coming by day coach and some by hitchhiking. They were suffering from a persecution complex that provoked them to strike out bitterly in every direction. This, of itself, was an indictment of some aspects of our society and civilization of which our two great major parties must take heed, for the cry of the persecuted and downtrodden that went up here was an indictment of them and their manifest inadequacies of the moment.

Here was raised again, as through the centuries, the mourning of Israel and Rachel weeping for her children. Here in anguished tones rose the threnody of former black slaves still with the yoke of discrimination about their shoulders, though they live in a free land; in the scorching denunciation of a Negro woman writer, Shirley Graham, the biographer of Frederick Douglas and George Washington Carver, who inspired the Convention to reiterate in a reverberating chant her challenge: "Jim Crow must go"; in the bitter talk of Paul Robeson, who gives voice in glorious song to the tragic plight of his race; in the call to action by the Convention's keynote speaker, Charles Howard of Iowa, prominent lawyer, a Republican for 30 years, who told why he and so many of his race look to the new political movement in one simple sentence: Tues. 7-27-48

"For the first time in my life, I am experiencing human dignity."

Here were raised the protests of others who are sensitive to the uncertainties of this curious postwar age when there is no peace; of war veterans and those who might again become war veterans and of their parents against the drift toward another war; of writers and artists who are fearful of the shackles being imposed on freedom of the mind and the spirit of atomic scientists who are constantly conscious of the moster they created and harried by the worry that unthinking or willful men may let it loose upon the world; of young people and old people who are afraid for their own security in an economy bolstered up paradoxically by expenditures for rebuilding the places laid waste by the last war and production of armaments for another possible war, flimsy foundations.

Wallace Refuses to Answer Pegler

Star New York, N.Y.

PHILADELPHIA, July 23 (AP)—Henry A. Wallace refused today to answer questions from columnist Westbrook Pegler or discuss the so-called "Guru letters."

The matter came up at Wallace's news conference when a reporter inquired whether the New Party presidential nominee was prepared to repudiate or comment "on the Guru letters."

These are letters which Pegler, a Hearst columnist, has said Wallace wrote to the head of some mystic cult in New York City.

"I never discuss Westbrook Pegler," Wallace said. 7-25-48

Back in the middle of the room a man stood up. Sun.

"My name is Westbrook Pegler," he announced.

He said that in the last few moments, Wallace had been speaking about various letters and also about newspapermen getting all the facts. So Pegler tried to get Wallace into discussing those "Guru letters."

Wallace flushed, looked straight at Pegler and said:

"I will never engage in any discussion whatsoever with Westbrook Pegler."

Pegler sat down. Somebody who said he was from the Detroit News got up and asked:

"Did you write the Guru letters?"

"I will never engage in any discussion with the stooge of Westbrook Pegler," Wallace declared.

Warren Francis of the Los Angeles Times asked why Wallace never has brought suit in connection with reports of these letters.

Again Wallace said he wouldn't discuss anything with a Pegler stooge. Sun. 7-25-48

And he continued to fend off questions, saying he would discuss the matter in his own discretion and at a time of his own choosing.

Big Southern Vote Is Seen

Star New York N.Y. Sun. 7-25-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 23 (AP)—A prediction that the Wallace New Party will get on the ballot in every Southern state except Florida—and has a "very good chance" of winning in some of them—Came today from Clark Foreman.

Foreman, who heads the Southern Conference on Human Welfare, told reporters that Wallace's ticket will make an unexpected showing in November, especially if the special session of Congress abolishes state poll taxes. He is here as a delegate to the New Party's convention. 7-25-48

He predicted that elimination of the poll tax would mean many New Party voters going to the polls in November while Republicans, Democrats and Dixiecrat civil rights revolters would not turn out in numbers. Seven Southern states have poll taxes.

Jordan Stokes, Nashville attorney, sat with Foreman at the news conference. He said there is a "very definite chance that Tennessee will go to Wallace on the Republican nominee" in the November voting. Democrats traditionally have carried Tennessee although Republicans often are victorious in some areas in that state.

Wallace Party Convention Opens Today

By Tom O'Connor
STAR Convention Bureau

PHILADELPHIA, July 22—Henry Wallace's Gideon's Army of liberals, progressives and radicals is trooping into Philadelphia today to take its stand for a New Deal.

New York N.Y.

The formal opening of the founding convention of the New Party will take place tomorrow night at Convention Hall when Elmer Benson, former governor of Minnesota and now chairman of the National Wallace for President Committee, raps the gavel and calls the some 2600 delegates to order. Star

In that hall, where the Republicans fought over a candidate and the Democrats over a platform plank, the Wallaceites will be fighting not at all. The candidates have been picked, the platform is pretty well set, and the convention will serve principally as a huge rally—for Wallace and Taylor. N.Y.N.Y.

Meanwhile the platform committee is holding its open hearings and the luminaries are holding pre-convention press conferences.

So far the issue of communism and the relationship between the New Party and the Communist Party have dominated press conferences and presumably will dominate press reports. There are no signs, however, that it will dominate the convention.

Leaders and delegates appear to have worked out an approach to the issue, and are intent on shoving it aside. Star. N.Y.N.Y.

At today's first press conference, held by Taylor, the press began to cross-examine on the Communist question. A number of reporters fancied themselves in the role of prosecuting attorneys.

Thomas Forgets Role

At the afternoon press conference, held by Mrs. Elinor Gimbel, chairman of Women for Wallace, the press corps was augmented by the reporter accredited to the Denver Post, one Norman Thomas, who also happens to be the Socialist candidate for President.

Thomas began with questions but soon was making a speech on Czechoslavakia.

With Mrs. Gimbel, were Mrs. Lawrence Steefel or Minnesota, National co-chairman of Women for Wallace; Mrs. Katherine Van Orden, of New Jersey, honorary chairman of the League of Women Shoppers; Mrs. Harriet Crocker of Rhode Island, former chairman of the Rhode Island League of Women Voters, and Estelle Massey Osborne of New York, former president of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses.

The women boasted that half of the state directors of the Wallace movement were women, that most of the half-million signatures collected on the Wallace petition in California were obtained by women, and that 34 women were running for local or state office on the Wallace ticket. Star.

Must 'Follow' Wallace

New York N.Y.

However, reporters wanted to talk about communishm, so that was the talk. Mrs. Gimbel summed it up for Norman Thomas (whom she failed to recognize):

"If the Communists are willing to follow the Wallace line, all right. Mr. Wallace does not follow the Communist line. We do not consider this a very serious problem. If anybody gets in who wants to overthrow the government, we'll throw them out quick."

Thomas left the room remarking to a friend: 7-23-48

"We don't want to waste our shots. We'll save it for the Wallace press conference."

Wallace is due to arrive at 10 a.m. tomorrow and the New Party faithful are busy drumming up a big reception for him at Broad St. station.

Handbills announcing his arrival are being distributed, and the two sound trucks are plugging hard to get a crowd out.

The kind of turnout obtained may show up Philadelphia's attitude toward the New Party.

So far the attitude seems to be one of cool tolerance.

New Party Tunes Peace With Russia Platform

Birmingham Ala

Wed. 7-21-48

BY MAX HALL

PHILADELPHIA, July 21—(AP)—With the CIO and AFL coldly staying home, Henry Wallace's third party began hearing suggestions for a "peace with Russia" platform today and worked itself up for a revival-singing convention.

"Everyone wants Wallace
Friendly Henry Wallace,
Friendly Henry Wallace
In the White House."

A group of Wallace supporters was singing that on the sidewalk. The "New Pary's" founding convention will sing it—and other songs—Friday, Saturday and Sunday. A convention song-book was issued today.

As for the platform, two days of public hearings started today but the first tentative draft of the document was written yesterday.

It says—according to Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, platform chairman—that "capitalist America and Communist Russia can and must live together in the same world."

IT SAYS THE PARTY "pledges through negotiations and discussion with the Soviet Union, in good faith, to find areas of agreement to win the peace." wed.

It condemns the Marshall plan and other aspects of the U. S. foreign policy. It accuses the Republicans and Democrats of rejecting the United Nations and of obeying "the dictates of big business."

The platform goes before the convention for adoption Sunday.

The AFL and CIO were not among the 60 groups, even though the platform is certain to condemn the Taft-Hartley labor law. They didn't even reply to the invitations.

340

An AFL spokesman, Publicity Director Phil Pearl, said that the letter was thrown in the waste basket "because we regard the third party as a front for the Communist Party" (Wallace denies it). The CIO merely referred reporters to the action of executive board which condemned the third party last January.

wed. 7-21-48

Judging by advance indications, the Wallace convention may be the most musical political shin-dig on record.

THE DELEGATES, meeting in the same convention hall where the two major parties met, will choose a permanent name to replace "New Party," nominate Wallace for president and Sen. Glen Taylor of Idaho as vice president.

On the list for the Wallace hearings are some widely-known organizations like the National Education Association, the Townsend old-age movement, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Friends Committee on National Legislation, the United Electrical Workers (CIO), the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and the National Farmers Union.

For example: Armenians for Wallace, Armenian Progressive League of America, Armenian Compatriotic League of America, Armenian National Council of America, Armenian Youth of America. Ga.

Other examples: Provisional World Council of Dominated Nations, United Harlem Tenants Council, Amigos de Wallace, Women's Auxiliary of the National Maritime Union, and Slovenian-American Women's Committee.

Wallace Says: He Would Talk With Stalin

Fri 7-23-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 23—(UP)—Henry A. Wallace said today that he would "go over to Russia" and see Premier Josef Stalin if such action would serve the cause of peace.

Wallace made the statement at a news conference called shortly after he arrived here to be on hand at the founding convention of his new third party. The convention opens tonight. It will nominate Wallace and Sen. Glen Taylor of Idaho for president and vice president tomorrow afternoon.

Wallace said he had received no invitation from Stalin to visit Russia but that he would be glad to exchange views with the Soviet leader—by letter or personal visits—if such action would promote peace.

Columbia S.C.

The third party candidate urged reporters not to question him about his Communist support.

"No matter how hard you try, you are not going to get me to engage in Red-baiting, and no matter how hard you try you are not going to get me to admit that I am a Communist," he said.

Wallace read a part of a radio statement he made last May in Albuquerque, N. M. It said:

"I will not reject any support that comes to me on the basis of interest in peace."

Today he conceded, however, that Communist support "is a political liability."

The Columbia Record

Wallace also:

1. Said that if he were president now one of the first acts would be to end all kinds of segregation in the armed services.

2. Declined to discuss the tense Berlin situation, but promised to deal with United States-Soviet difficulties in the German capital in his acceptance speech Saturday night.

3. Said he had never discussed "one way or the other" the law under which a New York federal court this week indicted 12 United States Communist leaders on charges of seeking violent overthrow of the government.

Wallace said earlier on his arrival that the founding of the third party would mark "a great turning point in the history of the world."

Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass has been appointed national co-chairman of Women for Wallace and secretary of the credentials committee for the Wallace new party convention to be held in Philadelphia July 24-25. She is publisher of a Los Angeles, Calif., newspaper.

SCENE IS SIMILAR BUT CAST CHANGES

New York Times

Delegates Are Eager, Attentive and Orderly—Response Is Quick to Oral Shafts

By LUTHER A. HUSTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, July 23—The Progressive party convention opened here tonight with much the same trapping as the Republican and Democratic conventions that met in the same hall in recent weeks. But the cast was vastly different.

Sun 5-23-48

No one could liken the delegates at this political gathering to the group the Republicans brought here in June or the stalwarts that assembled under the banners of the Democrats earlier this month. The faces and the clothes of the Wallace party delegates were as different from those of the old parties as were the words their orators uttered. And that amounted to quite a difference.

There was a decided difference, also, in the atmosphere that prevaded the hall and in the demeanor of the delegates. Where old-party delegates had been blasé, indifferent often to what was being said and done on the platform, the New party delegates were eager, attentive, orderly and more spontaneously responsive to the verbal shafts hurled y speakers who may have ignored doctrinaire political logic but were not lacking in fervor.

New York, N.Y.

Air of Expectant Gayety

There was an atmosphere of expectant gayety, reflecting the youth and political freshness of the majority of the delegates, when the first session opened. The crowd was larger than at either of the opening sessions of the major party conventions and was orderly with less milling in the airles and on the floor.

The same scorching lights bored down on the delegates, the speakers on the platform and the toilers in the press box. Banners and flags, the inevitable trappings of such gatherings, were present in about the same assortments and profusion.

Suspended from the great dome of the hall, directly in front of the rostrum and over the heads of the delegates, was a five-pointed red, green, blue and black star. One point was for Franklin D. Roosevelt, one for Henry Wallace, one for Thomas Jefferson, one for Abraham Lincoln and one for the late Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska.

Above the stage, behind the speaker's platform, was strung a large ribbon-banner bearing the quotation, "Let Us Create a Better America," from the words of Mr. Wallace.

Along the base of arena boxes suspended at the sides of the convention floor another streamer proclaimed Mr. Wallcae's dictum: "When the old parties rot, the people have a right to be heard through a new party."

"Name" Band Is Lacking

The "Sing for Wallace" program which preceded the formal opening of the convention was spirited but resembled a revival meeting more than an offering of a philharmonic society.

A notable absentee was the "name" band that performed at the Republican and Democratic functions. The pipe organ reverbated from its chamber below the stage but banjos and mandolins and accordions provided most of the instrumental accompaniment.

When Charles P. Howard came to the rostrum for his keynote speech Iowa delegates marched in the aisles waving tall corn stalks.

A delegate from Missouri flaunted a banner inscribed "Missouri wants a brave big man, not a brave little man."

Another sign read, "Rockin' chair's ready, piano's in tune, send us back our Harry, Independence, Mo., for Wallace."

The demonstration for Mr. Howard brought the delegates to their feet, standing on their chairs. A cloud of banners, placards and state standards waved over the convention floor. It was not a particularly long demonstration but it was fervent.

Mention of the names of Mr Wallace and Senator Taylor brought cheers from the delegates just as the names of candidates and party heroes do at the major party conventions. The name of President Roosevelt was cheered as long and as loudly as it was on many occasions when mentioned at the Democratic convention.

All told, although it was the birth-night of a party that challenges most of the tenets of the parties it would like to drive from the political scene, it diverged but little from the methods and the procedure which have become tradition with the Republicans and the Democrats. The difference was chiefly that which distinguished the impetuousity of youth from the mellowness of age.

Party Plans To Support Communists In Fight For Free Speech Right

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — Henry A. Wallace got formally into the 1948 presidential race Saturday with a call for America to march its troops out of Berlin.

In an acceptance speech taking his Progressive Party's nomination, he said this country has nothing to lose by giving up Berlin "in a search for peace."

He said:

"If I were President, there would be no crisis in Berlin today."

Before he came to this big baseball yard with its 35,000 seats nearly filled, his supporters called approvingly when Rep. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, said the government is trying to "destroy us by intimidation and by the indictment of Communist leaders."

Urges Protest

"I call on my fellow members of the Progressive Party," Marcantonio stormed, "to join with all believers in democracy and freedom and go to Washington Aug. 5 to protest to President Truman and the Justice Department against the indictments of Communists."

7-25-48

Paul Robeson, the Negro singer and actor, followed through with a similar appeal to join the on-to-Washington march to combat the "hysteria" he said the administration is whipping up.

Communist leaders were indicted earlier this week on charges of advicating violent overthow of the government.

Twice Wallace said in his address of acceptance that there would be no Berlin crisis if he were in the White House.

"I am committed," Wallace said, "to peaceful negotiations with the Soviet government . . .

More Red Meat

"The American people want and deserve fewer Red issue and more red meat."

It was to frenzied cries for peace, on a platform of peace through dickering with Russia, that Wallace was nominated unanimously for the presidency by zealous third party followers.

By this side, the party convention placed Senator Glen Taylor, of Idaho, as the vice presidential candidate.

The Advertiser

That was at a long, roaring session in Convention Hall at which delegates didn't let their enthusiasm sag for a minute.

They whistled and whooped and sang and stampeded through the aisles with banners aloft. Or they hooted or hissed or booed. It depended in which direction the orators and nominators thundered.

Montgomery, Ala.

Permanent Party

They adopted a constitution to make the party permanent, with a national committee and plans for annual conventions.

Sun.

They received, for formal approval Sunday, a platform that says in 7,000 words what their party stands for and promises.

And through all the speeches and action and documents ran one main theme: the cause is peace, Wallace is the great crusader for peace.

7-25-48

Then Saturday night, the convention shifted out doors, to the Philadelphia baseball park, for Wallace and Taylor to deliver their acceptance addresses.

"A new frontier awaits us," Wallace said in the text he wrote out in advance. "No longer West to the Pacific — but forward across the wilderness of poverty, and sickness and fear . . .

"This is the American way—to conquer the forces of nature—not our fellow men."

Wallace said there's still one world but—"frozen in one fear."

"In all earnestness," he said, "I assure you that if I were president, there would be no crisis in Berlin today.

"I assure you that without sacrificing a single American principle or public interest, we would have found agreement long before now with the Soviet government, and with our wartime allies."

Core of Crisis

Germany, Wallace said, will be the core of every world crisis until there is agreement with Russia. World peace, he said, is too fragile "to be shuttled back and forth through a narrow air corridor in freighter planes."

"Our prestige in Germany went sinking," Wallace said, "when we divided Germany and established the western sector as an American and British Puerto Rico, as a colony.

The Advertiser

"When we did that we gave up Berlin politically and we can't lose anything by giving it up militarily in a search for peace."

Taylor, like Wallace, was nominated unanimously and with the acclaim of noisy, parading delegates.

And in his own acceptance speech, just ahead of Wallace, he declared:

"Today the forces of greed have embarked America on a policy of preparing for a war of extinction.

"I say to you, my friends, that is the only issue: Whether we shall live or whether we shall perish."

The only way a "terrible atomic ordeal" can be avoided, he said in his prepared text, is by replacing warmongers in high places with a man of good will.

"The only such man available," he said, "is Henry Wallace."

Wallace's formal nomination came after Albert J. Fitzgerald of Lynn, Mass., permanent convention chairman, told delegates that if they can win control of Congress and put Wallace in the White House the world will have peace.

Montgomery, Ala.

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — A 27-year-old woman from Birmingham, Ala., Mrs. Pauline Thomas Dobbs, made one of the seconding speeches for Henry Wallace at the Progressive Party convention Saturday.

She got loud cheers from the crowd when she said the Ku Klux Klan "dominates the Democratic party in the South" and then declared:

"The Klan says it is to protect white southern womanhood. With the new progressive party and Henry Wallace, we white southern women—and Negro southern women—will protect ourselves."

Mrs. Dobbs was introduced as the woman who led a picket line against the "Dixicrat" States, Rights convention at Birmingham a week ago.

Sun.

She told a reporter she is a housewife, a native of Birmingham, and an unsuccessful candidate for the State Legislature in 1946.

7-25-48

There are 26 delegates, one Alternate, and four observers from Alabama at the Wallace convention. Chairman of the delegation is Robert Travis, of Bessemer, described here as a law student and veteran.

Peace Conference One Of New Party's Goals

PHILADELPHIA —(UP)— The new progressive party called Saturday for nationalization of some key industries, a reversal of policy aboard, a broad-guaked for world peace, abolition of the "quarantine Communism" progrom in Greece and Turkey, repeal of the military draft act and "repudiation" of the giant European recovery program.

The platform committee was headed by Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, one-time assistant secretary of agriculture and one of the late President Roosevelt's original brain trusters. It included a sprinkling of uneversity professors, labor leader, authors, and persons long associated with liberal political groups.

First For Reds

The new party announced that it will "fight for the constitutional rights of Communists" to express their views, oppose the Mundt-Nixon Communist control bill, and try to abolish the federal "loyalty purge program" as administered by the FBI.

"Big business," the old-line political parties and "aggressive" diplomacy provided the main platform targets.

"No glittering party platforms or election promises of the Democratic and Republican Parties can hide their betrayal of the needs of the American people," the platform charged.

Recommendations

The Advertiser

Specific recommendations included:

Prices—Controls that will "reduce and keep down" prices for food, shelter and clothing; allocation of scarce goods.

Peace—"Immediate cessation" of armament expenditures, abandonment of military bases, abolition of the draft and "negotiation and discussion" with Russia.

Civil Rights—Elimination of "segregation and discrimination in all its forms"; full equality for all; federal legislation against lynching, discrimination, segregation and the poll tax.

Farmers and farm economy of "planned abundance" including a guaranteed annual farm income of $3,000, a five-year price support program for all crops, and subsidies if necessary to encourage high production.

Labor—Immediate repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, a dollar-an-hour minimum wage; improvement of labor's standards, right-to-strike in publicly owned industries and collective bargaining for federal workers.

Housing—Federal program to build 4,000,00 low-rent and low-cost dwellings within the next two years and a "guarantee" that every family will have a "decent home."

Montgomery Ala.

Health and Welfare—A National system of health insurance, old age pension of $100 monthly for all over 60, increased funds for maternity care, and public dental and medical health programs.

Taxes—Exemption from taxes for those whose income falls below that necessary for decent living standards, "effective" taxes on excess profits and undistributed income, and progressive elimination of excise taxes.

Atomic—Action to outlaw the atomic bomb, destroy A-bomb stockpiles, and establish international atomic control by the United Nations.

Sun.

Israel—Removal of the arms embargo, admission to the new state.

7-25-48

Charging that both Democrats and Republicans are "profaning the American ideal of freedom," the Progressive Party in its platform promised it would give voters a "real chance" to move forward to "peace, freedom and abundance."

The 6,400 word platform on which Henry A. Wallace and Glen H. Taylor will campaign for the White House, touched upon almost every phase of American life and bitterly charged both old-line parties with "betrayal" of the people.

Sun.

The platform was approved by Wallace before publication. It will be adopted by the party's first convention tomorrow.

The new party called "as a first step" for nationalization of the largest banks, railroads, the Merchant Marine, the the electric, power and gas industry, and other unspecified enterprises dependent on government funds.

Public Ownership

"The progressive party will initiate south measures of public ownership as may be necessary to put into the hands of the people's representatives the levers of control essential to the opation of an economy of abundance," the platform said.

7-25-48

The platform contrasted sharply in most despects with the positions taken by both the Democratice and Republican parties.

PHILADELPHIA

It cost George Jackson, a blind college student, a pint of blood to attend the Progressive Party Convention last week, but he thought the sessions were worth it.

Jackson, 19, sold the blood to Graduate Hospital in New York for five dollars to help him make the trip here from his home in Montclair, N.J.

Baltimore, Md.

His constant companion and "eyes" during the sessions was pretty Irene Klein, white, also, 19, of Newark, a student at Montclair Teachers College.

Sat,

Both were delegates to the Youth Conference that followed Youth conference that followed the three-day convention of the new party which nominated Henry A. Wallace for President.

"Convention Buddies"

Jackson, a sophomore at Seton Hall College, and Miss Klein met three days before the convention at a Wallace rally in Montclair.

When they ran across each other again in Philadelphia, Miss Klein decided they would be "convention buddies," and that's the way it was. 7-31-48

"I needed a man to protect me," was the way Miss Klein put it.

They made all the sessions together and she described the excitement to her companion.

"Small Price" to Pay, He Says

Son of a minister, Jackson is studying physcology and hopes to do graduate work at Columbia University.

He said he joined the Progressive Party movement because he believes Mr. Wallace is a man who will look out for the interest of all. 7-31-48

Youth Group Wastes Free Time at Hall in Quibbling, So It Fails to Adopt Platform

PHILADELPHIA, July 26—In spite of frequent warnings from the rostrum, quibbling over rules technicalities and other minor matters so delayed the founding convention of the Young Progressives of America that it passed into history late today without a platform or passing upon several resolutions.

(conv)

The two-day session was gaveled to a close just before 6 o'clock, when free use of the Municipal Auditorium ended. From that hour on, the new youth organization would have had to pay $1,140 an hour, the amount required to pay ninety-five maintenance employes and other costs.

As the zero hour approached, Arthur Gilbert of New York, chairman of the platform committee, requested that the proposed platform be referred to the organization's national committee for adoption following consideration of amendments.

34

Repealed Draft Demanded

The platform, as drafted, followed in every detail the one approved by the adult convention yesterday. In addition, it called for repeal of the draft law and the franchising of all citizens to vote, upon reaching 18 years of age.

Another plank called for "the right of every political party to express its position without intimidation or fear." It added that it should be made clearer, however, "that the Young Progressives of America would deny the fascist groups in this country any occasion to infringe on the liberties or freedom of any American citizen."

One of the resolutions which failed to reach the delegates called for a young people's mass demonstration in Washington against racial discrimination, "bipartisan war policies" and the draft. Miss Dorothy Smith Dailey of Boston, Negro candidate for State Representative in Massachusetts, reported that delegates from her state and Connecticut were leaving this city for Washington tonight. Many of them, she said, were hitch-hiking because they lacked funds to journey by train or bus. Tues.

The credentials committee reported that 2,010 delegates and observers, representing forty-four states and Puerto Rico, participated in the two-day convention of the group, which pledged itself to support the policies and candidates of the senior branch of the party—Henry Wallace and Senator Glen Taylor. 7-27-48

Co-Chairmen Are Elected

Today's session was opened by Miss Christine Walker of Detroit, the convention's permanent chairman, who was elected national co-chairman of the youth group along with Alvin Jones of Louisiana, a national vice chairman of the Progressive party.

Two New Yorkers, Seymour Linfield and Elsie Wilcox, were chosen executive director and treasurer, respectively. The assemblage also endorsed thirty-one vice chairmen named by the nominations committtee, including several members of left-wing labor unions and representatives of religious, student, farm and student organizations.

After extensive debate, centering around technical points, the convention adopted rules prepared by a committee which met throughout the night under the leadership of Walter Wallace, Negro student at Columbia University and national co-chairman of Students for Wallace.

Represenative Leo Isacson, one of the three members of the third party in Congres, touched off a noisy demonstration when he stopped at Convention Hall to make a brief address before continuing on to Washington for the extra session of the Eightieth Congress.

The Times

Mr. Isacson described the Progressive movement as a party of all races, all religions and all creeds. "We are," he said, "a new party which belongs to the new generation of Americans. We will fight for the principles for which the major parties only pay lip service." New York, N.Y.

In conclusion, he promised to work in the extra session of Congress for repeal of the peacetime draft, "so you won't have two years taken out of your lives for no reason since there is no danger of war today." 7-27-48

Wallace Party Sets Convention For July 24-25

CHICAGO

Boosters of Henry Wallace for President wound up a busy week-end of activity here in which they:

¶ Set July 24-25 for a National convention at Philadelphia to launch, name, and adopt an official platform for a nwe Third Party.

¶ Formally established the Illinois Progressive Party with a peace-prosperity-security platform and three candidates for the State slate. PM

¶ Urged the people of Italy to disregard "efforts of our government to interfere and dictate" in the national elections there next Sunday. (See page 9.)

¶ Condemned the draft proposals and Universal Military Training and appealed to Americans to "dispel the hysteria of war."

400 Delegates 40 States New York, N.Y.

In setting the convention date, the Wallace-for-President Committee, comprised of some 400 delegates from 40 states, declared that the major parties have passed into the "hands of economic royalitst." The Republican nominating convention starts in Philadelphia June 20. The Democrats hold theirs in the same city, starting July 12. Mon

Both, said the Wallace group, "have conspired to deny our citizens the simple democratic right to vote for a program in which they can believe and for candidates whom they can entrust with its execution." 4-12-48

One of the main goals of the new party, asserted Sen. Glen Taylor (D., Ida.), Wallace's running mate, "is to keep America from going Fascist."

The committee's convention pronouncement echoed this idea. "We issue this call conscious of the grave responsibility of the new party to the people of our nation and to the cause of peace," it declared. PM

Peaceful American

In the anti-conscription action, the delegates charged that "a small group of powerful men would force the American people to abandon both peace and freedom."

"Under cover of war hysteria," the resolution said, "political bankruptcy seeks to retrieve its losses, monopoly to maintain its profits and militarists their dominance."

The committee called on all Americans to combat all moves toward arms spending, conscription, universal military training and "the militarizing of our science. New York

"War," it stated, "is not inevitable." N.Y.

Among those who spoke at the meeting was Dr. Francis E. Townsend, president of the Townsend Clubs of America. He urged the delegates to work for a national cradle-to-grave insurance plan and he said he supports Sen. Taylor because "he is not controlled by big business." Mon

One after another, the delegates for each state described their difficulties. Some can't get public assembly halls for their meetings. Others can't get advertising space in their local papers. Still others said that officials "showing any signs of cooperation" with the Third Party movement, are dismissed from their positions.

20 Million Votes 4-12-48

Wallace told the group the new party can draw 20,000,000 votes in November. He cautioned, however, that the party should not compromise its original stand for peace and civil rights "just to win votes."

In his broadcast speech on Saturday, he declared: 4-12-48

"I have been asked many times to join in the highly emotional attacks on Communists, which provoke violence and lead to the suppression of civil liberties.

"I will not join a chorus that has no purpose but the suppression of civil rights. I do not fear Communists or the ideas of Communists, if we keep and extend our democratic system. The only way to compete with Communists is to solve the problems for which they offer radical solutions."

Sun. 7-18-48

PHILADELPHIA, July 17 (UP).—Henry A. Wallace's third party set up headquarters here today in preparation for its three-day national convention which opens Friday in Convention Hall, scene of the recent Republican and Democratic conventions.

7-18-48

Delegates will choose Mr. Wallace as their Presidential nominee and Senator Glen H. Taylor of Idaho as his Vice Presidential running mate. Their acceptance speeches are scheduled for Saturday night at a rally in Shibe Park. The price of seats will range from 60 cents to $2.60.

The first session Friday morning will feature a keynote address and adoption of an official name for the party. Prominently mentioned for the keynoter job is Charles P. Howard, of Des Moines, Iowa, Negro attorney and newspaper publisher. Nominations and balloting will be held Saturday afternoon.

On 40 State Ballots, New Party Claims

PHILADELPHIA, July 21 (UP)—C. B. Baldwin, campaign manager of Henry Wallace, claimed today that New Party candidates would be on the ballots of at least 40 states, including the four largest, in the November Presidential election. Baldwin made the prediction at his first pre-convention press conference.

34d

Baldwin said Illinois was the latest state in which the Wallace forces have obtained recognition. He said the New Party has obtained 100,000 signatures to get on the Illinois ballots. Illinois law requires only 25,000 signatures.

Doesn't List Others

"Now we are assured a line in New York, California, Pennsylvania and Illinois—the four largest states," Baldwin said in a message to leaders of the Illinois Progressive Party. "We will make it on at least 40 ballots." 7-22-48

Baldwin did not enumerate the 36 other states where he expects the party to be represented.

By getting on the "big four," the Wallace movement can cause considerable trouble for the Truman-Barkley ticket, because it would be expected to draw heavily on the left-wing votes which supported the Democratic ticket under the late President Roosevelt. Thurs.

New York has 47 votes in the electoral college. Pennsylvania is next with 35. Illinois has 28 and California 25.

Appeasement Plan Would Produce Bigger Crisis

After Wallace Convention—What?

Mr. Wallace has been nominated and one of the queerest political conventions ever to assemble in America is now a thing of the past. The American people who listened to it on the radio or saw some of it in television or simply read about it in the papers have been puzzled and surprised. Perhaps they didn't know exactly what to expect, but what they heard from Philadelphia over the week-end was like nothing they ever saw or heard before.

Tues. 7-27-48

* * *

Like the Republican convention of last month, it was well organized. Unlike the Democratic convention, there was never a dull moment. There was energy and excitement. Even though Wallace and his supporters must know he cannot possibly win, there was no spirit of defeatism present such as dogged the Democrats. Some reporters are sure that Wallace was thinking ahead to 1952 and laying the groundwork for what he considers to be his big chance four years hence.

Birmingham, Ala.

There was more disagreement among the delegates than had been anticipated by the general public which thought that the convention would be a cut-and-dried thing. The right wing, supported by Rexford Guy Tugwell, was routed, but there was an attempt at any rate to get in an amendment to the foreign policy plank disavowing servile following of "the foreign policy of any nation." It didn't work, and the left-wingers won the argument. The party-liners won on every count, and Henry Wallace stands indicted as a tool of the Reds. The platform goes along the line of disavowing America's present relations with Russia, and calls for out-and-out appeasement to be first shown by a withdrawal from Berlin. Tugwell and certain followers of his, especially from New England and the Middle West, admit disturbance in their thinking, but for the time being it seems as though they will go along.

The News

The great mass meeting in Shibe Park on Saturday night may have surprised the critics of Wallace's program. Thirty thousand people paid to get in, then shouted and sang with a fervor which must have disconcerted many a listener to the goings-on. But their enthusiasm must indicate that there is a considerable body of Americans who feel keenly the need of some sort of program that is vitally concerned with a dynamic crusade for peace. It is possible, of course, that only on the Eastern seaboard could such a gathering have taken place. The test of Wallace's appeal will come when he begins to stump the country. Can he duplicate the interest he built up in Philadelphia when he speaks in such cities as Chicago and Kansas City and Denver? Can he arouse the people of smaller towns in the hinterlands? Here, gathered in Philadelphia for a special occasion, were thousands who had come for the specific purpose of supporting him and letting off steam. The thousands of leftists who live in New York and Baltimore and Washington were near at hand, and they were present to lend their voices in shouts and songs. Are there comparable crowds elsewhere? It is very doubtful. The Saturday night gathering served as catharsis, and it is quite possible that there will never be the same sort of opportunity again during the campaign.

But the supporters made an impression. They also made a substantial contribution to the campaign treasure chest. The Republicans had the money, in various candidates' camps, to wine and dine the delegates. These people for Wallace were mostly confused little folk who paid their own way and then dug into their pockets to make small contributions. They paid for tickets to get in the ball park, and then they pledged another $50,000 toward the campaign's expenses. When a man has invested a dollar of his own in an enterprise, he is anxious to see it succeed.

Negroes Play Prominent Role At New Party's Convention

Defender

Chicago

PHILADELPHIA—As the NAACP predicts that four million Negroes will vote in the fall election, the new Progressive party convention here was well represented by Negro delegates from all sections of the country.

Spurred to enthusiasm by election of Charles Howard, Des Moines Negro publisher and attorney as temporary chairman of the convention, the 30 Negro members of the Progressive party who are candidates for office were prominent in all convention affairs. Hundreds of others swelled the total of delegates, observers and guests.

Labor Well Represented

Despite disavowal of the party by top labor leaders, 47 AFL unions, 31 CIO unions, 14 railroad unions and six independent unions were represented at the convention.

Sweeping Rights Demand Highlights Inclusive Program

The Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

By LEM GRAVES Jr.

(Courier Washington Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA—A demand for a sweeping program of civil rights' legislation in all areas of discrimination and a challenge to President Truman to issue Executive Orders ending jim crow in the armed services and in Government employment was incorporated in the platform adopted by the Progressive party in convention here last Sunday.

The Progressive platform, on which Henry Wallace and Senator Glen Taylor will run for the two highest offices of the land, was more detailed and more inclusive than the declarations of either the Republican or Democratic party platforms, molded in conventions held here recently.

On civil rights, the platform declares:

CIVIL RIGHTS

Sat.

"The Progressive party condemns segregation and discrimination in all its forms and in all places.

7-31-48

"We demand full equality for the Negro people, the Jewish people, the Spanish-speaking Americans, Italian-Americans, Japanese-Americans, and all other minority groups.

"We call for a Presidential proclamation ending segregation and all forms of discrimination in the armed services and Federal employment.

"We demand Federal anti-lynch, anti-discrimination, and fair employment legislation and legislation abolishing segregation in interstate travel.

"We call for immediate passage of anti-poll tax legislation, enactment of a universal suffrage law which would permit all citizens to vote in Federal elections, and the full use of Federal enforcement powers to assure free exercise of the right of franchise.

"We call for a Civil Rights Act for the District of Columbia to eliminate segregation and discrimination in the Nation's capital.

"We demand the ending of segregation and discrimination in the Panama Canal Zone and all territories, possessions and trusteeships.

"We demand that Indians . . . be given full citizenship rights and the right to administer their own affairs.

"We will develop special programs to raise the low standard of health, housing and educational facilities for Negroes, Indians and nationality groups and will deny Federal funds to any State or local authority which withholds opportunities or benefits for reason of race, creed, color, sex, or national origin.

"We will intiate a program of education, in cooperation with State, local and private agencies to combat racial and religious prejudice.

The Courier

"We support the enactment of legislation making it a Federal crime to disseminate anti-Semitic, anti-Negro, and all other racist propaganda by mail, radio, motion picture or other means of communication.

"We call for constitutional amendment which will effectively prohibit every form of discrimination against women—economic, educational, legal and political."

This platform, which very closely parallels the recommendations of President Truman's Civil Rights Committee, far out-distances the platform pledges of the major parties, Republican and Democrats, in both concepts and in specific endorsement of a wide range of legislation which would largely eliminate discrimination and segregation from the United States public life.

The Progressive platform was headed "Peace, Freedom and Abundance."

Major planks in the platform dealt with peace, the United Nations and international policy, housing, political freedom within this country, economic planning and a miscellany of domestic matters, chief among which were the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, and nationalization of large banks, railroads, the merchant marine and certain types of public utilities through Government ownership.

INTEREST TO RACE

Of special interest to the race were the planks which called for:

ARMED FORCES

Abolition of jim crow in armed services, elimination of the officer caste system, revision in military court procedures and admission of young men from the ranks to the military academies;

GOVERNMENT

Abolition of the electoral college, home rule for District of Columbia, Statehood for Alaska and Hawaii, declaration of election days as holidays;

Pittsburgh, Pa.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Price controls for food, shelter, clothing, essentials of life and basic materials, reduction of excessive profits, subsidies for farm prices, allocation of goods and materials in short supply.

Sat.

Also GI bill extension to cover merchant seamen and guaranteeing the rights of Negroes to file terminal leave application in the South;

EDUCATION

7-31-48

A flexible tax policy based on ability to pay, exemptions from tax assessments for those whose income falls below a decent standard of living, opposition to all sales taxes, effective excess profit taxes a Federal education system including Federal grants in aid, a Federal department of education with cabinet rank, abolition of segregation in education and the elimination of school quotas based on race, creed or color, support for legal action on behalf of Negro students who are discriminated against and a national program of adult education.

The platform was 6,000 words long, almost three times as long as the Republican platform and some 2,000 words longer than the Democratic platform. On almost every issue, the Wallace platform is more explicit and more detailed.

On almost every issue its position represents a radical departure from the proclamation of the major parties.

Refuses to Alter Its Foreign Plank

Benson Named National Chairman, Platform Is Voted, Convention Ends

Mon. 7-26-48

By Don Irwin

PHILADELPHIA, July 25—The founding convention of the Progressive party rejected today an amendment to its consistently pro-Soviet platform that would withhold "blanket indorsement" from any nation's foreign policy.

The meeting's final session in Conventinon Hall went on to beat down every other effort by minority delegates to delete outcroppings of the Communist party line from the party plaform, which the convention adopted tonight.

The convention adjourned at 8:10 p. m. after election of officers for its new permanent national organization. The "week-end" session began officially Friday night to save working delegates from taking time from their jobs. When adjournment came after a round of singing, delegates' seats on the floor were barely half filled. Convention work started in Philadelphia Wednesday when the platform committee began a two-day series of public hearings.

Backs Communist Line

Herald Tribune

Today's actions topped off a five-day accumulation of evidence inescapably aligning policies of the new party that nominated Henry A. Wallace for President last night solidly behind doctrines advanced by the American Communist party.

New York, N.Y.

Cause of the most protracted debate at an otherwise anti-climactic session, the foreign policy resolutions was introduced by three members of the Vermont delegation and, judging by applause, had substantial backing in other state groups.

Mon.

Proposed for insertion in the platform section dealing with Russian-American relations, the amendment read: "Although we are critical of the foreign policy of the United States, it is not out intention to give blanket indorsement to the foreign policy of any nation."

7-26-48

In opposing the amendment, Rexford G. Tugwell, platform committee chairman, and Lee Pressman, its secretary, said they felt the object of the amendment was covered in another amendment, affecting the platform's preamble, adopted earlier in the session.

Advocating a "world federal legislature" to prevent war and chaos in the atomic age, the section specifically cited by the committee officers went on to say:

"Such a structure of peace through government can be evolved by making of the United Nations an effective agency of co-operation among nations. This can be done by restoring the unity of the great powers as they work together for common purposes.

For World Government

7-26-48

"Since the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, this principle has been betrayed to a degree which not only paralyzes the U. N. but threatens the world with another war in which there can be no victors and few survivors. Beyond an effective U. N. lies the further possibility of genuine world government.

"Responsibility for ending the tragic prospect of war is a joint responsibility of the Soviet Union and the United States. We hope for more political liberty and economic democracy throughout the world. We believe that war between East and West will mean Fascism and death for all. We insist that peace is the prerequisite of survival."

Herald Tribune

James Hayford, of West Burke, Vt., co-chairman of his state's delegation, insisted that he and two of his colleagues had "no intention to red-bait" in introducing the "blanket indorsement" resolution. He went on: "anyone reading the platform would be justified in drawing the conclusion we indorse Soviet foreign policy 100 per cent."

New York, N.Y.

In rebuttal, Hugh DeLacey, a former Democratic Congressman from Washington, declared the amendment resulted from "pressure from the outside." He demanded unity on the principles of the platform "to change the position of the only government on earth we can have anything to do with—our own."

Mon.

Amendment Defeated

After considerably more of the most outspoken debate this convention has seen in public, the amendment was defeated on a voice vote. The hall was crowded, with 8,000 spectators in addition to 3,000 delegates, but the "noes" were several times greater in volume than the "ayes."

7-26-48

Almost immediately thereafter, another dispute arose over a committee proposal to delete Macedonians from a list of "traditionally oppressed and dispersed people" whose national aspirations the platform supported. Marshal Tito's Communist government in Yugoslavia, now at odds with Russia in matters ideological, has recently taken the side of the Macedonian minority in Bulgaria.

In addition to its pro-Russian foreign stand, the Progressive platform, as finally adopted at 7:25 p. m. after more than seven hours of discussion, calls for broad domestic reforms, including nationalization of industries now under "monopoly" control, elimination of all bars to civil rights, safeguarding of the constitutional rights of Communists, renewed price controls, broad-scale public housing, repeal of restrictive labor legislation and national health insurance.

Consideration of the platform opened with an appeal from Dr. Tugwell that delegates recall the successive collapses of previous progressive parties and remember "the value of solidarity and the dangers of contention."

Tugwell Quotes Roosevelt

Herald Tribune

He declared that President Roosevelt, if alive, would support the Progressive party. To substantiate the claim, he recalled a private conversation in 1932, before Mr. Roosevelt took office, in which, Dr. Tugwell said, the late President said it would be impossible to hold together the disparate elements that made up the Democratic party. Mr. Roosevelt, he said, concluded the talk by saying: 'Rex, at the end of eight years there may not be a Democratic party. But there will be a Progressive one.'"

N.Y.

The week-end convention ran hours over schedule as delegates proposed scores of amendments, despite repeated insistence by Mr. Pressman and Albert J. Fitzgerald, convention chairman, that the matter before the meeting was a general policy statement, not a wholesale legislative program.

While the delegates wrangled, the convention's nominating committee submitted for convention for approval the names of its selections as leaders of the permanent progressive party organization set up by convention vote yesterday. They were:

For chairman, Elmer A. Benson, former Farmer-Labor Governor of Minnesota. Mon.

Co-chairman: Paul Robeson, barytone, and Mr. Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, a Congress of Industrial Organizations affiliate.

Secretary and campaign manager, C. B. Baldwin, head of the Wallace campaign to date.

Treasurer: Clark Foreman, a former aid to Mr. Wallace when the candidate was Secretary of Agriculture. 7-26-48

Vice-chairmen: Mrs. Elinor Gimbel, Fred W. Stover and Alvin Jones.

The New York national committeemen were Representative Vito Marcantonio, O. John Rogge, Representative Leo Isacson, Dr. George B. Cannon, Mrs. Ada S. Jackson, Charles Collins, Sam Burt, Arthur Osman, George Provost and Ruth Young.

Adjournment of the convention was followed by convening of delegates planning to found a new, permanent national youth organization to back up the Progressives. Three thousand delegates who met tonight at the Broadwood Hotel will gather tomorrow in Convention Hall.

NEGRO EX-REPUBLICAN WALLACE KEYNOTER

Times

A former Negro Republican leader has been selected to deliver the keynote address at the third party convention that meets in Philadelphia July 23-25, the National Wallace for President Committee announced here yesterday.

C. B. Baldwin, Wallace campaign manager, said the keynoter would be Charles P. Howard of Des Moines, Iowa, attorney and publisher and a Republican leader in Iowa for twenty-five years. He said Mr. Howard would be proposed by the Convention Arrangements Committee, headed by Josiah Gitt, publisher of The York (Pa.) Gazette and Daily. Fri.

Mr. Howard was a Republican until he resigned from his Republican County Central Committee early this year to support Mr. Wallace. He was an alternate delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1932 and was three times chairman of the Negro division of the Republican party in Iowa. N.Y. N.Y. Fri.

He is 53 years old and a graduate of Drake University, where he was a four-letter athlete. He was a first lieutenant in World War I, serving overseas with the 366th Infantry. He practices law and publishes two weekly papers in Des Moines. He is married and has three sons, all veterans of World War II. Fri. 7-16-48

Wallace Youth Group Product of Frustration

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

PHILADELPHIA, JULY 27.

THOSE eager, insecure youths who, as the newly-named Progressive Youth Organization, have said "amen" to every bit of the dangerous dogma of HENRY WALLACE's Progressive Party, are like the children who followed the Pied Piper of Hamelin. They are not the starry-eyed youngsters whom the piper charmed. In general they are so grim or at times so riotous, that even a Communist journalist who covered their meetings here remarked on the transformation as they softened into brightness when PAUL ROBESON, one of their heroes, sang to them.

They are those who are hungry for expression of their needs for identification with something big they feel is theirs. They are the ones who—whether by their own shortcomings or those of society and politics—have felt themselves the persecuted and the wronged. Wed. 7-28-48

They horrified REBECCA WEST, the British novelist-turned-reporter. To her they seemed dangerous dull dupes—those "most likely to fail" in their classes in school—those most likely to be the heralds of Fascism in the United States once they feel disillusion in the stiff discipline of Communist domination.

They are at once dangerous and tragic. They are a part of the strategy of those directing the Progressive Party who are only incidentally useful now. They have been set up for the future. That is what HENRY WALLACE was talking about when he told them about finding the glorious possibility of a long future. That was what GLEN TAYLOR was talking about when he told them of his many defeats, and his election to the Senate at long last by 215 votes.

They are for 1952. They are also for something else. In the panel discussions of their convention, emphasis fell on the tender nerves of minorities. The Jews, the Negroes, the miners, the Yugoslav-Americans, the Croat-Americans, the German-Americans—all these were at once made newly conscious of their difference from other Americans. If the aim was not incitement of bitterness, that was the effect.

The same technique was used in the Progressive Party convention. Those who are a part of it were made to feel embattled and separate from the rest of the nation. Repeatedly they were told they would be called Reds and that they must be ready not to care; indeed, to be proud of it.

Many of them are realistic enough to know the Progressive Party will not win the Presidency this year. But they are talking of electing congressmen to "hold the balance of power in Congress between the major parties so they will have to do what we want." And they are talking selecting a President in the future. The Courier-Journal

We would not be fair if we failed to see that this is not all the fault of the young Progressive members. Some of them are personally maladjusted. Some of them are naive. Who isn't at 18? Some of them are afraid of the draft, and have followed with yearning admiration the WALLACE promise of peace, abundance and goodwill. Louisville, Ky.

They don't know enough to be convinced of realities. They don't want to believe—not if as deft a charmer as GLEN TAYLOR and as earnest as evangelist as HENRY WALLACE tell them it is not so. But if real wrongs did not persist in our society, if the major political parties had really done what their platforms have promised in the past there would be no Young Progressives today nor would there be any tomorrow. The same alarming graft of Communist foreign policy on domestic discontents has been accomplished among these young people as was performed in the Progressive Party. Wed.

If mature and intelligent Americans do not see this as a challenge, they too are contributing to the danger for us all. 7-28-48

New Party Pledges Peace With Russia

Star
New York. N.Y. Sun. 7-25-48

By ALEXANDER H. UHL
STAR Convention Bureau

PHILADELPHIA, July 23—Peace with Russia based on mutual agreement, on the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other nations, is proposed in the New Party platform which will be presented to the full committee on Sunday.

The full platform committee spent today going over the New Party's appeal to American voters and by this evening had approved the party's foreign policy commitments.

Cites Wallace Letter

The Russian plank as approved at executive session read:

"Henry Wallace's open letter suggested and Premier Stalin accepted a basis for a sincere peace discussion. They concluded that specific areas of agreement can be found if the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other nations and acceptance of the right of peoples to choose their own forms of government and economic systems are mutually respected.

"The New Party therefore pledges, through negotiations and discussion with the Soviet Union to find areas of agreement to win the peace."

(Associated Press reported a pledge to seek destruction of all atomic bombs and work for a world agreement outlawing atomic warfare is contained in the "peace with Russia" platform.)

Longest Platform Sun

The New Party platform is a longer document than either the Republican or Democratic platforms. Including a brief preface, it runs about 6500 words. Members of the committee said tonight they expected to have it ready for distribution to the press and to delegates Saturday so that it might be thoroughly studied before it is voted Sunday. 7-25-48

The platform covers three main topics which have become the party's slogan — Peace-Freedom-Abundance.

The peace section, which covers American foreign policy, makes the following points:

¶ Repudiation of the Marshall plan, as presently functioning, with insistence on American aid being administered through the United Nations.

¶ Repudiation of the Truman doctrine in Greece and Turkey on the grounds of supporting a reactionary royalist government while using Greece as a possible base in case of war with Russia.

Star

Admission of Israel

¶ A demand for strengthening the UN by defending its charter.

¶ Creation of a UN reconstruction and development fund to promote international recovery without political conditions and with priority for those nations which suffured most from axis aggression.

¶ Strong support for admission of the new State of Israel into UN with all the attributes of sovereignty that go with such admission. N.Y. N.Y.

The foreign policy section is sharply critical of the present American bi-partisan approach toward foreign relations, and accuses both parties of rejecting the UN as an instrument for world recovery; of using the Marshall plan to rebuild Germany as a war base; of financing and arming corrupt governments in Greece, Turkey and China; of betraying the Jews of Palestine and of having to impose a peace-time draft because of an unnecessary war crisis. Sun. 7-25-48

Covers Lynching, Bias

It also declares that American policy has begun an atomic armaments race.

The section dealing with freedom covers civil rights and includes:

¶ A promise of the end of segregation in the armed services by executive order; anti-poll tax legislation, anti-lynching legislation and fair employment practices.

¶ Opposition to loyalty drives against foreign-born trade unionists and political leaders.

¶ Abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

¶ A fight against the Mundt-Nixon bill.

¶ Opposition to any breakdown in separation between church and state.

The section on abundance starts with the premise that the nation's "natural resources and wealth belong to the people."

Howard Left GOP for Wallace

Star
New York N.Y.

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia, July 23 (AP)—Charles P. Howard, keynote speaker at the New Party's founding convention, is a 54-year-old Negro attorney who has practiced law in Des Moines since 1920. He also is publisher of the Des Moines Observer. Sun. 7-25

Howard says he has been a Republican "all my life" until early this year when he decided to support Wallace. He was three times chairman of the Negro division of the Republican Party in Iowa.

Wallace's Third Party

New York, N.Y.

Philadelphia, which already had suffered the Republican and Democratic conventions, had Henry Wallace's new party on its hands this week-end. There was no suspense at this convention, however, as to who would win the nomination. It was in the bag for Wallace for President and Senator Glen H. Taylor, of Idaho, for Vice-President.

Three thousand delegates were expected for the convention, which opened Friday evening, continued yesterday and will finish tomorrow. To put the delegates in a happy mood, every session was to open with songs. One of them was "The Same Merry-Go-Round," and its theme was there's no use bobbing up and down with the donkey and the elephant—get off the merry-go-round, be a real smarty and join the new party.

The platform was shaped under the guidance of Rexford Guy Tugwell, who was an original member of President Roosevelt's brain trust. Subject to convention approval, it had three main headings, "Peace," "Freedom" and "Abundance." Sun 7-25-48

"Peace" called for scrapping the Marshall plan and our aid to Greece and Turkey and substituting a United Nations reconstruction fund which would provide assistance to needy nations without political conditions; that is, it would embrace Russia and her satellites. Negotiations would be held with Russia to straighten everything out.

The "Freedom" section of the tentative platform dealt mainly with assuring full civil rights to racial minorities and full equality for Negroes, Spansh Americans, Japanese Americans.

The "Abundance" section called for government ownership of the largest banks, the railroads, the electric power and gas industry "and industries primarily dependent on government funds and purchases,"

At Thursday's platform hearing James Loeb jr., national executive secretary of Americans for Democratic Action—non-Communist liberals—waited patiently to get a hearing and then appealed to the new party to renounce its Communist support. He told the committee members that although Wallace was the party's Presidential candidate, "the Communists and their collaborators guide the major policies and word the major pronouncements of this party." His words fell on unreceptive ears. Tugwell angrily replied that Americans for Democratic Action was resorting to "unscrupulous and demagogic denunciation."

BROAD NATIONALIZATION PLANK IS DRAFTED BY WALLACE PARTY

Times.

By W.H. Lawrence

New York, N.Y.

Philadelphia, July 21--Public ownership of a large segment of American industry and finance was recommended today in a tentative draft of the new party platform on which former Vice President Henry A. Wallace will seek the Presidency. Thu. 7-22-48

With the party's foreign policy plank already committed to adandonment of the Marshall Plan and to the seeking of a negotiated settlement with Russia, the domestic program, released today by Rexford Guy Tugwell, resolutions committee chairman, went a long way toward matching the traditional Communist party program for this country.

It went far beyond the policies of the New Deal and the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt whose program Mr. Wallace professed to support when he announced his independent candidacy for President after he had been dismissed from President Truman's Cabinet. Thu. 7-22-48

March on Capital Urged

Times, N.Y. N.Y.

Platform hearings, held throughout the day and night, were marked by an angry challenge of a Negro leader, Edgar Brown of Washington, who urged the convention to move from Philadelphia to Washington on Monday to march on the convening special session of Congress to pressure it for enactment of the complete civil rights program. Thu. 7-22-48

He thundered that President Truman should follow the example of President Grant and use Federal troops, if necessary, to enforce the right of 10,000,000 Negroes to vote in the South. 7-22-48

He said that the party of rebel Southern Democrats, who met in Birmingham, Ala., last Saturday to nominate Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President, should be "outlawed" and the citizenship of its leaders, whom he termed "home-grown Hitler Dixiecrats," should be taken away. N.Y. N.Y.

Party leaders said that if Mr. Brown's demand was repeated in the convention it might win limited approval in a decision to send a large group to the Capitol to demonstrate in favor of the civil rights program. Thu. 7-22-48

Utilizing three headings, "peace, freedom and abundance," as the keynotes of its platform, the new party promised Americans an "economic bill of rights" in which it asserted that "the cure for the excesses of private monopoly is democratic control through public ownership."

The initial step, the platform said, should be the nationalization of the largest banks, the railroads, the electric power and gas industry "and industries primarily dependent on Government funds and purchases."

Gerland Schafland of Coyngham, Pa., Pennsylvania state chairman of the Progressive Party, urged that the coal and steel industries should be specified as industries which would be nationalized first, and asserted such a move would win the party votes among workers in these two key industries.

His suggestion won support from Lee Pressman of New York, committee secretary and former CIO general counsel, who pointed out that while the steel industry recently granted wage increases totaling $160,000,000 annually, it had, in the last few days, increased prices to add $620,000,000 to its income annually.

Other key domestic planks in the Wallace party platform were:

Inflation—Establishment of effective price controls "to hold down prices, squeeze out excess profits and allocate materials and goods which are in short supply."

Labor—Outright and immediate repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, and re-enactment of the principles of the Wagner and Norris-La Guardia Acts. Unless labor has the right to organize, to bargain collectively, and to strike," a decent standard of living for all is only a dream."

Farmers — Protection against "the encroachment of corporation farms and absentee owners." The new party would encourage expanded production, guarantee price support for all major crops, expand the farm security program, and assure Government credit at low interest rates.

Power—Establishment of additional regional plans and river authorities on the TVA pattern to achieve cheap power, rural electrification, soil conservation, flood control, reforestation, and to accelerate the growth of undeveloped areas, particularly in the South and West.

Economic Planning — Provision for a "council of economic plannig" to develop plans for assuring high production, full employment, and a rising standard of living."

In making the tentative platform planks public while hearings still were in progress, Mr. Tugwell emphasized that they were subject to change and revision on the basis of testimony and in the discussions of committee members.

C. B. Baldwin, campaign manager for Mr. Wallace, predicted at a press conference today that the former Vice President would receive "an astounding vote" for President, but he would not be more specific.

He said Mr. Wallace's Vice Presidential running mate, Senator Glenn Taylor of Idaho, would arrive tomorrow morning and hold a press conference, but Mr. Wallace would not come until Friday, the convention's opening day.

With many of the platform drafters and other party leaders preoccupied by the indictment in New York of top American Communist leaders, which they interpreted as an attack upon their organization, a note of levity was introduced into the platform hearings by the repeated, unsuccessful efforts of a young man, whose name could not be understood, who wished to appear for an organization he called "Onward Christian Communists."

The platform group hopes to debate its final draft in executive sessions Friday and Saturday. It will go before the convention Sunday.

Virginia to Send 55 To Wallace Convention

Post. Washington, D.C.

Richmond, Va., July 19 (AP).—Virginia will send 44 delegates and 11 alternates to the Wallace party national convention, opening Friday in Philadelphia, George Elwood, executive secretary of the Progressive Party of Virginia, said today. Tue. 7-20-48

About half of the Virginia delegation will be Negroes, Elwood said. Headquarters for the Virginia delegation will be the Hotel Warwick and a caucus will be held there Friday prior to the convention opening at 8 p. m. to elect a chairman of the delegation and to discuss the platform planks as disclosed in a preliminary draft. 7-21-48

Elwood said that the party's campaign to obtain the necessary 100 signatures to certify it on the ballot is continuing. Wed

Wallace Sees No Loss if U.S. Yields Berlin

He Blames Truman For Russian Crisis

Accepts Nomination of Progressives; Taylor Terms E. R. P. a 'Steal'

By Don Irwin
A Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—Henry A. Wallace charged tonight, as he accepted the new Progressive party's nomination for President, that the Russian-American impasse at Berlin "was caused" by the Truman Administration's "get tough" policies.

Critical of major-party performance at home and abroad, but conciliatory toward Russia, the acceptance speech was delivered at a floodlighted outdoor ceremony in Shibe Park, big league baseball stadium. Senator Glen H. Taylor, of Idaho, accepted the new party's Vice-Presidential nomination at the same session.

The meeting climaxed the second day of the three-day Progressive party's founding convention here.

At Shibe Park Mr. Wallace received his third thundering ovation of the day from about 20,000 cash customers who paid up to $2.35 to hail the nominee and take part in a well staged three-hour political pageant. Young for the most part and chock full of noisy enthusiasm, they clapped, shouted, sang and whistled for the candidate and his program.

7-25-48

Cheered for 32 Minutes

Earlier, a near-capacity crowd of 13,000 cheered for thirty-two minutes at Convention Hall after Mr. Wallace's name was placed in nomination for eventual ratification by acclaim of nearly 3,000 delegates. The demonstration was halted only by the announcement that Mr. Wallace would appear at the hall at the end of the session. When he finally came to the rostrum with Mrs. Wallace, Senator Taylor, Mrs. Taylor and the three Taylor children. The hall went wild for another twenty minutes, although neither candidate did more than wave.

The Shibe Park crowd failed to hit the capacity of 33,000 forecast by the Wallace camp, despite perfect weather. Typical of the "common man" audience was the fact that good bleacher seats were filled solid, while the higher-priced reserved area behind home plate had plenty of room.

Both Bring Families

His appearance with Mrs. Wallace and Senator and Mrs. Taylor and their three children at 5:25 p. m. was the signal for another and, if anything, more feverish demonstration which lasted twenty minutes. The applause welled back in waves as the candidates grinned, waved in turn to their supporters. Neither said anything audible.

At Shibe Park, Mr. Wallace assured his followers "in all earnestness" that if he were President, "there would be no crisis in Berlin today." "I assure you," he continued, "that without sacrificing a single American principle or public interest, we would have found agreement long before now with the Soviet government, and with our war-time allies."

Supporting implicitly the Soviet side in the Berlin controversy, Mr. Wallace declared that the Western powers lost prestige in Europe anyway when they backed partition of Germany and division of Berlin.

"When we did that," Mr. Wallace said, "we gave up Berlin politically and we can't lose anything by giving it up militarily in a search for peace."

Terming world peace "far too fragile to be shuttled back and forth through a narrow air corridor in freighter planes." Mr. Wallace said Germany "will be the core of every world crisis until we come to agreement with the Soviet Union."

The candidate stressed his own correspondence with Premier Joseph Stalin following the abortive Russian-American negotiations two months ago and emphasized the need to "sit down and talk it over."

On the domestic front. Mr. Wallace declared that the Progressive party—so named at the opening convention session last night—would draw its example from Thomas Jefferson, first leader of the Democratic party, and Abraham Lincoln, who took office "four score and seven years ago" as the first Republican president. He declared the original ideals of both major parties dead.

Mr. Wallace called for a second "Emancipation Proclamation" to end racial discrimination and bring "full, free and complete citizenship everywhere in the United States."

Mocking the boast of major party candidates that they accepted their nominations without commitments, Mr. Wallace repeated "with pride" commitments to:

Place human rights above property rights.

Remove power over big business from private to public hands "wherever necessary."

Negotiate peacefully with the Soviet government and strengthen the United Nations.

Use the power of the United States to help "people of the world, not their exploiters and rulers."

Plan for production for peace to develop "progressive capitalism" and protect "truly independent enterprise" from monopoly.

Fight restrictive labor legislation.

Expand health and education facilities and provide "economic security" for "elder citizens."

Mr. Taylor devoted the greater part of his acceptance speech to an attack on the European Recovery Program as "the greatest fraud, the greatest steal, ever perpetrated in all history."

"Yes," Mr. Taylor charged, "this multi - billion - dollar armament program is another device to promote scarcity at home, keep prices high, help our monopolists, intimidate their victims all over the world and, of course, it means fabulous profits for the armament makers—a very small and select clique."

Mr. Taylor said he knows the Progressive ticket will win "because I do not believe that God in His mercy will inflict this terrible atomic ordeal on mankind."

The Shibe Park ceremonies were relied on by the Progressive leadership to finance much of the convention's cost through the sale of tickets at a $2.35 top to the thousands of Wallace supporters who have streamed into town since yesterday. Some came by all forms of public transportation; more drove their own cars, hitch-hiked or traveled at excursion rates on special trains from New York. Some stayed in hotels; more in rooming houses or makeshift accommodations volunteered by sympathetic Philadelphians.

The night session followed a full day's business session at Convention Hall which saw adoption of a permanent national organization for the Progressive party. It took the form of a resolution setting up a national committee, introduced by Representative Vito Marcantonio, American Labor party, of New York, chairman of the convention rules committee. A fifteen-minute ovation greeted Mr. Marcantonio, a party hero and one of the two A. L. P. members of the Eightieth Congress, when he submitted the report.

Under the resolution, the national committee must call annual national conventions, as opposed to the quadrennial affairs favored by the major parties. States would be entitled to a minimum of two national committeemen, with one extra committeeman for every five electoral votes in excess of thirteen.

One provision—permitting the committee to elect forty additional members at large—precipitated the first floor fight at the hitherto unanimous convention. The Maryland delegation objected that the provision short-circuited the representative process, but was defeated on a show of hands. Committee members are to be chosen by the national convention.

The delegates and alternates, estimated at 3,000, chose as the convention's permanent chairman Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, Congress of Industrial Organizations. Elected co-chairmen were Mrs. Lawrence D. Steefel, of Minnesota, and Alvin B. Jones, of of Louisiana. Chosen secretary was Louis Adamic, novelist.

The convention will remain in session through tomorrow, when delegates will consider the party platform, made public today by Mr. Marcontonio's committee. It will also elect national officers for the party and choose its first national committee. Adjournment is set for 5:30 p. m.

Beginning tomorrow and running through Monday, the new party will also hold a youth convention in Convention Hall. Representatives of farm and student youth and racial minority groups will attend.

Washington Calling

By MARQUIS CHILDS

PHILADELPHIA.

AT THIS third political convention to be held in Philadelphia there can be few surprises. The ground has been too carefully prepared from the first day, now more than six months ago, that Henry Wallace gave his consent to lead a third-party movement.

Sat

The resentment of non-Communist liberals and radicals at the domination of the Communists and fellow-travellers may boil up. And there is reason to believe Wallace would welcome such a protest, which would show that the convention is not too tightly stage-managed.

But otherwise the program will move on toward the climax in Shibe Park when Wallace and his running mate, Senator Glen Taylor, of Idaho, appear before a crowd that is certain to be wildly enthusiastic. This is a propaganda show, and the propaganda is aimed not so much at the present as at the future.

The shrewd stage managers are aiming at 1952. They do not believe, as Wallace says he believes, in the future of American capitalism. They see in inflationary prices and the trembling uncertainty of the stock market the symptoms of a new crash and depression, and they want to be ready to lead millions of dissatisfied Americans in another political direction.

7-24-48

These stage managers are something new on the national political scene. With one or two exceptions, they have never before engaged in the rough-and-tumble of American politics and they never held elective office. Behind a barricade of mimeograph machines, these dedicated men and women have carried on a propaganda warfare.

THIS is not said to belittle their influence. In organized labor, before Philip Murray, of the CIO, decided on a showdown, the power they exerted was far out of proportion to their numbers. Almost the only substantial labor support for the Wallace party comes today from the United Electrical Workers.

The most conspicuous stage manager is C. B. Baldwin, one of the few former associates of Wallace in the New Deal beside him in the present venture. A Virginian, he has an easy surface manner that belies his intense energy and organizing capacity as does his smooth, boyish face.

Sat

Almost as important in some respects as Baldwin, himself, is his new wife, the former Lillian Traugott, who was in Europe for the office of strategic services for part of the war. Mrs. Baldwin is thoroughly familiar with the politics of the left both in Europe and this country.

The individual who has made himself invaluable to Wallace personally is Lewis Frank, Jr. Soft-spoken, a brilliant intellectual, Frank is always at hand to help in the preparation of a speech or to discuss with the third-party candidate his doubts and difficulties.

The son of a wealthy paper-box manufacturer in Detroit, Frank might almost be a character out of one of the highly successful plays of Lillian Hellman with their sharply drawn villains, their pathetic victims and their heroes. Miss Hellman is one of the "big names" that lend prestige to the party and who presumably also comes through with generous contributions.

7-24-48

ONE of the few officeholders active in the party is Rep. Vito Marcantonio, of New York City. Marc, as he is called by almost everyone, must be rated as one of the four or five top managers of the party. He knows a lot about practical politics and he has a demagogic skill in stirring a crowd.

The Advertiser

Between Marc and another active manager, Lee Pressman, a rivalry is said to have grown up. Pressman, who resigned as counsel for the CIO when Murray forced a showdown over Wallace, is running for Congress on the third-party ticket in a Brooklyn district. He has an aggressive personality and a powerful intellect.

Montgomery, Ala

Paul Robeson, the Negro singer and a member of the executive committee, is high on the list. So is Clark Foreman, who was formerly the active force in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Another former CIO executive taking a leading part in the Wallace movement is John Abt.

Sat

Perhaps the major theme of the convention is peace with the Soviet Union. This is sounded at a moment when relations between the two nations, at the point of greatest friction in Berlin, have deteriorated so that alarmist talk of war is heard frequently.

7-24-48

The dedicated men and women working for the third party know this very well. Berlin is a kind of lurid backdrop for what happens here. If war with the Soviet Union should come, the FBI would move at once to confine thousands suspected of allegiance to world communism rather than to the United States. And it is no secret that some of those who would be confined are here at this convention. That is part of the drama just offstage, but you would never suspect it watching the stage managers go about their work.

Georgians Set Up People's Party, Nominate Negro

The Worker

By A. W. Berry

MACON, Ga.—Larkin Marshall, a Negro publisher of the "Macon World," was named candidate for the U. S. Senate, at the meeting here last Sunday that formed the People's Progressive Party of Georgia. The meeting, which organized a party to support Henry Wallace for President, was held in the Municipal Auditorium, and was not segregated. The vote of the 325 Negro and white delegates in the Municipal auditorium to nominate Marshall was unanimous. Marshall is the first Negro to be nominated in Georgia for high office since Reconstruction days. He is state vice chairman of the new party. He will run against Sen. Richard H. Russell.

A total of 55,000 signatures are required on nominating petitions to place the new party on the ballot in Georgia.

THE DELEGATES adopted a party program calling for an end to jimcrow; a foreign policy based on a strong UN, destruction of atom bombs and peaceful relations with the Soviet Union. The program also called for anti-lynching, anti-poll tax and FEPC. The program also called for legislation, and urged "outlawing the Ku Klux Klan and similar hoodlum groups that carry on their cowardly work under masks."

The party platform adopted includes a farm program to make "every farmer an owner," and a comprehensive labor plan which calls for a $1 an hour minimum wage law, repeal of the Taft-Hartley act and outlawing use of police in labor disputes.

★ Worker

SEN. GLEN H. TAYLOR, third party vice presidential candidate, attended the convention with his wife and two sons.

Taylor told the gathering that reports say 250 atom bombs "would make the world uninhabitable," and warned that "we are fighting now for our lives. I don't suppose our brass hats," he declared, "if they started a war, would stop after dropping 249 atom bombs."

After approving the nominations committee's recommendations for officers and electors, a floor fight developed when delegates opposed a proposal to refer candidates' nominations to the state executive board of the party. The committee had proposed waiting to allow Rev. Joseph A. Rabun, its first choice for Governor, 10 days to make up his mind. The matter was resolved when the delegates voted 63-51 to give the executive committee power to choose as gubernatorial candidate either Rev. Rabun or Prof. James S. Barfoot of the University of Georgia.

RABUN, who was present as a visitor, told the delegates that "moral obligations" and "previous commitments" would force him to say "No" if pressed to accept the nomination at once. He would require, he said, at least 10 days to confer with others. He is a Democratic gubernatorial candidate.

Other officers elected were Rev C. T. Pratt, Dalton, co-chairman; William W. Stafford, Atlanta, secretary; Mrs. Herman Rich, Atlanta, treasurer and Don West, Douglasville, executive vice chairman.

Foreign Policy Is Believed Main Topic; Committee Will Hear 40 Speakers

New York, N.Y.

By Don Irwin

A Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—The third party convention called here to nominate Henry A. Wallace for President on Saturday began quietly to take shape today.

With new symbols replacing left-over emblems from the recent Democratic convention, the party's seventy-four-member platform committee met all day and into the night in a closed session at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, the convention headquarters.

Mr. Wallace's known position against most stands taken by the two major parties was the only clew to the committee's work. When it recessed for dinner at 6:15 p. m., Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, permanent committee chairman, told reporters he had "no authority from this very big committee to say a thing."

Then Dr. Tugwell, one of the original members of the late President Roosevelt's "brain trust," went on to say, in answer to a question, that the session had been devoted solely to discussion of "tentative planks," and that no draft platform could be prepared until after public hearings set for tomorrow and Thursday.

It was generally reported that the greater part of the discussion at the session was given over to foreign policy, the focus of Mr. Wallace's main attack on the major parties. The third party candidate has charged that their bi-partisan foreign policy is leading to war, and has advocated broad-scale efforts to come to terms with Russia and greater use of the United Nations to build world peace. Herald Tribune

Other items on the Wallace program call for restoration of price controls; repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act; abolition of Jim Crow practices and of the House Committee on Un-American activities; Federal aid to long-range housing and local education; and a national health-insurance program.

More than forty speakers, mostly from left-wing groups, are scheduled to appear at the platform hearings, which will be held in the ballroom of Convention Hall. Among the group spokesmen slated to speak is Dr. Francis Townsend, whose liberalized old-age pension plan has been indorsed by Mr. Wallace. Herald, Tribune

The real work of the convention will not start until Friday night, when delegates, expected to number 2,500, will take over the Convention Hall where President Truman was renominated last week. The formal and certain nomination of Mr. Wallace and Senator Glen H. Taylor, of Idaho, a former Democrat, is set for Saturday night at Shibe Park, a baseball stadium. A platform will be adopted Sunday.

Hardened to such affairs by the Republican and Democratic conventions of the last month, Philadelphians paid little attention to outside signs of third-party activity centering around the Bellevue-Stratford. 7-21-48

Most striking of these was the display on the hotel's marquee, where previously had rested a rubber Republican elephant and papier-mache Democratic donkey. Now it is the platform for a streamer-sign that says "Wallace-Taylor" three times and is surmounted by a dozen red, yellow and blue signs that read variously: "Freedom," "Peace," "Abundance." Across the street is still a billboard reading "So produly we hail the Democratic National Convention."

In front of the hotel, orderly young men and women were doing some business selling seats for the Shibe Park rally—but there were few takers. Proceeds will be used to defray convention costs. Inside things were calm. Most delegates aren't expected to arrive until Friday. The advance guard of platform committee members and staff workers were busy on the building's second and third floors. Reporters were reduced to interviewing each other. N.Y.N.Y.

The Wallace Platform Strikes Up An Old Tune

The Courier-Journal

Louisville, Ky. Sun.

PHILADELPHIA, JULY 24.

THE WALLACE Progressive Party convention has a rather terrifying quality about it. It is not easy to describe because the symptoms are many and they are clouded. 7-25-48

First, let us take the Progressive Party as its sponsors would have us recognize it—a protest against persistent wrongs of the old parties. Under this limitation, the WALLACE party might seem a legitimate protest. If the protesters seemed a little blind, one might excuse it as the misty vision of sudden inspiration. For some of the injustices which convention speakers denounce are unquestionably real—political and economic discrimination based on race for one, an economy which denies wage earners the right to own a house for another, and an inflation which discourages thrift, oppresses the poor and threatens us all with the spectre of depression for a third.

These disturbing facts, of course, are not discoveries of the WALLACE party. Yet all of them exist, and were this the only nation in the world—if we had nothing to do to assure bounty and blessings except to mend our own shortcomings—then we might applaud the WALLACE party's pointing them out.

The WALLACE followers' promises go on and on. Domestically they promise to end JIM CROW, to build 8,000,000 homes for veterans and working people, to bring national health insurance, a $100 per month old age pension, a dollar an hour minimum wage, repeal of the TAFT-HARTLEY Act, repeal of the draft "and compulsory military training." All of this would be nice. 7-25-48

However the United States does not exist alone. The last promises of the WALLACE party—relating to repeal of the draft—is a key to one mightily terrifying suspicion. It was developed in the keynote speech of CHARLES P. HOWARD, who charged the United States with deliberately fomenting war for profit.

This is parrot-like repetition of Communist propaganda. This is what makes it apparent that the WALLACE party is the instrument of an ideology that would destroy the freedoms that flutter bravely on its banner. This is what makes us feel that the men of good will who have gone into the WALLACE movement—and there are many—are dupes. Mr. HOWARD rings the changes: "The President's greetings are in the mail. And they bear postmarks of corruption in China and betrayal in Israel, and murder in Greece. They bear the mark of every Nazi we have restored to power in Germany."

Heaven knows we are not one to defend the notorious record of the 80th Congress, or to praise the Government of Greece or China, or to proclaim our policy for Palestine has been steadfast. But we have been dealing with ugly realities, we have been accepting the least repugnant of courses in our dealings with Greece and China. We have undertaken in these lands, and in every country where the MARSHALL Plan will work, to preserve the circumstances out of which freedom may grow.

In allowing Communist conspirators to enchain these peoples, as Mr. WALLACE's friends would have us do, we would have seen their freedoms vanish forever or until slavery became so intolerable that the whole Communist world broke into flame.

So it is apparent that real domestic grievances, plus wildly imaginative domestic promises, have been woven into a heavy fabric of Soviet dogma to make the Progressive doctrine. The Courier Journal

In a way the honest men in the movement are as pathetically attached to a time that is gone as are the Messrs. WHERRY, KNUTSON and TABER among the Republicans. The latter gentlemen have forgotten that time and events have passed since WARREN HARDING's death. The former seem to have been asleep since FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT first took office. They rush back to him in every speech. They seem to have forgotten that much of what he advocated has been written into law, never to be removed. They seem unconscious of the forces which began to break thunderously about him as the Axis war drew near. Louisville, Ky.

For if their eyes were open then they could not talk so glibly about how the last war began at Munich without understanding that Munich has moved today to Berlin. Sun. 7-25-48

Wallaceites Start Work on Platform

The Post

Washington, D.C.

Philadelphia, July 20 (AP).—Platform makers for Henry A. Wallace's third party got down to work today on the eve of open hearings at which representatives of more than 40 organizations will testify. Wed. 7-21-48

An executive session of the 74-member group centered attention on foreign policy and a proposal for nationalization of basic industries.

Windmill signs separately calling for "abundance," "freedom," "peace," went up on the marquee at Bellevue-Stratford Hotel headquarters where the Republican elephant and Democratic donkey drew so much attention in recent weeks.

Mass Rally Is High Spot

Convention arrangements moved ahead with announcement that Albert Fitzgerald, president of the CIO United Electrical Workers, will introduce Wallace for his presidential nomination acceptance speech at Shibe Park Saturday night. 7-21-48

The mass rally will high spot the new party founding convention which opens Friday night. It will be open to the public with tickets selling at 65 cents, $1.30 and $2.60 to raise campaign funds.

Discussion of foreign policy, a platform committee spokesman said, appeared to be antibipartisan—as the Truman Administration insisted on it—and against both the Marshall Plan and the Truman doctrine.

"They believe," he stated, "that the question of peace can be worked out through a strong United Nations with relief based on need rather than on political expediency."

Nationalization Program

The Post

Commenting on nationalization of industry, the spokesman said "you can surmise that there will be a give and take on how far the nationalization program will be discussed. Mostly it involves certain public utilities and what we regard as basic industries."

The Wallace movement, he continued, certainly will call for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and it was understood the platform will be strong on civil rights. The policy statement is expected to include a preamble spelling out general principles and the basis for a new party.

Among those who will appear tomorrow and Thursday at open policy hearings are the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Dr. Francis Townsend, leader of the Townsend old age pension movement; the United World Federalists, the Teachers Union, the Congress of American Women and the Physicians Forum. Wed.

Others on the list include the Friends Committee on National Legislation; Society for Prevention of World War III; Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy; Child Care Center of New York; Civil Rights Congress; the People's Lobby; National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax.

International Workers Order; New York Tenants Council; Association of Scientific Workers; United Public Workers; American Committee for West Indian Federation; American Zionist Emergency Committee; the Southern Negro Youth Congress.

New Party Platform Calls for 'Joint Responsibility'

The Times-Picayune

Last Big Business Finished by Convention

New Orleans, La.

(The Associated Press)

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, July 25.—The new Progressive party formally adopted tonight a platform saying Russia and the United States share "joint responsibility" for "ending the tragic prospect of war."

Mon.

That was the last big business of a party convention which already had made peace its major issue and Henry Wallace its presidential candidate.

There wasn't much left to do but elect the party's permanent officers and members of its national committee, then adjourn.

And by that time there wasn't much of anyone left in this big hall—delegates, spectators or convention officials.

Battle Over Reds' Policy

Delegates didn't rivet the platform together without a battle over Russian foreign policy.

They settled it by crushing a proposal from a scrappy but weak minority that the platform declared:

"Although we are critical of the foreign policy of the United States, it is not our intention to give blanket endorsement to the foreign policy of any nation." 7-26-48

A Vermonter protested in vain that the party is endorsing Soviet foreign policy "100 per cent."

It strung along with an Indiana delegate's views that the defeated amendment would be "an insinuation against a friendly ally."

So Henry Wallace runs on a platform which promises "negotiation and discussion with the Soviet Union to find areas of agreement to win the peace."

With him runs Senator Glenn Taylor of Idaho, the convention's pick for vice-president.

James Hayford of Westiburke, Vt., started the scrap over whether the convention should say indirectly that the party is not backing Russian foreign policy. Two other Vermont delegates joined in offering the proposal.

No 'Red Herring'

Hayford said he wasn't trying to bring a "red herring" into the proceedings. But he said the platform as it stood opens the party to the charge of condemning American foreign policy "en toto" without saying a word of criticism about the policy of any other nation.

Mon.

Somebody else in the Vermont section got up to declare that in the platform "we endorse Soviet foreign policy 100 per cent and I don't support any foreign policy 100 per cent." 7-26-48

Someone from Pennsylvania said he favors "friendship with Russia but not blind friendship."

Members of the platform committee said they thought nothing was needed beyond the language already approved, which says Russia and the United States must share responsibility for keeping the peace. 7-26-48

And a big hand went up for Hugh Delacy of Seattle, Wash., a former member of Congress who urged delegates not to yield to "pressure from outside," not to "back up" but to take their stand for a "firm, solid basis of friendship between the United States and the Soviet Union."

'Appeasement' Charge

And Carl Leon Eddy, of Indianapolis, protested that the Hayford amendment was an attempt at "appeasement," at appeasing those who can't be appeased.

While Hayford's amendment took a beating, the convention put into the platform a denunciation of "anti-Soviet hysteria as a mask for monopoly, militarism and reaction."

Delegates went on record for erecting a structure of peace through "just enforcement upon individuals of world federal law, enacted by a world federal legislature."

The Times Picayune

With the platform peace planks finally okayed, the convention thumbed through amendments to the section on freedom. It took a few but rejected many.

And it yelled a lusty "no" to every attempt to sacrifice "free and open" discussion for speed.

Convention Chairman Albert J. Fitzgerald pulled off his coat and announced: "I haven't got anything to do until a week from today. Go to it."

But back through the delegate ranks many empty spaces were showing. And a New Yorker said there was "great danger" that important parts of the platforms would be adopted with a lot of delegates gone.

But the convention turned down his idea of leaving the rest of the amendments to the party's national committee to cull over and accept or reject.

The freedom section is the one that demands "full equality for the Negro people, the Jewish people" and other racial or national groups.

New Orleans, La.

Rights of Communists

It promises a fight for "the constitutional rights of Communists" and all other political groups to express their views.

There wasn't any opposition when Rose Russell of New York offered a plank urging "the full right for teachers and students to participate freely and fully in the social, civic and political life" of nation and community.

On a show of hands, the delegates put into the platform a pledge to respect the freedom of conscientious objectors to war and to "effect an amnesty" for those imprisoned in World War II.

The long session sandwiched some extra speeches into the work routine, vice-presidential candidate Glen Taylor turned up for a few minutes and got a big hand.

O. John Rogge Speaks

After the freedom section was approved, O. John Rogge of New York, former assistant attorney general, got a big hand and predicted a Wallace-Taylor victory in November.

Mon.

Delegates produced a big cheer when he said he thinks it is "un-American" and "unconstitutional" for 11 persons to face fines and imprisonment because they defied the authority of the House committee investigating un-American activities. 7-26-48

"It is to the shame and infamy of little bipartisan men that 2,000,000 federal employes have been subject to a loyalty check," he declared.

Rogge said the new party would put an end to the "monkey business" of the "little men" in Washington which he said has created a "stifling atmosphere" that tends to deprive the "common people of their freedoms."

While the convention was plodding through speeches and platform, Taylor and Representatives Vio Marcantonio and Leo Isacson of New York, gathered in an upstairs room to say they "intend to call the bipartisan bluff" in the special Congressional session starting tomorrow.

They are the only men in Congress who speak for the new party. So they will need a lot of help to put over a program which they said in a news conference statement includes "halting the Marshall plan, repealing the draft and Taft-Hartley labor laws, providing housing, a higher minimum wage, price controls, bigger old age pensions, anti-lynching legislation, and other items in the new party platform.

The convention went into its final session unanimously backing Wallace and Taylor. But it got to fussing about the platform from which the candidate will operate.

Various delegates turned in amendments and argued for them. Most of them were discarded quickly.

But Lee Pressman, secretary of the committee that drafted the 7000-word platform, brought in the new language pinning on Russia as well as this country responsibility for averting war.

It was in the form of a preamble to the section on peace.

Last Big Business

Adoption of the policy statement was the last big business left for the founding convention of the new party. Wallace and Taylor were nominated yesterday and accepted a few hours later.

Even as the platform for "peace, freedom and abundance" was submitted to the delegates, signs of dissatisfaction with parts of it appeared.

Convention Chairman Albert J. Fitzgerald told a reporter:

"Sure there'll be some fights."

He ruled that no amendments would be considered which were not submitted in writing before the reading of the platform was completed.

Pennsylvania delegates thus were barred from making any attempt to obtain a party promise for government ownership of the coal industry.

The Pennsylvanians still were talking about offering an amendment when the deadline came. They accused a reporter inquiring about their plans of being a "Red baiter."

Committee's Draft

As drafted by a 74-member committee, the platform, among other things, calls for:

Immediate public ownership of the largest banks, the railroads, merchant marine and power and gas industries.

"Negotiation and discussion with the Soviet Union to find areas of agreement to win the peace."

Loud cheers broke out on the convention floor when planks were read which promise:

To make distribution of anti-semitic, anti-Negro and anti-racial propaganda a federal crime.

To "fight for the constitutional rights of Communists" and all other political groups to express their views.

To repeal the Taft-Hartley labor law.

The Progressive party went into the wind up session of the convention with an extra $50,000 in the kitty to help finance its campaign for the Wallace-Taylor ticket.

Publicity Director Ralph Shikes told a reporter that was the net take at a rally last night at Shibe Park. It was there that Wallace and Taylor accepted their nominations.

Vacant Seats

Delegates were up late last night listening to Wallace. And there were large stretches of vacants seats both on the floor and in the spectator galleries when the convention started its Sabbath session.

A report accrediting 3240 delegates and alternates to the convention was approved unanimously. Mrs. Lawrence Steefle, Minneapolis, chairman of the credentials committee, said every state and Hawaii and Puerto Rico were represented.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, University of Chicago professor and one of Franklin D. Roosevelt's original "brain trusters," headed the platform drafting committee.

He told the convention that had President Roosevelt "lived on into the peace, he would have led a movement like that which we now join."

Delegates cheered when he gave his reason for saying so. Back in 1932, when Roosevelt still was governor of New York, Tugwell quoted him as saying:

"Rex, at the end of eight years there may not be a Democratic party. But there will be a progressive one."

As for the platform itself, Tugwell said:

"We hope that as time passes it will be remembered as the beginning of revitalization for the institutions of the America we have loved so deeply.

"We have worked not only for our nation's health but for her honor. We pass that responsibility now to you."

Housing Plank

A plank on housing was inserted belatedly into the Progressives' platform. A party spokesman said it was omitted by error from previous drafts.

Mon.

It pledged reorganization of the building industry, abolition of discrimination and segregation in housing and conveniently located homes near places of employment "with adequate provision for health, education, recreation and culture." 7-26-48

A statement issued by the party's nationalities division said minority groups rallied to the Progressive banner "because we want a party pursuing a policy of lasting peace through international co-operation."

Revised Wallace Platform Asks A-Bomb Junking, Price Controls, Civil Rights, Peace With Reds

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Bonus to Vets Also Promised In New Draft

Philadelphia, July 23 (AP)—Destruction of all atom bombs, repeal of the Draft Law, and peace with Russia! That was the cry today of Henry Wallace's third party in the semifinal draft of its 6,500-word platform.

The platform, being whipped into final shape by the 74-member party resolutions committee calls also for "full equality" for Negroes and other minorities.

It asks Government ownership of a large segment of the nation's economy.

It demands a return to price controls.

It promises "a greater New Deal."

It proposes a federal bonus for war veterans "based on length of service."

In the "peace-freedom-and-abundance" platform the party declares itself the heir of "Jefferson, Jackson, and Lincoln—of Frederick Douglass, Altgeld, and Debs—of Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Here are other things the preliminary draft proposes:

Russia—The New Party pledges "through negotiation and discussion with the Soviet Union, in good faith, to find areas of agreement to win the peace."

Disarmament—Work through the United Nations for a world disarmament agreement to outlaw the atomic bomb, bacteriological warfare, and all other instruments of mass destruction: to destroy existing stockpiles of atomic bombs; to establish United Nations controls, including inspection, over the production of atomic energy. 7-24-48

United Nations—"The New Party will work to realize Franklin D. Roosevelt's ideal of the United Nations as a true world family of nations, by defending its Charter and seeking to prevent its transformation into the diplomatic or military instrument of any one power or group of powers."

Also, in the interest of peace, to repeal the peacetime draft, and repudiate the Marshall plan for European aid and the "Truman Doctrine." To establish in the United Nations a fund to promote international recovery.

Civil Rights—"Full equality" for Negroes and other persons and enactment of federal anti-lynch, antipoll-tax, antidiscrimination, and fair-employment-practices legislation, and legislation abolishing segregation in interstate travel. Abolish the House un-American Activities Committee and prohibit the F.B.I. "from investigating or interfering with the political beliefs and activities of citizens." Abrogate President Truman's "loyalty purge order."

Monopoly—Public ownership "of key sectors of the economy wherever monopolies block expansion of the economy or deny the people the enjoyment of an abundance of goods and services at fair prices. As a first step, the largest banks, the railroads, the electric power and gas industries, and industries primarily dependent on Government funds or Government purchases will be placed under public ownership."

Labor—Repeal the Taft-Hartley Labor Act and "restore labor's equality in collective bargaining by re-enacting the principles of the Wagner and Norris-La-Guardia Acts. Grant employees in publicly owned industries the right to organize and to strike. A $1-an-hour minimum wage for all workers.

Sat. 7-24-48

Housing—An emergency federal housing program "to build within the next two years 4,000,000 low-rent and low-cost dwellings. . . . With priority to veterans, a long-range program to build 25,000,000 new homes in 10 years."

Agriculture—Price supports for all major crops; low-cost crop insurance; protect the family-size farm; help tenants to farm ownership; support co-ops.

Security and Health—"Extend Social Security protection to every man, woman, and child in the United States, providing old-age pensions of $100 a month for all persons at the age of 60, disability and sickness benefits."

Taxation—Free from income taxes all families and individuals "whose income falls below the minimum necessary for a decent standard of living." Tax corporations "at steeply graduated rates to eliminate profiteering."

Education—Guarantee with federal funds "every man, woman, and child in America" the right of a good education.

Women—Legislation "to guarantee full economic and political equality to women."

Independent Business—"Encourage and safeguard independent business by providing adequate working capital and development loans, at low interest rates, granting tax relief, and giving independent and small business a fair share of Government contracts."

Youth—Guarantee to youth "the right to education and employment without discrimination. The New Party will lower the voting age to 18."

Economic Planning—Develop, on the T.V.A. pattern, the regional plans and river-valley authorities projected by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Progressive Platform Strong on Civil Rights

Baltimore, Md.

7-31-48 Sat.

PHILADELPHIA

Of the 99 planks in the platform adopted by the Progressive Party during its founding convention here, at least 15 are designed specifically to benefit colored persons. The platform, a 22-page document, was adopted by the convention delegates Sunday night, with no major changes in spite of prolonged debate over several issues.

In addition to these planks aimed directly at correcting problems confronting colored and other minority groups, many of the remaining 84 will indirectly benefit them insofar as they help citizens of the United States generally.

The Civil Rights Planks

The 15 planks, which would better conditions both here and abroad, follow:

1. Ending of racial discrimination and segregation of all kinds.
2. Full equality for the colored people.
3. No segregation in housing.
4. No segregation in education.
5. Antilynch legislation.
6. An immediate Presidential proclamation ending racial discrimination in the Army and Government employment.
7. Federal scholarships to insure that everyone with the ability will get a higher education.
8. Ending of all discrimination against racial minority groups.
9. Entrance, to West Point and Annapolis to be based on competitive examinations rather than on Congressional appointment.
10. Home rule for the District of Columbia.
11. Admission of Hawaii and Alaska as the 49th and 50th States of the Union.
12. Independence for Puerto Rico.
13. Freedom of Korea.
14. Self-determination of all colonial peoples everywhere, as to whether or not they want to be free.
15. An end to deporting of foreign-born labor leaders.

Active Role in Party Setup

The emphasis on racial problems in the platform was held consistent with the emphasis placed by the party on participation of colored persons in the entire convention, which was culminated with the election of several to high posts in the established organization.

Among the elected officials of the body, as now constituted, are Paul Robeson, co-chairman with Albert E. Fitzgerald; Alvin Jones, Louisiana law student, one of three vice-chairmen; Dr. J. E. T. Camper, national committeeman, representing Maryland.

Keynoter's Contribution

Perhaps the most significant work during the convention proper was that done by Charles P. Howard, attorney and publisher from Des Moines, Iowa, who served as keynoter.

Declaring that the Congressional order of the day has been to kill, kill, kill, Mr. Howard, a Republican leader for 30 years, said:

"This killing was the joint handiwork of Republicans and Democrats, a majority of both parties, plotting together in a Congressional Murder Incorporated.

"And the final hypocrisy is that these very men met in this very hall and drew up civil rights planks for their party platforms. Civil rights planks.

"How many times have they both courted us with the same shabby promise, and how many times have they both betrayed us? I remember 30 years of promise and 30 years of betrayal.

"The plain fact that I stand here before you tonight defines our party. For the first time in my life, I am experiencing human dignity.

"Choice and Change"

"Two things lie at the heart of democracy — choice and change. And these are the very things upon which the new party has been founded. In Henry Wallace we see one again the image of the mountain men who visioned a great nation where there was only desert and forest.

"Once again we offer to Americans the precious right of choice. The old parties . . . . They offers you a jim-crow America—we say that those who perpetuate jim crow are criminal and we propose to fight them with everything we have.

"The new trails await us. The frontier awaits us. The rebirth of this nation awaits our coming, and we are on the march."

Wallace Platform Body Rows Over Communism

Courier Journal Ky.
Fri. 7/23/48

From Wire Dispatches.

Philadelphia, July 22.—The New Party's platform committee was plunged into angry debate today by a demand that it demonstrate its independence of communism and totalitarianism by indorsing the European Recovery Program and by condemning all "police states," whether in Mississippi or Russia.

James Loeb, Jr., executive secretary of American for Democratic Action, outwaited all efforts to discourage his testimony through delay. He told the platform-committee members to their faces that although former Vice-President Henry A. Wallace is the party's presidential candidate, this "does not obscure the fact that the Communists and their collaborators guide the major policies and word the major pronouncements of this party."

A Few Persons Hiss.

A few persons hissed Loeb as he talked. Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, an original New Deal brain truster and now chairman of the Wallace platform committee, and Dr. Joseph Johnson of Washington, dean of Howard University's Medical School, made angry replies.

Tugwell said the A.D.A. resorted to "unscrupulous and demagogic denunciation" and appeared to be getting ready to indorse Governor Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican presidential candidate, since it already had denounced both President Truman and Wallace and had failed to persuade General Dwight Eisenhower to seek the Presidency.

Johnson, a Negro orator of great skill, took violent exception to the A.D.A.'s claim that it had won the battle for civil rights in the successful fight from the floor to expand the Democratic platform pledge. This was, he said, "an insulat to every Negro" who knew that old parties wouldn't keep their platform promises and that the only hope of the Negro race rested with the New Party, led by Wallace and Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho. He was applauded vigorously.

Says It Follows Red Course.

Neither Tugwell nor Johnson answered the A.D.A.'s charge of Communist control in the Wallace party. Although Tugwell himself made speeches in behalf of E.R.P., the platform draft already made public repudiates the Marshall plan. Tugwell confessed to reporters today his dissatisfaction with the E.R.P. plank and other phases of the proposed platform, but he said he would make no floor fight on these issues.

Loeb later said at a news conference that Tugwell's refuseal to discuss the Communist issue proved that "The third party is irrevocably committed to the course set by the Communist Party."

"It is an acknowledment that Mr. Tugwell still prefers not to recognize or discuss the dominant role of the Communists within the third party," Loeb said.

He said the best indications of Communist influence in the third party were the persons associated with it.

"This is the same old crowd," he said. "The only difference is that Mr. Wallace is in the picture. That is tragic. Mr. Wallace has taken them (the Communists) from the Texas League to the major leagues in one jump."

Friday 7/23/48 Ky

Believes Reds Being Used.

Loeb said he believed Wallace was convinced he was only using the Communists to advance his own cause. He said, however, that no one else—not even John L. Lewis—had been able "to get the best of the Communists."

"And if Lewis can't do it," he said, "I don't think Wallace can."

The sharp exchange came toward the end of a day during which Taylor had welcomed Communist votes for the Wallace-Taylor ticket, but said he expected to get the "pinks" only—not the outright "Reds."

Taylor predicted that the revolutionary "Reds" will vote for Dewey on the theory that their best chance of overthrowing the Government is to have another Administration like that of former President Hoover.

Wants Any Support. 7/23/48

Taylor, who will be the party's vice-presidential nominee, said he would welcome the support of Communists or anyone else who is for the Wallace-Taylor program of "peace-abundance-freedom."

The Idahoan said there were two kinds of Communists in this country, the pinks and the Reds.

"I think the pink Communists who believe in the democratic processes, that is, evolution instead of revolution, probably will support the New Party," Taylor said. A Red Communist, he said, wants revolution.

Taylor saw no chance for Communists of any kind to gain control of the New Party, whose founding convention opens here tomorrow.

In a radio interview tonight Taylor said he could not conceive of any circumstances under which he or Wallace could withdraw from the 1948 political wars.

Ky. Fri. 7/23/48

Blames Berlin On Bungling.

As for the tense state of affairs in Berlin, Taylor blamed that on what he termed a "bungling, bipartisan foreign policy which got us into a well-nigh untenable position."

"I hope we can bumble through until the new President takes over next January 20," he said. "Mr. Wallace can straighten things out."

The convention will pick a party name tomorrow night, nominate Wallace and Taylor on Saturday night, and adopt its platform Sunday.

Wallace, meanwhile, charged that the peacetime draft is a "giant step toward the establishment of a regimentation in this country which we would have called "fascism" in other countries."

Courier Journal

In a statement released from New Party headquarters, Wallace said in connection with a New Party youth convention scheduled for the week end that the platforms of the two "old parties" contain "not one single word dedicated to the specific needs of young people."

"But," Wallace said, "don't think they have neglected you. Their performance—if not their promise—has built an ironclad program for young people. For the first time in America's peacetime history the two old parties have joined hands in passing a peacetime draft law."

Townsend Gives Ultimatum.

The Wallace party, which has confidently counted on the support of the Townsend old-age pension movement, got an ultimatum earlier today from its founder, 81-year-old Dr. Francis E. Townsend. He said he would not indorse Wallace and his party unless the platform specifically included his $100-a-month pension program, based on a 3 per cent gross-income tax on individuals and businesses. Dr. Townsend claimed influence on "several million votes."

In Columbus, Ohio, the State Supreme Court today ruled that the Wallace ticket could go on the State's election ballots next November. The Ohio secretary of state previously had refused to permit it.

Wallace press headquarters here said the Ohio court action meant the party would be on the ballot in at least 11 states. It said that in addition the party had obtained enough petitioning signatures to go on the ballot in Illinois and Massachusetts and had submitted lists in six other states.

The Wallace Party Platform Problems

34d

A CURIOUS dilemma faced REXFORD GUY TUGWELL and his fellow-members of the platform committee in HENRY WALLACE's third party. They had two major problems. The first was to uphold WALLACE's contention that peace with Russia is just a matter of friendly negotiation. The second was to write a domestic declaration which would make the Democratic platform seem harsh toward human and civil rights.

Courier Journal

They seem to have failed. In upholding the WALLACE position with regard to Russia they have called for repudiation of the TRUMAN Doctrine and the MARSHALL Plan. To a great many Americans this has a familiar ring, which in the light of today's realities can be likened to the entreaties of blind isolationists before Pearl Harbor. In out-doing the Democrats on the domestic front, Mr. TUGWELL and his associates have strained themselves to little avail.

Ky. Fri. 7/23/48

The WALLACE platform writers also indulged in some criticism of the Republicans and Democrats. But it was not based on what strikes us as real deficiencies. Instead it was a Soviet-sounding scolding for "rejecting" the United Nations and financing "corrupt and fascist governments" in Greece, Turkey and China.

This strange affinity with the Communist line appears in the statement by Mr. WALLACE himself on Tuesday's arrest of American Communist leaders. The similarity of his and the Communist Party's comment on this turn is striking. WALLACE says: "The bi-partisans will play up the indictments and hearings and trials to promote fear"; the Communists: "The domestic counterpart of the criminal bi-partisan attempts to turn the war in Berlin from cold to hot." WALLACE says: "The history of Germany, Italy, Japan and FRANCO Spain should teach us that the suppression of the Communists is but the first step in an assault on the democratic rights of labor, national, racial and political minorities, and all those who opposed the policies of the Government in power"; the Communists: "The Communist Party . . . defend and have always defended the economic welfare and democratic rights of the American people . . . We accuse our accusers of seeking to subvert America's democratic institutions and replace them with a fascist dictatorship."

City Officials Demand Jim Crow At Auditorium

The Black Dispatch

Oklahoma City Okla

Senator Taylor Address Cancelled

34d

Sat-5-15-48

By MALCOLM S. WHITBY

The scheduled Municipal auditorium Sunday afternoon address of Sen. Glen Taylor, vice presidential running mate with Henry A. Wallace on the Progressive party ticket, was cancelled Wednesday by state party chairman Carl von der Lancken, who told a reporter that City Manager Wm. "Bill" Gill and auditorium manager Jimmy Burge insisted on strict segregation arrangements, which he flatly refused after a lengthy conference earlier in the week.

Sat-5-15-48

Mr. von der Lancken expressed outrage over the ruling when no law whatsoever exists requiring jim crow seating arrangements. He added that his party would immediately take steps to "crack this discrimination wide open and Senator Taylor will return in a few weeks to speak in the same hall under American conditions."

The Progressive party leader showed a Municipal auditorium receipt No. 6568, dated April 30, in the amount of $75 for use of the Hall of Mirrors on Sunday, May 16, signed by J. C. Burge, manager, and Mary Lago.

Mr. von der Lancken also showed a letter signed by James C. Burge, auditorium manager, which read as follows:

"With reference to your reservation of the Hall of Mirrors in the Municipal Auditorium for May 16, 1948, for the address of Senator Taylor of the Progressive Party, and your payment of $75.00 rent, I desire to go on record confirming my statement to you on May 7th, at the City Manager's office, that if you refuse to comply with the regulations of the Auditorium toward segregating Negroes and Whites, your reservation will be cancelled and your money refunded. As heretofore stated, you are at liberty to divide the Hall by the center line, or in any other manner you see fit, but our experience in Oklahoma City requires that, for the protection of persons and property, and to avoid disturbance, such a policy is wise.

"If there is no change in the thinking of your party with reference to the handling of this situation since I last talked with you, you may consider your reservation cancelled, and your money is available at any time."

34d

Immediately on receipt of this letter outlining the segregation demand, the Third party leader said he held a one-hour conference with City Manager "Bill" Gill and Mr. Burge, during which conference the two held to their jim crow requirement on the scheduled meeting.

Mr. von der Lancken further expressed his views in a prepared statement following a direct statemen that early court action would be taken. The Oklahoma Third party leader's statement is as follows:

"Sen. Taylor and the Progressive party of Oklahoma refuse to be bound by any undemocratic house rule which attempts to legislate jim crow when no law whatsover exists that requires segregation at public hearings.

"The ruling of City Manager Wm. Gill is an attempt to dictate a policy of second-class citizenship for the Negro people. We believe that if white and Negro Americans could die together on the battlefield to smash Hitler's idea of race supremacy, then they can sit together to hear a talk on democracy.

"The Progressive party will fight this breach of contract—right down the line. If we are unable to obtain the auditorium for Sen. Taylor Sunday, we will crack this discrimination wide open and the senator will return in a few weeks to speak in the same hall under American conditions.

"A matter of principle is involved and the Progressive party is a party of principle."

The Senator from Idaho and New Party leader refused to bow to Dixie Bourbon traditions—and won many a Southerner's esteem

34

By ABNER W. BERRY

THE REACTIONS of southern newsmen to Sen. Glen H. Taylor, I thought, were a fair barometer of his effectiveness. They had one two-word description of the new party Vice Presidential candidate: He's honest.

I saw him meet the press in four cities—Winston-Salem, N. C., Birmingham, Ala., and Macon and Atlanta, Ga. "Well," he invariably greeted reporters, "just fire away, no holds barred." And when they did, he made no effort to win them by concessions to that outworn myth of "the Southern social pattern." His answer on segregation was thorough, and among the newsmen his position was respected. He "believed that segregation is discrimination; it's wrong and unconstitutional and I refuse to live by it. I don't go along with the liberals in the North and South who raise all the little legal questions and say 'Now you've got to go easy with this race question.' If it's wrong then we ought to get rid of it—now."

Down-to-Earth Answers

The Worker

His father, he says, was a Texas preacher "and he had all the Biblical reasons for segregation. I believed them until I found out better after I'd nearly starved to death out in Idaho." He would sometimes go on to chat about his father, telling how he had to leave the church because he wanted to be free to "criticize the big boys who ran the brothels and kept a private pew" at the same time. "Pa wasn't so straight on the race question," he explains, "but I was straight enough on that, all right."

New York, N.Y.

The Senator will expand on his feelings about segregation with the least prodding. "Now about segregation: I usually tell the white person who defends it to place himself in the place of the Negro who cannot find a place to eat or a hotel to sleep in or a good school for his children. And I say to him, 'How would you like to be placed like that in America?' Of course, they wouldn't like it. Well if you wouldn't like it how do you think the Negro feels. The whole thing is just that simple to me."

Sun. 7-11-48

In [illegible] place was this answer on segregation followed by the one-time stock question: "Would you want your daughter to marry a Negro?"

The senator always brought his position on foreign policy down to earth and shunned all diplomatic doubletalk: "If the Russians were arming the Mexicans to fight us, dredging their harbors and building their military roads, as we are doing for the Turks against the Russians, I'd vote for a military appropriation to get them out. But they are not; and they have a right to be suspicious of what our generals are doing."

With these sort of answers he cuts right through what built-up prejudices the newspaper people might have had. As a pretty young woman reporter put it: "He just about charms you with his frankness and plain old common sense. Don't you think so?" I had to answer in the affirmative; I had seen it happen.

But with the audiences it is another matter. He won them just as he had won the newsmen, only better. And that's as it should be: the reporter has a short-lived relationship with the senator; the followers of the new party are comrades-in-arms in the political war to save the country from monopoly, potential fascism and war.

How He Got the Political Bug

He imbues his audiences with a sense of success based on his own experiences. Here before them is a man who has reached an honored position in America in a determined fight against fraud. He is a common man who beat the money power in the Northwest and won a seat in the United States Senate in a six-year peoples grass roots campaign. "I won an election without one newspaper advertisement and without one minute's time on the radio," he explains.

The editorial writers attempt to poke fun at him for having been a singing cowboy, but Taylor turns this into one of his strong points. His cowboy band, he says was ruined in 1929 by "talking pictures and the depression. Just one of them was enough to do it—but we got 'em both at the same time. So he and his little troupe had to move into the smaller towns where there were no facilities for sound pictures.

It was in one of these little towns that he later got the political bug. But not until he had read a lot of books on economics and sociology. One book, in particular, had stressed the point that "The object of all knowledge is action." He has forgotten the author, but he remembers that he started casting about for a way to act.

He found it in the summer of 1937, while laying over in a small town to allow the use of the local theatre by the Governor of Idaho for a political rally. Attending the rally and seeing the hammy quality of the governor's acting plus his poor understanding of the issues, he made up his mind. Politics it would be. "Why I knew more about what the people needed than that bird did, and his campaign acting was only amateur and I was a professional." He had seen "oranges piled 10 feet high for miles, left to rot while we raised a generation of rickety children who couldn't pass the physical tests in the last draft." He had lived in his station wagon. His 12-year-old son, Arod, spent his first years there. He knew from books and experience what the Common Man needed and wanted.

Wouldn't Be Licked

His wife, Dora, wasn't surprised when he told her the same night: "I think I'll run for the Senate." She just said sleepily, "that's nice," or something like that, and went back to sleep. (They were still living in the station wagon.) After that the family established residence in Pocatello, and in 1938 Taylor ran for a seat in Congress but lost in the primaries. He used his cowboy band then. It was a political innovation.

"Now just so the record is straight," he tells his audiences, "Pappy O'Daniel (U. S. Senator from Texas and former governor) started his singing cowboy campaign in May, 1938; I started mine in April. I want it understood that I've never followed Pappy in anything."

In 1940 Taylor ran for the Senate and won in the Democratic primaries, but lost by 14,000 votes in the general election. Roosevelt carried the state by 25,000 votes that year, he says, but the state organization thought he "ought to be taught a lesson" and worked for his defeat. In his campaigning, aided by his wife and five-year-old Arod (named in honor of his mother: "Dora" spelled backward), he went to the "end of the roads," into communities "no bigshots ever visited."

During the war he had to go out of the state to get a job in a war plant because local plants would say "We have no suitable job for a senatorial candidate." But he was back for the senatorial race in 1942. He won the primaries again but lost by only 4,000 in November. This time he could not put on his family entertainment act; Mrs. Taylor had to stay at home to care for the baby (Paul Jon) who had come, and she would not allow yopng Arod to accompany his father on his tours.

Technique of Campaigning

This time he had to ride a horse. He couldn't get gasoline. In fact he had just a little over 100 dollars for all of his expenses. The newspapers were full of publicity about a (screwball) cowboy. About this Taylor says, "Shucks, I had no way of getting myself before the public," but his act was opening doors to him. "One farmer, seeing me ride down the road toward him," the Senator relates, "dropped the reins over his plow and ran to greet me. 'Well I'll be, he shouted, 'it's you, ain't it? Heard 't over the radio and just thought it was all talk. Well I'll be! Guess I better tell the folks about this.' I'll bet that man got me 40 or 50 votes."

Taylor's political ardor wasn't dampened by the two defeats. He went back to his war plant job and filed again in 1944. No cowboy stuff this time. He campaigned in a business suit and left his horse at home. But he stuck to the small towns he had cultivated for six years. He had no advertisements and no radio time so he thought up a new wrinkle: He wrote 3,000 letters in longhand to friends throughout the state. "If you are interested in the technique," he offers smilingly, "it took me eight weeks' time. And I'll add this: you won't be bothered with writer's cramp after the second day's work."

SEN. GLEN TAYLOR

His "dignified campaign" also got him plenty of publicity. He had become a "screwball" in a business suit and a Homburg. He won the primary. The old state party chairman was changed and he got some money for his campaign.

Success Story of The Common Man

When the returns started coming in his opponent darted out in front. There were the returns from the city districts which were counted first. He caught up when the country districts were counted. And he won the election by 216 votes. "I cashed in on my political ignorance," he claims. "I wasn't smart enough to campaign through the big towns." He tells his audiences that he had to work hard to get "the best job I ever had. But the way things are going now it looks as if I'll be rocking on Harry's new porch soon—that is, if Hank'll let me."

He shows how he was able to do it in Idaho and gives his listeners a perspective of victory for America. His "success story" is immediately translated into its broader counterpart—the struggle for political power by the Common Man.

He winds up many of his talks with: "They say I'm crazy. Guess I am, too: because I sure do want peace." And as for understanding the needs of the common people he quips: "I ought to understand them. Why I've been so common that it hurt."

The Senator can still campaign with music, as he and his family demonstrated in his appearances in Georgia. He has proved himself a political cowboy who could ride out the West and coax Eastern and Southern hands away from the old owners of the range. The folks were with him whether he had a guitar or a string of hard words for the bankers and generals. HE's a winner—with charm and intelligence and courage.

Third Party Row Flares in Nevada

The Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 7-10-48

RENO, Nev.—Meeting in this city to found the Nevada State Independent Progressive party and to convene the first convention of the new party, delegates were thrown into turmoil when the convention chairman resigned almost before he took his seat.

George Springmeyer, attorney of this city, who was elected convention chairman, had placed in the preamble a provision that declared the Nevada State Independent Progressive party in opposition to communism. Sat.

Other delegates declared they would exclude that part of the preamble. Springer, aroused, flatly declared he was not a Communist, and bolted the meeting . . . Following his departure, delegates struck his proviso from the preamble.

Mrs. Charlotta Bass, Los Angeles publisher, declared she would die before she would let anyone tell her whether or not she was a Communist. 7-10-48

Delegates were elected to attend the national convention of the IPP to convene in Philadelphia from July 23 to 25.

Georgia Pastor Quits Over Wallace Support

The News

Birmingham, Ala.

ATLANTA, May 7—(AP)—An Atlanta preacher, a leader in Georgia for Henry Wallace's third party bid for the presidency, is leaving his pulpit, he says, because his congregation has been stamped into race consciousness.

The Rev. Isaiah J. Domas, pastor of the Unitarian-Universal Church, said last night his congregation had accepted his resignation, effective Sept. 1. Fri. 5-7-48

He said that two groups existed within the church—one a "vocal, ultra-race-conscious minority," the other a "non-vocal, less race-conscious minority." The latter group, he said, had "allowed themselves to be stampeded by the ultra race-conscious element when faced by the fact of bad publicity in the local press."

Domas served as co-chairman of arrangements for a speech Wallace made before a mixed white and Negro audience in a Negro church here last Winter. Fri. 5-7-48

Chairman Phillip G. Hammer of the church's public relations committee said Domas' activities on Wallace's behalf had a "great deal" to do with the acceptance of the pastor's resignation. 5-7-48

Alabama CIO Bars 3d Party

CIO News

By BOB CHRISTOFFERSON

NO Third Party in 1948—Aid to Europe—A ban on persons who subscribe to Communist principles holding office in the state CIO—Repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act—Continuance of the CIO's Southern Organizing Drive—An end to wage differentials between the North and the South.

This was the gist of resolution adopted by the ninth constitutional convention of the Alabama CIO Council held April 23-25 in Montgomery. The convention also called for:

A new Federal minimum wage law of 75 cents an hour—Federal aid to education—Funds and facilities for labor education—Low-cost housing—An adequate armed force without Universal Military Training—Support of veterans' legislation—Support of the United Nations Appeal for Children.

The resolution opposing UMT but favoring an "adequate regular army, navy and air force" was adopted by a standing vote of 98 to 60, but only after lengthy debate.

There was no division, however, when it came to slamming the door in the Communists' faces, nor in making known the convention's stand on the Third Party.

Adopted unanimously was a constitutional amendment which read: "Persons who subscribe to Nazi, Fascist or Communist principles shall be ineligible to hold office in the Alabama CIO Council."

ALSO adopted unanimously was the anti-Third Party resolutions, which proclaimed "opposition to the Third Party movement of 1948 . . . is the official stand of the CIO in Alabama."

The resolution declared that "unity of all progressive forces . . . in 1948 is one of vital importance to the welfare and security of America." It termed the Third Party a "threat to this much-needed unity of progressive forces in the coming elections."

"An element in America foreign to our way of life" is using the Third Party in order to benefit "from the discord and chaos it can achieve among America's progressive forces by the injection of the Third Party issue into the nation's politics in the 1948 elections," the resolution said.

The sweep against left-wing elements was complete. Right-wingers took every position on the state executive board.

Carey E. Haigler and Eugene M. Wells, both former Birmingham steelworkers, were re-elected president and secretary-treasurer respectively. Haigler to his fourth consecutive term and Wells to his third. Haigler is also state CIO director in Alabama.

Elected vice presidents at large were Tom Green, Birmingham, Steelworkers, and Willie Harris, Bessemer, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

U. S. Senators Lister Hill and John Sparkman, both friends of labor; Gov. James E. Folsom, the Director of CIO Councils, John Brophy and Secy.-Treas. Sherman H. Dalrymple, of the CIO Organizing Committee, were among the speakers.

Brophy told the delegates that the great lesson of the past insofar as labor is concerned "is that we succeeded in the past when we pulled together." He gave a picture of the domestic and world conditions that shaped CIO policy on the Third Party and ERP and said that all but a "minority" in CIO will follow that policy.

Oklahoma Bars Wallace's Party in July Primary

Times-Picayune

New Orleans, La.

(The Associated Press)

Oklahoma City, June 12.—Henry A. Wallace's Progressive party was denied a place on Oklahoma's July 6 primary ballot today by the state supreme court.

The court ruled that the Progressives did not constitute a political party under Oklahoma election statutes.

The ruling came on an appeal by A. B. Cooper, Oklahoma City detective agency manager, from a decision by Secretary of State Wilburn Cartwright, who ordered Progressive candidates placed on the primary ballot.

Cooper had challenged the sufficiency of the Progressive nominating petition, attacked the validity of their non-Communist affidavit and asked the court to prohibit the secretary of state from recognizing them as a political party. 6-13-48

Party to Stay; Wallace Says

Detroit, Mich.

Standard Bearer Hopes Congress Will Act

PHILADELPHIA

Hope that the special session of Congress would "at the very least pass an anti-poll tax law and strong legislation against lynching was expressed Sunday by Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party candidate for President.

In his first press conference as the official nominee of the Progressives, Wallace said that he realized passage of civil rights legislation by the special session might weaken the new party "from a purely political standpoint."

Sat. 7-31-48

Speaking as the party leader, Wallace declared, however, that "We're in this not for personal gains, but to pressure for equality, political and social gains for all the people."

Greater Influence Ahead

He expressed belief that the party already has been an impelling force in this direction and predicted an "even greater effect" on national policy.

The Afro-American

He said he believed the founding convention of the Progressive Party would "unleash liberal forces over the country."

Wallace talked with representatives of colored newspapers in his Bellevue-Stratford Hotel suite for nearly an hour. The conference was requested by the newsmen.

With him were Charles P. Howard, Iowa attorney and convention keynoter; George B. Murphy Jr., an assistant campaign manager, Milton Smith, of the public relations office; and Mrs. Viola Scott, the candidate's personal secretary.

Asked to comment on a weekly newspaper editorial suggesting that he withdraw from the Presidential picture because he would be indirectly aiding the Republicans, Wallace pointed to the enthusiasm at the convention and the way colored citizens were "completely woven into every fibre of the Progresive Party."

Moreover, he said, he could not let down the people who believed in peace. He saw no meeting ground with the Democrats, he said because he felt the administration was leading the country into war.

Fears Reactionaries Work

Further, civil rights legislation in Congress would be stymied by Southern reactionaries in key positions, he added. Sat.

If Congress really wanted to act on this legislation, Wallace said, ways could be found to beat off a senate filibuster by imposing cloture. 7-31-48

Wallace, whose general press conference at the convention had been fraught with tense unfriendliness. Was quite relaxed at this one and seemed to enjoy it.

At the earlier meeting with the press, the party standard-bearer said if he were President today one of his first acts would be to issue an executive order ending jim crow in the Armed Forces.
